The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that, at the end of the routine morning business on the next legislative day, the resolution respecting the Brownsville matter be laid before the Senate. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HALE obtained the floor.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. I should be glad to have the Senator prefer a request that the resolution, together with the amendment, be printed.

Mr. HALE. That will of course be done.

Mr. CARTER. I presume the amendment has been offered separately. I should like to see the resolution and the amendment printed together.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolution will be printed with the amendments noted in the proper connection.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. HALE. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. McCUMBER. I wish to ask, Mr. President, if any notice has been given as to taking up any subject next Tuesday morning?

Mr. HALE. I should like to say right here that there seems to have grown up a belief——

Mr. McCUMBER. I ask for information——

Mr. HALE. That because a Senator gives notice, he can therefore bring up a bill. There is nothing in the history of the Senate, there is nothing in the precedents, which sustains that idea. I get no additional advantage by notifying that next Wednesday or a week from next Wednesday or two weeks from next Wednesday I will call up a bill. It ought not to be journalized. The clerks have fallen into a fashion, if a Senator announces that he proposes to make a speech on a certain day next week, and he either wants to bring all his friends here or wants to keep them away, of journalizing the notice. The clerks have no right to do that. It is not a part of the proceedings of the Senate. Giving notice that on a certain day a Senator will call up a bill expresses nothing except how the Senator's mind is working, and that he is going to try it at that time. It adds nothing to the privileges of a Senator, and does nothing in the way of obstructing the business of the Senate. I do not object to the Senator from North Dakota giving his notice.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, during the time I have been here this custom has been almost universal in the Senate. It is a custom which has worked to the advantage of the Senate in the dispatch of business, inasmuch as it makes it possible for us to know beforehand what subject is liable to be called up at a given time. Most Senators have conceded that right, and have fallen in with it. I know, as the Senator from Maine has already expressed it, that it carries no particular right with it, except a right which has been granted as a matter of courtesy.

I desired to have the Senate take up the bill to-day. I desire to have it taken up some other day, if it can not be taken up at this time, and I desire to have it understood that I should like to have it taken up at some time when it will be most convenient for other Senators who have other measures which they wish to have considered. That is the only object of giving notice, and with that object in view very much good can be accomplished.

Mr. HALE. The Senator is quite right. Let him give his notice that he will try to get up his bill, and I will try to help him.

Mr. McCUMBER. Before I give the notice I should like to have the information which I sought to obtain.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair ascertains from an examination of the record of to-day that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] gave notice that on Tuesday next, after the close of the routine morning business, he would call up Senate resolution No. 200 for the purpose of making some remarks thereon.

Mr. McCUMBER. The very fact that the Senator from North Carolina has given that notice induces me to refrain from giving notice for Tuesday in order that the Senator may have the time he wishes. It is but proper that he should have the time when he has given notice that he wishes to speak, as that will undoubtedly be most convenient for him.

That being the case, I should like to give notice that I will call up the pension bill for consideration, not for final vote, after the routine morning business next Wednesday.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. HALE. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day, it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 2 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, January 7, 1907, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 3, 1907.

SURVEYOR OF CUSTOMS.

Marcellus O. Markham, of Georgia, to be surveyor of customs for the port of Atlanta, in the State of Georgia. (Reappointment.)

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS.

George L. Smith, of New Jersey, to be collector of customs for the district of Newark, in the State of New Jersey. (Reappointment.)

Daniel W. Patrick, of North Carolina, to be collector of customs for the district of Pamlico, in the State of North Carolina. (Reappointment.)

Morton Tower, of Oregon, to be collector of customs for the southern district, in the State of Oregon. (Reappointment.)

PROMOTIONS IN REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

First Lieut. Preston Henry Uberroth to be a captain in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from December 25, 1906, in place of Walter Spooner Howland, retired.

Second Lieut. Henry Ulke, jr., to be a first lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from December 25, 1906, in place of Preston Henry Uberroth, promoted.

Third Lieut. Ralph Waldo Dempwolf to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from October 1, 1906, in place of Second Lieut. Ernest Eugene Mead, promoted.

Third Lieut. Roger Chew Weightman to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from November 4, 1906, in place of Second Lieut. Henry Granville Fisher, promoted.

PROMOTION IN PUBLIC HEALTH AND MARINE-HOSPITAL SERVICE.

Asst. Surg. John S. Boggess to be a passed assistant surgeon in the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States, to rank as such from December 5, 1906.

ASSISTANT TREASURER.

Edwin Upton Curtis, of Massachusetts, to be assistant treasurer of the United States at Boston, Mass., in place of George A. Marden, deceased.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Edward T. Sanford, of Tennessee, to be Assistant Attorney-General in place of James C. McReynolds, resigned.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

William H. Mackey, jr., of Kansas, to be United States marshal for the district of Kansas. A reappointment, his term having expired on December 8, 1906.

APPOINTMENT IN THE ARMY.

General officer.

Brig. Gen. J. Franklin Bell to be major-general from January 3, 1907, vice Lee, retired from active service.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

CAVALRY ARM.

To be captain.

First Lieut. Guy S. Norvell, Eighth Cavalry, from October 2, 1906, vice Carleton, Thirteenth Cavalry, promoted.

To be first lieutenants.

Second Lieut. Guy Kent, First Cavalry, from August 2, 1906, vice Odell, Eleventh Cavalry, resigned.

Second Lieut. Copley Enos, First Cavalry, from August 10, 1906, vice Karnes, Sixth Cavalry, resigned.

Second Lieut. Emory J. Pike, Second Cavalry, from August 20, 1906, vice Whitside, Fifteenth Cavalry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Williams S. Martin, Fourth Cavalry, from September 13, 1906, vice Purviance, Fourth Cavalry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Frank E. Sidman, Eighth Cavalry, from September 13, 1906, vice Johnson, Second Cavalry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Frederick Mears, Fifth Cavalry, from September 20, 1906, vice Cushman, Eleventh Cavalry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Alden M. Graham, First Cavalry, from October 1, 1906, vice Tilford, First Cavalry, promoted.

ARTILLERY CORPS.

To be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Norris Stayton, Artillery Corps, from December 21, 1906, vice Mitchell, retired from active service.

PROMOTIONS IN THE PORTO RICO PROVISIONAL REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

Second Lieut. Teofilo Marxuach, Porto Rico Provisional Regiment of Infantry, to be first lieutenant from November 20, 1906, vice Woodruff, promoted.

Second Lieut. Eugenio C. de Hostos, Porto Rico Provisional Regiment of Infantry, to be first lieutenant from November 20, 1906, vice Angel, promoted.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Professor of Mathematics Lucien F. Prud'homme, United States Navy, retired, with the rank of commander, to be a professor of mathematics on the retired list of officers of the Navy, with the rank of captain, from the 29th day of June, 1906, in accordance with a provision contained in the naval appropriation act approved on that date.

Gunner Cornelius Cronin, United States Navy, retired, to be a chief gunner on the retired list of the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 29th day of June, 1906, in accordance with the provisions of the naval appropriation act approved on that date.

PENSION AGENT.

John R. King, of Maryland, to be pension agent at Washington, D. C., his term having expired. (Reappointment.)

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, January 3, 1907.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Infinite Spirit, our God and our Father, whose blessings are new every morning and fresh every evening, we lift up our hearts in gratitude to Thee for the care Thou hast exercised over us as individuals and as a nation in the past, and we pray that Thou will continue the same. We thank Thee for the holiday season which has come and gone with its lessons of love, peace, and good will. Grant that they may remain with us that we may be the better prepared to prosecute the work of the new year, and grant, oh, most merciful Father, that the laws enacted by these, Thy servants, may lessen the evils in the world and promote the good. Through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, December 20, 1906, was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

Mr. NEEDHAM. Mr. Speaker, the Hon. William F. Englebright, who has been elected as the successor of Hon. J. N. Gillett, resigned, is present, and I ask that his credentials be read and that he be sworn in.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the credentials.

The credentials were read.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Speaker, Hon. Charles G. Washburn, who has been elected to complete the term of the late Hon. Rockwood Hoar, is present and I ask that the oath be administered to him.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the credentials.

The credentials were read.

Mr. Englebright and Mr. Washburn appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath required by law.

COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask the consent of the House that the Committee on Military Affairs may have leave to sit during the sessions of the House for the rest of this session.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] asks unanimous consent that the Committee on Military Affairs may have leave to sit during the sessions of the House for the remainder of the session. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. BRICK, for ten days, on account of serious illness in his family.

Mr. LAMAR, until January 8, 1907, on account of sickness.

Mr. CLARK of Florida, indefinitely, on account of sickness in family.

Mr. LINDSAY, until further notice, on account of sickness in family.

Mr. MCMORRAN, for ten days, on account of important business.

Mr. GRIGGS, until January 8, 1907, on account of sickness.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a recommendation as to legislation for compensation of ordnance officers in charge of national armories—to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting a draft of a bill for increasing the limit of cost of the Freedmen's Hospital building and setting forth the need of additional appropriations therefor—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting a draft of proposed legislation relating to allotments to certain children of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache reservations—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the chairman of the commission on consolidation of schools and general plan of school buildings in the District of Columbia, submitting a preliminary report—to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting a draft of proposed legislation relating to a proposed patent in fee simple to William G. Labadie—to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a memorial of the Agricultural Association of Panay and Negros with reference to the tariff in its relation to the Philippines—to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a copy of a letter from the Judge-Advocate-General, a recommendation as to the payment of claims for liquors destroyed by the Federal authorities at the time of the earthquake in San Francisco—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, submitting a recommendation as to the claim of George Kingsland, of Bath Beach, Brooklyn, N. Y.—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusion of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the brig Juno, Henry Atkins, jr., master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the schooner Maria, William Cole, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of J. P. McCleudon, administrator of estate of Meredith King against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the schooner Eagle, Jeremiah Goodhue, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the schooner Catherine, James Cocks, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the brig Bachelors, D. Churchill, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the brig Lydia, Thomas McCray, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the ship Hiram, Samuel A. Whitney, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the Hope, John Prince, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for seacoast defense guns at West Point, N. Y.—to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting an estimate of appropriation for protecting public lands, timber, etc.—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of Commerce and Labor submitting an estimate of appropriation for a tender for the Seventh light-house district—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and law in the French spoliation cases relating to the schooner Molly, John Alden, master—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of allowance on the account of Capt. George H. Cameron, United States Army—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for repair of fortifications at Pensacola, Mobile, and New Orleans—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for defense at Pensacola—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, submitting an estimate of appropriation for protection of the Casa Grande ruin in Arizona and continuation of investigations—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for repairs and supply of stores at artillery posts on South Atlantic and Gulf coasts—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Flat Rock Baptist Church, Missouri, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Navy submitting an urgent estimate of appropriation for navy-yard at Norfolk, Va.—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of G. D. Able, administrator of estate of Catherine Rutherford, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Navy submitting an estimate of deficiency appropriation for yards, docks, and equipment—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting a draft of proposed legislation for permitting the issue of a patent in fee simple to John W. Early, Ottawa allottee—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of W. T. Forbess, administrator of estate of Archie B. Forbess, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of survey of channel from Aransas Pass to Corpus Christi, Tex.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, estimate of 6-foot channel in the Mississippi River between the Missouri River and St. Paul, Minn.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Postmaster-General, transmitting report of the finance of the Department, balance due, accrued postage, amount paid for carrying the mail, etc.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of channel in Newark Bay, New Jersey—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination of Galveston Harbor, Texas—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination of channel from Aransas Pass to Cuero, Tex.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of Pamlico and Tar rivers, North Carolina—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of Merrimac River, Massachusetts—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination of Old South River, New Jersey—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HENRY of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23199) for the erection of a Federal building for the post-office at Marlin, Tex.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 23200) to provide additional judges for the district of Alaska—to the committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 23201) to amend the act approved March 1, 1905, entitled "An act to amend section 4 of an act entitled 'An act relating to the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia, approved February 28, 1901'"—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: A bill (H. R. 23202) to increase the rate of pension of certain widows under the act of June 27, 1890, and its amendments—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 23203) to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes"—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington: A bill (H. R. 23204) to establish a biological and fish-culture station in the Territory of Hawaii—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. MORRELL: A bill (H. R. 23205) causing a survey to be made of the Delaware River, etc.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. COCKS: A bill (H. R. 23206) requiring the American flag to be flown from post-office buildings from sunrise to sunset each day that the offices are open for business—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: A bill (H. R. 23207) reserving coal, lignite, petroleum, and natural-gas deposits from disposal of under existing land laws, and providing that such deposits may be mined under mining leases—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MACON: A bill (H. R. 23208) to prohibit the receipt, delivery, or transmission of interstate or foreign messages or other information to be used in connection with or furtherance of any project or transaction concerning the interstate or foreign buying or selling, or otherwise dealing in futures in agricultural products or commodities, and to prohibit the interstate or foreign buying or selling or otherwise dealing in said products and commodities—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. COLE: A bill (H. R. 23209) to provide for a soil survey in the Territory of Hawaii—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. RANDELL of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23210) providing for the transmission and delivery of semiweekly and triweekly newspapers through the mails in same manner and at the same rate of postage as weekly newspapers—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 23211) authorizing the leasing of Indian lands—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SCOTT: A bill (H. R. 23212) for the construction of a breakwater at Hilo Harbor, in the Territory of Hawaii—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23213) for the further improvement of Honolulu Harbor, in the Territory of Hawaii—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 23214) to provide for the erection of a hospital at Fort McKenzie, Wyo.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: A bill (H. R. 23215) to regulate the issue of certain stocks and bonds of common carriers engaged in interstate commerce—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: A bill (H. R. 23216) to provide for the appointment of an additional district judge in and for the southern district of the State of Ohio—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HUGHES of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 23217) to provide for the appointment of an additional district judge in and for the southern judicial district of the State of West Virginia—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23218) to authorize Kentucky and West Virginia Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River at or near Williamson, in Mingo County, W. Va., to a point on east side of said river in Pike County, Ky.—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23219) to authorize Majestic Collieries Company, of Eckman, W. Va., to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River about 2½ miles west of Devon, W. Va., a station on Norfolk and Western Railway—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WELBORN: A bill (H. R. 23220) providing for an amendment to section governing compensation of registers and receivers of United States land offices—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: A bill (H. R. 23221) for the erection of a public building at the city of Athens, in the State of Ohio—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23222) providing for the erection of a monument to Januarius Aloysius MacGahan—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. MORRELL: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 209) concerning the dredging of the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a resolution (H. Res. 674) authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate railroad wrecks—to the Committee on Rules.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: A bill (H. R. 23223) granting a pension to Margaret Mars—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23224) granting a pension to Ella J. Crosse—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23225) granting an increase of pension to James D. Leech—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23226) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Swihart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23227) granting an increase of pension to Charles Weller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23228) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Hambake—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23229) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Cornell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23230) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Walker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23231) granting an increase of pension to Robert Thompson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23232) granting an increase of pension to Lucas B. Brewster—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23233) granting an increase of pension to Theophilus Jones—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 23234) granting an increase of pension to James W. Walsh—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23235) granting an increase of pension to James L. Barney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensons.

By Mr. BONYNGE: A bill (H. R. 23236) for the relief of Edward H. Phelps and to correct his military record—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23237) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Charles L. Thompson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23238) granting a pension to L. W. Clark—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23239) granting a pension to Charles L. Thompson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23240) granting an increase of pension to Ezra B. Ide—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23241) granting an increase of pension to Mary Loomis—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23242) granting an increase of pension to William E. McFarland—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: A bill (H. R. 23243) for the relief of Charles P. Ryan—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23244) granting an increase of pension to Michael Andrews, jr.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 23245) for the relief of Alexander Morgan—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23246) for the relief of James Holder, jr.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23247) granting an increase of pension to George I. Stults—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23248) granting a pension to Andrew J. Mullins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CAPRON: A bill (H. R. 23249) granting an increase of pension to Patience G. Reddy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CASSEL: A bill (H. R. 23250) granting a pension to Georgie A. Mercer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COCKS: A bill (H. R. 23251) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Hibson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 23252) granting an increase of pension to John Powell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23253) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Murray—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CUSHMAN: A bill (H. R. 23254) granting an increase of pension to William W. Brightman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23255) granting an increase of pension to Napoleon B. Moore—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOVENER: A bill (H. R. 23256) granting a pension to Samuel H. Gebhart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23257) granting an increase of pension to Calvin C. Shank—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23258) granting an increase of pension to John J. Robinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23259) granting an increase of pension to J. M. Francis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DAWSON: A bill (H. R. 23260) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wilkinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DARRAGH: A bill (H. R. 23261) granting an increase of pension to George W. Plummer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23262) granting an increase of pension to William Spatch—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULLER: A bill (H. R. 23263) granting an increase of pension to Michael Downs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLOYD: A bill (H. R. 23264) granting a pension to James W. Officer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23265) granting a pension to Henry Hilton—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23266) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Watts—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23267) granting an increase of pension to Franklin Williams—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23268) granting an increase of pension to John N. Trimble—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23269) granting an increase of pension to Samuel E. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Penions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23270) granting an increase of pension to John Bogenschutz—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23271) granting an increase of pension to Carmin Watkins—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23272) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Foster—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23273) granting an increase of pension to James R. Atkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23274) to correct the military record of McDonald Meade—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23275) to correct the military record of James H. Murphy—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23276) to correct the military record of James M. Morrow—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23277) to correct the military record of John Hurst and grant him an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: A bill (H. R. 23278) granting an increase of pension to James M. Morris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23279) granting an increase of pension to D. H. Moore—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GOULDEN: A bill (H. R. 23280) granting an increase of pension to Bartholomew Burke—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GILLESPIE: A bill (H. R. 23281) granting an increase of pension to William T. Fisher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GILLETT: A bill (H. R. 23282) granting an increase of pension to John W. Tumey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23283) granting an increase of pension to David D. Pierce—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23284) granting an increase of pension to Albert M. Moore—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GARNER: A bill (H. R. 23285) for the relief of M. N. Dominguez, of Brownsville, Tex.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HOUSTON: A bill (H. R. 23286) granting a pension to Sophia R. Harrison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23287) granting an increase of pension to William T. Gullett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23288) for the relief of John Mason—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HEPBURN: A bill (H. R. 23289) granting a pension to Rebecca Greenlee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23290) granting a pension to Sarah J. Boles—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23291) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Huston—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23292) granting an increase of pension to C. E. Bacon—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23293) granting an increase of pension to Amos S. Ladd—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 23294) granting a pension to F. M. Sampson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23295) granting an increase of pension to Grace Aram—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23296) granting an increase of pension to George H. Blakeslee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23297) granting an increase of pension to Charles T. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAY: A bill (H. R. 23298) for the relief of Fredrick Hughson—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. JONES of Washington: A bill (H. R. 23299) granting an increase of pension to Henry Goodlander—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 23300) granting an increase of pension to George W. Fletcher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KNAPP: A bill (H. R. 23301) for the relief of H. E. Middleton & Son—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KEIFER: A bill (H. R. 23302) granting a pension to Samuel B. Dump—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23303) granting a pension to Mary J. Rush—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23304) granting an increase of pension to William W. Levering—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23305) granting an increase of pension to Bessie Sharp Pettit—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23306) granting an increase of pension to James Mahaffey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KAHN: A bill (H. R. 23307) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Casey—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LITTAUER: A bill (H. R. 23308) granting an increase of pension to Harrison Hall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23309) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Durkee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LINDSAY: A bill (H. R. 23310) granting an increase of pension to Charles Palmer—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23311) granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah Burke—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23312) granting an increase of pension to William Lewis—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LAWRENCE: A bill (H. R. 23313) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin D. Reed—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LORIMER: A bill (H. R. 23314) granting an increase of pension to Henry King Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23315) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Marvin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23316) granting an increase of pension to William G. Haynes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAFEAN: A bill (H. R. 23317) granting an increase of pension to Elias Garrett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 23318) granting a pension to James M. Childers—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23319) granting a pension to Philip S. Day—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23320) granting a pension to Thomas J. Cornell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23321) granting a pension to Sylvester Hendrix—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23322) granting an increase of pension to Franklin D. Allen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 23323) granting an increase of pension to Robert Foote—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23324) authorizing the sale of certain land to the city of Buffalo, Wyo.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MINOR: A bill (H. R. 23325) granting an increase of pension to Noah D. Lindsay—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23326) granting an increase of pension to Ann Sprague—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAHON: A bill (H. R. 23327) granting an increase of pension to Paul Sheets—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCREARY of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 23328) granting an increase of pension to Thomas M. Farrell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REEDER: A bill (H. R. 23329) granting an increase of pension to E. Y. Morris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23330) granting an increase of pension to William Ure—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23331) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Holmes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23332) granting an increase of pension to Uriah Blair—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23333) granting an increase of pension to Bradley Webster—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23334) granting a pension to Hellen A. Duvall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23335) granting a pension to Jethro Carpenter—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23336) granting an extension of Patent No. 426012—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. SHERMAN: A bill (H. R. 23337) granting an increase of pension to Susan McLaughlin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23338) granting an increase of pension to John C. Thorn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SIBLEY: A bill (H. R. 23339) granting an increase of pension to Martha Louise Burnham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 23340) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Alling—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23341) granting an increase of pension to Asa L. Rees—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23342) granting an increase of pension to James Hamrick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23343) granting an increase of pension to William M. Harrod—to the Committee on Invalid Penions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23344) granting an increase of pension to Isaac B. Hughey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WELBORN: A bill (H. R. 23345) for the relief of the city of Glasgow, Mo.—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23346) for the relief of Dennis Sullivan—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23347) for the relief of John Fischer—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23348) granting a pension to Fred Wakefield—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23349) granting a pension to Mary Brady—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23350) granting a pension to Mary E. Campbell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23351) granting a pension to Leonidas H. Hightshoe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23352) granting a pension to Orpha A. Martin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23353) granting a pension to Charles W. Gist—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23354) granting an increase of pension to James A. Ellison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23355) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Cossins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23356) granting an increase of pension to George Richard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23357) granting an increase of pension to James M. Houston—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23358) granting an increase of pension to Robert J. Pray—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23359) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Potts—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23360) granting an increase of pension to Robert Hastie—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23361) granting an increase of pension to James A. King—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23362) granting an increase of pension to Elbert Nugent—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILEY of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 23363) granting an increase of pension to Louis Sherard—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WEISSE: A bill (H. R. 23364) granting a pension to Mary Ann Whittaker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23365) granting an increase of pension to William Seitz—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23366) granting an increase of pension to August Maffert—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEBBER: A bill (H. R. 23367) granting an increase of pension to Asa A. Gardner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. YOUNG: A bill (H. R. 23368) granting a pension to Patrick McGrain—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23369) granting an increase of pension to Stephen Loranger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ZENOR: A bill (H. R. 23370) for the relief of the estate of Thomas G. Morrison, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23371) granting an increase of pension to Clark Crecelius—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23372) granting an increase of pension to Smith McCallister—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS: A bill (H. R. 23373) granting a pension to John Paul—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23374) granting a pension to Rose A. Doyle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23375) granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah Wall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of bills of the following titles; which were thereupon referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9714) granting an increase of pension to George Wood—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 22610) granting an increase of pension to Margaret C. Storts—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 22637) granting an increase of pension to William A. Buchanan—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 23167) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Amberg—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Washington Board of Trade, against change of names of avenues as established in original plans—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, against appropriation of public funds for sectarian purposes—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of General Assembly of Presbyterian Church in United States, for constitutional amendment abolishing polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Inland Waterway Association, for action relative to construction of a waterway from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort Inlet, N. C.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Carriage Builders' National Association, for regulation of tariff rates by a permanent commission—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Twentieth Century Club, for repeal of law placing duty on works of art—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Edward K. Lilikalani, for action on his claim to crown lands of Hawaii—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Catholic Church Extension Society of the United States, relative to the relations of church and state in France—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Pasadena Central Labor Council and other labor organizations, for passage of merchant marine shipping bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. ACHESON: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Theophilus Jones, James W. Milligan, Lucian B. Brewster, and John Vandegrift—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Daily Tribune, Beaver Falls, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Joseph V. Cumming—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of National Association of Colored Women, for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of council of city of Cincinnati, Ohio, favoring appropriation for improvement of waterways—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Willard Council, No. 46, Daughters of America, New Castle, Pa., favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ADAMSON: Petition of G. W. Poer et al., for increase of pay of rural mail carriers—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of King Hardware Company, Atlanta, Ga., for legislation to prevent the jug trade in States or counties where prohibition prevails—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of Western States Portland Cement Company, favoring bill to provide 2 cents per mile fare on all railways of the United States—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ALLEN of New Jersey: Petition against application of the antitrust laws so as to militate against cooperation of small dealers—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of executive committee of the Inter-Church Conference on Federation for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BARCHFELD: Petition of Charles K. Harris, of New York, relative to the extension of the copyright laws to devices adapted to reproduce musical works—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of James Pollock, harbor master of the port of Philadelphia, relative to the deepening of the channel of the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Andrew G. Austin Council, No. 67, of McKees Rocks, Pa., and Welcome Council, No. 134, of Pittsburg, Pa., for restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Edwin A. Abbey and 65 other artists, asking for the removal of duty on works of art—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of Oakland Board of Trade, of Pittsburg, Pa., indorsing bill H. R. 19076, calling for increased compensation of letter carriers—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of James Carothers & Co., of Pittsburg, Pa., and of New York Produce Exchange Bank, urging that some action be taken at this session of Congress for the relief of the money markets of this country—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. BARTLETT: Petition of J. W. Burke & Co., of Macon, Ga., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BENNET of New York: Petition of American Artists for Free Art, against tariff on art works (bill H. R. 15268)—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BONYNGE: Petition of W. F. Robinson Printing Company, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BOWERSOCK: Petition of The World, Lawrence, Kans., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of William A. Green, as per bills S. 7149 and H. R. 21701, awarding travel pay as an officer in United States Volunteers in war service in Philippines—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: Petition of Waterville Morning Sentinel, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of veteran soldiers of the civil war and war with Spain of Togus, Me., for restoration of army canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Andrew J. Mullins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of George J. Stultz—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAPRON: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Patience G. Reddy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Mary A. Pecor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of The D. and W. Fuse Company, of Providence, R. I., in favor of increasing the pay of the corps of examiners in the Patent Office and of increasing the facilities for the transaction of business in said office—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, resolution of Local No. 133, U. T. W., of White Rock, R. I., in favor of the passage of the shipping bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition and resolutions of Thomas A. Walton, teacher commercial department Pentecostal Collegiate Institute, of North Scituate, R. I.; Pawcatuck Council, No. 15, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Shannock, R. I.; Miantonomah Council, No. 7, of Providence, R. I.; of Arthur L. Taylor, of Phenix, R. I, and of John G. Ulmer, principal of the Grammar School, Anthony, R. I.—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Evening Times, Pawtucket, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CASSEL: Resolutions of Lancaster Council, No. 912, of Lancaster, Pa., and Intercourse Council, No. 650, Junior Order United American Mechanics, in favor of the passage of the immigration bill (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: Petition of Milton Journal, Milton, Wis., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DARRAGH: Petition of Daily Eagle and Daily Times, Flushing, N. Y., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DOVENER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Elizabeth H. Brubaker and Duncan Cunningham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Valley Star Council, No. 60, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Eli B. Fleming—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLOYD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of George W. Maynard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Adaline Ploer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Thomas H. Cook—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Dolly Bivens, A. J. James, et al.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of the Republic, Rockford, Ill.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of Excelsior Homestead Progressive Association, against Asiatic coolies in Panama and for application of Chinese-exclusion act to Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GOULDEN: Petition of National Camp and Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Petition of New York Produce Exchange Bank, relative to the stringency of the money market—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of Pride of the West Council, No. 157, of Allegheny, Pa., and Aspinwall Council, No. 238, of Aspinwall, Pa., for restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of the Sandusky Avenue Baptist Church, of Allegheny, Pa., for passage of a bill forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquors in Government buildings; also for the passage of the Littlefield-Carmack original-package bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of James Pollock, harbor master of the port of Philadelphia, relative to the deepening of the channel of Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Edwin A. Abbey and 65 other artists, for the placing of works of art on the free list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Oakland Board of Trade, of Pittsburg, Pa., indorsing bill H. R. 19076, for increasing pay of letter carriers—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Petition of Scholl Printing Company, Chillicothe, Ohio, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of directors of the Ship Owners' Association of the Pacific Coast, San Francisco, Cal.—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Atlantic Harbor, No. 77, American Association of Masters, Mates, and Pilots of Steam Vessels, Brooklyn, N. Y., for merchant marine shipping bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Nelsonville, Ohio, Council, No. 108, Daughters of America, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Seattle Printing Pressmen's Union, for ship-subsidy bill (S. 529)—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. HAY: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Frederick Hughton—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of California Miners' Association, favoring House bill relating to revision of section 2325 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relative to location of claims of mineral lands—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, petition of F. J. Hipp et al., citizens of California, against cooly labor on Panama Canal; also that Chinese-exclusion act apply to Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Grace Aram—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, petition of Excelsior Homestead Association, against employment of coolies in Panama Canal Zone, and that Chinese-exclusion act apply to Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Evening News, San Jose, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of George H. Blakeslee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of certain officers of the Second Louisiana Volunteer Cavalry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Ben Harrison Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of California Promoters' Commission for improvement of California harbors—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, resolution of citizens of San Francisco, against stand taken by the President relative to matters concerning the Japanese in San Francisco—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Labor Council, of San Francisco, for exclusion of Asiatic laborers—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HEPBURN: Resolution of conductors of Delaware and Hudson Railroad system, against passage of sixteen-hour bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolution of railway employees of Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway, employed at Creston, Iowa, against passage of bill limiting hours of service of railway employees—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Gate City, Keokuk, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of locomotive engineers, Delaware and Hudson system, against bill limiting hours of labor on railways—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Citizens of Ringgold and Wayne counties, Iowa, for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HINSHAW: Petition of citizens of Nebraska, against tariff on art works (bill H. R. 15268)—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KAHN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John F. Bishop, as per House bill 21701, for travel pay of officers of United States Volunteers in war service in Philippines—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. KEIFER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Frances F. Mower, widow of Carl K. Mower, as per House bill 21701, for travel pay of United States officers in war service in Philippines—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Ohio: Petition of Morning Gleaner, Massillon, Ohio, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Operative Plasterers' International Association, Philadelphia Board of Trade, and Wellsville Division, No. 289, Order of Railway Conductors, for the subsidy shipping bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of citizens of Boston, against the summary discharge of the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of International Association Mechanics, Lodge No. 200, Youngstown, Ohio, for ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Legislative Committee of Pomona Grange, No. 62, Mount Nebo, Ohio, for legislation establishing parcels post and postal savings bank—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Crescent Council, No. 10, Daughters of Liberty; General McPherson Council, No. 110; Lincoln Council, No. 16; Valley Forge Council, No. 179; New Waterford Council, No. 153; Pride of the East Council, No. 8; Paul Jones Council, No. 203; Diamond Council, No. 5; Ensign Bagley Council, No. 123; Thomas Jefferson Council, No. 100; Washington Council, No. 12, and Loyal Council, No. 22, Junior Order United American Mechanics, and Molly Pitcher Council, No. 10, Daughters of America, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. KNAPP: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Middleton & Son—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Edgar F. Morris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Reunion and Daily Standard, Watertown, N. Y., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LACEY: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Franklin D. Allen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for the relief of Caroline Eckess, sister of Frank W. Eckess (House bill 21701), for travel pay of officer of United States Volunteers in war service in Philippines—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Iowa Academy of Sciences, for the metric system—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFEAN: Petition of Colonial Council, No. 605, Junior Order United American Mechanics, and State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of B. M. Root Company, York, Pa., against increase of rate of postage on trade publications—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of S. Morgan Smith Company, York, Pa., for appropriation of $200,000 for hydrographic investigation of United States Geological Survey—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles P. Kibler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS: Petition of Clinton Publishing Company and the Dispatch, of Frankfort and Kokomo, Ind., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Liberty Bell Council, No. 5, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LAWRENCE: Petition of Evening Journal, Pittsfield, Mass., and North Adams Transcript, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of John N. Truden (bill H. R. 21701), for travel pay as United States volunteer officer in war service in Philippines—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of Frank H. Lancaster, Publishers' League, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of American Artists for Free Art, against tariff on art works—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Charles K. Harris, favoring that part of Senate bill 6330 protecting authors and composers of music from manufacturers of mechanical devices—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of E. W. Ordway, for forest reservation in White Mountains—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against President's utterances in message regarding attitude of people of California toward Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the State Water Supply Commission of New York, for appropriation for gauging of streams by the United States Geological Survey—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. LITTAUER: Papers to accompany bills for relief of Thomas Durkee and Harrison Hall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Daily Sun, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MAHON: Papers to accompany bills for relief of Paul Sheets and Frederick Kriner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAYNARD: Petition of citizens of Iowa, for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MOON of Tennessee: Petitions of Social Council, No. 31; Keystone Council, No. 114; Sherman Council, No. 20; Friendship Council, No. 2; Tranquillity Council, No. 23; Sweetwater Council, No. 61; Riceville Council, No. 41, and Wattauga Council, No. 63, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. NEEDHAM: Petition of California Miners' Association, favoring House bill relative to revision of section 2325 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relative to location of claims of mineral lands—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, petition of State Camp of New York and National Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Santa Cruz Board of Trade, for increase of salaries of clerks in all first and second class post-offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of the Sentinel, Santa Cruz, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ROBERTS: Petition of St. Mark Literary and Musical Union, against the President's order discharging the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, and for a reconsideration of the same—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Egg Rock Council, No. 23, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SCHNEEBELI: Petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SHERMAN: Petition of Evening Telegram, Herkimer, N. Y., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Council No. 1, Daughters of Liberty, Ilion, N. Y., favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of John C. Thorn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Susan M. Laughlan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPERRY: Petition of Business Men's Association of New Haven, Conn., for passage of House bill 9754, for reclassification of clerks in first and second class post-offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Ansonia Sentinel, Ansonia, Conn., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Business Men's Association of New Haven, Conn., for appropriation for completion of harbor of refuge, Point Judith, R. I.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Liberty Bell Council, No. 3, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of New Haven, Conn., favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce, New Haven, Conn., for improvement of harbor at New Haven—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce of New Haven, Conn., for forest reservation in Southern Appalachian and White Mountains—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. SULLIVAN: Petition of Jamaica Plain News, and Christian Endeavor World, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Ohio: Petition of Times-Democrat, of Muscogee, Ind. T., and Columbus Citizen, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Ex-Soldiers and Sailors' Association of Franklin County, Ohio, for bill for increase of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WADSWORTH: Petition of Union Sun, Lockport, N. Y., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WELBORN: Petition of citizens of Saline and Lafayette counties, Mo., for appropriation for work on Missouri River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of the Leader, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of city of Glasgow, Mo.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILEY of Alabama: Petition of Montgomery Times, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. YOUNG: Petition of Knights of Columbus, Hancock, Mich., for a bill making October 12 of each year a public holiday, to be called "Columbus Day"—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of New York State Pharmaceutical Association, for reorganization of Medical Corps of United States Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, January 4, 1907.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

COMMITTEE APPOINTMENT.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to announce the following committee appointment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Chair appoints Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT, of California, a member of the Committee on Mines and Mining in the place of Mr. Williamson, of Oregon, who has not appeared and taken his seat in this House.

The SPEAKER. In connection with this appointment the Chair desires to say that Mr. Williamson was appointed as a member of the Committee on Mines and Mining at the beginning of the first session of this Congress. In accordance with the parliamentary law, as laid down in Jefferson's Manual, a Member-elect may be named on a committee before he has qualified. There are quite a number of early precedents in similar cases where Members had been appointed to committees before taking their seats and afterwards were removed from the committees by the Speaker because of nonappearance, and in order to make room for the appointment of other Members in their places. The Chair is inclined to the opinion on all of the precedents that this appointment is in harmony with the precedents, but prefers to say that if there be no objection the appointment will stand. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection.

WAR CLAIMS.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House, Mr. RODENBERG in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar under the rule. The Clerk will report the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 225.

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee take up the bill H. R. 19003, the omnibus bill.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for order. It is not possible to hear the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania or the bill to which he refers.

Mr. MAHON. It is the omnibus bill.

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask how the bill gets before the House?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves to take up the bill. It is not yet before the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 19003) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act, and to provide for the payment of French spoliation claims recommended by the Court of Claims, under the provisions of the acts approved January 20, 1885, and March 3, 1891, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Will the committee take up this bill?

Mr. MANN. It has not been possible to hear at this place in the Hall what the motion is or what the bill is.

The CHAIRMAN. The motion is that the committee take up the bill the title of which has just been read.

Mr. SIMS. I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on War Claims if this bill contains anything but the findings of the Court of Claims?

Mr. MAHON. And four miscellaneous claims.

The title of the bill was again reported.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Chairman, I ask this question, and I would like to have a reply: Does this bill contain any items except those that have been passed on by the Court of Claims?

Mr. MAHON. I will tell you in a minute. There are four miscellaneous claims.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Pennsylvania if he can tell us where a copy of this bill can be obtained. I sent to the document room and there were none there.

Mr. MAHON. I will give the gentleman a copy.

Mr. SIMS. I understand the gentleman to say that there are four claims that have not been passed upon by the Court of Claims?

Mr. MAHON. There are six miscellaneous claims.

Mr. SIMS. That have not been passed upon by the Court of Claims?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. SIMS. Does this bill propose to refer these to the court to pass upon or to make the appropriation for them direct?

Mr. MAHON. The facts as to what is due to these people have been ascertained in the Departments, and it is not necessary to send them to the court.

Mr. SIMS. Does the report show what each of these claims is for—what they are? I have been unable to see what they are for.

Mr. MAHON. Yes, sir. I will have the reports read when we reach them.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the bill be taken up?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Is the motion subject to debate?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I make the point of order that the bill is now in order, and it is not necessary to vote upon the question of taking up the bill. The bill comes up on the call of the Chairman and is now before the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The bill is not the first bill on the Calendar.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I make the point of order that the committee has the right to call up any of the bills on the Calendar, not necessarily in the order in which they stand on the Calendar, but the order in which they shall be called is to be determined by the Chairman.

Mr. MAHON. I make this motion because the first bill on the Calendar is one to refer a matter to the Court of Claims, introduced by Mr. HAUGEN, of Iowa. He is not in the House. The next bill is one in which Mr. FULKERSON, of Missouri, is much interested, and Mr. FULKERSON is not here. This bill comes third, so I have called it up.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the bill be taken up?

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk proceeded to report the bill.

Mr. MAHON. I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. PAYNE. I hope we will have better order. It is impossible to hear what is going on.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, as it is not possible to obtain a copy of the bill, I object.

The bill was read at length.

During the reading—

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the further first reading of the bill.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I object, Mr. Chairman.

The Clerk resumed and completed the reading of the bill, and then proceeded to read the committee amendments.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, is this a part of the first reading of the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. This completes the first reading of the bill.

Mr. MANN. Has the first reading of the bill been completed?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; it has.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to make a point of order on this bill, or so much of it as relates to the French spoliation claims, on the ground that the Committee on War Claims has no jurisdiction to report a bill of this sort, it being a private bill and subject to a point of order at this time.

I may say, Mr. Chairman, that the rules provide that all bills carrying private or domestic claims and demands, other than war claims against the United States, shall be referred to the Committee on Claims. Bills providing for claims arising from any war in which the United States has been engaged shall be referred to the Committee on War Claims.

It has been the universal custom and practice in the House that bills providing for the payment of French spoliation claims shall be referred to the Committee on Claims and not to the Committee on War Claims. Now, I insist that the Committee on War Claims can not enlarge its jurisdiction in violation of the rules of the House because a bill may be introduced carrying one claim properly referable to that committee, but including a large number of claims properly referable to the Committee on Claims. If that could be allowed, any committee dealing with private bills could obtain jurisdiction of any kind of a bill by putting one section in the bill properly referable to that committee, and including in the bill a number of things properly referable to some other committee. I understand, of course, the reason that is given in this case. It has been the custom and the practice heretofore that when the House passed an omnibus war-claims bill and it went to the Senate, that the Senate amended the bill, as it had a right to do, by adding to that bill French spoliation claims. But that is a matter that deals with the rules of the Senate, with which we have nothing to do, and we have the right, I think, to insist that where one committee has for years entertained jurisdiction over these claims, perhaps favoring or disfavoring certain of them, that that committee shall retain the jurisdiction which the rules give to the committee and not have the jurisdiction taken by another committee, no matter what the reason may be, and no matter how justifiable that reason may seem. If the Committee on War Claims think they ought to have jurisdiction of French spoliation claims, then they ought to ask for the amendment of the rules of the House and have these claims sent to their committee, instead of to the committee that the rules now provide for.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I have no disagreement with the gentleman about the technical correctness of the point of order which he makes. I do not think the Committee on Claims of this House, since I have been a Member, during the last fourteen years, have ever reported a French spoliation claim to the House. The Senate has one Committee on Claims, which handles all claims presented before that body. When we pass an omnibus bill, they put these French spoliation claims on, as they did during the last Congress. Then we go into conference, and the conference committee, consisting of members of the War Claims Committee of the House, must take up these French spoliation claims. There was a long contest in the last Congress over a lot of these claims, which were stricken out until we knew more about them. We thought they needed careful investigation. Now, the committee took up those claims and examined them carefully. They did not have them all in here. We put them in the bill, so that when we get to conference the House Committee on War Claims will be familiar with them. Now, it was only out of due precaution that this was done, knowing that any French spoliation claims which were put on the bill in the Senate would in conference go to the Committee on War Claims of the House eventually. If the gentleman insists on his point of order, he is right, and I do not object to it. The Senate will put these claims in the bill.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the point of order of the gentleman from Illinois

[Mr. MANN] comes too late. I do not know much about parliamentary law, but recall that a few days ago we had a similar question up. A bill had been improperly referred to a committee, which reported. A similar point of order was made, and the Speaker, as I recall it, ruled that the point of order came too late.

Mr. MANN. Will my distinguished friend permit me to make a suggestion?

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is talking about a public bill, with reference to which one rule prevails; but this is a private bill, in reference to which another and an entirely different rule prevails. The point of order does not come too late on a private bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state the time to make the point of order is after the bill has been read, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] made the point of order in sufficient time.

Mr. MAHON. It is only a question of procedure, Mr. Chairman. I have no objection to the gentleman's point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. In the opinion of the Chair, there is no question that such portion of the bill as relates to the French spoliation claims belongs properly to the jurisdiction of the Committee on Claims, and for that reason the Chair will sustain the point of order of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], and order those portions of the bill relating to French spoliation claims to be stricken from the bill. Can the gentleman from Pennsylvania indicate that portion of the bill relating to French spoliation claims?

Mr. MAHON. Yes; it will be found on page 25, commencing with line 17, and from that on to the end of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now read the bill by paragraphs for amendment.

Mr. MANN. Oh, Mr. Chairman, one moment. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] desire to consume any of his time? If not, I desire to take the floor.

Mr. MAHON. This bill is all one section and will have to be read first, and then we will take the bill up for amendment.

Mr. MANN. I am talking about general debate.

Mr. MAHON. I mean that we will have to read the bill the second time. It is only one section.

Mr. MANN. But the gentleman understands that after the bill has been read for amendment he can cut off debate in ten minutes' time.

Mr. MAHON. Well, go ahead. If the gentleman wants to kill it, I say kill it; I do not care.

Mr. MANN. Oh, I want to get some information about the bill.

Mr. MAHON. I am ready to give it to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman desires to occupy his time——

Mr. MAHON. I will take the floor in my own right. How much time does the gentleman from Illinois want?

Mr. MANN. Oh, I am not asking the gentleman for any time for myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. MANN. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that we ought to have some explanation of the bill.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, the first part of the bill is made up of findings of the Court of Claims for stores and supplies under the Bowman Act and for property rented under the Tucker Act. Under these two acts of Congress, by resolution, these claims have been sent by Congress to the Court of Claims to ascertain the facts. After the Court of Claims has investigated them and has found the facts, they have been reported back to this House, and they were then referred to the Committee on War Claims. Of course we included them in the bill. The French spoliation claims have gone out.

Mr. Chairman, I now reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman, in view of the fact that there can be no debate practically upon the bill under the five-minute rule, if he will explain to us these miscellaneous claims that are in the bill?

Mr. MAHON. I will yield to the gentleman when we reach them, if he wants to find out.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman understands that he will have no time to yield when the claims are reached, and that anybody can offer an amendment.

Mr. MAHON. Let the gentleman take the floor. I reserve the balance of my time. Let the gentleman attack any claim in this bill, and I will reply to him in due season. Let him go ahead, and I will ask him questions in his time.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, it is a remarkable circumstance that the chairman of the committee, distinguished as he is, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON], bringing a bill into the House covering a large number of claims, involving nearly a million of dollars, declines to explain any one item in the bill in his own time. I say it is a remarkable circumstance. Nobody in the House knows what these claims are unless it be the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania and the members of his committee. It was impossible to obtain a copy of the bill this morning from the document room for a considerable length of time. I asked for a copy of this bill in the document room days or weeks ago and obtained no copy. Yet, when the bill is presented to the House, our distinguished chairman of that committee declines to explain an item in the bill in the presentation of the bill to the House.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman what item he wants me to explain. It will take me five hours to explain every one.

Mr. MANN. I asked the gentleman to explain, for instance, the miscellaneous claims which have been allowed by no court, which have been passed upon by nobody, so far as I know, which are not referred to specifically in any way in the report of the committee, which have not a word of explanation in the report of the committee, which carry thousands of dollars. Who knows what those claims are for? Nobody in the House, unless it be the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, and he declines to explain the claims.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I will explain it in my own way and in my own time.

Mr. MANN. I suppose so.

Mr. MAHON. This bill carries a great many claims, and I do not propose to explain any court findings of seven judges. If the gentleman wants any information we have the findings of the court on every one of these court claims.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman can not consume my time, having declined to use his own time.

Mr. MAHON. Go ahead, I understand the gentleman's purpose fully.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman says he will explain these claims after I have called attention to them. It is the duty of the gentleman to explain the claims when he brings the bill into the House and when the question is asked of him. It is not the duty of the chairman to present the bill and wait until somebody else points to a specific provision of the bill before he is willing to make explanation of it. Here is a claim on page 34 of the bill which I know, providing that there shall be paid to the legal representatives of Samuel Schiffer, deceased, New York County, N. Y., $73,022.46. What is it for? A legal claim? No. Any reason given for the payment of the claim? No. Any report made by the committee showing why the claim should be paid? No. Any line in the report on the subject? No. Any explanation by the chairman of the committee bringing in the bill? No. What is the claim? It is a gratuity proposed to be paid by the Government. Has it ever been referred to the Committee on Claims under the Bowman Act? No. Has it ever been referred to the Court of Claims under the Tucker Act? No. Has it ever been passed upon by the House favorably? No. What right has that claim in the bill? The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania says that this bill covers claims which have been passed upon by the Court of Claims. There are hundreds of claims pending in this House not yet passed upon by the Court of Claims which the gentleman from Pennsylvania and his committee decline to put in this bill. Why did they put this claim in? I do not wonder the gentleman from Pennsylvania did not explain the claim in the first instance. It will be a difficult matter to give any reasonable explanation for putting it in the bill. The man, Mr. Schiffer, has no claim against the Government. He is entitled to not the payment of a dollar. He had his claim adjudicated by the Court of Claims and it was thrown out of court. His claim went to the Supreme Court of the United States and was thrown out by that court, and yet the Committee on War Claims brings that claim to the House in an omnibus bill and proposes, without a word of explanation, to pay the heirs of this man or his estate $73,000.

Mr. GARRETT. What was his claim?

Mr. MANN. His claim arose in this way. He went South and bought cotton during the war. Cotton had been accepted by the Government from various people in the South, and the cotton having been turned over to the Government, he bought their certificates. Of course they received the money. The Supreme Court and the Court of Claims held that under the circumstances he was not entitled to be dealing in cotton, that he had no right to be there buying cotton, that he was not entitled to maintain any claim against the Government in reference to the cotton. I do not know whether he ought to have been paid any money or not. He presented his case to the Court of Claims of the United States and it was rejected. His claim went to the Supreme Court of the United States on appeal and the rejection was sustained, and yet without a line in the report, without a word given to the House in defense of the claim in an omnibus claim bill, lined up by States, so as to make it difficult for Members of the House to vote against it, because they would be voting against the interest of some constituent of their State, this claim is brought into the House, as rank and unjust a claim, in my opinion, so far as its present status is concerned, as could be well imagined.

Now, there are other of the miscellaneous claims. I do not know what they are. I happened to see, by a mere accident probably, this claim under the head of "Miscellaneous Claims"—the first one—and I happened to remember that I had read some report somewhere in reference to the Schiffer claim and had the information. I do not recognize the other claims, but no explanation is offered of those.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] would have us believe, however, he ought to give no explanation of any of the claims allowed by the Court of Claims under the Bowman Act. Mr. Chairman, it is a fortunate circumstance in our country that the American people, as a rule, are perfectly willing to accept the judgment of the court as decisive upon any proposition properly submitted to that court. And hence when we see that the Court of Claims has allowed a claim after a hearing, the disposition of Congress is to pay the claim, supposing that the Court of Claims has carefully considered it, has disposed of it upon its merits, and that the Court of Claims has declared upon the merits of the case, and that the Government owes the money.

What was the Bowman Act under which these claims are referred to the Committee on Claims? The Bowman Act was passed in 1883, and provided:

That whenever a claim or matter is pending before any committee of the Senate or House of Representatives, or before either House of Congress, which involves the investigation and determination of facts, the committee or House may cause the same, with the vouchers, papers, proofs, and documents pertaining thereto, to be transmitted to the Court of Claims of the United States, and the same shall there be proceeded in under such rules as the court may adopt. When the facts shall have been found the court shall not enter judgment thereon, but shall report the same to the committee or to the House by which the case was transmitted for its consideration.

The Court of Claims practically passes simply upon the papers which are presented when the claim is filed with Congress. It would be a peculiarly constituted court, passing merely upon the papers laid before it by the plaintiff, that did not find a case in favor of the plaintiff. It would be a peculiar court, passing upon claims upon papers presented by the claimant, who did not find facts in favor of the plaintiff. It is true that under this act the Attorney-General of the United States is authorized to appear in defense. It is also true that under the Bowman Act claims which have been allowed by that court have been universally considered of little validity so far as final judgment was concerned. It was the custom for years, or some time, at least, under this act, for different departments of the Government which were given the same authority as the committee to refer claims under the Bowman Act for adjudication, and I think it has been the universal, or the uniform, history of Congress never to permit any of those claims to be included in an appropriation bill, although a mere claim audited by the department can go into a deficiency bill. These claims have no standing so far as an adjudication is concerned. It is merely the same as though the committee should report the facts in the case. If the committee has obtained facts through the Court of Claims which the committee might have obtained itself, of course those facts should have been given to Congress. The House of Representatives and the members are entitled to know what the facts are in reference to these claims. I notice——

Mr. GARRETT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. GARRETT. Do I understand that on claims which are referred under the Bowman Act no additional proof is taken—nothing except just ex parte statements that are sent over?

Mr. MANN. No additional proof is required.

Mr. GARRETT. But when the Government attorney appears there he has the right to take evidence, has he not?

Mr. MANN. I presume so.

Mr. GRONNA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. GRONNA. Has this particular claim been referred to the Court of Claims?

Mr. MANN. This claim I referred to, the Schiffer claim, has not been referred to the Court of Claims. It was originally brought before the Court of Claims under a law allowing the same to be brought there, and was thrown out, as I understand it. It never has been referred to the Court of Claims. Now, there are other of these miscellaneous claims. Here is one to a gentleman by the name of J. B. Orbison, of Butler County, Pa., $300, being the sum unlawfully collected from him by the board of enrollment in 1863. Also the same amount to William G. Keats, of Walworth County, Wis. There are a number of these claims pending before the Committee on War Claims, some of which they have reported favorably upon. Why does the committee take out those two claims and put them in this bill and leave other claims for the future tender consideration of special bills?

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MAHON. I want to answer the gentleman's question on that. We have a great many that we refuse to report, because there is no merit in the cases. These are the only two that the committee are willing to report.

Mr. MANN. Are these the only two that the gentleman's committee has reported?

Mr. MAHON. The balance we have refused to report, because they had no merit.

Mr. MANN. Of course, I take the gentleman's statement. I was under the impression that the committee had already reported some other claims besides these two. I thought the committee had reported a claim of a man in Missouri for $300 for money which they claimed was unlawfully collected from him.

Mr. OTJEN. Mr. Chairman, as the honorable gentleman from Illinois has criticised the Schiffer claim, I ask that the report be read for the information of the committee during my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the report will be read in the gentleman's time.

Mr. MANN. I would ask the gentleman what report he is going to have read?

Mr. OTJEN. It is on the claim of Samuel Schiffer.

Mr. MANN. I have examined the report on this bill, and find nothing in it referring to the Schiffer claim.

Mr. OTJEN. There was a separate report made on it, and I think if the gentleman had been diligent he could have found it.

Mr. MANN. I do not want the House to understand, after I have said that there was nothing in the report of this bill on that subject, that the gentleman was having read the report on this bill.

Mr. OTJEN. The report on this bill does not bear on the Schiffer claim. This was separately reported.

Mr. MANN. I found that report.

Mr. OTJEN. I ask for the reading of the report.

The report was read as follows:

[To accompany H. R. 16201.]

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 16201) for the relief of the legal representatives of Samuel Schiffer, deceased, submit the following report:

A favorable report on this case was made by this committee in the Fifty-eighth Congress. The facts involved are set forth in that report, which is adopted and made part of this report, a copy being hereto appended.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

[House Report No. 116, Fifty-eighth Congress, second session.]

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred House bill 5990, respectfully submit the following report, and also refer to House Report No. 4041, Fifty-first Congress, second session, for the full text of certain documents herein quoted.

Prior to the war of the rebellion the late firm of Schiffer & Co. were largely engaged in the cotton trade, with extensive southern connections, especially in and about Savannah. When the war broke out many southern merchants were heavily indebted to them.

It was generally understood at this time, by both the citizens and the Federal authorities, that the permanent occupation of belligerent territory restored the freedom of business intercourse between its citizens and those of the North. This is evidenced by the policy adopted by the Government of appointing an agent for the purpose of collecting property in such territory and of recognizing and encouraging permits to purchase issued by such agent. Millions of dollars of such transactions were finally consummated under circumstances identical with those in this case, and it was not until the Supreme Court rendered its decision in the case of Lane (8 Wall., 185), December 29, 1869, that it was discovered that the nonintercourse laws, which were not penal in character, had been violated thereby. In many of these transactions the Government had a direct pecuniary interest, to the extent of one-fourth of the profits, and in all it profited by the consummation of its political policy. The President himself was a party to these illegal proceedings, and in these very cases issued a permit, pass, or license to Schiffer's agents, guaranteeing them safe conduct in locating and acquiring cotton "to be purchased near Savannah, Ga.," and brought through the Federal lines. The parties to this transaction were Hanson A. Risley, "an authorized agent of the Treasury Department," and Abraham Lincoln on the one part and J. Schiffer & Co. and James B. Stewart on the other. No suggestion of bad faith or moral turpitude can be made against one party without impunging the other.

When Schiffer's agents reached Savannah early in 1865 they found all of the cotton in that neighborhood nominally seized by the military forces. The provost-marshal had directed all owners of cotton to report the same to him, and it was being then transported to New York as rapidly as vessels for that purpose could be secured.

In this state of affairs Schiffer's agents made purchases from fifteen different parties of their rights to the proceeds of their cotton when sold, in consideration therefor canceling the indebtedness of such parties to them and paying them the balance, when any, in cash.

The loyalty of these fifteen original owners is fully established in suits brought in the Court of Claims.

The cotton was sold in New York by Simeon Draper, the selling agent of the Government, and the proceeds, less expenses, were deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the "Abandoned and captured property fund," where it still remains.

The original owners of the cotton instituted suits in the Court of Claims in their own names for the use of Schiffer & Co., under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 12, 1863. One case only came to trial, that of Solomon Cutner. (6 Ct. Cls., 415; 17 Wall., 517.) The Supreme Court summarily disposed of the case by saying that intercourse between the inhabitants of the belligerant sections was still prohibited when the sales were consummated, in March, 1865, and was therefore clearly illegal. It said:

"The sale being illegal, suit can not be sustained for the benefit of the vendees. It can not be sustained for Cutner's own benefit because he received the full consideration of the cotton, and had no interest remaining."

It is hard to understand how a transaction between these claimants and Schiffer, which could not legally invest the latter with title, was yet sufficient to divest title from the former, and it is still more difficult to understand upon what authority a transaction of this kind could be held to have invested the United States with title to this property—legal, equitable, or moral. Upon every consideration of equity and sound morality the proceeds of this cotton belonged to either Schiffer or the original claimants, and the latter having received full consideration for their property, and no longer making any claim thereto, Schiffer's equitable rights became paramount.

It should be borne in mind that the act of 1863 was in no sense a penal one, and that there could be no confiscation thereunder. It was, on the contrary, a remedial statute, pure and simple, the sole purpose of which was the preservation of property rights.

But for the accident of Schiffer's place of residence he would have recovered in the Court of Claims. After the President's proclamation of amnesty he would have recovered even if he had lived south of Mason and Dixon's line, had been in active rebellion against the Government, and red-handed in secession instead of a devoted Union man.

Your committee can see no sound reason in law, equity, or good morals why a geographical residence, either North or South, should, at this time, work a forfeiture to or confiscation by the Government of any property, and especially of property which was acquired as this was, by the active connivance of the Government, and where there is no suggestion of any intentional wrongdoing, but, on the contrary, an admittedly honest mistake on both sides.

The nonintercourse laws grew out of the necessities and perils which beset the Government during the war of the rebellion. These necessities and dangers are now long since happily past, and it is, in the opinion of your committee, now only just and proper that a less stringent application of these laws should be applied. Technically, there was a violation of the law, to which both Schiffer and the Government authorities, including President Lincoln, were parties. These technical defenses should now be waived by the Government and restitution made of property to which it has no shadow of title, to the heirs of him who is entitled to every equitable consideration.

In the original fifteen suits brought in the Court of Claims the records are voluminous and the proof conclusive as to all the material facts, including the loyalty of the original owners of the cotton. The suits are as follows: Kesiah Hall, No. 2827; Abraham Leffler, No. 2829; Morris Rich, No. 2832; John Ruckert, No. 2833; A. Fawcett, No. 2834; John Elkan, No. 2835; Mary Haley, No. 2836; A. B. Wissolowski, No. 2838; Lewis Levi, No. 2839; Raphael Cohen, No. 2840; Solomon Cutner, No. 2841; L. Hohenstein, No. 2845; Hannah Kenney, No. 3444; Hannah Fowler, No. 3445, and S. W. Silverhill, No. 3447.

The aggregate amount of the proceeds of the cotton now in the Treasury, according to the official report, is $73,022.46.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay this amount to the party equitably entitled thereto.

Mr. OTJEN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HEPBURN. Will the gentleman allow me just a moment to ask a question of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. MAHON. Certainly.

Mr. HEPBURN. As I understand this last report, it is alleged that the original owners of this cotton were people who could and did establish their loyalty; that the proceeds of this cotton when sold by Draper in New York were covered into the Treasury and are now in the Treasury. Do I understand those to be the facts?

Mr. OTJEN. I understand those to be the facts.

Mr. HEPBURN. Now I want to know, if that is true, why they can not recover this amount from the Secretary of the Treasury without any act of Congress or without any action at law, in the Court of Claims, simply upon the establishment of these facts? The law as it exists to-day is ample for that purpose. If it is true that the loyalty of the original owners was established, that this cotton was seized by the Government and it went into the hands of this gentleman, Draper, that it was converted into money and by him covered into the Treasury, there is ample legislation now for the recovery; for these are the essential facts that must be established to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, without any other legislation than that which now exists, to make payment.

Mr. OTJEN. This report was made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON], who is more familiar with it than I am, and I yield to him to answer that question.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I reported this bill during the last Congress and this one. I did not know Mr. Schiffer or his wife or children; but I am ready to stand by my report. If there is anyone in the United States who is entitled to this money, it is the wife of Mr. Schiffer and his children. In answer to the question of my friend, I will say that he knows as well as I know that Congress may pass laws and the Treasury officials will interpret them, and very frequently the effect of their interpretation is to repeal the laws of Congress and to make laws. They actually refuse to pay these claims unless Congress appropriates the money for it, and the money has been paid into the Treasury. What are the facts in this case? They are simply these: That this man was doing a large business in New York when the war broke out. There were reasons, Mr. Chairman, why Schiffer should get this cotton north. The more cotton we got into our ports the less was left for the blockade runners to carry to England and bring back gold to the Confederate States. Mr. Schiffer, under a permit given by the President and signed by the officers of the Treasury, was authorized to go down South and attempt to collect his debts and take it in cotton, which he did, losing a large amount. The only embargo was that he should deal with loyal men, and he dealt with fifteen old debtors that were found, not by the Court of Claims, but by the Supreme Court of the United States, to have been loyal. Now, then, the Treasury Department refuses to pay him this money, although the officials state that it has been in the Treasury for years, and if interest were to be paid upon it it would be three times the amount that it is now proposed to pay him. He went into the Supreme Court, where all the facts were found as stated. The fact was found that this money was in the Treasury, but the objection was raised in the court that he had violated the nonintercourse act. He knew nothing of it. It appears that President Lincoln knew nothing of it, and neither his Secretary of War nor the Commanding General knew anything of it. The violation of this act was the only reason which actuated the Supreme Court in refusing to render a judgment in his favor. Of course that decision was technically proper under the law, because the nonintercourse act stared him in the face.

Now, suppose he had lived in Georgia. Under the very same act of Congress General Sherman took $27,000,000 worth of cotton, and after deducting the expenses of sale over $16,000,000 were paid to men in the South. The nonintercourse act did not apply to southern men. That was their home. There are hundreds of cases where men in the Confederate army, men commanding brigades—Confederate brigadiers and Confederate colonels—were paid for cotton so taken. The question of loyalty was not raised against those men, because this was a trust fund. But when this man from New York comes into court, although these people who had been in rebellion against the Government received $16,000,000 out of this fund in the Treasury, this technical objection was raised against him that he had violated the nonintercourse act. In the last Congress I presented the case of Capt. Warren Mitchell, an old captain in the Army, who had a claim of $176,000. His claim passed this House and passed the Senate without a dissenting vote and the old man at last got his $176,000 that this Government had held for nearly twenty-eight years.

Now, this man Schiffer comes to Congress and asks that this money be paid him. I defy the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to point out any statement of mine in reference to this matter which is incorrect. The violation of the nonintercourse act was the only ground upon which the Supreme Court refused to allow judgment in favor of the claimant.

Mr. HEPBURN. Will the gentleman permit me?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. HEPBURN. Has this claim been presented to the Treasury Department?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. HEPBURN. What is the objection made by the Treasury Department?

Mr. MAHON. They turned him into court; told him to go to the Court of Claims. The case was sent there by the Department. It was tried by the Court of Claims and went to the Supreme Court, and all the facts are as I have stated. The Supreme Court refused to render judgment in favor of Mr. Schiffer because the nonintercourse law stared him in the face.

Mr. HEPBURN. The gentleman thinks that the Treasury Department, without some action of Congress, will refuse to make payments in cases like this? There is something in connection with this case that has not come to the knowledge of the gentleman, I am confident, because the Treasury Department has paid out millions of dollars in cases similar to this, as the facts are stated in this report. There are two essentials to entitle a man to secure his payment from the Treasury Department, namely, the establishment of the loyalty of the original owner of the cotton and that it went into the hands of Mr. Draper, the agent of the Government at New York, and that the proceeds from the sale of the cotton were by him covered into the Treasury. Any man who has a claim where these essential facts are shown can have his adjudication perfected in the Treasury Department and receive his money. That is the state of the law, and I assert that millions of dollars have been paid under that statute upon circumstances such as are narrated in this report.

Mr. MAHON. Will the gentleman allow me to make an explanation?

Mr. HEPBURN. Yes.

Mr. MAHON. This property was taken under the captured and abandoned property act.

Mr. HEPBURN. Yes.

Mr. MAHON. And that act expired by its own limitation in 1889. This man was then after his money. It had not been paid him yet when that act expired, and that ended it so far as that was concerned. Not only Mr. Schiffer, but other men went into court to establish their claims. Now, this man would have received judgment in his favor if the nonintercourse act had not been pleaded by the United States attorney against him. There is no question about that. Other cases were pending. The question of loyalty had been raised. There are four millions of this money in the Treasury yet. The question of loyalty was raised, as I said, and during the time that trial was in court—I think it was the Cline case—during the time the Supreme Court had under consideration the question of loyalty, as to whether it should enter into securing this money or not, the act expired by the limitation placed upon it. The Supreme Court in the Cline case held, first, that that money paid into the Treasury was a trust fund; second, that as to any man in the South who had money in the Treasury disloyalty was no bar any more; that under the proclamation of President Johnson, of August, 1867, if that owner of funds in the Treasury took the oath of allegiance, he was restored to his political, personal, and property rights, and that was a property right that he had in that fund as a trust fund. I say this act expired in 1889. The Treasury will not pay it because the act is not in force. Now, this man comes to Congress. He went into the court. He was not afraid of the court. He has established his case beyond all peradventure, and I have no doubt the Supreme Court was sorry that they had to knock this old man out of court. I say that the merits of this case, the equity, and everything surrounding, entitles this old man to this money which is in the Treasury of the United States. They have already got part of his money that he can not get back. He must come to Congress for relief. It is for you to give it to him or to refuse him. This is the last of these cases, I think, in our committee. In the case of John Mitchell and of Vogel, the old German down in Virginia, this Congress has given relief, and this case is on the same footing.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman says the act expired in 1889.

Mr. MAHON. I think I am right about that.

Mr. MANN. It is a long time between the time this cotton was sold and 1889.

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Why was not the claim presented during that time?

Mr. MAHON. Now, here is a resolution of Congress which I shall read:

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all moneys which have been received by any officer or employe(e) of the Government, or any Department thereof, from sales of captured and abandoned property in the late insurrectionary districts, under or under color of the several acts of Congress providing for the collection and sale of such property, and which have not already been actually covered into the Treasury, shall immediately be paid into the Treasury of the United States, together with any interest which has been received or accrued thereon.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That if any officer or person having the custody, possession, or control of any money derived or arising from the sale or other disposition of any such property mentioned in the preceding section shall convert the same to his own use, or shall refuse or neglect for the space of thirty days next after the passage of this resolution to pay the same into the Treasury of the United States, or shall in any wise pay away or dispose of the same otherwise than by paying the same into the Treasury as aforesaid, shall be deemed and held guilty of embezzling the public money of the United States, and shall be punished therefor by imprisonment for a term of not more than ten years, and shall pay a fine equal to the sum so embezzled.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That a sum of the proceeds of such sales not exceeding seventy-five thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the payment of the necessary expenses incurred by or under the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury for incidental expenses in acting under the laws respecting the collection and disposition of captured and abandoned property, and for the necessary expenses of defending, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, such suits as have been brought against him or his agents in the premises, and for prosecuting suits in the United States for the recovery of such property, and for providing for the defense of the United States against suits for or in respect to such property in the Court of Claims.

They held a man had to go to the Court of Claims, whether right or wrong. This money, having been covered into the Treasury of the United States, can not be paid out except by an act of Congress.

Now, as to these other small cases, I might say that every omnibus bill passed through this House has carried miscellaneous cases. This case would not be in this bill if the court had not found all the facts. The court has found all the facts about this bill. There is no use of sending it back to the court again, because the same plea would be raised against this old man as was raised before. Here is the case of Myron Powers, late a major of the Ninth Colored Infantry. He has a little bill, which this man is entitled to beyond all controversy—some four or five hundred dollars. Now, why send him to the Court of Claims? He would have to employ an attorney, and the Court of Claims would go to the War Department, and it would be purely a matter of record evidence. That is all. They would simply give the record to the Court of Claims that they have there now.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Why would it be necessary for an officer or an enlisted man in the Army to go to the Court of Claims to recover his traveling pay, which the law provides for and for which we appropriate?

Mr. MAHON. Why, the Department admits they owe him this money, but they will not give it to him unless we appropriate. They say they have no funds.

Mr. MANN. But we appropriate for such purposes. The Department pays out every year not only thousands, but yet the gentleman says that the Department admits that they have the money and will not pay. If that is the case as against this man, why would not the same be true as against the 55,000 other men in the Army?

Mr. MAHON. Well, that is no credit to the Government. I will say of the United States Government, as stated by Mr. Garfield, when a Member of this House, that the United States Government for her treatment of her private citizens, if she got her just deserts, would be wearing a striped suit and be in the penitentiary for life. The gentleman knows, I do not care how good a claim is or how honest it is, I do not care what equity it has, it is put on this Private Calendar of war claims and——

Mr. PAYNE. How long has it been since Garfield said that?

Mr. MAHON. When he was a Member of Congress. I can go and get it.

Mr. PAYNE. That is long before we had such a bill as an omnibus claim bill.

Mr. MAHON. I know that was the time when it went on the Private Calendar——

Mr. PAYNE. Was it not long before the House legislated for any payment of French spoliation claims?

Mr. MAHON. I do not know anything about that.

Mr. PAYNE. This kind of a bill was unknown to Congress at that time.

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. Does not the gentleman think if Garfield was here to-day he would condemn this kind of legislation, especially the omnibus claims bill that came back from another House at the last session?

Mr. MAHON. No; because Garfield of Ohio and the gentleman from New York look at claims in a different light.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield now for a question?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is it not a fact, notwithstanding the quotation the gentleman has made from President Garfield, that any claim against the Government which is audited by any Department at once goes in the general deficiency bill?

Mr. MAHON. No, sir; not claims.

Mr. MANN. Well, the gentleman is wrong; more information is coming to him.

Mr. MAHON. Well, I have it and a good deal of it.

Mr. MANN. Any audited claim becomes in order on that bill, and they are all put on that bill, and they are put on it by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MAHON. Certain claims audited by the War Department.

Mr. MANN. Of course claims which are not audited do not go on the bill.

Mr. MAHON. Why, there are thousands of claims in this country which the Treasury Department under the law could not take control of and would not.

Mr. MANN. The Department can audit any claim except possibly these war claims.

Mr. MAHON. Well, I have studied this business for fourteen years, and I think I know something about it.

Mr. MANN. These claims against the Government for which there is due authority of law to incur——

Mr. MAHON. Can the Treasury audit a Bowman Act claim for storage and supplies?

Mr. MANN. Why, certainly, they could audit a claim if authorized.

Mr. MAHON. Why do not they do it?

Mr. MANN. If there is any law for storing supplies, and they are paying them every day. There are supplies all over the United States which are not audited and paid.

Mr. MAHON. You provide the money for payments under the War Department for the fiscal year ending the 1st of July, and every dollar of unexpended money will go back into the Treasury on that date, and any claim not paid will come back to Congress.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is again mistaken. The money does not go back the 1st of July.

Mr. MAHON. When does it go back?

Mr. MANN. Not for several years.

Mr. MAHON. Well, it gets there.

Mr. MANN. Well, the money does not go back into the Treasury for several years—until ample time is given to present claims and audit them. They pay these claims out of appropriations for previous years, and if the appropriations of previous years are exhausted they pay these claims in the general deficiency bill.

Mr. MAHON. Who passes on them?

Mr. MANN. And as to the gentleman's statement about that, there is no legal claim against the Government which can not be collected as easily as a claim can be collected against a private individual. I know an impression to the contrary prevails, but we provide methods for collecting all these claims, if they are legal claims.

Mr. MAHON. No, sir. You only provide in the case of the War Department for certain claims. You specify where the money shall be paid, do you not?

Mr. MANN. We make an appropriation. Of course the appropriation provides what the money is to be expended for, but one of the items is travel pay. The War Department has authority to allow travel pay; it not only has the authority to allow it, but is required to allow travel pay. Now, why? I do not say there may not be an instance where it was not legal, but what is the reason?

Mr. MAHON. Let me explain.

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. MAHON. When you go to an Auditor of the War Department, he may know the law and he may not, but very often——

Mr. MANN. That is the case with all of us.

Mr. MAHON. He either does know it or he does not know it. Then he takes it to the Comptroller, and he approves that finding. Right or wrong, from that Comptroller there is no appeal, and which is an outrage on the people of this Government who have dealings with that Department; and thousands of these cases have come up where auditors have turned them down unjustly and illegally, and the claimants have no place to go except to Congress.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman says there is no appeal from the Comptroller. Now, whoever has an appeal against the Government can present it to the Court of Claims, and that is an appeal from the Comptroller.

Mr. MAHON. I can tell the gentleman a good many claims that can not be appealed.

Mr. MANN. All legal claims against the Government, all evidences of indebtedness, which are legal in their character, every claim which could be sued upon against a private individual, except in the case of a tort, can be presented to the Court of Claims and allowed by the court and paid as a matter of cost——

Mr. MAHON. The gentleman forgets this fact that when this property was taken from loyal people the great civil war was sweeping over the country, the Departments were disorganized, and claims were turned down. This property was taken, the evidence could not be reached, time had gone by, and so they flooded Congress with claims, and Congress created what was known as "the Court of Claims" under the Bowman and Tucker acts. They send these claims there, and does the gentleman say they would render a judgment on a few affidavits, which no court would do? I take it that it is the gentleman's judgment that they do not render findings in that way. An official from the Attorney-General's office, who is a Deputy Attorney-General, is notified when the cases are to be tried, and the attorney for the claimant is on hand. The claimant must offer his evidence either by deposition or in some way, and then the Government has the right to go out and take depositions to show that his testimony is not true, and after a fair trial the Court of Claims renders a finding of fact. Now, what is a finding of facts? First, it is a jurisdictional fact that the claimant's loyalty has been proved beyond all question. If that is not proven it is the end of the case. Second, that the stores and supplies were taken. If not all he alleged to be taken, the court finds how much—what was the value of those supplies in the market at the time they were taken. That is the next finding. Fourth, that the Government of the United States owes the man for stores and supplies furnished to the Army of the United States so many dollars. The court makes that report to Congress.

Now, neither Congress nor the committee could investigate all these claims. That is the trouble I have with this bill. Every time I bring it in the gentleman from Illinios [Mr. MANN] wants me to explain every little item. There are some 150 findings. I do not know anything about them. Congress said to the court, "You try the cases, ascertain the facts, and report back to Congress, and then we will appropriate for them." I would not like to report on these court's findings. The gentleman would not ask the Committee on War Claims to review the Court of Claims, would he? It would be disrespectful to the court. We do examine all of them; every one of these findings has been gone over carefully by the committee, and here they are. We do not propose to write every report.

Mr. MANN. The bunch of reports which the gentleman holds in his hands is not very large for the number of claims. It is not much bigger than the bill.

Mr. MAHON. I would say to the gentleman that here are the findings upon every case in this bill. If the gentleman desires any information as to court findings we can supply that information.

The Committee on War Claims are not going to review the court and are not going to reverse the court. They examine the findings, and if they are found to be in due form they place them in this bill for this House to consider. The committee do not care whether you pass the bill or do not. There is nothing personal in the matter to the committee. Can the gentleman tell me what percentage of those claims have passed? Just to show you what a good court you have, I will state that in the last five years that the average is not 4 per cent. They are taken up in this Court of Claims——

Mr. PAYNE. May I interrupt the gentleman at that point? Is that 4 per cent of the claims examined? There are thousands of claims that have been presented or referred to the court.

Mr. MAHON. That is what has been found by the court.

Mr. PAYNE. We see by the reports that there are thousands of cases that have gone there that have not been acted upon at all, and the committee say that the most of these will be finally rejected and some that they rejected; and it looks as though that 4 per cent was of the amount of claims that went to the Court of Claims——

Mr. MAHON. No.

Mr. PAYNE. Nine-tenths of which claims have not been acted upon by the court.

Mr. MANN. Will not my friend answer two questions at the same time? Is not the 4 per cent based upon the number of claims disposed of in this way, that a large number of claims are dismissed on motion without examination, and that you include that as a claim adjudicated?

Mr. MAHON. Yes; we do.

Mr. MANN. And that makes the 4 per cent of the claims, while the balance have never been prosecuted or the claims adjudicated.

Mr. MAHON. It is 4 per cent of all claims sent down for trial that are adjudicated. Now, it has been the policy for the last two or three years, when thousands of these bills have been introduced (in the last Congress there were 3,000 bills), we send them to the Court of Claims. The Attorney-General or his assistants go down there for their trial and whenever claims have reached a certain age they are dismissed. There will be over 1,200 cases dismissed this year because the claimants at this late day can not get the evidence to prove their claims. A great many have been dismissed. We send them there and that relieves the Member of Congress. When you send the claims to the Court of Claims, you are sending them to what may be known as the "Claim graveyard." Now, as to this claim of J. B. Orbison, of Butler County, the facts are that this was a colored man who wanted to enlist, and they would not muster him. They would not take him into the service, as there was no provision for enlisting colored men. The draft came along and they drafted him. They took from him the $300, notwithstanding the fact that he claimed he was not subject to draft, which he was not, but still the Government took his $300, and they have had it from that day to this; and we put that in this bill. This man is still living, a very old man. The Government took from him $300 unlawfully and this committee wants you to pay it back.

Now, as to the case of William G. Keats, of Walworth County, Wis. They drafted him, although he was a foreigner, a man who had not become a citizen of the United States, which was a violation of the specific statute.

Mr. MANN. Did he live in the United States, was he protected by the United States, was he enjoying the benefits of the United States, and then too mean to go and protect it for the benefits which he enjoyed?

Mr. MAHON. That is no argument.

Mr. MANN. It is a very strong argument.

Mr. MAHON. It only appeals to prejudice.

Mr. MANN. It appeals to common sense, to common decency, and to patriotism.

Mr. MAHON. When the Government of the United States takes $300 illegally from a man, I think it ought to do as the gentleman from Illinois would do, and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT] would do, and every Member of this House would do—if you have found you have taken money illegally, unconsciously, you would pay it.

Mr. MANN. Has the return of the money to these claimants not been provided for by law where proof was given showing that they were illegal?

Mr. MAHON. No, sir.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman will not deny that. If the gentleman will read the report, I expect he will find that.

Mr. MAHON. That act expired long ago.

Mr. MANN. Well, I say the gentleman knows that there was such an act.

Mr. MAHON. This comes down to the question of whether the Government can afford to take money illegally; and this provision is that the Government restore the money without interest. Now, here is the case of the Rev. George W. C. Smith, late second lieutenant. I tried to pass the bill last Congress in reference to that; and these are the only cases that we have down there now.

During the war the War Department, or some authority having the right to do so, fixed the minimum of a regiment at 1,000 men. Every regiment raised during the war had to have ten full companies, making a thousand men. They commissioned the colonel, the major, the adjutant, the captains, the lieutenants, and the chaplain to raise the regiment. These men went through the States where they lived, recruited men and mustered them into the service. The regiments reached perhaps six or seven hundred in number when the draft came on, and local bounties being offered and men hard to get, here were a number of officers who had parts of regiments running from five to eight hundred, who were in the service five or six or seven months, and some of them more than a year, rendering service to the Government, and some of them in the field, but not being able to raise their full complement of a thousand. The War Department disbanded those regiments. They did not send the men home, but distributed them among other regiments to fill up old regiments and sent these officers home. This magnanimous War Department that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] talks so much about, in its fairness, paid nothing to these officers for their services.

Mr. WALDO. Have all these claims in this bill been passed upon and judgment rendered for them by the Court of Claims?

Mr. MAHON. Yes; all but six small claims.

Mr. WALDO. Why have they not been sent to the Court of Claims?

Mr. MAHON. It would cost these men more to prosecute them in the Court of Claims than they are worth.

Now, that is this bill. You may pass it or defeat it as you please. The committee have discharged their duty, and have nothing personal in it except to see that this House pays these claimants what the courts say they are entitled to—pays Mr. Schiffer what he is absolutely entitled to in all fairness, and pays these six old soldiers their mileage and their pay for the time they were in the service of the Government.

Mr. MAHON. Will the gentleman explain any item in the bill at all in his own time?

Mr. MAHON. What item do you want explained?

Mr. MANN. I should like very much to have the gentleman explain the item on page 23:

To the Pennsylvania Company for insurance on lines and granting annuities, executor of Henry Etting, deceased, of Philadelphia County, $665.86.

Mr. MAHON. I will have the Clerk read the finding of the Court of Claims in reference to that item. Would the gentleman like to have me do that?

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman desires to do it in that way.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 5, 1906.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court, I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings of fact filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the resolution of the United States Senate, under the act of March 3, 1887, known as the "Tucker Act."

I am, very respectfully, yours, JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,
President of the Senate.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 10942–463. The Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, executor of Henry Etting, deceased, v. The United States.]

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for difference between sea pay and shore pay whilst claimant's decedent was serving as an officer in the Navy of the United States, to wit, a lieutenant, upon receiving and other ships belonging to the Navy was transmitted to the court by Senate resolution on the 4th day of June, 1902, referring Senate bill No. 5949, for proceedings and report under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1887.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 4th day of December, 1905. Messrs. Pennebaker & Jones appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by L. A. Pradt, esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The claimant in its petition makes substantially the following allegations:

This claim was previously presented to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department for settlement and was allowed by such accounting officers under the decision of this court and of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Strong v. The United States (125 U. S., 656), the sum thus allowed being $665.86. This action was reported to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury in Senate Executive Document No. 144, Fifty-first Congress, first session. In appropriating for said allowance (and others of like character) Congress made the following proviso: "That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition in the Court of Claims upon which the judgment was rendered, which, being affirmed by the Supreme Court, has been adopted by the accounting officers as the basis for the allowance of said claim." (Act approved September 30, 1890.)

Thereafter, pursuant to said proviso, the accounting officers readjusted said claim for such difference of pay, as the same had been settled under the said decision in United States v. Strong, and refused to allow that portion which accrued more than six years prior to July 17, 1886, the date on which the petition in the said case of Strong v. The United States was filed in the Court of Claims. Upon such readjustment there was found to be due, and then paid to claimant nothing out of said appropriation, and nothing, being the amount which accrued subsequent to July 16, 1880, and to which said proviso did not relate.

The accounting officers also found that the difference in pay between that received prior to July 16, 1880, and that to which claimant's decedent would have been entitled under the decision in The United States v. Strong had Congress not prohibited the payment of the same, was $665.86.

Subsequent appropriation statutes have contained the same proviso, and the accounting officers of the Treasury, pursuant to said provisions, have continuously refused to allow this and other similar claims, and the same are still unpaid.

The court, upon the evidence and the report of the Treasury Department, and after considering briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDING OF FACTS.

The claimant is a citizen of the United States and a resident of the county of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, and is the executor of Henry Etting, deceased, whose claim, under decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in The United States v. Strong (125 U. S., 656), was adjusted by the accounting officers, reported to Congress, and appropriated for as alleged in the petition.

The amount found due the claimant by the accounting officers under said decision was $665.86, and the amount paid claimant was nothing. The amount suspended under the proviso to the act of Congress approved September 30, 1890, and which still remains unpaid is $665.86 (six hundred and sixty-five dollars and eighty-six cents).

Filed December 18, 1905.

A true copy of the finding of facts as filed by the court.

Test this 5th day of January, 1906.

[SEAL.] JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield——

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I know I am a little thickheaded and always was. I was born that way. I listened to the reading just as carefully as I could. Everybody else in the House may understand it, but I do not. The gentleman will pardon me for asking a question: Is this $665.86 the amount that was barred by the six-year limitation or the amount that was not barred by the six-year limitation?

Mr. MAHON. I think it was the amount that was barred.

Mr. MANN. The report, I suppose, indicates that, but I could not tell by listening to it.

Mr. MAHON. The man is unquestionably entitled to his money. You can not plead the statute of limitations against the United States, and it is not fair to plead it on the other side.

Mr. MANN. Is this similar to the bill which has been reported from the gentleman's committee waiving the statute of limitations as to Army officers on longevity pay?

Mr. MAHON. This does not come under that.

Mr. MANN. I know; this is a naval matter.

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. But is this similar to that proposition?

Mr. MAHON. No. This man probably did not know his rights. He did not know about the statute of limitations, but when he went to make application for his money they pleaded the statute of limitations against him.

Mr. MANN. It was not a case of pleading the statute of limitations. The law provided that he could file his claim, but that the claim must not extend back of six years. Now, does this propose practically to override that law?

Mr. MAHON. Yes; in a case like this, where we believe that the man acted in good faith, and that he ought to have judgment, and that he was not guilty of gross laches.

Mr. MANN. But we have absolutely nothing in the report as to whether he was guilty of laches or not.

Mr. MAHON. That is all the committee gets from the court—the finding of facts.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will not understand that in anything I say I intentionally criticise the committee. The Committee on War Claims has not only my profound respect, but most of the time, in considering these bill, my profound sympathy.

Mr. MAHON. I say let the gentleman move to strike it out. I have no objection.

Mr. MANN. I am trying to get at what these claims consist of.

Mr. MAHON. Of course when a man comes here to get relief limitations and all that do not enter into it. That is what he comes here for. This man probably did not know, and it is not supposed that all these men living in the United States who were in the service knew of all the laws of Congress. He no doubt did allow the statute to bar him. But I do not know whether the gentleman can point out a case where there is a statute which runs as against a claim of the Government of the United States. Let the gentleman be a revenue collector, and a claim be put in after six years, and the Government will raise the bar, but the Government will follow you for eighty years afterwards if they find out that you owe them a dollar and a half.

Mr. MANN. It never has followed me yet in that respect.

Mr. MAHON. It is pleading the bar of the statute on one side and not upon the other, and in cases of this kind we do not say that the bar does not run, but these men come to Congress and they go to court, and they get the facts before Congress and the court. We act on principles of equity—does the Government owe this money to the man? The court says that it does. Now, it is simply a question for Congress to say whether this man shall be paid or not.

Mr. MANN. Is not this the case, that without Congressional action a man whose claim is against the Government has no standing anyway?

Mr. MAHON. No; he has not.

Mr. MANN. Thereupon a lot of claims come up out of the past which would not be allowed, which are not allowed by any government, and then Congress passed a law at the request of the claimant providing for the payment of those claims, but limiting the operation of that law to a certain period of time, which usually has been six years, the ordinary period of the statute of limitations. Then the people having been perfectly satisfied with that law at first, having filed their claims under that law and secured their claims under that law, set up as a precedent for paying other claims the allowance of those claims, without regard to any limitation at all. And does the gentleman believe, and does his committee in its action believe, that that is a proper course to take?

Mr. MAHON. We believe, the committee believes, and we think that Congress believes that when a man shows that he knew nothing of the law, and when he did file his claim, he can come to this representative body, the body that represents the people, and that there should be no restriction or limitation or anything of that kind on this body. If the man can show that he has a just and equitable claim that the Government owes him, then we believe that the Government ought to pay him. I want to say this to the gentleman. It is true that you could not sue the Government of the United States, nor could anybody without an enabling act of the legislature, but there is a compact between the citizens and the Government. The citizen promises to support the Government in time of stress, and there are times when the Government promises to take care of him. The trouble with this House is that the old laws have been enforced. Other nations have been more generous with people who suffered in war than has this nation.

Mr. MANN. With people who suffered in war?

Mr. MAHON. Yes; they have been more generous than this nation has been.

Mr. MANN. That will be news to the people of the other nations.

Mr. MAHON. They have abandoned long ago the doctrine that the man who lost his property should not be paid. That doctrine has been abandoned by the civilized peoples of the world. Let us take the Franco-Prussian war as an example. That war had scarcely ended when France, with that enormous indemnity which she had to pay—France almost on the verge of bankruptcy, without a dollar in the treasury and having to go out and borrow millions of dollars with which to pay that indemnity—very promptly, through her parliamentary body, appointed a commission. That commission went down along where those two armies contended, and in less than eight months paid every citizen of the Government of France, whether the property had been destroyed by the German army or by the French army. It was not a question of whether the property had been taken for the use of the French or for the use of the German army. It was not a question of whether the property had been destroyed or taken by the German army. The question was not that at all. But France, as a Government, in an open-hearted way, said that these people had stood by her, that these men had been in the ranks, and that now she, as a Government, would pay them for the losses that they had incurred, and that she did not care who destroyed that property, whether the French or the Germany army. And France paid $17,000,000 inside of a year—every loss was paid.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question now?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is France still paying war claims growing out of the Franco-Prussian war?

Mr. MAHON. I am coming to that. Notwithstanding the fact that we had had a civil war which lasted for four years, in which thousands of lives had been sacrificed—laid upon the altar of either side of the contending forces—notwithstanding the fact that untold millions had been expended, and that eleven of the Southern States had been prostrated, yet the States represented by the Northern Army—in other words, the United States—were greater and richer when the war closed than they were when the war commenced so far as resources were concerned.

There are plenty of these claims before the Committee on War Claims filed in the Treasury and War Departments and Quartermaster's Department in 1866, 1867, and 1868. My State alone filed over 1,800 claims for horses and supplies taken by the Union Army in the six counties in the border which I represent. Two cavalry officers, colonels, commissioned by the War Department, went into Adams, York, and my own county and took 800 horses from the people of that section, horses worth from $200 to $300. What did they do with them? They took them from these men and gave vouchers for them. Three regiments of cavalry were equipped, mounted, and sent to the field and remained in the field until the end of the war. These claims were piled up here, one man for one horse, another for two or three, and so on, and they were deviled by this Department until they got disgusted. Not a horse was paid for, because the farmers of that section will not stand around Washington waiting for three or four hundred dollars. Not a claim was paid.

Mr. MANN. Did not Congress pass a law providing expressly for the payment of those claims or claims for horses taken by the Treasury Department?

Mr. MAHON. No, sir.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is again mistaken. There is a law upon the statute books authorizing the Treasury Department to audit and pay claims for horses taken.

Mr. MAHON. I do know I was attorney for these people, and when we presented our claims the gentleman said that this major and this captain and this lieutenant did not have authority to take the horses from the people, and refused to recognize their vouchers and threw the people back on the legal proof that the officer had been commissioned directly from the War Department. Not only that. They stripped those five counties, not a barn nor building was left, and never paid those people one dollar. Now, I want to say that these people are making no demand; they have quit long ago. The treatment they received at the hands of this Government is infamous and outrageous, and it disgusted them, their sons, and children afterwards. Now, if Congress, or the powers that be, had appointed a commission to go among those loyal men who sacrificed their sons and their money, as did the men from your State, in addition to the immense loss that should be borne by the whole people of the Government, as France recognized, these bills would have been paid long ago and there would not be any war claims before Congress to-day, forty-five years after that war. It looks badly for this Congress to talk of "stale claims." They are not, because the men have been persistently knocking at the doors of Congress and Congress has refused to dispose of them. I have been fourteen years on the committee, and I think if I stayed fourteen years more I would like to be relieved. If the gentleman from Illinois had served on that committee that long, he would have gotten so well acquainted with the methods of the Departments at Washington City in paying people what they ought to pay them he would change his mind very greatly. Now, Mr. Chairman, I ask for the reading of the bill under the five-minute rule.

Mr. PAYNE. May I ask the gentleman a question? If I understand him, these claims that go to the Court of Claims after hearing—of course the hearing is largely ex parte on the part of the United States——

Mr. MAHON. If it is ex parte the Government consents to it.

Mr. PAYNE. Still the claimants are the only people who can get at the evidence usually. Does not the gentleman think, in view of the fact that only 4 per cent of those claims are found to be valid on such investigation, that which is largely one sided at least, almost ex parte, that Congress is justified in looking into these claims, and not simply handing over a check because some one presents them with an affidavit, and that after all the Congress of the United States and the Government of the United States is not so mean and outrageous and robberlike in its character and treatment of these claimants as the gentleman's declamation would seem to indicate?

I appeal to the gentleman's patriotism and sense of fairness and his knowledge of what has always been done in these cases, and in view of the fact of the small percentage of allowance, if his language, after all, does not seem to him to be almost extravagant when condemning the United States and the Congress of the United States?

Mr. MAHON. Not at all. The cause of the low percentage in the last three or four years is because these people have been held up, and forty years have gone by and nearly all of these people are dead. If these claims had been referred to the Court of Claims immediately after the war, they would have proven 80 or 90 per cent of them. The French spoliation claims have been largely reduced, and I think cases under the Bowman Act and the Tucker Act are about 300, because the percentage is getting so low that they can not prove their cases. The witnesses are dead. It is the same with an old soldier who is trying to prove his pension claim when he is required to get the affidavits of two or three officers and finds that they are dead, and the Department will not accept any other evidence.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman recommend that Congress pay these claims without evidence?

Mr. MAHON. No; but pay them with the little evidence that can be produced at this late day.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman want them all paid notwithstanding the fact that they can not produce the evidence?

Mr. MAHON. Pay what the court finds. It is the gentleman's court and mine. I do not know anything about these findings. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] does not know about them. It is a waste of time to talk about it.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman not think he ought to withdraw his extravagant criticism of Congress?

Mr. MAHON. No, sir; I emphasize it.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman is a part of Congress.

Mr. MAHON. I know I am.

Mr. PAYNE. And he is a citizen of the United States, and he ought to have some patriotic pride.

Mr. MAHON. I take no pride in a government that robs her people.

Mr. PAYNE. But with the bad names he has given here, and in view of the facts he has presented in this report, will he tell us on the floor of this House——

Mr. MAHON. I repeat it. This Government is more unfair, more dishonest, in refusing to pay the honest debts she owes her people than any government on the face of the earth. I am a part of the Government, and as chairman of the Committee on War Claims I have been trying to get them out.

Mr. PAYNE. I do not know so much about the other governments and what they do.

Mr. MAHON. It may be well for the gentleman to read up a little on them.

Mr. PAYNE. I think the Congress of the United States is disposed to be eminently fair and just in the payment of these claims, and that the people recognize the fact that they are not only to see that those claimants are paid, but that the interest of the taxpayers of the United States require that the Treasury shall not be robbed by unjust claims, and the duty is just as strong to look into these claims and see that none but honest claims get through as it is to see that honest claims get through.

Mr. MAHON. I hope the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] will carry that out when the river and harbor bill comes in. Further, I am not anxious to appear in any other light than that which I have stated.

Mr. PAYNE. Of course, if I can not appeal to the gentleman in that way, I am going to ask him another question. In line 7, page 19, the claim of Charles B. Stark, assignee, etc., $3,702, and the appropriation of $1,851 in this case, contained in the act of the last omnibus bill——

Mr. MAHON. What page?

Mr. PAYNE. Page 19, line 7. It appropriates double the amount to this gentleman, Mr. Stark, that is claimed, and that passed in the last omnibus bill. What new light has come to the committee?

Mr. MAHON. I will read the findings of the gentleman's court and mine to the gentleman, as follows:

[Court of Claims. Congressional, No. 11078. Charles B. Stark, assignee of Joseph C. Stark, deceased, v. The United States.]

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The following claim was referred to the court on the 2d day of March, 1903, by a resolution of the United States Senate, under an act of Congress approved March 3, 1887, known as the Tucker Act.

The claimant appeared and filed his petition in this court April 20, 1903, in which he makes the following allegations:

"That he is a citizen of the United States and a resident of the State of Missouri; that he is the sole owner of this claim; that during the war of the rebellion claimant's father was tenant in common with one Beverly G. Hilliard of an estate of about 675 acres in Robertson County, Tenn.; that on divers dates the military forces of the United States took from said estate property of the aggregate value of $14,377; that said property was used by the Army of the United States; that vouchers for said property were refused by officers commanding said troops; that said claimant was at all times loyal to the Government of the United States; that said claim was presented to the Quartermaster-General in 1873, and by him disallowed as to part of the property on the ground that it was not in his jurisdiction and part on the ground that it was seized before the claimant took the oath of allegiance; he did allow for three mules $400, and claimant got $200, being one-half belonging to said claimant; that the present claimant bought this claim at a sale duly authorized by the court."

The case was brought to a hearing on the 22d of November, 1904. Pennebaker & Jones appeared for the claimant, and the Attorney-General, by George M. Anderson, his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. It appears from the evidence that the deceased claimant, Joseph C. Stark, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout the war for the suppression of the rebellion.

II. It appears from the evidence that Beverly G. Hilliard, partner of the said Joseph C. Stark, also deceased, was not loyal to the Government of the United States throughout the war for the suppression of the rebellion.

III. Charles B. Stark, the present claimant in this cause, is the son of Joseph C. Stark, the original claimant, and he brings this suit in his own right by virtue of a bill of sale of and for said claim, made to him by H. C. Crunk, clerk and master of the chancery court of Robertson County, in the State of Tennessee, on the 20th day of January, 1896, pursuant to a decree duly rendered by the said court at the May term of 1895, whereby the said clerk and master was ordered to sell the said claim for cash publicly to the highest bidder.

IV. Joseph C. Stark and Beverly G. Hilliard, under the name of Stark & Hilliard, owned, as tenants in common, and operated for joint account, a farm in Robertson County, Tenn., 5 miles from Springfield, the county seat thereof. Said farm consisted of 625 acres of fertile and productive land, 400 of which were in cultivation. There was located on said property a distillery, with a capacity of 5 or 6 barrels of whisky per week. Said farm was fully equipped with farming implements and utensils, and with horses, mules, and cattle. There were usually employed on said farm, and in and about said distillery, eighteen to twenty hands, and most of the produce of said farm went into consumption thereof and in said distillery.

V. In 1858 the said Stark sold a one-half interest in said farm and distillery to the said Hilliard, and thereafter, until about 1874, the same was operated for their joint benefit. In 1862, when the Federal forces took possession of Springfield and the surrounding territory, the said Hilliard expressed a desire to the said Stark to close up their business relations, fearing that the Federal forces would take their property and that they would get no compensation therefor.

The said Stark, however, insisted that their business relations should continue as before, and assured the said Hilliard that if they suffered any losses by reason of the Federal occupation he, the said Stark, would be responsible to him, the said Hilliard, for his share therein. Subsequently, and in the year 1868, there was a settlement between the said Stark and Hilliard as to their business matters, and in said settlement the said Stark allowed the said Hilliard credit for one-half of the amount of the claim against the Government of the United States hereinafter set forth, as though the same had been paid to him, the said Stark, in cash.

VI. During the years 1863 and 1864 the Federal authorities from Nashville and vicinity used and carried off 25 barrels, amounting to about 1,000 gallons, of whisky, which had been manufactured at the said distillery of Stark & Hilliard, and was stored in their warehouse. The reasonable value of this property so used and carried off was $500 (five hundred dollars).

VII. During the years 1863 and 1864 the Federal military authorities took, carried off, and converted to the use of the United States Army horses, mules, wagons, harness, oxen, and farm produce to the reasonable value of $3,202, making in all the sum of thirty-seven hundred and two dollars ($3,702), being the amount allowed for the taking of the aforesaid property, one-half owned by Stark and one-half owned by Hilliard, at the time of taking. After said taking claimant Stark paid Hilliard for his share of the loss.

BY THE COURT.

Filed December 5, 1904.
A true copy.
Test this 10th day of December, 1904.
[SEAL.] JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Now, those are the findings of the court.

Mr. PAYNE. I have listened to the gentleman, and I still do not understand how it is that this claim has been increased from $1,850 to $3,702 since the omnibus claim bill was passed in 1905.

Mr. MAHON. It means that this court finds that $3,702 is due him.

Mr. PAYNE. When were the findings made?

Mr. MAHON. In 1904.

Mr. PAYNE. Was it not found that one of the parties was loyal and the other party disloyal?

Mr. MAHON. It appears from the findings that they dissolved their partnership and that this Mr. Hilliard took the other share.

Mr. PAYNE. They dissolved their partnership after the war on this whisky was over?

Mr. MAHON. And he was paid by Stark.

Mr. PAYNE. The disloyal man can not revive a claim by assigning it to some one else who was loyal.

Mr. MAHON. There was no divisibility of property. Hilliard was a loyal man.

Mr. PAYNE. Congress has time and again divided such claims, where one party was loyal and the other was disloyal, and given a moiety. I remember a case which occurred up in New York, and I brought the facts to the attention of the gentleman, where one of the persons was loyal and the other disloyal, and the proposition was to pay the loyal man and the disloyal man, and the gentleman denounced in scathing terms an act by which such a thing should be allowed. Now he comes in here and reverses the action of Congress on the theory that one of the persons was loyal and the other person being disloyal he can not recover, and he comes and says a disloyal man may transfer his claim, and therefore comes, contrary to the judgment of the Court of Claims and the judgment of Congress two years ago, and gives the whole amount. That seems to be the size of the case.

Mr. MAHON. The court says he is entitled to that much money after they had dissolved their partnership. I do not have all the evidence that the court had.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman says he does not know what the findings included.

Mr. MAHON. The Committee on War Claims does not have all the information that the court has. They have the evidence, and the court finds for $3,702; and that is all I know about it.

Mr. PAYNE. Where does the gentleman get these facts in the report?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have time to conclude his remarks.

Mr. PAYNE. I was going to ask that.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman through?

Mr. PAYNE. No; the gentleman is not through. I am trying to get unanimous consent that he may have time to conclude his remarks so that I can ask a question, and the gentleman from Illinois is seeking the same purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois that the gentleman from Pennsylvania be given time to conclude his remarks? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. PAYNE. Now, I would like to know where the gentleman got these facts that he has read to the House from that report if he does not know anything about the case?

Mr. MAHON. What I have read is the certificate of the Court of Claims, which is sent down to the Speaker of the House, and by him to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. PAYNE. Is that the findings of the court?

Mr. MAHON. That is the findings of the court.

Mr. PAYNE. Then the court found one of these men was disloyal?

Mr. WALDO AND OTHERS. No! no!

Mr. PAYNE. Now, from what you said you are coming here with an adjudication for the money for a disloyal man as well as the loyal man. A clear case. Now, if you were right two years ago, you are wrong now.

Mr. MAHON. I want to say to the gentleman that when we reach that item he can move to cut it in two. I do not care. That is the way to get the bill straightened.

Mr. MANN. There is no way to reach this item that is included here.

Mr. MAHON. Why not?

Mr. MANN. Because there is only one section to the bill.

Mr. MAHON. You can amend the different items of the bill.

Mr. MANN. You can move to close debate ten minutes after the bill is read practically, and I presume you will do it.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I would just like to say a word about this matter.

Mr. LACEY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask a question before he commences? As I understand the gentleman, there was a precedent heretofore where they allowed half of the claim—that is, where there were two persons they allowed the loyal person his part of the claim and disallowed as to the other, who was disloyal. As I understand, the suggestion is made that this is the same identical claim.

Mr. MANN. It is not the same claim.

Mr. LACEY. This is a different claim? The loyal man in this case got his half before.

Mr. MAHON. The court gave him that much money.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, when this bill was originally passed the amount was cut in two. The claimant, who happens to live in St. Louis and is one of my constituents, a prominent lawyer there, is the son of the original claimant. He rejected what Congress had given him——

Mr. MAHON. Refused to take it.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Because there was no question about the loyalty of the one partner. This amount which this bill carries merely pertains to the loyal claimant, and no part of it will go to the disloyal claimant. The very fact that this gentleman rejected the allowance of Congress two years ago and refused to accept the money which Congress wanted to give him is, it seems to me, proof that he was in the right. When he came back to the Committee on Claims and presented the matter a second time, the committee readily admitted that they had been in error, and that he was entitled to the full amount of the original claim. Hence this provision in the bill.

Now, if there is any further question about it, I am ready to answer, and I think I can dispel any doubt about it.

Mr. PAYNE. There were two partners in this case, and one of them was found by the court to be disloyal.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. This claim refers only to the loyal partner. The disloyal partner gets nothing.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman dispute the facts stated by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON], that the finding of the court for the whole claim was $3,702?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. But my understanding is that the disloyal claimant never put in a claim.

Mr. PAYNE. It was stated distinctly that the loyal partner had an assignment from the disloyal man of his right to the property.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. That is a misunderstanding.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman says they get that from the finding of the Court of Claims. The gentleman had better go back to the Court of Claims and get them to rectify their finding.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. As far as the Court of Claims is concerned, it finds the sum of $3,702 to be due to this loyal man, and certified in favor of him.

Mr. NORRIS. Is it not true, however, that one-half of that claim was due to the disloyal claimant, and that the loyal claimant had bought him out and taken an assignment of his claim?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. No; I do not so understand it.

Mr. NORRIS. As I understand the reading of the report by the chairman of the committee, that is what the court itself says, that at the time the Federal forces were in the vicinity the disloyal man wanted to close up the business, but the loyal partner said no, that they should continue on, and that if they lost anything he would make it up to him, and that he afterwards did pay him one-half of the loss, and he added that to his half, and together it makes the amount called for in this bill. So that, as a matter of fact, this item does include the entire damage, one-half of which has already been paid by the loyal man to the disloyal man.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. But this $3,702 represents the total loss of the loyal man.

Mr. NORRIS. That may be so, but the half of that loss was incurred by paying the disloyal man. If it would be right to allow that claim, then I could purchase the claim of any disloyal man and have a good claim.

Mr. MAHON. If the Government had taken this property from a disloyal man, then the question of disloyalty would come in, but this claimant had purchased his partner's interest before the property was taken by the Federal forces.

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, no; he made the settlement afterwards.

Mr. MAHON. Not the settlement, but the payment.

Mr. NORRIS. He paid his partner for it after the war closed.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. My understanding is that the loyal man is a loser to the extent of $3,702.

Mr. NORRIS. That may be, but half of that is what he paid to the disloyal man. In other words, he bought half of it from the disloyal man.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Why shouldn't he?

Mr. NORRIS. That means that you would have to pay practically every disloyal claim, because if that is good law, then, all that would be necessary would be for some loyal man to get an assignment of the claims of disloyal men.

Mr. MANN. More than $250,000,000 depend upon the answer to the question, "Why shouldn't he?"

Mr. MAHON. The Government took the property after it had become the property of the loyal man.

Mr. NORRIS. You would have to pay practically every war claim whether the claimant was loyal or not.

Mr. MAHON. Oh, no. Men dissolved partnership all over the South when the war broke out.

Mr. SIMS. In view of the circumstances of this case, does it not strike the gentleman that this raising of this question of loyalty at this late day in this era of good feeling is rather technical than substantial?

Mr. NORRIS. That would apply to every such claim.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. GROSVENOR having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 21678. An act to provide for the extension of time within which homestead entrymen may establish their residence upon certain lands which were heretofore a part of the Crow Indian Reservation, within the counties of Yellowstone and Rosebud, in the State of Montana.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 5869. An act for the relief of Larvan Gordon.

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES], because he represents the district, I think, in which the claim originated, and he knew the claimant, as well as his son, the St. Louis attorney.

Mr. SIMS. But I wanted my friend to answer my inquiry in connection with my question—I mean as to this particular claim.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, if I can be heard for just a moment I think I can elucidate something that is confusing to the minds of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE]. Judge Stark was a distinguished lawyer of the Springfield-Robinson County bar. He was absolutely loyal throughout and under the most trying circumstances right in the very heart, you might say, of the Confederacy. He had grit and nerve to stand by his convictions. That is the way I recollect this proof.

Mr. PAYNE. Is he the man that the court found was loyal?

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. The claimant now is the son of Judge Stark. This son, grit of the old man's grit, says this claim, all of it, is just, and he wants it all, and he refuses to take a part of it—the same sort of grit that his father had when he refused to take sides against the Government that is now about to deny his son, forty years afterwards, the payment of this claim. This son is made of the same stuff as his father was, and he refuses to take part of the claim that the proof shows is absolutely just. Now, as to the division of it, here is the report, which says that "the said Stark, however, insisted that their business relations should continue as before, and assured the said Hilliard that if they suffered any loss by reason of the Federal occupation he, the said Stark, would be responsible to him, the said Hilliard, for his share therein, and that subsequently, and in the year 1868, there was a settlement between the said Stark and the said Hilliard as to their business matters, and in said settlement said Stark allowed the said Hilliard credit for one-half the amount of the claim against the Government of the United States herein set forth as though the same had been paid the said Stark." Now, the proof in this case, as I recollect it, is as I have stated. I tried here for years to get the amount paid, and young Mr. Stark came here to see me. The matter was finally taken up by Senator Cockrell and by the gentleman from St. Louis [Mr. BARTHOLDT], and they have been managing the matter ever since. The young man Stark, who lives in St. Louis, is a leading lawyer there, was once one of the judges there, and he contends, and my recollection is the proof shows, that the part of the claim that is now insisted upon is as good as the balance, and that it is the father's part, the part of the deceased Judge Stark, who, I say, the proof shows, and the court finds, was absolutely loyal to the Government at a time when it meant something more to be loyal than it does to-day. He was loyal then to the Treasury of the United States and loyal then to the cause of the Federal Government, and I think it comes with somewhat poor grace for us at this late day to refuse this claim of the son who comes up here with clean hands, and who is a respected citizen and a member of the bar of St. Louis, and who asks Congress that part of the funds in an overflowing Treasury be now turned toward the payment of this claim, which I believe is absolutely just.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. MAHON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that what my friend from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES] has said only emphasizes the fact that one-half of this claim ought not to be allowed. If his theory is true, then it ought to be paid on the ground that the man himself says it is just. He submitted it to a committee and to Congress and they allowed half of it, on the theory that he and his father were loyal, and that one-half of the claim ought to be paid. But the gentleman says the man believes that he ought to have it all and for that reason we ought to give him all. If that is true, we, and every court or every organization or body of any kind that passes on a claim, would have to give whatever the claimant honestly believed he ought to get. The fact remains that one-half of this claim, as it is shown by the gentleman's remarks and by the report which he read, was owned by a man who was disloyal. The loyal man proposed to him, or in the settlement he allowed him, which would be the same, the entire amount of his claim, after the war was over in 1868. If that makes a valid claim here, then there is no reason why any disloyal man should not sell his claim to a loyal man and the loyal man have a right under that kind of a precedent to have it paid here in Congress or allowed by the Court of Claims.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. No; but that would be partnership.

Mr. NORRIS. Very well. The man had a half interest in it. He sold his interest to his partner. He could just as well, as a matter of law, have sold it to somebody else. If he had any claim at all it was assignable. He sold it to this man who was his partner. He could as well have assigned it to somebody who was not his partner.

Mr. JOHNSON. Does the gentleman overlook the fact that the loyal man guaranteed this claim, that he was a surety?

Mr. NORRIS. No, sir; I do not; but if this is going to be the procedure——

Mr. JOHNSON. He was quite sure the claim would be paid and he acted as surety.

Mr. NORRIS. He agreed he would pay if the loss occurred, and he kept his word. That is not a basis upon which a man should be paid money who was not loyal to his country. If a man has agreed not to pay him it would be a very easy matter to fix up another kind of a claim, and——

Mr. JOHNSON. How many cases of this kind do you suppose will arise in the history of the Government?

Mr. NORRIS. I think that if we allow this there will be about as many cases arising as there are claims. It will be a very easy matter to get up that kind of a claim. You know how those things are done.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Chairman, I think I can explain the facts so that there will be no question about this partnership of Judge Stark. Here are the facts about it. They were operating a farm and distillery, and the Federals came to Nashville. One of the partners was afraid that the Federals would take their property, not upon the ground that he was loyal or disloyal, but he wanted to wind up the business of said partnership. Stark said to go ahead, he needed his partner's services, and that if there was a loss occasioned by this property being taken that he would hold him harmless. This was in effect a transfer or assignment. They went ahead. The soldiers did take part of his property for the use of the Government without any reference whatever to whether anybody was loyal or not. They took it, and the United States got the benefit of it. Then in a settlement afterwards between Judge Stark and this man whom he had induced to remain in the business Judge Stark accounted for the one-half in value of what the Government had taken. This claim did not arise upon the idea that the retiring partner was disloyal at all. It was not guaranteeing him against loss on account of loyalty or disloyalty, but simply that if the Federal soldiers took any part of it, he would be held harmless for that part.

Mr. NORRIS. Does that make a legal claim against the Government now?

Mr. SIMS. It makes a moral obligation, and that is about the only kind you can get against the Government.

Mr. MANN. Suppose you guaranteed a man who was not a partner?

Mr. SIMS. If the loss had already occurred, if the soldiers had already taken the property, then that would be a different matter; but Judge Stark evidently did not think there would be any property taken at all. He did not believe that the property would be taken. Now, there is the highest possible moral obligation to reimburse this loyal man who had faith that the property would not be disturbed.

Mr. NORRIS. Is there any higher obligation to reimburse him than to reimburse the man himself who lost the property? Do you make the obligation higher and better by having it transferred to somebody else?

Mr. SIMS. I do in this way. I was speaking of the facts in this case where one partner did not have confidence the property would not be taken and the other man, Judge Stark, did have it and did not think the property would be taken.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not know as to that.

Mr. SIMS. Judge Stark trusted the Government, had confidence and faith in it, and the other man did not, and he is therefore upon a higher moral plane, because he had confidence in the Government.

Mr. NORRIS. This is simply to pay a man for his confidence; that is all there is to it——

Mr. SIMS. This is to pay for property used by the Government——

Mr. NORRIS. Who did not lose anything.

Mr. SIMS. Who did not lose anything.

Mr. NORRIS. That so far as an assignment made of the claim is concerned.

Mr. SIMS. Suppose the Government had not gotten his property, they would have had to buy it from somebody else. Does not that create a moral obligation? It creates a moral obligation, the effect of which is avoided by proving disloyalty, upon the idea that the Government has the right to take property from a disloyal citizen. So far as it being a necessity of war does not waive moral obligations in the slightest.

Mr. PAYNE. May I ask a question right there? This man Stark had confidence in the Government, and on the face of that he made a bet and lost his bet.

Mr. SIMS. I do not think that when one has confidence——

Mr. PAYNE. He stakes his money on the confidence he had in the Government that they would not take his property.

Mr. SIMS. I think that when one has confidence in his Government he is not necessarily betting. If he had bought the claim afterwards speculatively, it would have been a very different thing, but he simply asked that this partnership be continued. Suppose he had bought the man out, would not the Government have owed him?

Mr. PAYNE. Before the war?

Mr. SIMS. Suppose he had bought him out before the property was taken at all. Of course, the gentleman is bound to know that if Judge Stark had bought out his partner before the property was taken that the Government would pay for it.

Mr. MANN. We are dealing with the facts, not suppositions. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SIMS. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. If a wholesale merchant in New York desired his client or customer in New Orleans to continue in business, and had guaranteed him against loss, and then the Army had taken the goods of the disloyal merchant in New Orleans, does the gentleman think that under the practice of Congress we ought to reimburse the wholesale merchant at New York?

Mr. SIMS. I do not think that the practice of Congress has been governed by the highest moral conceptions. We were talking about moral obligations, and not of the practice of Congress.

Mr. MANN. Now then, the gentleman goes into the question of whether Congress is to appropriate money that was taken away from a loyal or disloyal citizen. I take it that has been foreclosed. I do not know how I should vote upon the proposition if it were a new one now, but it has been the practice of Congress always, and I do not think the gentleman or any other Member from the Southern States would make a proposition here to-day that the Government should pay for all property taken by the Army without regard to the loyalty of the person who owned it. I am sure the gentleman would not support the proposition.

Mr. SIMS. But this is a different case entirely. I think the question of loyalty in this case is technical and not substantial.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Will the gentleman permit me to make a suggestion?

Mr. SIMS. Certainly.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Is it not true that there is but one claimant?

Mr. SIMS. That is true.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. There are not two claimants. Not a loyal and disloyal claimant, but only one claimant, and that claimant was loyal under the most trying circumstances, at the most trying time of our country. He was loyal. He comes with this claim, and no one else does, and he was not a disloyal man. He represents his individual loss, which amounted to $3,702.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman a question?

The CHAIRMAN. To whom does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] yield?

Mr. PAYNE. I understand the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] yields for that purpose. If this gentleman came in here as a claimant in his own right and also assignee of a disloyal person and presented it all in one claim, the gentleman's argument would still hold good. He came in here and presented one claim. He was loyal, and that is all Congress had the right to inquire into.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. He is not the assignee of a disloyal person at all.

Mr. PAYNE. That is all he is.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. These two people had a partnership, and when he——

Mr. PAYNE. It has been gone over a good many times. He was assignee of this party who was disloyal, was he not?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I do not admit that to be the case.

Mr. PAYNE. He comes as the assignee in this bill——

Mr. BARTHOLDT. The loyal man paid him——

Mr. PAYNE (continuing). As assignee of this claim.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. If my friend from New York will permit, the money which this disloyal man paid was the money of a loyal man, and he asks for a reimbursement for that loss.

Mr. PAYNE. I know. If I bought a claim of a disloyal man, I being a loyal man, my money would be the money of a loyal man in the same way.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. But, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me a distinction can be easily drawn there. If I am in the business of buying up claims of disloyal people and then present them to Congress, I would have to expect to be turned down by the committee, but that was not that kind of a transaction. It was a transaction made in good faith. It was not for the purpose of securing reimbursement from the Government. It was a transaction that occurred in the case of a partnership, when one of them retired and the other simply paid him the amount he was entitled to under the partnership arrangement.

Mr. PAYNE. This was in 1868. I do not know how it was, but if I believed that the Government would pay a claim of a disloyal man. Suppose in 1868 a disloyal claimant had come along with his claim and offered it to me. Suppose I paid him my money for it, having confidence in the Government. Would I not be in the same situation as this man?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. You have not made the right distinction. Here was a man who was the partner, and in the case you suggest he is an entire stranger.

Mr. PAYNE. Now, my contention is that the first intention of this committee in 1905 was entirely correct, that they put it in the omnibus bill at the correct amount, and Congress did the same thing, and now you reverse the judgment of Congress. We know it is the custom under different acts of Congress, when the bills are passed, to appeal from the action of the Court of Claims and of everybody else, and finally they come to Congress two or three times. But here is a case where Congress evidently did the correct thing.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. The fact that this claimant here has refused to accept what Congress did offer him in the last Congress——

Mr. PAYNE. That did not bear upon the question at all.

Mr. BARTHOLDT (continuing). Is certainly evidence of the fact that he feels himself to be honestly and squarely entitled to the whole amount, and if he thought there had been any question or there would be any question in the least as to his being entitled to the whole amount he would have been ready and willing to accept what Congress voluntarily offered him. But he simply takes the high ground that he is entitled to the full amount, and consequently he refused half of it, and comes back here and says "Congress owes me the whole amount, and I want it all or nothing."

Mr. MAHON. This property was taken in 1863 or 1864, when that part of Tennessee was under Federal control, and it never went back. The Confederates never again got hold of this territory. The proclamation of President Lincoln, especially with regard to the State of Tennessee, was that all the property of the citizens, the persons, and all their property, should be protected by the Federal officers, because it was under Federal control. That proclamation covered all the territory wherever the Federals got control of the territory. No man, whether loyal or disloyal, should have his property taken. It is not a question of loyalty. That did not enter into it. It was very evident that the Confederates had no control of this country. Here was a man who was disloyal, the other partner was loyal. The disloyal man wanted to get out of the business for some purpose, and the other man, who was loyal, wanted to go on. He said "We will have protection of the Government; we are under the proclamation of President Lincoln, that no man's property can be taken in this part of Tennessee and used without compensation or without protection." That was the situation down here when this property was taken.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman with reference to this item on page 23, "To the Columbia National Bank, of Columbia, Lancaser County, $51,150." What are the facts in that case?

Mr. MAHON. I am familiar with the facts in that case without reading from the report.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman state them?

Mr. MAHON. This was the largest bridge in the United States at that time, a bridge over a mile long, over the Susquehanna. The stock was owned by this bank, and to prevent Johnson coming down from Cumberland with 25,000 Confederates the Federal troops, by direction of the Secretary of War, burned the bridge to keep Johnson from crossing. It was done as an act of absolute military necessity, and, under the rulings of the courts, where property belonging to a party whose loyalty is admitted is destroyed as an absolute military necessity, the Government must pay for it. This has been pending in the Departments for years, and finally we sent it to the Court of Claims. There is no question of loyalty involved in it. I want to say this. I am familiar with the case—the United States district attorney in this case agreed with the attorneys of the bridge company that the Government would confess judgment for $90,000. Their claim was $100,000.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Who built that bridge and to whom did it belong?

Mr. MAHON. Let me finish this statement first. They said that they would confess judgment for $90,000. The claimants were very foolish that they did not take it, but they thought that they could recover the whole $100,000, and so they went into the Court of Claims, and the Court of Claims rendered a judgment for $50,000.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The question I wanted to ask was, Was the bridge built by a joint stock company?

Mr. MAHON. Yes. The bank held the stock.

Mr. MANN. I understood the gentleman to say that this bridge was ordered to be destroyed by the Secretary of War. Is the gentleman correct about that?

Mr. MAHON. It was ordered destroyed by some military authority.

Mr. MANN. Is it not a fact——

Mr. MAHON. General Meigs and General Couch ordered it destroyed.

Mr. MANN. Was it not destroyed by the army in the same manner as thousands of millions of dollars worth of property in the South was destroyed, in the conflict between the two armies?

Mr. MAHON. Oh, no.

Mr. MANN. Not being property taken, but property destroyed, just as though it were in battle or by troops in retreat.

Mr. MAHON. No; the courts draw this distinction. Take the battle of Gettysburg. The property destroyed in that battle was lost, and there could be no reimbursement for that. The courts have never held——

Mr. MANN. And never will.

Mr. MAHON. I do not think there has ever been a dollar paid for property destroyed in battle; but where the military authorities destroy property as a military necessity, to prevent an army from following, and where there was no battle, but simply a military necessity, even the destroying of houses in order to obtain a better view, or something like that, the courts have always held in those cases that the property must be paid for.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman claim that the courts have held—I do not suppose that the courts have had an opportunity to hold——

Mr. MAHON. They have.

Mr. MANN. But that the Government has ever held that where an army in retreat destroyed property to protect itself from an advancing enemy payment could be made for property so destroyed?

Mr. MAHON. This is a different case. This army was not in retreat.

Mr. MANN. But this comes within the case that the gentleman mentions, of an army destroying property to protect itself. As nearly as I can get at it, they destroyed this property to prevent the advance of an enemy. Has it ever been held that the Government is liable to pay for property so destroyed?

Mr. MAHON. The gentleman does not understand the situation——

Mr. PAYNE. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania allow me right here to read the finding of the court?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. This is finding No. III:

III. The bridge was occupied for military purposes on the 15th day of June, 1863, by order of Major-General Couch, of the United States Army commanding the military department of the Susquehanna, and under his orders was thereafter used and for the benefit of the public service in transporting military stores, supplies, and troops thereover to and from the several military posts under his command on opposite sides of the river, and for such other purposes as the needs of the service required until the 28th day of June, 1863, when on the evening of that day the bridge was, by his orders, fired, and the superstructure was destroyed under circumstances of immediate public exigency then arising necessitating its destruction, the public danger being so imminent and impending, and the public service so extreme and imperative as not to admit of delay.

Mr. MANN. But what was this? Does the court make a finding and state that there was a public necessity and imminent danger and not state what it was? Is that the kind of finding that the Court of Claims has made?

Mr. MAHON. Why burn the bridge, if that condition did not exist?

Mr. MANN. I want to know what the emergency was.

Mr. MAHON. Here was this bridge. It belonged to this bank. There was no battle and there was no battle imminent.

Mr. MANN. The reason there was no battle was because the bridge was destroyed.

Mr. MAHON. There was no army in retreat.

Mr. PAYNE. Will the gentleman right here allow me to read further from the report?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. Point 2 in the petition of the claimant:

II. That Maj. Gen. D. N. Couch, of the United States Army, on the 15th day of June, 1863, took possession of the Columbia Bridge for military purposes, situated on the Susquehanna River, between the town of Columbia, county of Lancaster, State of Pennsylvania, and Wrightsville, county of York, in said State, and used the same for such purposes as the needs of his department required from the 15th day of June, 1863, until the 28th day of said month, when said property was by his order destroyed, to prevent the enemy from crossing the river.

Mr. MANN. That is it—to prevent a battle. That is what I said to the gentleman before. There was no battle, because the bridge was burned.

Mr. MAHON. The gentleman does not know what prevented that battle. The gentleman was not born at that time. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. I can assure the gentleman that whether I was born at that time or not, I am born now. The gentleman is finding that out, I think.

Mr. MAHON. It says the danger was imminent. Why would they burn the bridge unless there was great necessity for it?

Mr. MANN. I have no doubt there was great necessity for it. There was equal necessity if the Union Army had been in retreat and had burned the bridge to keep the enemy from capturing it.

Mr. MAHON. The courts of this country have never allowed this Government, even in a case of great necessity, to destroy my property for military purposes without paying me for it.

Mr. MANN. They did it at Gettysburg.

Mr. MAHON. That was a battle. You must allow the distinction.

Mr. MANN. In a battle, or as a part of a battle, or to prevent a battle, or to prevent capture.

Mr. MAHON. Oh, no; I beg the gentleman's pardon. The gentleman can go to his library to-night and take the writers on war law and he can not find one authority that does not sustain my position. Where the Government takes property and destroys it for military purposes or because of military necessity, the courts of this country and the courts of all countries have held that the Government must pay for that property if the man to whom it belonged was loyal.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman claim that the courts hold that a claimant can recover under such circumstances?

Mr. MAHON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Then why does not the claimant in this case go to the courts?

Mr. MAHON. He has been to the courts.

Mr. MANN. And has been thrown out.

Mr. MAHON. Where?

Mr. MANN. Has not the claimant been to the court? Is he still in court or has he been thrown out?

Mr. MAHON. No, sir.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman says that they have a right to recover in the courts. Why not appeal to the court.

Mr. MAHON. The gentleman knows as well as I do that you can not sue the Government in the courts.

Mr. MANN. I know there is a Court of Claims where everybody who has a claim against the Government can sue the Government.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But they have been there.

Mr. MANN. And have been defeated. Are they still there?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No; they have got a favorable finding.

Mr. MAHON. This was referred to the Court of Claims.

Mr. MANN. That is not a suit. This was sent by one House of Congress for a statement of facts. There is no doubt about the question of liability. The Court of Claims does not pass upon that.

Mr. PAYNE. This was referred by a Senate resolution.

Mr. MANN. This was referred by a Senate resolution to the Court of Claims to state the facts, and having stated the facts, it appears that there is no claim as against the Government.

Mr. MAHON. Let the House decide the liability, and let the gentleman produce his authorities that the Government is not bound.

Mr. MANN. That is what we are thrashing out now. I ask the gentleman to produce the authorities. The gentleman has the affirmative of the case.

Mr. KEIFER. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. MAHON. Yes; I yield the gentleman five minutes.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Chairman, I do not know enough of this particular claim to comment upon it, and I only want to utter one sentence here in illustration of what has been going on throughout all the history of the Government of the United States, so far as the matter of having no proper machinery to settle claims against the Government is concerned, and I hope the time will come when we can have a means of settling claims that do not directly grow out of existing law which may be settled through the Departments.

I do not agree with the general statement going around here that the Government of the United States is liable to pay for general devastations of the property of either friend or foe in time of war, and there is no occasion for drawing a fine distinction between the destruction of property or the devastation of property in battle, and when the army is marching through the country.

Mr. MAHON. The courts have drawn that.

Mr. KEIFER. Oh, no; the rule is settled; the international rule is settled. It is settled in all the countries of the world, and has been long ago, that property which is incidentally destroyed by a marching army the Government is not legally liable to pay for, even though it is the property of friends, saying nothing about the property of the disloyal, which is never paid for. What is paid for in other countries than this and what was laid down long ago in decisions of this country by courts that had jurisdiction to determine what should be paid for in the way of war damages by the Government, was that an army marching through a country would pay for supplies such as they could use in the commissary or quartermaster's department; that is, those things that supplemented the general supply for maintaining the army, and that such things should not be classed as devastation of property; but the incidental burning of fences and the destruction of property or the destruction of fields of growing grain, or of matured grain, and all such things as were incidental to marches and campaigns, such as the destruction of bridges, the destruction of roads, and everything of that kind, belonged in the general class of devastations of war and were not paid for to either friend or foe, loyal or disloyal.

I do not know the circumstances of the case under consideration, and it is quite immaterial to my mind whether the bridge was burned to prevent an enemy from crossing to bring on a battle or whether it was burned as the judgment of some officer, or even by private soldiers wantonly. It is not a subject to be paid for under the general rules of law governing in such cases. We fought that matter out early in the history of this country. I have not the decisions at hand, but I made reports on this question many, many years ago, concurring with the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Carlisle, then in this House, and with others, on this very question. We fought it out in Ohio. We had loyal people out in Ohio who had property destroyed, not only by John Morgan in his raid extending through the State, but we had property destroyed by Union troops that pursued him, and the general judgment was to pay for none of it. That class of claims is easily distinguished from another class arising on account of an army that is marching through a country that is friendly to it, where the quartermaster and commissary officers go to the mills and get flour if it can be obtained there, or take grain from the bins of the farmer, or gather anything that is necessary to supply the commissary department or get forage for horses, or even horses for cavalry or artillery, or anything that is necessary to supply the quartermasters' department, even to build up quarters for the sick or for barracks, etc. Those are necessary things that you would buy at home and pay for, and they are plainly distinguishable from merely destroyed property, and they ought to be paid for, and the rule is to pay for them to loyal people, but the rule does not go any further than that.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. These claims are mostly based on moral rights. Let me put a case to the gentleman. Supposing driving along now with your army, your horses hitched to a cannon or some large machinery, should turn over a man's house or destroy it. Does the gentleman not think that a moral obligation would rest upon him to pay for that house?

Mr. KEIFER. I am not dealing with the question of morals at all. I think that would belong to the general devastation of war as much as if the men came in the fields and took the top rails off the fences for the purpose of cooking their provisions and supplies. So also I might say that if they happened to kill a horse that would belong to the devastation of war; but if they take from a private loyal person a horse to put in the artillery or put in a wagon that horse ought to be paid for.

Mr. JAMES. So your position is that if they go to a mill and get a bushel of flour they ought to pay for it, but if they go in a farmer's field and burn up 200 bushels of corn they ought not to pay for it.

Mr. KEIFER. That pretty nearly illustrates the rule.

Mr. JAMES. Then it is a very bad one.

Mr. KEIFER. That is the rule universal in this country and in other civilized countries of the world, and always has been and probably always will be.

Mr. MAHON. The gentleman has been speaking about taking wood, fences, and all that sort of thing for the Government, as to whether the Government is responsible. The Government is under certain circumstances. If an officer having authority takes wood, a fence, or a building, and that wood or building were used for the soldiers to cook or warm themselves, that is a supply, I do not care what it is, and the Government should pay for it. Now, if a soldier or half a dozen or a dozen soldiers go in and burn a man's house or his grain, that is a tort on the part of the soldier for which the Government is not responsible and never has been responsible and never has paid for it. There is the distinction between soldiers taking things and a commissioned officer taking things. I have studied this case, and I will give the gentleman a leading case. Now, here was a bridge. There was no likelihood of a battle or any fight taking place there, but Johnston was pressing in that direction, and the general commanding burned that bridge as a military necessity—it was the private property of this bank—so that Johnston could not cross there, but would have to retreat and return to Cumberland Valley, 28 miles, and go in by the way of Gettysburg, up over the mountain. So he had to take another crossing. Now, why should these people contribute a hundred thousand dollars? If the soldiers had burned that bridge, it was a tort on their part, but it was destroyed by the commanding general——

Mr. KEIFER. No distinction.

Mr. MAHON. Here is Grant's case, which is a leading case. I am only going to read the syllabus.

William S. Grant v. United States. The officer of the United States commanding troops in the vicinity of Tucson, Ariz., ordered his subordinate to destroy such Government stores as he can not transport, together with such private property of the claimant as may be of value to the public enemy or to the disloyal people of Tucson. The subordinate officer, acting under circumstances of immediate and pressing necessity, notified the claimant to save his papers, and in half an hour fires his mills and other property.

Mr. KEIFER. What court decides that?

Mr. MAHON. The Supreme Court—no, the Court of Claims. It was never taken up.

Mr. KEIFER. I think it was never taken to the Supreme Court.

Mr. MAHON. Hold on; this is the law and the court is right.

The taking of private property for use or for destruction, when the public exigency demands it, by a military officer commanding any part of the public forces, is an exercise of the right of eminent domain. Whenever the officer is justified, the Government is liable. The state of the facts as they appeared to the officer when he acted must govern the decision.

Mr. KEIFER. That decision was reversed twenty-five years ago.

Mr. MAHON (reading):

There is no discrimination to be made between property taken to be used and property taken to be destroyed. It is no defense that the circumstances must have rendered the property valueless to the owner if the officer had not destroyed it. It is the imminence of danger that gives the State a right to destroy property, but the certainty of the danger does not relieve the State from liability for the property which it takes to destroy.

And that has been the decision of the court since the civil war, and every decision——

Mr. KEIFER. I want, Mr. Chairman, to say it is easy to find a decision so long ago rendered.

Mr. MAHON. It has never been reversed.

Mr. KEIFER. What volume are you reading from?

Mr. MAHON. The gentleman himself individually might reverse it, but it takes a court to do it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is the difference between an authorized act of the Government and an unauthorized act of an individual.

Mr. MAHON. That is the old law four or five hundred years ago, and it is the law of all nations. The Government is held responsible where it destroys private property through pressing necessity for it. But they draw this distinction, that property destroyed in battle and incident to a battle was not by order of any officer. Like at Gettysburg, it can not be paid for. But when an army is lying in a peaceful country and the enemy is approaching and the army destroys a valuable bridge, it does it for what purpose? To keep the enemy from crossing. Can anyone tell me why the Columbia Bridge people should lose that money? That was the method they used to defeat the enemy, the same as money would be used to buy shells and other munitions of war, to prevent them from coming over. It saved the Government probably a battle and a great loss of life. I believe there is no question about the legal position.

Mr. PAYNE. In line 10, on the same page, it says:

The Pennsylvania Company, for insurance on lines and granting annuities.

Mr. MANN. We have already had that up. I have something more to say about that.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the bill be read under the five-minute rule, and then the gentlemen may have opportunity to amend and strike out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. I have no objection to it if we will be allowed to do that.

The Clerk began the reading of the bill.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I believe I have some time reserved.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has forty-five minutes.

Mr. MAHON. I have the floor, but the gentleman can have it if he desires.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to refer to several of the claims which have been referred to by the very distinguished chairman of the Committee on War Claims. Merely at random, without ever having seen this bill until this morning, after the noon hour I asked the gentleman in reference to several claims in the bill, only one of which did I in any wise recognize. And the explanation as to each one of the claims shows that that particular claim has no merit whatever. The first claim that I asked the gentleman in regard to was the claim in favor of the legal representatives of Samuel Schiffer. I had received the report of the committee upon the bill introduced for that claim alone and had read it some time ago. And I had been impressed with the fact that there was no merit in the claim. I happened to notice it in this bill, there having been one bill reported to the House covering the claim, but never having been referred to the Court of Claims; and it never having been passed upon by any judicial or semijudicial body, I was surprised to see that claim in this bill.

Now, I have heard the criticism of the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OTJEN] and the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania as to the decision of the Supreme Court. This was an old cotton claim. There were thousands of those claims in the United States. There are still, as I understand, millions of dollars in the Treasury of the United States dependent upon these claims if they can be properly proven. Whom that money belongs to I do not know, but this claimant filed his claim in the Court of Claims. It was rejected. He appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States. They rejected it, and the distinguished Committee on War Claims passes the decision of the Supreme Court and refers to that decision in this fashion:

It is hard to understand how a transaction between the claimants and Schiffer, which could not legally invest the latter with title, was yet sufficient to divest title from the former, and it is still more difficult to understand upon what authority a transaction of this kind could be held to have invested the United States with title to his property—legal, equitable, or moral.

The Supreme Court of the United States had decided in this way, and the committee says it is hard to understand. Well, I suggest that the gentleman attend law school or read the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. I know it is a very common fashion on the part of the man who is defeated in a lawsuit to "cuss" the court, but it was news to me that it was the fashion of the Committee on War Claims in the House of Representatives to "cuss" the Supreme Court because the court had decided in favor of the United States and against the claimant, and yet that is the language, practically, "cussing" the court, which the committee presents to the House. It is the excuse which they give for overruling the Supreme Court. The committee says it is hard to understand why the Supreme Court so decided.

It is not here for my understanding; it is not here for the understanding of the average Member of Congress, nor do I think it would be here for the Committee on War Claims' understanding if they had ever read the decision. I do not think that one of them has ever read the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States rejecting that claim.

Then there was another claim that I asked the chairman of the committee in regard to; and I suppose I never would have asked that question if the bill had been properly printed. The bill says: "To the Pennsylvania Company for insurance on lines and granting annuities, executor of Henry Etting, deceased." I had a curiosity to ascertain how it was to compensate the Pennsylvania Company for insurance on lines. It did not occur to me that it was "lives," and that was the title of the company, because the words were not printed in capital letters, or I would not have inquired as to the explanation of it.

Now, some years ago there was a dispute arose, after the Navy Department had been organized for nearly one hundred years, as to a certain abuse and how that compensation should be computed. There was a direction that there should be an adjudication of a number of claims. The report of that adjudication was made to the Fifty-first Congress. That Congress appropriated, after full consideration of those claims, an amount of money to pay the claims with this provision.

That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition with the Court of Claims upon which the adjudication was rendered.

That provision was put in the law, because if there had been no limitation of time put upon these claims, claims would have had to be paid from the foundation of the Government. There had been a ruling adopted in the Navy Department and the Treasury Department which they followed up from the beginning of the Navy. This ruling was reversed. Congress was not obligated to pay a cent for any back claims, but after full consideration the committee proposed to pay these claims within the ordinary statute of limitation, and without that provision there was not a single naval officer who had served in the Navy who would not have received this extra compensation. Now, Congress put in the limitation. How many of the cases there are I do not know. How many thousands there might be which would come under this rule now proposed to be wiped out, if anyone had claims unpaid back of the six years, if justice should be handed out, why, then, every naval officer from the foundation of the Government, by his legal representatives, would be entitled to the same compensation. That is the claim which the gentleman takes up as a basis for abusing the United States because it does not pay its claimants, saying that the United States holds back the money of these claimants. That is one of the claims the gentleman uses for the abuse complained of, about how the Government robbed the people. Let me tell the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania that under the Tucker Act any man, woman, or child who has a legal claim against the Government of the United States which the Departments refuse to audit can present that claim before the Court of Claims and before any district or circuit court of the United States and have it allowed and paid. The man who has a just legal claim against the United States has the best asset in the world, and therefore every naval officer who has one, notwithstanding the statement my friend from Pennsylvania has thrown out, we have made provision for the payment of these claims, but if we should wipe out the statute of limitations, we would have to pay all claims against the Government. Then there was one other claim I asked about.

Mr. KEIFER. If the gentleman will allow me before he goes to the other claim.

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. KEIFER. With the permission of the gentleman from Illinois, I want to make a further statement, coupled with a request. The authority read by the gentleman from Pennsylvania sustains his view of the law. I remembered this Grant case was the only one that seemed to have any weight at one time in the consideration of the class of cases under consideration. It was a decision made in 1863, not in the midst of civil war; it had no relation directly to the civil war, and it was taken up and reviewed especially by a tribunal appointed by the United States, and I will put the decision in the RECORD if my request is granted. But this case came pretty nearly up to the point of holding exactly what the law on the subject is that has been reviewed by some great writers of our own and other countries. The judge states, in his opinion—and I read from page 50 of the report, which was one of the first reports made by the Court of Claims—the judge says this:

> Private property must not only be taken upon urgent necessity, but for public use—

That public use, Mr. Chairman, is that kind of use that I have described, that can be appropriated to the maintenance of the Army—> in order to fix the liability of the Government to make compensation. Was the destruction of this property a taking of it for public use? It is almost of equal public importance that military supplies be kept from the use of the enemy as that they minister to the support of our own armies.

Reading further:

> Writers on public law do not discriminate between property destroyed to prevent it from falling into the hands of an enemy, and property taken for the actual sustenance of our own military forces. In both cases it is treated as a taking for public use.

It is the latter part of this decision that was criticised and overruled, and the law laid down that the common devastations of war, the destruction of property not taken and applied for public use, was to come within the general class of property destroyed in war, either by a friendly or unfriendly army, and whether property of the loyal or disloyal, was not to be paid for, and this I can clearly make appear if given an opportunity to refer to the books.

Mr. MAHON. If that position has ever been reversed by the courts I should like to know it, and have the gentleman refer me to it.

Mr. KEIFER. Yes; I can do so, and will do so fully.

I request, Mr. Chairman, that I may be allowed to add some references to my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEIFER. Here follows all I deem now necessary to amply support my recollection as to the law relation to a government's liability for damages caused in a period of war by the general destruction of property by the armies in the field. It might easily be enlarged.

The House was kind enough to grant my request to add something to the oral remarks I made, as appears above, on the subject of war claims; and this it did because I was unable at the moment to give the citations of authorities in support of the principles I endeavored to state. I now think it unnecessary to add at great length anything on the subject, as the case I cited later of the United States v. The Pacific Railroad, from the one hundred and twentieth United States Supreme Court Reports, page 227, fully covers all the rules and principles upon which I based my recollection of the law, but to those who are curious enough to want to pursue this subject, I call attention to a collation of decisions in a report made to this House by the Committee on War Claims in the second session of the Forty-third Congress, Report No. 134. The whole subject of the right or duty of the Government to pay for claims of the loyal or disloyal that are mere incidents of battle or to the movements of armies, whether friendly or unfriendly, will be found between pages 274 and 297 of that report, and perhaps incidentally more will be found on the subject in the same report.

As some weight seemed to be given to the Grant case, found in the first Court of War Claims Report, page 41, I make the following quotation from a report made in the third session of the Forty-fifth Congress, No. 187, by the Committee on War Claims. I do this particularly to show that the Grant case was long ago under consideration and disregarded, as I have already stated. Here follows an extract from the report mentioned:

> The claimant's property was destroyed by the general ravages of war, and for which payment is never made, under the law of nations, or upon any principles of public policy or duty.
>
> Primarily the destruction was caused by the enemy. Confederate troops fired the buildings, but this fact would not, in the opinion of your committee, change the liability from what it would have been if the Union forces had, when a battle was imminent, or while it raged, set fire to the buildings or caused their destruction. The loss would still have been classed with property destroyed by the misfortunes and casualties of war, for which no compensation is ever made to friend or foe, loyal or disloyal. The petitioners have pressed with much earnestness upon your committee, through their counsel and otherwise, the theory that the seizure of houses under the circumstances stated there was the appropriation of the same to a public use within the meaning of the Constitution, and its destruction while thus appropriated gave the owners the right to a just compensation for the same. They contend that the latter clause of the fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States secures them this right.
>
> The clause relied on is as follows:
>
> "Nor shall any person * * * be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."
>
> The error is in assuming that a commanding officer by occupying, under the exigencies of a battle, by his troops, private buildings, or by shielding himself and his troops behind them during a conflict, within the meaning of the Constitution appropriates private property to a public use. The temporary occupancy of private property by the troops of the United States, even where a battle is not imminent or actually raging, has never been held or regarded as an appropriation of the same to a public use. When private property is taken for public use merely to be held temporarily no appropriation in any constitutional sense results. Mere possession of private property by public officers or soldiers of the United States can not be construed to be an appropriation of the property to a public use.
>
> It has been expressly held that where a building was burned by accident, where it had been seized by the war power of the General Government for a hospital or for other use by the United States authorities, that there was no liability resting upon the Government to pay for it. (Lagow's case, 10 Court of Claims, 266; Green's case, 10 Court of Claims, 466; Filor's case, 9 Wall., 45.)
>
> It is said there is a case where the United States were held liable for the appropriation of a mill burned by an officer of the United States to prevent it from falling into the hands of the so-called "government." This case is known as the "Grant case," and will be found reported in 1 Court of Claims, page 41. It is only a decision of the Court of Claims, and as authority it has been doubted.

Under article 12 of the treaty of May 8, 1871, between the United States and Great Britain, there was provision made for the payment of claims of British subjects who owned property in the United States and in regions where the armies passed over it or had access to it. After this treaty there was organized what was known as the "American-British Claims Commission," for the purpose of determining the character of claims British subjects were entitled to have favorably considered. This commission was composed of distinguished American and English lawyers, learned in international and other law. They considered in the light of the law of nations the claims of the British subjects, and according to a report made by Hon. R. S. Hale to the Secretary of State, dated November 30, 1873, as to the claims of the British subjects before the American-British Claims Commission under said article 12, it appears that claims for property destroyed by general devastations of war were unanimously rejected by the commission. The report (p. 49) says:

> 2. Claims for property alleged to have been wrongfully injured or destroyed by the forces of the United States.
>
> These claims were also numerous and involved a large variety of questions. They included claims for property injured or destroyed by the bombardment of towns of the enemy, as in the case of Charles Cleworth, No. 48, and in other military operations of war, such as the passage of armies, and the erection of fortifications, as in the case of Trook, administrator, No. 58, etc.
>
> Also for timber felled in front of forts and batteries to give clear range for the guns and deprive the enemy of cover, as in the case of Trook, administrator, No. 58, and of William B. Booth, No. 143.
>
> In these claims for destruction of property it may be stated generally that, with very few exceptions, and those mostly insignificant, no awards were made against the United States.
>
> The claims for injuries by bombardment, the passage of armies, the cutting of timber to clear away obstructions, the erection of fortifications, etc., in the enemy's country, were all disallowed by the unanimous voice of the commissioners.
>
> The same may be said of the incidental destruction of innocent property involved in the destruction of public stores and works of the enemy.

It will be observed that this high commission recognized the principles I have tried to state as the law relating to war claims of the class under consideration.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I am glad that I yielded in order to allow the distinguished gentleman from Ohio to interrupt me. I am somewhat familiar with the decision which the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] read. I do not agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania that it carries out the judgment that he expresses, in reference to the opinion. That case does not cover the case of the Columbia Bridge at all. It is an entirely different proposition, the seizing of supplies and then destroying them.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in answer to the criticism of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] and other gentlemen whom I have heard criticise the Government of the United States on the floor of this House in reference to the payment of claims. I was referring to the fact that there is a widespread impression in Congress that a claim against the Government can not be paid. I notice reported from the Committee on Claims the other day a bill which never will be considered by this House, a bill introduced by a very distinguished Member of the House. That claim could be audited and paid at any time. If it were not audited and paid it could be presented to the Court of Claims and adjudicated at any time by that court and paid as a necessary consequence. Through lack of information on the part of the claimant, or, possibly, on the part of the Member who introduced the bill, he has introduced it into the House as a private claim, and it has about as much show, in its place on the Calendar, as though it never had been introduced.

But the man who has a legal claim against the Government, not for a personal injury, has an opportunity to have that claim determined and paid.

I ask to read a portion of the first section of the Tucker Act.

That the Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the following matters:

All claims founded upon the Constitution of the United States—and, mind you, these are not determinations under the Bowman Act. They are not determinations under a resolution referring these claims to the committee under the so-called "Tucker Act." These claims, when allowed by the Court of Claims, are put into the general deficiency bill and paid.

All claims founded upon the Constitution of the United States or any law of Congress, except for pensions, or upon any regulation of an Executive Department, or upon any contract, express or implied, with the Government of the United States, or for damages liquidated or unliquidated, in cases not sounding in tort, in respect of which claim the party would be entitled to redress against the United States either in a court of law, equity, or admiralty, if the United States were suable.

So that under the law any person who has a claim against the United States upon which he could bring a suit against a private individual, except torts, can bring a suit in the Court of Claims against the Government. I may say, of course, that there is a specific exception as to war claims.

Now, there was another case about which I asked the gentleman from Pennsylvania—the Columbia Bank. And what is the explanation of that case? If the Columbia Bank is entitled to $50,000, the Government ought in all justice to pay out anywhere from one to ten hundred million dollars to the people of this country. It has been the universal custom throughout the ages that an army in motion did not pay for the property it destroyed. For the property which was consumed the army paid. For the property destroyed there was no pay. No military officer in command of troops would know where he stood if he felt all the time the necessity of being economical in the destruction of property.

These people they may say are loyal. Very likely. They took the chances which other people take. If this were a fresh claim, if this were something which happened yesterday, sympathetic considerations might cause us to appropriate for it; but the men who lost the bridge, the men who lost the money, will never get it back. It is not the men who owned the Columbia National Bank who will receive the money, not the men who owned the property when it was taken. There is no sympathetic consideration in this case, and this claim ought not to be allowed; it ought not to be paid unless it is the settled purpose of Congress to appropriate money in payment of every dollar's worth of property which was destroyed by the Union Army belonging, at least, to loyal citizens. I do not know whether Congress is yet ready to go as far as the Stark case proposes, in which it is claimed that we must not only appropriate for the loyal citizens who lost property, but also permit them to purchase by assignment claims of disloyal citizens and then allow the loyal citizen for the full amount. I do not know. In this era of good feeling it would be a delight to my heart, if it were possible without bankrupting the Government, to vote to many of the people in the South who were injured by the war, whose property was destroyed by the Army without any special fault on their part, money to reimburse them; but I take it that that question has been foreclosed and that if the proposition were made in the House in its broad term it would be opposed mostly by the Representatives from those States.

Mr. Chairman, these illustrations at random, selected in the House at random, are sufficient reason, in my mind, for insisting upon an explanation of every item in this bill, and so far as lies within my power I propose to insist, under the Rules of the House, that there shall be an explanation of each and every item in this omnibus bill. I am not willing to say that because an omnibus claims bill can be brought into the House with certain claims from the State of Illinois, one of which is in favor of a constituent of mine whom I honor and respect most highly—I am not willing to say that because, perchance, I would like to vote for his claim, that all of the rest of the Members of the House in similar circumstances should now vote for my claim if I vote for theirs. I think these claims ought to be considered on their merits. If the Committee on War Claims would say in these cases that it had considered the report of the Committee on Claims, very well. But how is it done? The Senate will refer a claim to the Committee on Claims. Take this naval-pay case. The Committee on Claims has never reported in favor of the payment of the $665. There is not a line in the judgment which the gentleman has had read here in favor of the payment of that claim. Everybody knew who knew the case that that had been adjudicated upon before. There was nothing for the Committee on Claims to report upon. Thereupon the Senate of the United States passed a resolution to have that claim referred to the Court of Claims. It comes back to the Senate, and there is not a line in the report indicating that the money should be paid. The Court of Claims does not render any judgment. It simply says that according to their previous finding there would have been six hundred and sixty-five and odd dollars due this man if Congress had not fixed the limitation of time.

Mr. MAHON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Yes; how much time?

Mr. MAHON. Ten minutes.

Mr. MANN. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MAHON. Now, Mr. Chairman, the nigger is out of the wood pile, and we might as well face the situation.

Mr. KEIFER rose.

Mr. MAHON. No; I have not the time now.

Mr. KEIFER. I want to give the gentleman an opportunity to reply to my suggestion about the law.

Mr. MAHON. I am satisfied that I am right about that, and I do not care to hear from the gentleman.

Mr. KEIFER. If the gentleman will allow me five minutes before he makes his speech.

Mr. MAHON. I will after a while, after I get through.

Mr. Chairman, we hear talk that every man in this country, if he has a legal claim, can be easily paid in Congress. Here are 300 people at least, and there can be no dispute about their claims. Every Member of this Congress knows that you can not pass these claims one after another on private-bill days. The rules of this House are very nicely fixed, which I opposed, giving the Committee on Pensions two days in each month for the consideration of pension bills, and the Committee on War Claims one Friday, and the Committee on Claims one Friday in each month. My experience has been since the rule was adopted that generally a big appropriation bill is rushed ahead of the day set apart for the Committee on Claims, and so during the long term of the last Congress this committee had no consideration. I am not complaining. It is the rule that was made. It is so easy for these people to be paid! I do not want to impugn the motives of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. He is in earnest in this matter. But I have been around this House so long that when I see movements made with military precision I think I have sense enough—I have judgment enough—to know what is going on, and I am going to be perfectly frank with what I have got to say.

Two or three little bills here to-day—the Stark bill, which the committee proposes to amend when they reach it by reducing it to one-half; then one little bill from the Court of Claims. They have not found any fault with any other except the Columbia Bridge bill, and I will stake my reputation I am right on that as to the law, and if the gentlemen will come to my office and give me a little leisure I will give them enough law to keep them reading for a month.

Mr. KEIFER. I want to save the gentleman the humiliation of being in conflict with the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. MAHON. Now, Mr. Chairman, this bill is not perfect. The Committee on War Claims—I ignore myself—is composed of thirteen men, mostly lawyers. All these claims have been given very careful consideration for the last four or five months. I have given my own, I know, but like all other appropriation bills, things come in that probably should not be in, and I have appealed to those gentlemen to wait until we reach them under the five-minute rule and then they could be stricken out, but no, they wanted to debate them now. I say the bill is not perfect. If we treated the river and harbor bill, which I have always voted for, if the gentlemen who oppose this bill would be so anxious about every little item in that bill and wanted to know all about it in general debate, it would take us six months to pass it—as this bill. We would not put in an appropriation for Raccoon River, New Jersey, $20,000, for boats drawing 21 or 22 inches of water, or, as was said by a gentleman in making a speech in regard to an appropriation, that out in his county a flood had changed the stream and had left his port 10 or 12 miles away from water. If the gentlemen are in earnest in saying that these people are entitled to be paid, this is the way to have them paid. An omnibus bill has been recognized by Congress. It is no more an omnibus bill than the river and harbor bill, no more than any other appropriation bill or public buildings bill. They are all omnibus bills. Now, the claims in here from the Court of Claims have had the sanction from the court. I am very free to say I have read their decisions, most of them, all of them, but we are not going to criticise the court we created. If they make a mistake, that is their business. The gentleman from Illinois ruled the French spoliation items out on the point of order, which point is well taken. We put that in simply to guard this Congress against fraudulent claims. Now, Mr. Chairman, as I say, the committee worked hard on this bill. There is nothing personal in it. I do not know these claimants. I have always stood by what I believe, that when a man had an honest claim against the Government the Government ought to pay him. I reported that Schiffer claim myself. I wrote that report, and with all due deference to my friend from Illinois, he could not write a better one. There is a great deal of work on it, and I am satisfied that man should be paid, but, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. OTJEN. A gentleman said you criticised the Supreme Court.

Mr. MAHON. I said the nonintercourse act was pleaded, and, of course, the court very properly refused to give judgment. That is all. These gentlemen talk about being willing to have all these people paid. There has been a disposition on the part of Congress—not of Congress, but some gentlemen on the floor of this Congress and on this side—to defeat this bill by parliamentary tactics and delay. There is no use whitewashing, I understand that. It is the purpose to kill this bill to-day and keep the House from voting for it and not let it come up this session. If the gentleman from Illinois was chairman of the Committee on War Claims and should put these bills on the Calendar, though a young man—I am nearly old enough to be his grandfather——

Mr. MANN. Older in wisdom.

Mr. MAHON. And attempt to pass the legitimate claims that come in this Congress, he would have the frosts of one hundred and fifty winters on his head before he got half through. The gentleman knows it is impossible. Now, as I said to the committee, to the gentleman from Illinois, and the gentleman from New York, if there are any bills that they object to, when they are reached I agree to give plenty of time to amend or to strike out, and I am very frank to say, in regard to the Stark case, I was not in sympathy with appropriating the whole amount. I had intended when reaching that part of the bill to move to cut it out and pay one-half.

But taking that bill and the other, which is the insurance case, which will probably open some very just criticism, there is no criticism which can be made justly as to the balance of these claims against the Court of Claims. So let us bring this bill up and pass it, and if the gentlemen move to strike out and amend I will agree to give them time in which to do it. If we are not to pass this bill there is no use to waste the time of the House, because if the gentleman is going to have every item scrutinized and every item debated we could not pass it if we were to stay here for six months.

Mr. KEIFER rose.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I want to keep my time. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] is entitled to some time himself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has twelve minutes.

Mr. MANN. I will reserve the balance of my time, if I may, until the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] yields.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Chairman, I am only in this debate accidentally. I undertook to state from memory what I believed was the law relating to this class of claims, perhaps not to all of them included in this bill, and did not rise originally to antagonize the bill or any provision of it. I undertook to state merely from memory the principle I understood, from having examined the subject more than a quarter of a century ago, obtaining in all of the civilized nations of the world, and in my imperfect way I succeeded in stating so much of it as led gentlemen all around me to contend that I had fallen into an error. And the distinguished chairman of the committee found a case and read it that was in exact opposition to the principle that I stated.

Now, I did state that the principle of that case had been overruled long ago—totally overruled in this country—by a tribunal that met for the purpose of considering war claims, and by various other courts, and I only now arise for the purpose of settling the question so far as justifying myself, and to read from only one case, a case of the highest authority, that of the United States v. Pacific Railroad, found on page 227 of 120 United States Reports, and decided in 1886. I may state preliminarily that the decision rendered was the unanimous judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States, all the judges of that court concurred therein, and the opinion which I may read from is that of Justice Field, one of the most eminent of the justices of that court. I read the first proposition of the syllabi of the case, as follows:

The United States are not responsible for the injury or destruction of private property caused by their military operations during the civil war.

Now, so that we may get a clear statement——

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will read that over again, so that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] will get the full import of it.

Mr. KEIFER. I will read what will include it. Justice Field, in considering this case, which was a claim for large damages—about $136,000—took pains, for the benefit of the country, to review the decisions and the writers on law of this country and other countries. Let me read a little from his opinion, reading first from page 233 of the volume:

The war, whether considered with reference to the number of troops in the field, the extent of military operations, and the number and character of the engagements, attained proportions unequaled in the history of the present century. More than a million of men were in the armies on each side. The injury and destruction of private property caused by their operations, and by measures necessary for their safety and efficiency, were almost beyond calculation. For all injuries and destruction which followed necessarily from these causes no compensation could be claimed from the Government. By the well-settled doctrines of public law it was not responsible for them. The destruction or injury of private property in battle, or in the bombardment of cities and towns, and in many other ways in the war, had to be borne by the sufferers alone as one of its consequences. Whatever would embarrass or impede the advance of the enemy, as the breaking up of roads or the burning of bridges, or would cripple and defeat him, as destroying his means of subsistence, were lawfully ordered by the commanding general. Indeed, it was his imperative duty to direct their destruction. The necessities of the war called for and justified this. The safety of the State in such cases overrides all considerations of private loss. Salus populi is then, in truth, suprema lex.

These views are sustained in treatises of text writers, by the action of Congress, and by the language of judicial tribunals. (Respublica v. Sparhawk, 1 Dall., 357; Parham v. The Justices, 9 Geo., 341; Taylor v. Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad, 6 Coldwell, 646; Mayor v. Lord, 18 Wend., 126.)

Vattel, in his Law of Nations, speaks of damages sustained by individuals in war as of two kinds—those done by the state and those done by the enemy. And after mentioning those done by the state deliberately and by way of precaution, as when a field, a house, or a garden belonging to a private person is taken for the purpose of erecting on the spot a town rampart or other piece of fortification, or when his standing corn or his storehouses are destroyed to prevent their being of use to the enemy, and stating that such damages are to be made good to the individual, who should bear only his quota of the loss, he says: "But there are other damages caused by inevitable necessity, as, for instance, the destruction caused by the artillery in retaking a town from the enemy. They are merely accidents; they are misfortunes which chance deals out to the proprietors on whom they happen to fall."

The sovereign, indeed, ought to show an equitable regard for the sufferers if the situation of his affairs will admit of it; but no action lies against the state for misfortunes of this nature—for losses which she has occasioned, not willfully, but through necessity and by mere accident, in the exertion of her rights. The same may be said of damages caused by the enemy. All the subjects are exposed to such damages, and woe to him on whom they fall. The members of a society may well encounter such risk or property, since they encounter a similar risk of life itself. Were the state strictly to indemnify all those whose property is injured in this manner, the public finances would soon be exhausted, and every individual in the state would be obliged to contribute his share in due proportion, a thing utterly impracticable.

A word more, Mr. Chairman. I read further from the same opinion:

The principle that for injuries to or destruction of private property in necessary military operations during the civil war the Government is not responsible is thus considered established. Compensation has been made in several such cases, it is true; but it has generally been, as stated by the President in his veto message, "a matter of bounty rather than of strict legal right."

In what we have said as to the exemption of government from liability for private property injured or destroyed during war by the operations of armies in the field, or by measures necessary for their safety and efficiency, we do not mean to include claims where property of loyal citizens is taken for the service of our armies, such as vessels, steamboats, and the like, for the transport of troops and munitions of war, or buildings to be used as storehouses and places of deposit of war material, or to house soldiers or take care of the sick, or claims for supplies seized and appropriated. In such cases it has been the practice of the Government to make compensation for the property taken. Its obligation to do so is supposed to rest upon the general principle of justice, that compensation should be made where private property is taken for public use, although the seizure and appropriation of private property under such circumstances by the military authorities may not be within the terms of the constitutional clause. (Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How., 115, 134; United States v. Russell, 13 Wall., 623.)

While the Government can not be charged for injuries to or destruction of private property caused by military operations of armies in the field or measures taken for their safety and efficiency, the converse of the doctrine is equally true, that private parties can not be charged for works constructed on their lands by the Government to further the operations of its armies. Military necessity will justify the destruction of property, but will not compel private parties to erect on their own lands works needed by the Government, or to pay for such works when erected by the Government. The cost of building and repairing roads and bridges to facilitate the movements of troops or the transportation of supplies and munitions of war must therefore be borne by the Government.

The concluding sentence of this admirable opinion, in so far as it relates to the disposition of the claim for such damages, is:

The court will leave the parties where the war and the military operations of the Government left them.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I feel like congratulating myself that I made a pretty good guess at what the law of this country is on the question of war damages. My statement a few moments ago was warranted by a decision of the highest judicial tribunal in this country. The case of Grant was decided in October, 1863, and was not well considered by the then new Court of Claims, and it has been long ago overruled in principle and by name as we have seen. But whether so or not, the principle laid down here by Justice Field in his opinion, which was put, with the concurrence of all his associates, into the first proposition of the syllabi of the case, disposes of that and of all other cases of this class, and firmly establishes the rule which should obtain here in disposing of this class of claims, unless you propose to treat them as mere bounties and deal with them as such.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I am perfectly willing that the gentleman should have more time if he desires it. I will yield him all the time he wants, but I do not want to lose my rights.

Mr. MAHON. I do not care to indulge in personalities or to talk about the movement of military forces. There was no conflict in hundreds of miles. I still sustain and still hold to my legal position. There had been marching to battle and to conflict, and property had been destroyed all the time, for which there was no compensation paid. That was all thrashed out in the decision before the Court of Claims, and the question was, Shall the Attorney-General refuse to appeal it to the Supreme Court of the United States?

Now, Mr. Chairman, it is very evident that if we are going to examine every claim in this bill, it will take all night, and I move that the committee do now rise.

Mr. MANN. Before the gentleman makes that motion, will he not allow me to make a statement?

Mr. MAHON. I have no objection.

Mr. MANN. A few moments ago the gentleman from Pennsylvania stated that he did not propose to impugn the motives of the gentleman from Illinois, referring to me, and said that the procedure in the House practically established that under the rules of the House the purpose was to prevent the consideration of this bill, the intimation being this was probably somewhat directed by the Speaker of the House.

Now, Mr. Chairman, so far as I am concerned, I want to say that I never have exchanged words with the Speaker of the House of Representatives in reference to the omnibus claims bill or in reference to this matter in any way whatever. During the holidays I obtained some of the claims which had been reported from this committee, as a sort of light reading. It was my misfortune, when born, to be born with an inquiring turn of mind. That is something that, while I may be blamed for it, still gentlemen will have to forgive me, because it is natural. [Laughter.] I endeavored to obtain the bills which had been reported from this committee, knowing that they were entitled to a day soon in the House, and, being in favor of giving them their day, I asked for a complete set, from the document room, of all the bills on the Calendar that had been reported from this committee and from the Committee on Claims. And I want to assure the gentlemen of the House, as an aside, that I never have had more entertainment than in reading some of the reports of these two committees, which were so interesting that several nights, without even an indication of sleepiness, I continued their perusal until after 2 o'clock in the morning. But I failed to get the omnibus claims bill. I did not know there was an omnibus claims bill pending in Congress, and when some gentleman said to me on the floor to-day when we met, that we were going to consider the omnibus claims bill, I said: "There is no such bill on the Calendar. Was that bill reported this morning?" So that the insinuation of the gentleman, that this is a prearranged plan, is wholly the product of his vivid imagination, which he has not confined to his statements concerning my action, but has put into some of his reports on these claims. If he had left his vivid imagination behind him in passing upon some of these claims, and had confined the report of this committee to claims which ought to be paid and about which there could be no question, I would not be found here to-day objecting.

Now, there is another thing. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] has been here fourteen years. There is no man in this House for whom I have more respect and more honor than the gentleman from Pennsylvania. I appreciate his trying position. I appreciate the fact that he has been the target for more lobbyists, more people desiring to get money out of the Treasury, than any other man in Congress during those fourteen years. I do not criticise him for bringing in these reports. I understand that we are all subject to be influenced, not by improper motives, but by the facts that are stated to us, the arguments that are made before us, and very often we are persuaded, possibly against our will, to decide in favor of a thing at a particular time, which afterwards we think was wrong. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has been here fourteen years. I have not been here so long. I am just closing my tenth year in this House; but I have been here long enough to know that whenever an omnibus claims bill has passed this House, it usually has passed with most of the claims in it perfectly proper and legitimate; but after leaving this House it has gone to another place and there been filled up with claims which no honest government ought to pay, and then under certain peculiar circumstances, which are always allowable in legislative bodies in the closing days of Congress, the situation has arisen referred to the other day by the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], where the jobs have been put through, where things that ought not to go in have been allowed, because people wanted to pay just claims and in order to pay just claims they were required to pay others which were unjust. I know that gentlemen in the House here who are waiting to have their little claims considered for people in their districts, claims that ought to be paid, are not willing to vote against their own claims in order to kill other claims which they never would favor; and when the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] is willing to say to the House that when this bill passes the House, certain classes of claims shall be stricken out and that they shall not be reinserted and agreed to by him in conference, and that other claims which ought not to be paid shall not be agreed to by him in conference and then reported into the House of Representatives in the closing hours of the session, when probably there will not be forty men in the House, when no one dares to raise the question of no quorum because it would mean an extra session of Congress—when the gentleman makes that agreement, I am willing to waive my rights under the rules of the House; but until he does, I shall insist upon my rights as a Representative under the rules of the House.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. The gentleman has well stated that matters are crowded through Congress here at the last days of each session. We all know that that is a fact. Does he not think that all of the troubles which he has been alluding to, or a great many of them, could be avoided if all the Members of the House and all the members of the Senate would come here every day, as he does, and a few others that I could mention, and attend to the business of the people, instead of waiting until the dying hours of Congress and then rushing the business through?

Mr. MANN. Well, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will pardon me for answering that question, I may say that I have some doubt whether if all the Members were as "numerous" on different occasions as I am, when probably they ought to be in their seats—if they all came here and did the same thing that I am doing, I am afraid there never would be anything done. [Applause and laughter.]

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I think it is a godsend, and I think it is a blessing to the country and to the Treasury of the United States, that the gentleman is not only in his seat as often as he is, but that he is on his feet as often as he is, protesting against the wrongs and pointing out the evils that creep into legislation here because of the chronic absence of the Members of this House.

Mr. KEIFER. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] whether he did not include with himself the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES] in the statement he has just made. [Laughter.]

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Oh, I am always included in everything that is wrong by some people, and I would rather be thus included than otherwise, considering the sources the criticisms sometimes come from. [Laughter.]

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I want to say to the gentleman from Illinois that I am very sorry he brought the name of the Speaker into this matter. The name of the Speaker was not in my mind at all. I saw when we started that if the gentleman were to exercise his rights under the rules of this House, the bill could never be passed at this session. Of course he has a right to do that, and I have no complaint to make. As to this bill going over to the Senate, I have had charge of some very large omnibus bills. We once passed a bill out of this House carrying eight or nine hundred thousand dollars. When it came back from the Senate it had $9,000,000 added, and my friend from New York [Mr. PAYNE] will bear me out in the statement that we stood for two months in conference and forced the Senate conferees to knock out about $8,000,000 of the claims that they had put on. Gentlemen who have served on conference committees between the Senate and the House on omnibus bills will understand the situation. I know the men who are familiar with the passage of these conference reports and bills will do me the credit of saying that I always try to get for the House what I think will satisfy the House. I am not anxious to get on the conference committee this year. It means long work. I have no reflections to make. I have been here long enough to know some things, and we had not been on this bill ten minutes before I knew that I would not get it through to-day. I saw the movements of, not the Speaker, but of lieutenants and captains of legislation. I am not complaining. They have a right to do it, but when I saw the getting together and the movements I knew exactly the plan of battle that had been laid out and what I was up against, and I knew this bill could not go through to-day.

Now, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES] is complaining about our not remaining here. The only complaint I have got to make of the gentleman from Tennessee is in reference to an interview which I noticed in the Washington Times the other day, in which he said that my friend from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and himself and a few others were "frazzled out," as he used the term. A gentleman sitting alongside of me suggested that if our friend from Tennessee would go down to Tennessee for a month or two and get the good of mountain air there and get the frazzle out of him, it would be a good thing for everybody. [Laughter.]

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I am sure, Mr. Chairman, that if I follow the example of the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] I would be away from here 95 per cent of my time. Now, if the gentleman wants to make this matter personal, I want to say to the country at large and to this House that if there is any law on the statute book for docking absentees, whether the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] or the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] or the gentleman from Tennessee or elsewhere, I am going to have that law enforced if I can, even though the gentleman from Pennsylvania is going to try to keep this House from enforcing this law.

Mr. MAHON. Yes; and I did not dock myself.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Oh, I have been reading the gentleman's speech in the House in 1894 on that question. He says there is no law on the books for that, and he protested against it because the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House undertook to dock him. Now, I have a record of being here and standing by the law, and I want the gentleman, if he can not take an example from me in anything else, to at least remain here in his committee room working on these claims, so that he may bring in cleaner claims and better claims, and so that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and others will not take up all of the time of the House in trying to purge the bill of its evil claims, which could be avoided if the gentleman would bring in a clean bill, one that we can pass in a few hours.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. SIMS. A good deal of the time of the House has been used up by the gentleman from Illinois in purging the bill of the Stark claim.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. That is all right, if it is an unclean claim coming from my district let it be purged, but let the gentleman from Pennsylvania stay in his committee room instead of staying at home, thereby forcing the bill to be purged by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SIMS. Does the gentleman think that the Stark claim is a bad claim?

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Oh, no; but——

Mr. MANN. I have not referred to the Stark claim to-day.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman, I have a question of privilege. I would ask that the gentleman from Tennessee indicate more clearly to what gentleman from Ohio he refers.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I meant the gentleman's colleague, Mr. KEIFER, who made his usual sling at me. No man can run me from this House or elsewhere.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Then the gentleman acquits me.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I acquit the gentleman.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. RODENBERG, chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 19003), the omnibus claims bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same.

H. J. Res. 196. Joint resolution relating to the construction of a bridge at Fort Snelling, Minn.;

H. R. 4554. An act to remove the charge of absence without leave and reported desertion from the military record of J. F. Wisnewski;

H. R. 21200. An act to authorize the county of Allegheny, in the State of Pennsylvania, to construct a bridge across the Allegheny River, in Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 21408. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the keeping of employment agencies in the District of Columbia where fees are charged for procuring employment or situations," approved June 19, 1906.

H. R. 1871. An act granting an increase of pension to Alonzo Cooper;

H. R. 2315. An act granting a pension to Miranda Birkhead;

H. R. 2715. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Martine;

H. R. 2978. An act granting a pension to Amanda M. Webb;

H. R. 3338. An act granting an increase of pension to Lafayette Franks;

H. R. 4205. An act granting an increase of pension to Amanda W. Ritchie;

H. R. 4292. An act granting a pension to George W. Kelley;

H. R. 4689. An act granting an increase of pension to James Reeder;

H. R. 4690. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Slinger;

H. R. 4707. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Pitman;

H. R. 5728. An act granting an increase of pension to William Harvey;

H. R. 5846. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Chandler;

H. R. 6956. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry L. Johnson;

H. R. 7580. An act granting an increase of pension to James W. Stewart;

H. R. 7719. An act granting an increase of pension to George Fetterman;

H. R. 8273. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Pearson;

H. R. 8481. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard Callaghan;

H. R. 8712. An act granting an increase of pension to Josiah Hall;

H. R. 9107. An act granting a pension to James W. Russell;

H. R. 9262. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Farrar;

H. R. 9465. An act granting a pension to Ella Q. Parrish;

H. R. 9836. An act granting an increase of pension to Dier Collett;

H. R. 10814. An act granting a pension to Eugene A. Myers;

H. R. 11142. An act granting an increase of pension to James McQuade;

H. R. 11483. An act granting a pension to Maria Niles;

H. R. 12128. An act granting an increase of pension to Dennis A. Litzinger;

H. R. 12190. An act granting an increase of pension to Milton R. Dungan;

H. R. 12339. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles T. Murray;

H. R. 12482. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel B. McLean;

H. R. 12517. An act granting a pension to William Bays;

H. R. 12667. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Weber;

H. R. 13057. An act granting an increase of pension to James S. Salsberry;

H. R. 14144. An act granting a pension to Allen M. Cameron;

H. R. 14199. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ewing;

H. R. 14480. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Moore;

H. R. 14537. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert B. Crawford;

H. R. 14680. An act granting an increase of pension to Sampson Parker;

H. R. 15619. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel W. Atkinson;

H. R. 15620. An act granting an increase of pension to David D. Owens;

H. R. 15713. An act granting an increase of pension to William McCrea;

H. R. 16211. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Montgomery;

H. R. 16342. An act granting a pension to Matilda Foster;

H. R. 16397. An act granting an increase of pension to Allie Williams;

H. R. 16513. An act granting an increase of pension to Bridget M. Duffy;
H. R. 16741. An act granting an increase of pension to William J. Girvan;
H. R. 16747. An act granting a pension to Sherman Jacobs;
H. R. 16748. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucius C. Fletcher;
H. R. 16856. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph McBride;
H. R. 17481. An act granting a pension to Eliza F. Wadsworth;
H. R. 17651. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Riley;
H. R. 17675. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonas M. Sees;
H. R. 17691. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Henrie;
H. R. 17874. An act granting an increase of pension to Roseanna Hughes;
H. R. 17918. An act granting a pension to Walter S. Harman;
H. R. 18018. An act granting an increase of pension to David Evans;
H. R. 18045. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Webb;
H. R. 18066. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander M. Fergus;
H. R. 18113. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa M. Sees;
H. R. 18193. An act granting an increase of pension to Walden Kelly;
H. R. 18214. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ingram;
H. R. 18227. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine F. Fitzgerald;
H. R. 18343. An act granting an increase of pension to John N. Oliver;
H. R. 18363. An act granting an increase of pension to Rudolph Bentz;
H. R. 18403. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Jane Ragan;
H. R. 18429. An act granting an increase of pension to David Mitchell;
H. R. 18493. An act granting an increase of pension to George H. Reeder;
H. R. 18705. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas T. Page;
H. R. 18860. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Anderson;
H. R. 19080. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick Fienop;
H. R. 19101. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah C. A. Scott;
H. R. 19119. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Osborn;
H. R. 19161. An act granting an increase of pension to Marcus D. Tenney;
H. R. 19162. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Van Tine;
H. R. 19174. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha A. Billings;
H. R. 19215. An act granting an increase of pension to John Lingenfelder;
H. R. 19256. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa J. Birthright;
H. R. 19293. An act granting an increase of pension to William Colvin;
H. R. 19298. An act granting an increase of pension to Job B. Crabtree;
H. R. 19300. An act granting an increase of pension to Phebe Easley;
H. R. 19318. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Rivers;
H. R. 19319. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Spruell;
H. R. 19320. An act granting an increase of pension to Louise J. Pratt;
H. R. 19321. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Turner;
H. R. 19322. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Isabella Rykard;
H. R. 19323. An act granting an increase of pension to Orlando L. Levy;
H. R. 19324. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Long;
H. R. 19325. An act granting an increase of pension to George Oppel;
H. R. 19326. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret R. Vandiver;
H. R. 19357. An act granting an increase of pension to Anna Lamar Walker;
H. R. 19359. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi Brader;
H. R. 19494. An act granting an increase of pension to Elias S. Falkenburg;
H. R. 19415. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Ann Reavis;
H. R. 19416. An act granting an increase of pension to Antonio Macello;
H. R. 19463. An act granting an increase of pension to Emma L. Patterson;
H. R. 19483. An act granting a pension to Lydia A. Patnaude;
H. R. 19503. An act granting an increase of pension to David S. Jones;
H. R. 19504. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Walker;
H. R. 19511. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander Dixson;
H. R. 19514. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Stimpson;
H. R. 19529. An act granting an increase of pension to Nancy Elizabeth Hutcheson;
H. R. 19530. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles P. Gray;
H. R. 19534. An act granting an increase of pension to Noah Ressequie;
H. R. 19587. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha Ann Jones;
H. R. 19601. An act granting an increase of pension to John E. Kingsbury;
H. R. 19611. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Kinkerly;
H. R. 19626. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Campbell;
H. R. 19743. An act granting an increase of pension to W. P. McMichael;
H. R. 19744. An act granting an increase of pension to George Casper Homan Hummel, alias George C. Homan;
H. R. 19819. An act granting an increase of pension to Johanna Kearney;
H. R. 19889. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Melson;
H. R. 19922. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Sutherland; and
H. R. 21678. An act to provide for the extension of time within which homestead entrymen may establish their residence upon certain lands which were heretofore a part of the Crow Indian Reservation, within the counties of Yellowstone and Rosebud, in the State of Montana.

The Speaker announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 5565. An act to close certain alleys in the District of Columbia;
S. 5246. An act to provide for the extension of Geneseo place and Summit place, District of Columbia;
S. 2098. An act authorizing the extension of Second street NW. from Elm street north to Bryant street, of W street from its present terminus west of Flagler place to Second street, and W street west of Second street eastwardly to Second street;
S. 2260. An act authorizing the extension of Meridian place NW.;
S. 133. An act authorizing the extension of Twenty-third street NW. to Kalorama road;
S. 68. An act for the widening of a section of Columbia road east of Sixteenth street;
S. 55. An act for the widening of Bladensburg road, and for other purposes;
S. 64. An act for the extension of Seventh street and Franklin street NE., and for other purposes.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

An act (S. 5869) for the relief of Larvan Gordon—to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, Mr. MARSHALL was granted leave of absence, on account of delayed trains.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly, under the order previously made (at 4 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned to meet again on Monday next at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Joseph C. Smith against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Laura E. Roulston, administratrix of estate of James W. Roulston, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of William T. Hamner against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of St. Michael Canal, Alaska—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to the inquiry of the House, a statement of public lands withdrawn from entry since July 1, 1906—to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting an estimate of appropriation for an improved telephone service between the various Departments—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of Commerce and Labor submitting an estimate of appropriation for construction of a keeper's dwelling at Fort Point light station, California—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting an estimate of appropriation for survey of Pine Ridge and Standing Rock Indian reservations—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting an estimate of appropriation for steel file cases—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting a draft of proposed legislation to enable his Department to survey, plat, and appraise certain town sites in the Indian Territory—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, with a copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, a recommendation that a law be enacted authorizing a patent in fee simple to be issued to Charles C. Geboe, Quapaw allottee—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of Cold Spring Inlet, Cape May, New Jersey—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Commissioner of the Freedmen's Saving and Trust Company, transmitting report for the year ended December 1, 1906—to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, recommending legislation authorizing experimental tests of safety devices for preventing railroad collisions—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, recommending an appropriation for electrical protection for vaults in public buildings—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, with a copy of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, a statement of the action of the Department in relation to surveys within railroad land grants—to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, with a copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, a recommendation for legislation relating to the capitalization of certain Indian annuities—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Postmaster-General submitting a report of all mail entered at the Washington post-office under the penalty privilege, and the sum which would have been required to pay postage on the same—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the proceedings of the American National Red Cross for the year 1906—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, a bill of the following title was reported from committee, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Calendar therein named, as follows:

Mr. GAINES of West Virginia, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21942) to construct bridges across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5630); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAMSON: A bill (H. R. 23376) to increase the compensation of rural carriers to $80 per month—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SMITH of California: A bill (H. R. 23377) providing for the sale of grazing and stone lands and milling timber, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BROOCKS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23378) to provide for a survey of the Sabine River in Louisiana and Texas—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23379) for cleaning, clearing, and putting in navigable condition Red River above Fulton, Ark.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ALLEN of Maine: A bill (H. R. 23380) to amend the laws relating to the shipment and discharge of American seamen—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23381) for the widening of Benning road, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23382) authorizing the extension of Oak street NW.—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: A bill (H. R. 23383) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River," approved June 25, 1906—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. PEARRE (by request): A bill (H. R. 23384) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia' regulating proceedings for condemnation of land for streets"—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BOWERS: A bill (H. R. 23385) for a survey of the harbor at Biloxi, Miss.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. McGUIRE: A bill (H. R. 23386) for cleaning, clearing, and putting in navigable condition the Red River above Fulton, Ark.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WALLACE: A bill (H. R. 23387) for the improvement of the Red River from Fulton, Ark., to the mouth of said river, cleaning, clearing, and putting in navigable condition—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BARTLETT: A bill (H. R. 23388) to establish a subtreasury at Macon, Ga.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WALLACE: A bill (H. R. 23389) for cleaning, clearing, and putting in navigable condition Red River above Fulton, Ark.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23390) to establish a national wood-testing laboratory—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. THOMAS of North Carolina: A bill (H. R. 23391) to change the time of holding the United States district courts in the eastern district of North Carolina and to provide for the appointment of a clerk of the courts at Washington, N. C.—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEVER: A bill (H. R. 23392) to establish a sub-treasury at Columbia, S. C.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MUDD: A bill (H. R. 23393) providing that hours of service of certain employees engaged in operating any steam railroad in the District of Columbia shall be limited to not more than eight hours in any twenty-four consecutive hours—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KAHN: A bill (H. R. 23394) to provide for an additional district judge for the northern district of California—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. VREELAND: A resolution (H. Res. 675) for the employment of five additional folders in the folding room of the House—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. GREENE: A resolution (H. Res. 676) requesting information from the Postmaster-General—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BURLESON: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 210) extending the pension act of July 27, 1892, to certain officers and men of the Army—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 211) authorizing the transfer of the files, books, and pamphlets of the Industrial Commission—to the Committee on the Library.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: A bill (H. R. 23395) granting a pension to Amanda Pearson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ALLEN of Maine: A bill (H. R. 23396) to refund customs taxes illegally assessed and collected of John B. Keating, of Portland, Me.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ANDREWS: A bill (H. R. 23397) granting an increase of pension to David Denholm—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23398) granting an increase of pension to Quincy Adams Stiteler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23399) granting an increase of pension to Frank A. Hill—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23400) granting an increase of pension to C. H. Kirkpatrick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23401) for the relief of Louis Kahn—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23402) granting an increase of pension to Henry W. Turner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23403) for the relief of Manuel Madril, of New Mexico—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. AMES: A bill (H. R. 23404) granting an increase of pension to Lewis Zaney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23405) granting an increase of pension to David Curran—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23406) granting an increase of pension to Dennis Sullivan—to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. ANDRUS: A bill (H. R. 23407) granting an increase of pension to Hurd L. Miller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARTLETT: A bill (H. R. 23408) granting a pension to Charles E. Holcomb—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23409) for the relief of the heirs at law of Wesley C. Welch, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BENNET of New York: A bill (H. R. 23410) to amend the military record of Howard A. Whitfield—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BISHOP: A bill (H. R. 23411) granting a pension to George H. Martin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23412) granting an increase of pension to Daniel L. Barnes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BONYNGE: A bill (H. R. 23413) granting a pension to the surviving members and the widows of members of the Forsythe Scouts—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 23414) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Riddle—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 23415) granting a pension to Frank West—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23416) granting a pension to William Goodwin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23417) granting a pension to Lafayette J. Spangle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23418) granting a pension to William Cockrun—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23419) granting a pension to William J. Sanders—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23420) granting a pension to Benjamin F. Longacre—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23421) granting a pension to Thomas Inman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANNON: A bill (H. R. 23422) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Richard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23423) granting an increase of pension to Eldrige Simpson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23424) granting an increase of pension to William H. Cannon—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23425) granting an increase of pension to James Cheffer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COCKS: A bill (H. R. 23426) granting an increase of pension to John S. Bergen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23427) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Young—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COLE: A bill (H. R. 23428) granting a pension to Louie E. Read—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23429) granting an increase of pension to William McAdams—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23430) granting an increase of pension to Giles J. Titus—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CURRIER: A bill (H. R. 23431) granting a pension to Henry S. Corey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23432) granting a pension to James Le Gro—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DE ARMOND: A bill (H. R. 23433) granting an increase of pension to James T. Cantrell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23434) granting an increase of pension to James T. Gothard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota: A bill (H. R. 23435) granting a pension to Martha R. O. Oleson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23436) granting an increase of pension to Jonas P. Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23437) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of John Regan and grant him an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DAWSON: A bill (H. R. 23438) granting an increase of pension to Harvey Edwards—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23439) granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Goodno—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DRAPER: A bill (H. R. 23440) granting a pension to Carrie May Allen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DUNWELL: A bill (H. R. 23441) granting an increase of pension to John Mess—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23442) granting an increase of pension to James J. Lawley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DWIGHT: A bill (H. R. 23443) granting an increase of pension to Louisa R. Matthews—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23444) granting an increase of pension to Jennie E. Baldwin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23445) granting an increase of pension to Phaon F. Gerhard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23446) to correct the military record of Aaron B. Galloway—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ELLIS: A bill (H. R. 23447) granting a pension to John H. T. Yost—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ESCH: A bill (H. R. 23448) granting an increase of pension to William D. Galloway—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FASSETT: A bill (H. R. 23449) granting a pension to Menzo W. Johnston—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23450) granting a pension to Edson Billings—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23451) granting a pension to William Woodhouse—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23452) granting a pension to Stephen L. Tobey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLOOD: A bill (H. R. 23453) granting an increase of pension to Margaret T. Everly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLOYD: A bill (H. R. 23454) for the relief of Sarah E. Terrill—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FOSTER of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 23455) granting an increase of pension to Robert Magill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23456) granting an increase of pension to William H. Hutchinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23457) granting an increase of pension to Nathan S. Martin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FOSTER of Vermont: A bill (H. R. 23458) granting an increase of pension to Edgar D. Ellis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULLER: A bill (H. R. 23459) granting an increase of pension to Mary Morgan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GARNER: A bill (H. R. 23460) authorizing a survey of the Arroya Colorado, in Texas, from Harlingen to Point Isabel—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GILL: A bill (H. R. 23461) for the relief of the Sanford & Brooks Company—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23462) granting a pension to Catherine Myer—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23463) granting an increase of pension to Thomas E. Kelly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GOULDEN: A bill (H. R. 23464) authorizing the President to nominate and appoint Trangett F. Keller as second lieutenant in the United States Army—to the Committee on Miliary Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23465) granting a pension to Abraham W. Eckstein—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23466) granting a pension to Michael Baker—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23467) granting an increase of pension to Michael Flanagan—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23468) granting an increase of pension to Martin Becker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23469) granting an extension of letters patent No. 482951 to William D. Stratton and John H. Drake—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. GRONNA: A bill (H. R. 23470) for the relief of Henry Rustan—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HASKINS: A bill (H. R. 23471) granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Robinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HIGGINS: A bill (H. R. 23472) granting an increase of pension to John Bolles—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23473) granting an increase of pension to Henry E. Silcox—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23474) granting an increase of pension to Horace R. Chester—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JAMES: A bill (H. R. 23475) granting an increase of pension to T. J. Green—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LEE: A bill (H. R. 23476) granting an increase of pension to Fredrick Ellison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LEVER: A bill (H. R. 23477) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Vick—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LORIMER: A bill (H. R. 23478) granting an increase of pension to Ezekiel Downey—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23479) granting an increase of pension to Charles L. Cureton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McGUIRE: A bill (H. R. 23480) granting a pension to William Pouder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MACON: A bill (H. R. 23481) granting an increase of pension to John G. Price—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAYNARD: A bill (H. R. 23482) granting a pension to Louise H. Curtis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MURDOCK: A bill (H. R. 23483) granting an increase of pension to James R. Wiley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23484) granting an increase of pension to Chancy Buckingham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23485) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Miller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23486) granting an increase of pension to Cornelius Kramer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23487) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. John H. Ash—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23488) granting an increase of pension to David Furnas—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23489) granting an increase of pension to John S. Cantril—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23490) granting an increase of pension to John Doyle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23491) granting an increase of pension to Thomas R. Hornaday—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23492) granting an increase of pension to John W. Shirley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23493) granting an increase of pension to William Kunkle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NORRIS: A bill (H. R. 23494) granting a pension to Wenzel Patzelt—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23495) granting an increase of pension to Adam Sliger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PADGETT: A bill (H. R. 23496) for relief of trustees of Harpeth Academy—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23497) for relief of the trustees of Porter Female Academy—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23498) for relief of heirs of Joseph W. Baugh, sr., deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PATTERSON of South Carolina: A bill (H. R. 23499) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Myers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23500) for the relief of William A. Chisholm, administrator of William S. Chaplin, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23501) for the relief of the estate of Stephen A. Kittles, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23502) for the relief of the estate of John Fripp, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23503) for the relief of the heirs of Daniel P. Jenkins, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23504) for the relief of the heirs of T. B. Fripp, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PAYNE: A bill (H. R. 23505) granting an increase of pension to Richard Welch—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23506) granting an increase of pension to William B. Yawger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23507) granting a pension to Myron C. Marshall—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PRINCE: A bill (H. R. 23508) granting an increase of pension to William M. Veach—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAINEY: A bill (H. R. 23509) granting a pension to Kate Sanders—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23510) granting a pension to Jennie C. Curtis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23511) granting a pension to Garratt Moore—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23512) granting an increase of pension to Barbara N. Stephenson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23513) granting an increase of pension to Hobart Hamilton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23514) granting an increase of pension to David Everitt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23515) granting an increase of pension to Edward P. Taylor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23516) granting an increase of pension to Thomas G. Pratt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23517) granting an increase of pension to John B. McDowell—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23518) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Dougherty—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REYBURN: A bill (H. R. 23519) granting a pension to Sarah Schafhirt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 23520) granting an increase of pension to William Harvey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RODENBERG: A bill (H. R. 23521) granting a pension to Henry Roper—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RUCKER: A bill (H. R. 23522) granting an increase of pension to George W. Shacklett—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SCHNEEBELI: A bill (H. R. 23523) granting an increase of pension to Theodore Groner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD: A bill (H. R. 23524) for the relief of the legal representatives of Samuel Dickins—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23525) for the relief of the legal representatives of Samuel Dickins—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23526) granting an increase of pension to Stephen D. Jordan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23527) granting an increase of pension to Joseph E. Knighten—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23528) granting an increase of pension to John M. Smith—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHERLEY: A bill (H. R. 23529) for the relief of Cora Cousens—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23530) for the relief of Louisa Henderman—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23531) granting a pension to Barbara Mehringer—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SLEMP: A bill (H. R. 23532) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Slemp—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 23533) granting an increase of pension to James T. Johnson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23534) granting an increase of pension to John L. Ford—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23535) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Eckols—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STANLEY: A bill (H. R. 23536) for the relief of the drafted men of Henderson County, Kentucky, and other counties of Kentucky—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23537) granting an increase of pension to Kinchen L. Terry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23538) granting an increase of pension to Robert G. Marsee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SULLIVAN: A bill (H. R. 23539) granting a pension to Henry Wanderly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAWNEY: A bill (H. R. 23540) granting an increase of pension to M. S. Anderson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 23541) authorizing the President to nominate and appoint Birchie O. Mahaffey, John A. Cleveland, and Traugett F. Keller as second lieutenants in the United States Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WALLACE: A bill (H. R. 23542) granting an increase of pension to Julia B. Reynolds—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23543) granting an increase of pension to Isaac T. Grindstaff—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WILEY of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 23544) granting an increase of pension to Clayton E. Blackwell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS: A bill (H. R. 23545) granting a pension to Columba F. Mitchell—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23546) for the relief of R. R. McMullan, administratrix of Thomas J. McMullan, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WOOD: A bill (H. R. 23547) granting an increase of pension to John Shields—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ZENOR: A bill (H. R. 23548) granting a pension to George Peyton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23549) granting an increase of pension to Isaiah Carter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ELLERBE: A bill (H. R. 23550) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth C. Smith—to the Committee on Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of bills of the following titles; which were thereupon referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 22286) granting a pension to Joseph Felix Bath—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 16886) granting a pension to James W. Murray—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petition of Danville Commercial News, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the International Seamen's Union of America, protesting against passage of the so-called "ship-subsidy bill"—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of Beaver Valley News, New Brighton, Pa., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Theophilus Jones—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ADAMSON: Petition of the Ledger, Columbus, Ga., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of R. M. McCaslan, Greenville, Ga., favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against effect of petition of so-called "Maritime Trades' Council" relative to ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. ALLEN of New Jersey: Petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against effect of petition of the so-called "Marine Trades' Council" relative to ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ANDREWS: Petition of Evening Citizen and Daily Optic, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BABCOCK: Paper to accompany bill for relief of James W. Walsh and James L. Barney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARCHFELD: Petition of State Camp of Pennsylvania, Patriotic Order Sons of America, and National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against utterances of the President relative to status of citizens of said city with Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Arthur E. Paige for appropriation to provide for continuous housing and care of Patent Office model exhibits now in Union Building—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, papers to accompany bill for relief of John Powelson and Joseph Newmeyer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of City Library Association of Springfield, Mass., protesting against the amendment of the copyright law in regard to the free importation of books, etc., by libraries and other institutions of learning—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of the International Seamen's Union of America protesting against the passage of the ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. BARTLETT: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Wesley C. Welch—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BELL of Georgia: Petition of C. W. Grant, of Clarksville, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BENNET of New York: Petition of State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Howard A. Whitefield—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BOWERS: Petition of Day Progress, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Osborn W. Fish—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURNETT: Papers to accompany bill H. R. 22182, relative to judgment in James R. Boyd v. W. D. Clay et al.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Thomas Inman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Thomas Inman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of the Lead Daily Call, South Dakota, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of William J. Sanders, William Cockrum, Lafayette J. Spangle, William Goodwin, and Frank West—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CALDER: Petition of Home for the Blind, Brooklyn, N. Y., for free postage on books for the blind—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Eliza M. Stephenson Council, No. 62, Daughters of Liberty, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. CAPRON: Petition of publishers of Manufacturing Jeweler, of Providence, R. I., against increase of rate of postage on second-class mail matter—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Rhode Island Horticultural Society, against free seed distribution—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CASSEL: Petition of Lititz Springs Council, No. 196, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. COLE: Petition of the Courier, Findlay, Ohio, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of Pittsburg Council, No. 34, Daughters of Liberty; Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America; Battleship Maine Council, Daughters of Liberty; National Camp, and State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of McKeesport Evening Times and Pittsburg Christian Advocate, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota: Petition of Commercial Club of St. Paul, for appropriation to reclaim overflowed and swamp lands—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. DAWSON: Petition of Ministerial Union of Iowa City, for the McCumber-Tirrell bill, relative to sale of liquor on Government property—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. DOVENER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Calvin C. Shank and Samuel H. Gebhart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of Shirt-Waist and Laundry Workers' International Union, for passage of House bill 17562 and Senate bill 5469—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of Hall of Division No. 461, Order of Railway Conductors, Whitehall, N. Y., against legislation restricting hours of labor on railways—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce, Troy, N. Y., favoring passage of bill H. R. 9754 (the Wilson bill), for increase of salaries of clerks of first and second class post-offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of American Artists for Free Art, against tariff on art works—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Edward H. Lisk, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of New York State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Robert S. Waddell, against the monopoly of the Dupont Powder Company—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DUNWELL: Petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against the President's utterance relative to attitude of people of San Francisco toward the Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp and New York State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ELLIS: Petition of stockholders and officers of Bank of Greenwood, Mo., for addition of an inclosed bill of lading amendment to the rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Kansas City Directory Company, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ESCH: Paper to accompany bill for relief of William D. Galloway—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America; National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, and Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committtee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against effect of petition of the so-called Maritime Trades Union relative to ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. FLOOD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Margaret T. Everly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLOYD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John Bogenschultz, Henry Hilton, and Corinia Watkins—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of James H. Murphy and James M. Morrows—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of James W. Officer, Samuel Watts, and James R. Atkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FOSTER of Indiana: Petition of the Demokrat and the Courier, Evansville, Ind., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Ohio Valley Council, No. 23, and Golden Rule Council, No. 5, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Free Trader, Ottawa, Ill., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Mary Morgan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Papers to accompany bill (H. R. 22252) granting an increase of pension to William W. Tyson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Arthur E. Paige, requesting an appropriation to provide for the housing and care of the model exhibits of the Patent Office—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of A. McLean, in reference to conditions in the Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Charles K. Harris, regarding the passage of a copyright law—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, National Camp, and New York Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring the passage of the immigration bill—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, in reference to the Japanese conditions in San Francisco—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of the International Seamen's Union of America, of Boston, protesting against the passage of the ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. GOULDEN: Petition of New York Produce Exchange, against free-seed distribution—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Paper to accompany bill for relief of James M. Morris and D. H. Moore—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HASKINS: Petition of Hardwick Council, No. 46; Green Mountain Council, No. 9, and Lincoln Council, No. 4, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of Henry Evert et al., citizens of California, against employment of Asiatic cooly labor on Panama Canal and for application of Chinese exclusion law to the Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petitions of Unity Council, No. 39, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of San Jose, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles T. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HEPBURN: Petition of Order of Railway Conductors, against bill limiting hours of labor of railway employees—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HIGGINS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of David Conner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of New Haven Chamber of Commerce for an appropriation to complete Point Judith Harbor—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HILL of Connecticut: Petition of Banner Council, Daughters of Liberty, South Norwalk, and Friendship Council, of Winstead, Conn., indorsing Senate bill 4403—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HOUSTON: Paper to accompany bill for relief of E. L. Judkins, Columbus A. Bailiff, and Thomas G. Bratton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUFF: Petition of State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, and Loyalty Council, No. 314, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Business Men's Association, Butler, Pa., for bill H. R. 9754 (Wilson bill)—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Butler Eagle, Butler, Pa., and The Despatch, Jeannette, Pa., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HULL: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Anson W. Brandt—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HUNT: Petition of T. S. Beeler Lodge, No. 19, Brotherhood Railway Trainmen, against bill (H. R. 18671) limiting hours of labor of railway employees—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petitions of Pennsylvania State Camp and New York State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of American Artists for Free Art, against tariff on art works—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Inland Waterway Association, held in Wilmington, N. C., for appropriation to construct waterway from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort Inlet, North Carolina—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against utterances of the President relative to status of citizens of said city with the Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KAHN: Petition of librarian of University of California, against part of copyright law (section 30, bill H. R. 19853)—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of California Miners' Association, indorsing House bill known as the mineral-land bill for segregation of mineral lands within railway land grants—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against President's utterances relative to status of citizens of California with the Japanese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Calkins Publishing House, San Francisco Chronicle, Pacific Unitarian, and the Bulletin, San Francisco, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFEAN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Francis Weaver and Elias W. Garrett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Hillam Council, No. 58, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LAMB: Petition of the Times-Dispatch, Richmond, Va., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEE: Paper to accompany bill for relief of William Buckalew—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against effect of petition of so-called Maritime Trades Council, relative to ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Mississippi River Ram Fleet and Marine Brigade, favoring passage of bill H. R. 7216—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LITTAUER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Edmund Coward—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOUSER: Petition of Daily Mirror, Marion, Ohio, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania: Petition of Star of Union Council, No. 77, Junior Order United American Mechanics, and John E. Armstrong Council, No. 24, Daughters of Liberty, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. NEEDHAM: Petition of International Seaman's Union of America, against effect of petition of so-called Maritime Trades Council, relative to ship subsidy—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. OVERSTREET: Petition of Charles B. Matson et al., against passage of new copyright bill—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. PADGETT: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Joseph J. Pritchett, George W. McKim, and John R. Morris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Harpeth Academy, Porter Female Academy, Joseph W. Baugh, Sarah Powell, Sarah J. Cleves, administratrix of estate of Mary Crocket, C. S. Moss, administrator of W. R. Haynes, and John C. Seward, heir of John C. Seward, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PATTERSON of South Carolina: Paper to accompany bill for the relief of Claude E. Sawyer and William S. Blair—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee: Petition of International Seamen's Union against ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. PAYNE: Petition of Newark Grange, No. 366, against free distribution of seeds—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PEARRE: Petition of members of St. John Catholic Church, of Frederick, against attitude of French Government toward Catholic Church—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Baltimore, for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. REYBURN: Petition of Schreibers & Sons, Philadelphia, favoring the copyright bill—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp and National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Hygienic Fleeced Underwear Company, for Lakes to Gulf deep waterway—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: Paper to accompany bill for relief of William Harvey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROBERTS: Petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against effect of petition of the so-called Maritime Trades Council relative to ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SCHNEEBELI: Petition of Seamen's Union of America, against effect of petitions of so-called Maritime Trades Council favoring the subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (bill S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SMITH of Illinois: Petition of citizens of Illinois, against parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SULLIVAN: Resolution of International Seamen's Union, against passage of so-called ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. TAWNEY: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Jacob W. Pierce—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WALLACE: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Isaac T. Grindstaff—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Julia B. Reynolds—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for establishment of a national wood-testing laboratory—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. WOOD of New Jersey: Petition of sundry advertisers, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of mass meeting of colored citizens of New Jersey and colored citizens of Trenton, N. J., against discharge of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, three companies—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Henry S. Scudder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOODYARD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Harvey J. Simmons—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ZENOR: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Clark Crecelius—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE.

MONDAY, January 7, 1907.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. EDWARD E. HALE.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday last, when, on request of Mr. KEAN, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal stands approved.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT MAIL MATTER.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, a statement showing the mail matter entered by the Treasury Department at the Washington City post-office under the penalty privilege during the period July 1 to December 31, 1906; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

GIFT TO AMERICAN MINISTER TO MOROCCO.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of State, requesting, pursuant to law, that Mr. Samuel R. Gummeré, the American minister to Morocco, be authorized to accept a sword recently presented to him by the Sultan of Morocco on the occasion of Mr. Gummeré's mission to Fez to present his letters of credence; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

CAPITALIZATION OF INDIAN FUNDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting drafts of seven items for incorporation in the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, for the capitalization of funds belonging to the various tribes under treaty stipulations; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PREVENTION OF RAILROAD COLLISIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Interstate Commerce Commission, recommending the enactment of certain legislation to authorize the Commission to conduct experimental tests of safety devices to prevent railroad collisions, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

PERPETUAL ANNUITIES OF INDIANS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs relative to large sums of money due certain tribes of Indians as perpetual annuities, which before the obligations of the Government are fulfilled with these Indians will have to be capitalized; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

INCIDENTAL EXPENSES OF INDIAN SERVICE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting an item for incorporation in the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1908 for general incidental expenses of the Indian Service, being a substitute for the fourteen separate items in the bill as it now stands; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

CHARLES C. GEBOE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs submitting the draft of an item of proposed legislation for the purpose of permitting a patent in fee simple to be issued to Charles C. Geboe, Quapaw allottee, for land allotted to him in the Indian Territory; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs submitting the draft of proposed legislation to enable the Secretary of the Interior to survey, plat, and appraise towns in each of the Five Civilized Tribes, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

LOWER BAND OF CHINOOK INDIANS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a certified copy of the findings of facts filed by the court in the cause of the Lower Band of Chinook Indians of the State of Washington v. The United States; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PURCHASES OF COAL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of June 29, 1906, a statement relative to the quantities and character of coal purchased during the last fiscal year for use of the Interior Department, together with certain information with reference to the areas of coal land now owned by the United States and their localities; which, with the accompanying papers and maps, was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

OFFICE OF ASSISTANT TREASURER AT NEW YORK.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York requesting that an increase be made in the salaries of the chiefs of division and other employees of that office; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

FINDINGS BY THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate communications from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting certified copies of the findings of facts filed by the court in the following causes:

In the cause of The Trustees of the Forest Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, of Dumfries, Va., v. The United States;

In the cause of G. B. Wallace, administrator of Robert N. Blake, deceased, v. The United States;

In the cause of Benjamin Fenton, surviving partner of the firm of Fenton & Co., v. The United States;

In the cause of Estelle Landry, administratrix of the estate of Joseph Landry, deceased, v. The United States;

In the cause of The Vestry of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, of Haymarket, Prince William County, Va., v. The United States;

In the cause of Irene E. Johnson, administratrix of the estate of Leo L. Johnson, deceased, v. The United States; and

In the cause of The Trustees of the Walnut Grove Baptist Church, of Gibson County, Tenn., v. The United States.

The foregoing findings were, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

S. 55. An act for the widening of Bladensburg road, and for other purposes;

S. 64. An act for the extension of Seventh street and Franklin street NE., and for other purposes;

S. 68. An act for the widening of a section of Columbia road east of Sixteenth street;

S. 133. An act authorizing the extension of Twenty-third street NW. to Kalorama road;

S. 2098. An act authorizing the extension of Second street NW. from Elm street north to Bryant street, of W street from its present terminus west of Flagler place to Second street, and W street west of Second street eastwardly to Second street;

S. 2260. An act authorizing the extension of Meridian place NW.;

S. 5246. An act to provide for the extension of Geneseo place and Summit place, District of Columbia; and

S. 5565. An act to close certain alleys in the District of Columbia.

H. R. 1871. An act granting an increase of pension to Alonzo Cooper;

H. R. 2315. An act granting a pension to Miranda Birkhead;

H. R. 2715. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Martine;

H. R. 2978. An act granting a pension to Amanda M. Webb;

H. R. 3338. An act granting an increase of pension to Lafayette Franks;

H. R. 4205. An act granting an increase of pension to Amanda W. Ritchie;

H. R. 4292. An act granting a pension to George W. Kelley;

H. R. 4554. An act to remove the charge of absence without leave and reported desertion from the military record of J. F. Wisnewski;

H. R. 4689. An act granting an increase of pension to James Reeder;

H. R. 4690. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Slinger;

H. R. 4707. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Pitman;

H. R. 5728. An act granting an increase of pension to William Harvey;

H. R. 5846. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Chandler;

H. R. 6956. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry L. Johnson;

H. R. 7580. An act granting an increase of pension to James W. Stewart;

H. R. 7719. An act granting an increase of pension to George Fetterman;

H. R. 8273. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Pearson;

H. R. 8481. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard Callaghan;

H. R. 8712. An act granting an increase of pension to Josiah Hall;

H. R. 9107. An act granting a pension to James W. Russell;

H. R. 9262. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Farrar;

H. R. 9465. An act granting a pension to Ella Q. Parrish;

H. R. 9836. An act granting an increase of pension to Dier Collett;

H. R. 10814. An act granting a pension to Eugene A. Myers;

H. R. 11142. An act granting an increase of pension to James McQuade;
H. R. 11483. An act granting a pension to Maria Niles;
H. R. 12128. An act granting an increase of pension to Dennis A. Litzinger;
H. R. 12190. An act granting an increase of pension to Milton R. Dungan;
H. R. 12339. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles T. Murray;
H. R. 12482. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel B. McLean;
H. R. 12517. An act granting a pension to William Bays;
H. R. 12667. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Weber;
H. R. 13057. An act granting an increase of pension to James S. Salsberry;
H. R. 14144. An act granting a pension to Allen M. Cameron;
H. R. 14199. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ewing;
H. R. 14480. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Moore;
H. R. 14537. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert B. Crawford;
H. R. 14680. An act granting an increase of pension to Sampson Parker;
H. R. 15619. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel W. Atkinson;
H. R. 15620. An act granting an increase of pension to David D. Owens;
H. R. 15713. An act granting an increase of pension to William McCrea;
H. R. 16211. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Montgomery;
H. R. 16342. An act granting a pension to Matilda Foster;
H. R. 16397. An act granting an increase of pension to Allie Williams;
H. R. 16513. An act granting an increase of pension to Bridget M. Duffy;
H. R. 16741. An act granting an increase of pension to William J. Girvan;
H. R. 16747. An act granting a pension to Sherman Jacobs;
H. R. 16748. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucius C. Fletcher;
H. R. 16856. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph McBride;
H. R. 17481. An act granting a pension to Eliza F. Wadsworth;
H. R. 17651. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Riley;
H. R. 17675. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonas M. Sees;
H. R. 17691. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Henrie;
H. R. 17874. An act granting an increase of pension to Roseanna Hughes;
H. R. 17918. An act granting a pension to Walter S. Harman;
H. R. 18018. An act granting an increase of pension to David Evans;
H. R. 18045. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Webb;
H. R. 18066. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander M. Fergus;
H. R. 18113. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa M. Sees;
H. R. 18193. An act granting an increase of pension to Walden Kelly;
H. R. 18214. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ingram;
H. R. 18227. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine F. Fitzgerald;
H. R. 18343. An act granting an increase of pension to John N. Oliver;
H. R. 18363. An act granting an increase of pension to Rudolph Bentz;
H. R. 18403. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Jane Ragan;
H. R. 18429. An act granting an increase of pension to David Mitchell;
H. R. 18493. An act granting an increase of pension to George H. Reeder;
H. R. 18705. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas T. Page;
H. R. 18860. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Anderson;
H. R. 19080. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick Fienop;
H. R. 19101. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah C. A. Scott;
H. R. 19119. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Osborn;
H. R. 19161. An act granting an increase of pension to Marcus D. Tenney;
H. R. 19162. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Van Tine;
H. R. 19174. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha A. Billings;
H. R. 19215. An act granting an increase of pension to John Lingenfelder;
H. R. 19256. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa J. Birthright;
H. R. 19293. An act granting an increase of pension to William Colvin;
H. R. 19298. An act granting an increase of pension to Job B. Crabtree;
H. R. 19300. An act granting an increase of pension to Phebe Easley;
H. R. 19318. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Rivers;
H. R. 19319. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Spruell;
H. R. 19320. An act granting an increase of pension to Louise J. Pratt;
H. R. 19321. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Turner;
H. R. 19322. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Isabella Rykard;
H. R. 19323. An act granting an increase of pension to Orlando L. Levy;
H. R. 19324. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Long;
H. R. 19325. An act granting an increase of pension to George Oppel;
H. R. 19326. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret R. Vandiver;
H. R. 19357. An act granting an increase of pension to Anna Lamar Walker;
H. R. 19359. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi Brader;
H. R. 19404. An act granting an increase of pension to Elias S. Falkenburg;
H. R. 19415. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Ann Reavis;
H. R. 19416. An act granting an increase of pension to Antonio Macello;
H. R. 19463. An act granting an increase of pension to Emma L. Patterson;
H. R. 19483. An act granting a pension to Lydia A. Patnaude;
H. R. 19503. An act granting an increase of pension to David S. Jones;
H. R. 19504. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Walker;
H. R. 19511. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander Dixson;
H. R. 19514. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Stimpson;
H. R. 19529. An act granting an increase of pension to Nancy Elizabeth Hutcheson;
H. R. 19530. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles P. Gray;
H. R. 19534. An act granting an increase of pension to Noah Ressequie;
H. R. 19587. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha Ann Jones;
H. R. 19601. An act granting an increase of pension to John E. Kingsbury;
H. R. 19611. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Kinkerly;
H. R. 19626. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Campbell;
H. R. 19743. An act granting an increase of pension to W. P. McMichael;
H. R. 19744. An act granting an increase of pension to George Casper Homan Hummel, alias George C. Homan;
H. R. 19819. An act granting an increase of pension to Johanna Kearney;
H. R. 19889. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Melson;
H. R. 19922. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Sutherland;

H. R. 21200. An act to authorize the county of Allegheny, in the State of Pennsylvania, to construct a bridge across the Allegheny River in Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 21408. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the keeping of employment agencies in the District of Columbia where fees are charged for procuring employment or situations," approved June 19, 1906;

H. R. 21678. An act to provide for the extension of time within which homestead entrymen may establish their residence upon certain lands which were heretofore a part of the Crow Indian Reservation, within the counties of Yellowstone and Rosebud, in the State of Montana; and

H. J. Res. 196. Joint resolution relating to the construction of a bridge at Fort Snelling, Minn.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a memorial of the Credit Men's Association of Minneapolis, Minn., remonstrating against the repeal of the present bankruptcy law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, and a petition of the Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, praying for the enactment of legislation to restrict immigration; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. FRYE presented a petition of the State Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Maine, praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the petition of E. L. Sampson and 54 other citizens of Dover and Foxcroft, Me., praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Yarmouth, Me., and a memorial of sundry citizens of Richmond, Me., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Maritime Association of New York City, N. Y., praying for the enactment of legislation abolishing the requirement for the inspection of sail vessels and the licensing of mates thereof; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. TELLER presented a petition of the Woman's Club of Leadville, Colo., praying for the enactment of legislation to remove the duty on works of art; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Longmont, Colo., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Denver, Colo., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the classification of the salaries of postal clerks; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of Pomona Grange, No. 3, and a petition of Left Hand Grange, No. 9, Patrons of Husbandry, of Boulder County, Colo., praying for the passage of the so-called "parcels-post bill" and the savings-bank bill; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. HOPKINS presented resolutions adopted by the Bankers' Club of Chicago, Ill., favoring the principles of a bank-note issue as recently enunciated by the currency commission of the American Bankers' Association at Washington; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Chicago, Springfield, Evanston, Decatur, and Oregon, all in the State of Illinois, praying for an investigation of the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented memorials of the Copper River Railway Company, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to aid in the construction of a railroad telegraph and telephone line in the district of Alaska; which were referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented petitions of the Business Men's Association and the city council of Rock Island and the Chamber of Commerce of Quincy, all in the State of Illinois, praying that an appropriation be made for the improvement of the upper Mississippi River; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. McCREARY presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Louisville, Ky., remonstrating against an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Richmond, Ky., praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. CULBERSON presented the petition of John A. Hulen, of Texas, praying for the enactment of legislation for the relief of Joseph V. Cunningham and other officers of the Philippine volunteers; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BRANDEGEE presented the petition of David Conner, of Connecticut, praying for the enactment of legislation for the relief of Joseph V. Cunningham and other officers of the Philippine Volunteers; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also presented the petition of P. and F. Corbin, of New Britain, Conn, praying for a continuance of the appropriation for the maintenance of models in the United States Patent Office; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented memorials of sundry citizens of Albion, Moon, La Farge, Deerfield, Vernon County, and Dane County, all in the State of Wisconsin, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BERRY presented a memorial of sundry trainmen employed by the Fort Smith and Western Railroad Company, of Fort Smith, Ark., remonstrating against the passage of House bill 18671, commonly known as the "sixteen-hour bill;" which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. STONE presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Douglas County, Mo., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Lawrence, Barry, and Newton counties, in the State of Missouri, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation granting the right to national banks to issue legal-tender currency; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Springfield, Mo., praying for the ratification of certain treaties for the enlargement of the jurisdiction of The Hague Tribunal, and also for the enactment of legislation providing for an increase of the United States Navy; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the Society of the Athenæum, of Kansas City, Mo., praying for the enactment of legislation to establish a bureau for women and children in the Department of the Interior; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of sundry newspaper publishers of St. Joseph, Mo., praying for the enactment of legislation to permit newspapers to contract with railroads for transportation to be paid for in advertising at regular rates; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented memorials of C. V. McLaughlin, general chairman of the general protective board, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Union Pacific Railway, Omaha, Nebr.; H. L. Bronson, chief dispatcher, J. E. Johnson, first dispatcher, T. A. Smith, second dispatcher, and A. G. Stratton, third dispatcher, eastern district, Kansas division, Union Pacific Railway, at Kansas City, Mo.; J. L. Chandley, chief dispatcher, G. F. Payne, first dispatcher, G. A. Stebbins, second dispatcher, and R. Woodard, third dispatcher, western district, Kansas division, Union Pacific Railway, of Ellis, Kans.; J. E. Cave, chief conductor division 342, Order of Railway Conductors, of Kansas City, Mo.; W. C. Turner, general chairman Order of Railway Conductors, Missouri Pacific Railway system, St. Louis, Mo.; and H. J. Cheney, M. E. Smith, George B. Oder, J. F. Allen, J. E. Thomas, Walter Lord, C. E. Foster, all railway conductors, of Kansas City, Mo.; and L. S. Bennett, Val W. Robertson, H. M. Murray, W. T. Mills, I. N. Hughes, A. E. Hilburt, W. R. Stenry, and J. E. Hedges, all railway brakemen, of Kansas City, Mo.; J. G. Trimble, general attorney, Quincy, Omaha and Kansas City Railroad Company, and J. Fred Williams, of Sedalia, Mo., remonstrating against the enactment of the so-called "sixteen-hour law;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Springfield, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Chicago, Ill., praying that the Isthmian Canal Commission operate one-third of the Government's shipping out of the Gulf ports, with New Orleans as the most practicable port; which was referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

Mr. PERKINS presented a petition of the Clearing House Association of San Francisco, Cal., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the interstate-commerce law relating to bills of lading; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of the librarian of the University of California, Berkeley, Cal., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation abridging existing rights of libraries to import books in the English language; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Selma and Sebastopol, in the State of California, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented the petition of F. W. Richardson, publisher of the Gazette, of Berkeley, Cal., praying for the removal of the existing tariff on linotype and composing machines; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MILLARD presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Nebraska, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented the petition of Jacob H. Culver, of Nebraska, praying for the enactment of legislation for the relief of Joseph V. Cunningham and other officers of the Philippine Volunteers; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. ANKENY presented a memorial of sundry citizens of College Place, Wash., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. DEPEW presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Watertown, N. Y., praying for the reclassification and increase of the salaries of the postal clerks of all first-class and second-class post-offices; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented resolutions adopted at a mass meeting of citizens at Cooper Union, New York City, N. Y., relative to the discriminations against colored soldiers, and praying for the establishment of an impartial tribunal to determine the assertions and proceedings made against the soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WARNER presented sundry papers to accompany the bill (S. 6772) granting an increase of pension to Henry J. Lyda; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CLARK of Montana presented a petition of sundry citizens of Browning, Mont., praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. PATTERSON presented a petition of Left Hand Grange, No. 9, Patrons of Husbandry, of Boulder County, Colo., and a petition of Pomona Grange, No. 3, Patrons of Husbandry, of Boulder County, Colo., praying for the passage of the so-called "parcels-post bill," and the postal savings-bank bill; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. LATIMER presented the petition of Claude E. Sawyer, of South Carolina, praying for the enactment of legislation for the relief of Joseph V. Cunningham and other officers of the Philippine Volunteers; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. DOLLIVER presented petitions of sundry citizens of Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation for the relief of Joseph V. Cunningham and other officers of the Philippine Volunteers; which were referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. LONG presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Trego County, Kans., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a memorial of the National Bankers' Association of Kansas, remonstrating against the enactment of any legislation providing for a tax on the capital or deposits of a bank for the purpose of guaranteeing the depositors of failed banks; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PLATT presented memorials of sundry citizens of Erie County, N. Y., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the New York Indian Association and a petition of the Men's Association of the University Place Presbyterian Church, of New York City, N. Y., praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented memorials of Local Divisions Nos. 154, 450, 461, 171, and 56, of Binghamton, Oneonta, Whitehall, Mechanicsville, and Albany, all of the Order of Railway Conductors, and of Local Divisions Nos. 58 and 172 of Oneonta, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in the State of New York, and of Local Division No. 166, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Carbondale, Pa., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Athol, Mass., and a memorial of sundry citizens of Greater Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BURKETT presented sundry affidavits to accompany the bill (S. 6719) granting an increase of pension to Jane Newton; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of the Red River Valley Drainage Association of North Dakota, praying that an appropriation be made for topographic surveys of the Red River Valley in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

Mr. CLAPP presented a petition of the proprietors of the Daily Times, of St. Cloud, Minn., praying for the removal of the tariff on linotype and composing machines; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SPOONER presented the memorial of William Carpenter and sundry other citizens of River Falls, Wis., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HEYBURN presented sundry papers to accompany the bill (S. 7447) granting an increase of pension to Maria Wells; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. KNOX presented petitions of the Sunday School convention of Union County; William J. Gruhler, of Philadelphia; Everett Stewart, of Philadelphia; Dr. W. W. Keen, of Philadelphia; C. R. A. Janvier, of Philadelphia; M. Anderson, of Allegheny; Fred A. Riehle, of Philadelphia; John C. Sayre, of Philadelphia; Agens Kemp, of Swarthmore; Eva J. Smith, of Warren; F. W. Hutchinson, of Philadelphia; Frank Hansell, of Philadelphia; Rev. Alford Kelley, of Erie; Rev. J. W. Smith, of Warren; Rev. F. E. Southwroth, of Meadville; Dr. George W. Bailey, of Philadelphia; Frank Darragh, of Philadelphia; Ruth E. Walter, of Philadelphia; James F. Hagen, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Norman C. Allen, of Warren; F. H. Scott, of Philadelphia; M. Brown, of Philadelphia, and William F. Owens, of Lewisburg, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for an investigation of the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of the Sheffield National Bank, of Sheffield; First National Bank of Greenville; Elk County National Bank, of Ridgway; Oil City National Bank, of Oil City; the Citizens' National Bank, of Curwensville; the First National Bank of Youngsville; the Warren National Bank, of Warren, and the First National Bank of Warren, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation permitting national banks to loan 25 per cent of their capital stock on real-estate security; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of the Item, of Mount Carmel; the Sharon Eagle, of Sharon; the Lebanon Daily Times, of Lebanon; the Austin Autograph, of Austin; the Enterprise, of Belle Vernon; Susquehanna Transcript, of Susquehanna; Susquehanna Ledger, of Susquehanna, and the Knoxville Courier, of Knoxville, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for a modification of the Interstate Commerce Commission's ruling denying newspapers the right to exchange advertising for railroad transportation; which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented petitions of the Emmert Manufacturing Company, of Waynesboro; the Hygienic Fleeced Underwear Company, of Philadelphia; Supplee Hardware Company, of Philadelphia; John W. Bell & Co., of Mercer; Star Enameling and Stamping Company, of Pittsburg, and the Ames Shovel and Tool Company, of Beaver Falls, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying that an appropriation be made for the construction of a 14-foot waterway from the Lakes to the Gulf; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of McKees Rocks, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXTENSION OF RAILWAY TRACKS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. CARTER. I present a memorial from certain citizens of northeast Washington, transmitting a proposed amendment to the bill (S. 6147) authorizing changes in certain railway tracks within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes. I move that the memorial lie on the table and be printed as a document to be considered in connection with the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES AND MECHANIC ARTS.

Mr. NELSON. Some time ago I introduced a bill (S. 6680) to provide for an increased annual appropriation for the colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts, established and maintained under the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, and the act of Congress approved August 30, 1890, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I have here a brief statement showing the scope and effect of the bill and the necessity for it, which I move be printed and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 7105) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Baker;

A bill (S. 5542) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth S. Reess; and

A bill (S. 1495) granting an increase of pension to John Holley.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 7056) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Carel; and

A bill (S. 1594) granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Guthrie.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3681) granting a pension to Sanford H. Moats, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 5672) granting an increase of pension to Felix G. Murphy;

A bill (S. 1797) granting an increase of pension to John E. Henderson; and

A bill (S. 6947) granting an increase of pension to C. M. Brough.

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5106) granting an increase of pension to John Adshead, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6656) granting an increase of pension to Eli M. Skinner, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. ALGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6223) granting an increase of pension to William E. Cummin;

A bill (S. 7162) granting a pension to William H. Sheckler; and

A bill (S. 6510) granting an increase of pension to Sarah R. Williams.

Mr. ALGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 7094) granting an increase of pension to George B. Drake; and

A bill (S. 5991) granting an increase of pension to George F. Ford.

Mr. McCUMBER (for Mr. CARMACK), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 5836) granting an increase of pension to Daniel Loosley; and

A bill (S. 7378) granting a pension to Giles M. Caton.

Mr. McCUMBER (for Mr. CARMACK), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 7377) granting an increase of pension to Martha J. Callins, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also (for Mr. CARMACK), from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6625) granting an increase of pension to Anderson Henry, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also (for Mr. BURNHAM), from the same committee, to whom was referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6736) granting a pension to Charles H. Tracy;

A bill (S. 6800) granting an increase of pension to Esther Eldredge;

A bill (S. 6590) granting an increase of pension to Theron Hammer;

A bill (S. 7349) granting an increase of pension to Luke M. Lewis; and

A bill (S. 6372) granting an increase of pension to Marvin Osgood.

Mr. McCUMBER (for Mr. BURNHAM), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6915) granting an increase of pension to Samuel G. Healy;

A bill (S. 6916) granting an increase of pension to Nathan E. Stover; and

A bill (S. 6325) granting an increase of pension to David A. Edwards.

Mr. McCUMBER (for Mr. BURNHAM), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6670) granting an increase of pension to Dana H. McDuffee;

A bill (S. 7350) granting an increase of pension to Richard Dodge;

A bill (S. 6733) granting a pension to Anna D. Barnes;

A bill (S. 6835) granting an increase of pension to George Maybury;

A bill (S. 6137) granting an increase of pension to Fannie L. Pike;

A bill (S. 6145) granting an increase of pension to Enoch Bolles; and

A bill (S. 5912) granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel Green.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6963) granting an increase of pension to William B. Sayles;

A bill (S. 6960) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Ashton;

A bill (S. 4033) granting an increase of pension to William Kirkwood;

A bill (S. 6573) granting an increase of pension to John A. Williams;

A bill (S. 4108) granting an increase of pension to Martha M. Lambert;

A bill (S. 6050) granting an increase of pension to Edward W. Galligan;

A bill (S. 6823) granting an increase of pension to John H. Holsey; and

A bill (S. 6828) granting an increase of pension to Walter D. Greene.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6687) granting an increase of pension to Henry W. Mahaney;

A bill (S. 756) granting a pension to Jacob Neibels;

A bill (S. 3295) granting an increase of pension to Anna Williams; and

A bill (S. 6958) granting an increase of pension to Keiziah Walker.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6836) granting an increase of pension to Edward P. Strickland;

A bill (S. 7099) granting an increase of pension to Esther A. Cleaveland;

A bill (S. 6811) granting an increase of pension to James Carpenter;

A bill (S. 2780) granting an increase of pension to Daniel McCarter; and

A bill (S. 6571) granting an increase of pension to William G. Ross.

Mr. BURKETT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6722) granting an increase of pension to William Arnold;

A bill (S. 6710) granting an increase of pension to Thomas P. Way; and

A bill (S. 7265) granting an increase of pension to John R. McCoy.

Mr. BURKETT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 4113) granting an increase of pension to Dell E. Pert;

A bill (S. 7053) granting an increase of pension to Solomon Draper;

A bill (S. 7294) granting an increase of pension to W. P. Patterson:

A bill (S. 5854) granting an increase of pension to John W. McWilliams; and

A bill (S. 6708) granting an increase of pension to Columbus B. Mason.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6459) granting an increase of pension to Ellen Carpenter, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4769) granting an increase of pension to Rosa Olds Jenkins, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. OVERMAN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6350) granting an increase of pension to Silas G. Clark;

A bill (S. 6726) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Jackson;

A bill (S. 6351) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. West; and

A bill (S. 6589) granting an increase of pension to Washington D. Gray.

Mr. OVERMAN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 5292) granting an increase of pension to Michael J. Sprinkle; and

A bill (S. 6587) granting an increase of pension to Marcus M. Currier.

Mr. OVERMAN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 7069) granting an increase of pension to Marshall Johnson;

A bill (S. 5021) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Kearney; and

A bill (S. 6588) granting an increase of pension to Arthur Hathorn.

Mr. GEARIN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 7192) granting an increase of pension to Noah Jarvis, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 5023) granting an increase of pension to Ruth E. Olney;

A bill (S. 7193) granting an increase of pension to David C. Benjamin;

A bill (S. 6703) granting an increase of pension to John H. Niblock;

A bill (S. 3320) granting an increase of pension to Elias H. Parker; and

A bill (S. 7246) granting an increase of pension to William H. Berry.

Mr. GEARIN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 4055) granting a pension to Nancy J. Mullally; and

A bill (S. 4813) granting an increase of pension to Samuel M. Doolittle.

Mr. HOPKINS, from the Committee on Fisheries, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 78) authorizing and empowering the President of the United States to abate and suppress the continued shameful and cruel practice of killing nursing mother fur seals on the high seas, now permitted and conducted, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations; which was agreed to.

Mr. PILES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 7157) granting an increase of pension to Austin S. Dunning;

A bill (S. 6936) granting an increase of pension to Robert Jenkins; and

A bill (S. 6937) granting an increase of pension to Michael Rosbrugh.

Mr. PILES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6935) granting an increase of pension to W. R. Neil; and

A bill (S. 7384) granting an increase of pension to Orson B. Johnson.

Mr. PILES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 7161) granting an increase of pension to George A. Tyler;

A bill (S. 7060) granting an increase of pension to John Hager; and

A bill (S. 6532) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Daniels.

Mr. PATTERSON, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 1516) granting an increase of pension to O. O. Austin;

A bill (S. 7075) granting an increase of pension to J. S. Lewis; and

A bill (S. 7074) granting an increase of pension to William Jenkins.

Mr. PATTERSON, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6233) granting an increase of pension to George E. Vanderwalker, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. FRYE introduced a bill (S. 7519) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of William B. Young, alias John F. Huntly; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 7520) granting an increase of pension to William G. Towle;

A bill (S. 7521) granting an increase of pension to George W. Stone;

A bill (S. 7522) granting a pension to James C. Drew (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 7523) granting an increase of pension to John Cusick;

A bill (S. 7524) granting a pension to Mary J. Allen (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 7525) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Ham (with accompanying papers).

Mr. GALLINGER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia:

A bill (S. 7526) to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to close and abandon roadways in said District outside of the city of Washington, and to transfer the title of the United States in said roadways to abutting owners, and for other purposes.

A bill (S. 7527) governing the maintenance of stock yards, slaughterhouses, and packing houses in the District of Columbia (with an accompanying paper); and

A bill (S. 7528) regulating refunding of taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes (with an accompanying paper).

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 7529) to authorize Col.

Theodore A. Bingham, United States Army, to accept a decoration conferred upon him by the Government of the French Republic; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. ALGER introduced a bill (S. 7530) for the relief of the heirs of Frederick Carlisle; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7531) granting a pension to William F. Letts; and

A bill (S. 7532) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Kiichli.

Mr. FULTON introduced a bill (S. 7533) granting an increase of pension to Orvil Dodge; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7534) for the relief of the Kathlamet Band of the Chinook Indians of the State of Oregon; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. McENERY introduced a bill (S. 7535) for the relief of the estate of Raymond Pochelu, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. LATIMER introduced a bill (S. 7536) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building thereon at Beaufort, in the State of South Carolina; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. RAYNER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 7537) for the relief of John W. Watson;

A bill (S. 7538) for the relief of the trustees of the Sandy Hook School, Sandy Hook, Md.;

A bill (S. 7539) for the relief of the trustees of the Burkittsville School, of Burkittsville, Md.;

A bill (S. 7540) for the relief of the rector of St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, of Hancock, Md.; and

A bill (S. 7541) for the relief of the trustees of the Frederick Presbyterian Church, of Frederick, Md.

Mr. RAYNER introduced a bill (S. 7542) granting an increase of pension to Myers Uhlfelder; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DOLLIVER introduced a bill (S. 7543) granting an increase of pension to Robert B. McCumber; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FRAZIER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 7544) for the relief of the trustees of the Harpeth Academy, Williamson County, Tenn. (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 7545) (by request) for the relief of Michael Silke; and

A bill (S. 7546) for the relief of the trustees of the Porter Female Academy, Williamson County, Tenn. (with an accompanying paper).

Mr. FRAZIER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds:

A bill (S. 7547) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Springfield, in the State of Tennessee; and

A bill (S. 7548) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Winchester, in the State of Tennessee.

Mr. MALLORY introduced a bill (S. 7549) to amend sections 1, 2, and 3 of an act entitled "An act relating to liability of common carriers in the District of Columbia and Territories and common carriers engaged in commerce between the States and between the States and foreign nations to their employees," approved June 11, 1906; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SMOOT introduced a bill (S. 7550) for the relief of Harry A. Young; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7551) granting an increase of pension to Daniel R. Firman; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BULKELEY (by request) introduced a bill (S. 7552) to establish a Bureau of Insurance in the Department of Commerce and Labor, and to regulate stock companies undertaking insurances in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SCOTT introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 7553) granting an increase of pension to A. P. Clark (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 7554) granting an increase of pension to Amelia R. Randolph; and

A bill (S. 7555) granting an increase of pension to James T. Piggott (with an accompanying paper).

Mr. HOPKINS introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7556) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Spanton (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 7557) granting an increase of pension to Joie A. Lathrop; and

A bill (S. 7558) granting an increase of pension to Mary Morgan (with an accompanying paper).

Mr. DICK (by request) introduced a bill (S. 7559) for relief of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Gallipolis, Ohio; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7560) granting an increase of pension to James V. Brough; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. McCUMBER introduced a bill (S. 7561) granting an increase of pension to Charles A. Woodward; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. NELSON introduced a bill (S. 7562) to amend section 8 of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, and for other purposes," approved May 28, 1896, relative to the expense allowance of United States attorneys and assistants while absent from their official residences on official business; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CLAY introduced a bill (S. 7563) for the relief of the estate of Howell Tatum, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7564) to limit the jurisdiction of the district and circuit courts of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WHYTE introduced a bill (S. 7565) granting an increase of pension to Clara P. Coleman; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PILES introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7566) granting an increase of pension to John Anslow; and

A bill (S. 7567) granting a pension to William Booth.

Mr. PILES introduced a bill (S. 7568) to relieve the Tanana Mines Railroad, under construction in Alaska, of the license tax of $100 per mile per annum; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. CARTER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 7569) to reduce the rates of postage in certain cases on mail matter addressed to enlisted men in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Revenue-Cutter Service; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. KITTREDGE introduced a bill (S. 7570) granting an increase of pension to George W. Hapgood; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PERKINS introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7571) granting an increase of pension to Levi N. Gregory (with an accompanying paper); and

A bill (S. 7572) granting an increase of pension to Warren M. Fales.

Mr. BRANDEGEE introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7573) granting an increase of pension to John C. Collins; and

A bill (S. 7574) granting an increase of pension to Emily J. Larkham.

Mr. WARREN introduced a bill (S. 7575) to aid in the settlement and irrigation of the lands included in national reclamation projects; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7576) for the relief of Frederick W. Beardslee; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7577) granting an increase of pension to Frances V. Dallas; and

A bill (S. 7578) granting a pension to Sarah E. Turner.

Mr. MILLARD introduced a bill (S. 7579) granting an increase of pension to John G. Richardson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SUTHERLAND introduced a bill (S. 7580) granting an honorable discharge to Wilbur I. Rowland; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7581) authorizing Preston Nutter and others to enter certain lands in the former Uintah Indian Reservation in Utah; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7582) granting an increase of pension to William Mulock; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. WARNER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 7583) to make available the waters of the James River, in the county of Stone and State of Missouri, south of township 25 north, in range 23 west, for electric power purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 7584) for the relief of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Macon, Mo.; and

A bill (S. 7585) for the relief of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Macon, Mo.

Mr. WARNER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7586) granting an increase of pension to George Render (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 7587) granting a pension to George Metz, sr. (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 7588) granting an increase of pension to Charles Stimson (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 7589) granting an increase of pension to Christine Lusk; and

A bill (S. 7590) granting a pension to Kinsley D. James (with accompanying papers).

Mr. McCREARY introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 7591) for the relief of Mrs. Sarah E. Cleveland;

A bill (S. 7592) for the relief of the town of Nicholasville, Ky., and the Presbyterian Church of Nicholasville, Ky.; and

A bill (S. 7593) for the relief of Mingo Peters (with an accompanying paper).

Mr. McCREARY introduced a bill (S. 7594) to correct the military record of John Curtis; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7595) granting a pension to Elizabeth S. Norton; and

A bill (S. 7596) granting an increase of pension to Alexander C. Carman.

Mr. STONE introduced a bill (S. 7597) for the relief of Charles L. Blanton; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7598) granting an increase of pension to Jesse C. Newell; and

A bill (S. 7599) granting a pension to Charles W. McMullen.

Mr. CLAPP introduced a bill (S. 7600) granting an increase of pension to Sylvanus S. Boynton; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PATTERSON introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7601) granting an increase of pension to Catherine Cooper;

A bill (S. 7602) granting a pension to Nancy E. Weatherman;

A bill (S. 7603) granting an increase of pension to W. C. Beale; and

A bill (S. 7604) granting an increase of pension to John B. Morgan.

Mr. BEVERIDGE introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7605) granting an increase of pension to Judiah B. Smithson;

A bill (S. 7606) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Reeves (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 7607) granting an increase of pension to David M. Haskell (with an accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 7608) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Allison;

A bill (S. 7609) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Strong; and

A bill (S. 7610) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Kurz.

Mr. LODGE introduced a bill (S. 7611) granting a pension to H. A. Johnson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. FULTON submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 for establishing a telephone line from the Umpqua River life-saving station, Oregon, to a point at the mouth of the Siuslaw River, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment authorizing the payment to the Lower Band of Chinook Indians of the States of Oregon and Washington of $337,870.94, in full payment of lands taken from them by the United States, in accordance with the findings of the Court of Claims, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment including Alaskan Indians among the pupils who may be educated at the Indian school, Salem, Oreg., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment authorizing the issuance of fee-simple patents to Eddie Perryman, a full-blooded Creek Indian, for certain lands, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also submitted an amendment conferring upon the Court of Claims jurisdiction to hear, determine, and render final judgment in the case of the White River Utes, etc., v. The United States, intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment authorizing the issuance of fee-simple patents to Tobe Tiger and certain other Creek Indians in the Indian Territory for lands heretofore allotted to them, intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. ANKENY submitted an amendment relative to the allotment of lands in severalty out of any unallotted lands on the Yakima Reservation, in the State of Washington, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also submitted an amendment directing the Secretary of the Interior to pay to Alexander Mark, of King County, Wash., all moneys now held by the Government in trust for him, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. FRAZIER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $1,083 to pay J. L. Pearcy for services as clerk to the conference minority of the House of Representatives from December 16, 1903, to June 30, 1904, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KITTREDGE submitted an amendment conferring upon the Court of Claims jurisdiction to hear, determine, and render final judgment upon the claim of Esther Rousseau, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BURKETT submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $2,500 for completing the paving of Florida avenue from Eighteenth street to Connecticut avenue, intended to be proposed by him to the District of Columbia appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

EXTENSION OF RAILWAY TRACKS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. CARTER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 6147) authorizing changes in certain railway tracks within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

REGULATION OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

On motion of Mr. STONE, it was Ordered, That 500 additional copies of S. 7219, to amend section 1 of act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission," approved June 29, 1906, be printed for the use of the Senate.

RECLAMATION OF SWAMP AND OVERFLOWED LANDS.

On motion of Mr. CLAPP, it was Ordered, That 100 additional copies of S. 7290, for the establishment of a drainage fund and the construction of works for the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands, be printed for the use of the Senate.

INVESTIGATION OF RAILROAD COLLISIONS, ETC.

Mr. CARTER submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the appointment of a joint committee of the two Houses of Congress is hereby authorized, to be composed of four Senators, to be appointed by the Vice-President, and five Members of the House, to be appointed by the Speaker, which joint committee shall, as a body or through subcommittees of its members, investigate and report to Congress before January 1, 1908, its findings as to the causes of collisions, wrecks, and accidents of all kinds, involving personal injuries or loss of life, on railroads engaged in interstate commerce or operating in whole or in part in any Territory or the District of Columbia, and also to recommend to Congress, by bill or otherwise, its conclusions as to the best means of reducing injury and loss of life in traveling upon or operating such railroads.

The joint committee shall be and is authorized to send for persons and papers, compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and records, and to administer oaths through any of its members, and any subcommittee thereof shall have and may exercise the power and authority hereby conferred on the joint committee.

The said joint committee or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions or in the recess of Congress.

Be it further resolved, That the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, to be paid in equal proportions out of the contingent funds of the Senate and the House of Representatives, on the audit and order of the chairman of said joint committee, on account of clerk hire, witness fees, expert assistance, printing, traveling, and other necessary expenses incurred by the joint committee or the members thereof, by, through, or on account of such investigation and report.

THE PANAMA RAILROAD.

Mr. MORGAN. I send to the desk a resolution and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the following official papers relating to the Panama Railroad, viz, a letter of B. F. Harper, auditor, dated November 24, 1906, addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury; and a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, dated December 19, 1906; and a letter from T. P. Shonts, dated January 5, 1907, transmitting a tabulated statement of the financial condition of said railroad, together with such statement, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and also as a Senate document. And that the same be referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals and also, for information, to the Committee on Appropriations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none.

Mr. MORGAN. I hold in my hand the official papers to which the resolution refers. They have been obtained after a very considerable amount of research and examination of the records of the Panama Railroad, the Isthmian Canal Commission, and the Treasury Department. I ask that the resolution be adopted in order that the two committees referred to may have the benefit of this examination.

The resolution was agreed to.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, November 24, 1906.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

SIR: I have the honor to return herewith letter of the Hon. JOHN T. MORGAN, United States Senate, dated November 20, 1906, in relation to the accounts of the Panama Railroad Company, by you referred to this office for report.

So far as this office is advised, no separate account is kept in this department between the Panama Railroad Company and the United States. The Panama Railroad Company, as shown by the accounts of the Isthmian Canal Commission, is a corporation doing business as such, and money which it disburses is the money of the corporation as distinguished from public funds, and the accounts of the corporation are in no way subject to the scrutiny or audit of the Treasury Department. The Panama Railroad Company renders no accounts to this office as a disbursing or collecting agent of the United States, and if public funds have come into its hands for disbursement it is without the knowledge of this office.

Various amounts have been advanced by the Isthmian Canal Commission to the Panama Railroad Company under agreement to return the same. Aside from these advances, authorized by Congress, the Panama Railroad Company is treated in the accounts of the disbursing officers of the Isthmian Canal Commission submitted to this office as a contracting corporation furnishing services and materials to the United States. The accounts submitted for audit show the services rendered and materials furnished and the amounts paid therefor. These accounts also purport to show all materials sold to and services rendered for the Panama Railroad Company by the Isthmian Canal Commission, and the amounts received for the sale of such materials and for the performance of such services have been covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

Respectfully,

B. F. HARPER, Auditor.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, December 19, 1906.

Hon. JOHN T. MORGAN,
United States Senate.

SIR: Referring to your inquiries upon the subject of the accounting between the Panama Railroad Company and the Treasury, and as to the state of the accounts, and the amount of receipts and disbursements of the company since 1904, I have the honor to advise you as follows:

Receipts into the United States Treasury through the Isthmian Canal Commission on account of the Panama Railroad.

	Fiscal year 1905.	Fiscal year 1906.	Fiscal year 1907, July to November, inclusive.
Annual subsidy	$25,000.00	$25,000.00	.....
Dividends on Panama Railroad stock	344,945.00	.....	.....
Sale Panama Railroad stock	.....	1,300.00	.....
Work done by Canal Commission	160.64	17,548.33	$25,694.53
Earnings: Telephone and telegraph service	1,138.45	114.16	387.87
Freight refunded by railroad company	8.97	.....	.....
Rentals, canal property	.....	101,518.69	61,160.52
Interest on loans made by Canal Commission	.....	.....	10,462.48
Sales of Government property	.....	235,198.92	360,799.65
Total	371,253.66	380,680.10	458,505.05

As no separate account is kept in this Department between the railroad company and the United States, the disbursements to or of the company are not of record in the Treasury.

Further, the Treasury Department is not advised of the relations existing between the Panama Railroad Company and the Isthmian Canal Commission, and therefore can furnish no additional data to that above given.

A copy of the report made in the matter by the Auditor for the War Department on the 24th ultimo is inclosed for your information, and it is suggested that inquiries be made of the War Department for the detailed information desired.

Respectfully,

J. H. EDWARDS,
Acting Secretary.

PANAMA RAILROAD STEAMSHIP LINE,
Washington, January 5, 1907.

DEAR SIR: Referring to my letter of the 2d instant, I beg to inclose to you herewith statement prepared by the general auditor, showing the results of operations of the Panama Railroad Company from January 1, 1903, to October 31, 1906, by years.

In this statement is shown not only earnings and expenses, but the net earnings are carried through to profit and loss account, thereby showing the net results after all payments and adjustments during the period covered.

Very truly, yours,

T. P. SHONTS, President.

Hon. JOHN T. MORGAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Panama Railroad Company—Statement of earnings, expenses, and income, and profit and loss account, amount expended for new construction and improvement, and amounts paid United States Government January 1, 1903, to October 31, 1906.

Year.	Gross earnings.	Operating expenses.	Net earnings.	Miscellaneous income.	Total income.
1903	$2,587,976.69	$1,738,407.86	$849,568.83	a$76,074.60	$925,643.43
1904	3,206,621.76	2,045,025.89	1,161,595.87	a61,237.86	1,222,833.73
1905	3,689,179.46	2,858,613.33	830,566.13	33,564.55	864,130.68
1906 to Oct. 31	3,606,727.48	2,596,213.96	1,010,513.52	8,992.59	1,001,520.93
Total	13,090,505.39	9,238,261.04	3,852,244.35	161,884.42	4,014,128.77

Year.	Interest on bonds.	Charges against income.		Net income carried to profit and loss.
		Sinking fund and subsidy charges.	Miscellaneous.
1903	$102,645.00	$400,000.00	$21,930.13	$401,068.30
1904	101,360.62	400,000.00	10,578.12	710,894.99
1905	103,601.25	400,000.00	10,165.54	350,363.89
1906 to Oct. 31	82,338.75	333,333.33	1,342.55	584,506.30
Total	389,945.62	1,533,333.33	44,016.34	2,046,833.48

a These amounts being interest and exchange, were included in gross earnings in the published annual reports.

Panama Railroad Company—Statement of earnings, etc.—Continued.

Year.	Debits and credits to profit and loss.				Net increase or decrease in P. & L. balance.
	Dividends.	Property adjustment.	Miscellaneous adjustment.	First mortgage 4½ per cent bonds redeemed.
1903	$560,000.00	$540.00	$8,734.52	$140,000.00	$9,657.18
1904	175,000.00	59,570.00	10,831.46	140,000.00	605,493.53
1905	350,000.00	73,083.60	12,991.61	140,000.00	54,288.68
1906	.....	120,940.04	15,311.44	140,000.00	618,877.70
Total	1,085,000.00	253,053.64	222.89	560,000.00	1,269,002.73

Year.	Amount expended for new construction and improvements not included in operating expenses.	Amount paid to the United States Government.
		Date paid.	Dividends.	Date paid.	Subsidy.	Total.
1903 ..	$20,702.37	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
1904 ..	34,543.40	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
1905 ..	591,273.92	Feb. 1, 1905	$344,905.00	Feb. 17, 1905	$25,000.00	$369,905.00
1906 ..	1,223,540.67	.....	.....	Feb. 16, 1906	25,000.00	25,000.00
Total.	1,870,060.36	.....	344,905.00	.....	50,000.00	394,905.00

E. S. BENSON, General Auditor.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 4, 1907.

PROPOSED CLAIMS INVESTIGATION.

Mr. WARREN submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

Whereas some confusion has arisen respecting the reference of claims to the Court of Claims by the Houses of Congress and their respective committees under the acts of March 3, 1883 and 1887, commonly known as the "Bowman Act" and the "Tucker Act," and as to whether jurisdiction should not be given to said court to render judgments in all such cases if the statute of limitations were removed; and

Whereas there is also a difference of opinion among members of Congress as to whether the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission should be continued or abrogated and its business transferred to some other tribunal: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a joint committee of three members from the Senate and five Members from the House be appointed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House, respectively, to inquire into the wisdom of a repeal or modification of the acts of March 3, 1883 and 1887, respectively, or the substitution therefor of some law having uniform application to claimants, removing the bar of the statute of limitations from claims, and fixing a definite time within which suits should be commenced in said court.

Said committee is also authorized to inquire as to the wisdom of continuing the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission or abolishing the same and transferring its business to some other tribunal, with such appropriate legislation respecting the same as may in the judgment of said committee be deemed necessary.

And said committee is hereby directed to report their conclusions, with such bills, if any, as they may agree upon, at the next session of Congress.

INVESTIGATION OF AFFAIRS IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time for the report of the committee to investigate affairs in the Indian Territory be extended until the 16th of January. This request is made because of the fact that the Department of the Government having to do with Indian affairs has other matters which it wishes to present to the committee between this and that time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that the time fixed for the report of the Committee on Indian Affairs be extended to the 16th day of January. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SHOOTING AFFRAY AT ATHENS, OHIO.

Mr. TILLMAN. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution submitted by the Senator from South Carolina will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to furnish the Senate copies of all official letters, telegrams, reports, orders, and other documents, filed in the War Department having relation to the shooting affray which occurred in the town of Athens, Ohio, on the night of Friday, August 19, 1904, and which involved members of the Ohio National Guard and some of the United States troops participating in the maneuvers of the Ohio National Guard, in addition to those furnished in Senate Document No. 155, second session Fifty-ninth Congress, page 414 et seq.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, during the recess, looking through Senate Document No. 155, I read what was there reported as to the shooting affray at Athens, Ohio. Understanding that it was incomplete and having some recollection of the matter, the affair having occurred in our State, I addressed a communication to the Secretary of War requesting that all additional letters, orders, telegrams, and other documents that might be on file in the War Department in relation to the matter should be furnished to me. I received a letter from the Secretary of War a day or two later, saying that there was a lot of testimony that had been taken at a preliminary hearing that he thought I would not have any need for, though if I wanted it the Department would furnish it; that it would make a very voluminous document and cause considerable delay, but that if I would omit that they could furnish me everything else very promptly. I then wrote modifying my request, as suggested by the Secretary of War, under date of December 28, 1906, and the following reply was made:

In response to your letter of the 26th instant, as modified by your letter of the 28th instant, I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of documents as follows:

* * * * * * *

(3) Copies of all correspondence, including letters, telegrams, and orders that have been found on file in the War Department relative to the affair at Athens, Ohio, August 19, 1904, except the transcript of the record, with evidence, in the Athens County trials.

I call the attention of the Senator from South Carolina to the fact that I have from the War Department, in response to the request I made, all, as I understand, of the documents on file in that Department, except only that testimony and the record in those cases. I have looked through it, and I think it probably gives all the information on the subject that the Senator may desire to have. Now that it has been called for, if there is no objection, I will offer this matter, and the Senator can look it over. I sent for it not knowing whether I would desire to use it or not.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes.

Mr. TILLMAN. I was not aware that those documents were in the possession of any Senator; but looking through Senate Document No. 155 I noticed that the account of the Athens riot or murder or whatever it was—riot and murder both, it appeared to be——

Mr. FORAKER. It is characterized by the War Department as "a disturbance."

Mr. TILLMAN. Well, anyhow, there was a militiaman shot and killed and another one wounded, and the provost guard was overpowered by the regulars and a mob of fifty or sixty, or something like that, and I wanted the facts. I do not want to have so much particularity in some of these other instances and a seeming indifference or unwillingness to furnish us with official correspondence in the Athens matter. If the Senator has that and will have it ordered printed that will answer my purpose.

Mr. FORAKER. I will offer the matter furnished me, and ask that it may be printed as a Senate document. I got it with the idea that I might possibly want to make some use of it in connection with the investigation if we see fit to make one; but it can be used in the form of a Senate document just as well. I ask that the correspondence I send to the desk may be printed as a Senate document.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio asks that the papers sent by him to the Secretary's desk may be printed as a Senate document.

Mr. TILLMAN. With the understanding, of course, that they are official and come from the Secretary of War.

Mr. FORAKER. I have no doubt that the correspondence is complete. Of course it is official, for it comes from the Secretary of War. I have read enough from the letter of the Secretary of War addressed to myself to show the character of it.

Mr. TILLMAN. I merely want to get the evidence in such shape that it can not be impugned or attacked.

Mr. FORAKER. It will not be. The Secretary of War was very courteous, very prompt, and very obliging about it in every way. He did not seem to have any disposition to withhold anything in connection with the matter. I have no doubt everything is there, though I do not know, as I have never examined the record.

Mr. TILLMAN. I merely wanted to get at the attitude of the War Department in regard to the defense of these soldiers by the Judge-Advocate-General's office and the appeal made to the Department of Justice for help; that is all. I presume the Senator knows whether those things are in there or not.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes, Mr. President; but I will state, if the Senator desires me to do so, that it does appear from what I have sent to the desk to be printed that the War Department did send the Judge-Advocate-General to the town of Athens,

Ohio, with instructions to appear for the defense of the men who were indicted, and also directed the district attorney for the southern district of Ohio to watch the proceedings and give such help as he might be able to afford, all upon the theory that an enlisted man of the United States Army, when in trouble, was in a sense the ward of the Government, whom the Government should take care of in so far as that might be done with propriety when he should get into trouble in connection with his line of duty; but later, when the point was made that this affray had occurred outside of the line of duty of these men, the Secretary of War recognized, as the record shows, that there was some doubt about the propriety of the interference of the Government in that respect. My recollection is that the record shows that the Secretary of War then directed, or somebody else did, that the Judge-Advocate-General desist from further efforts and leave the men who had been indicted to trial and to such defense as might be provided under the laws of Ohio.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I think the information I seek is certainly contained in the correspondence which the Senator from Ohio presents. I will therefore withdraw the resolution I offered if the Senate will order the printing of the document the Senator from Ohio mentioned.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to printing the document which has been presented by the Senator from Ohio? The Chair hears none, and that order is made. The Senator from South Carolina withdraws the resolution submitted by him.

DISMISSAL OF THREE COMPANIES OF TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no further concurrent or other resolutions, the Chair lays before the Senate, in pursuance of the unanimous-consent agreement, a resolution submitted by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], which will be read.

The Secretary read the modified resolution submitted by Mr. FORAKER December 20, 1906, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be, and hereby is, authorized to take such further testimony as may be necessary to establish the facts connected with the discharge of members of Companies B, C, and D, Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, and that it be, and hereby is, authorized to send for persons and papers and administer oaths, and report thereon, by bill or otherwise.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the Calendar shows that the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. GEARIN] has given notice that on this morning he would address the Senate in regard to our relations with Japan. Of course I do not desire to interfere with that Senator by proceeding now to speak in regard to the amendment which I offered to the pending resolution. I shall, therefore, yield the floor to the Senator from Oregon that he may address the Senate, as he gave notice that he would. But I desire to say, Mr. President, that as soon as that Senator shall have concluded I shall, if I can secure recognition, take the floor in regard to the amendment which I offered on Thursday last. I am extremely anxious to press the consideration of the resolution, and under the unanimous-consent agreement I believe it is the understanding of the Senate that the resolution is to be considered until disposed of, of course not interfering with the unfinished business. I am very anxious, as I think all Senators must be, to have this resolution disposed of, and, I hope, adopted. Therefore I repeat, Mr. President, that when the Senator from Oregon shall have concluded I shall, if I can be recognized, take the floor in regard to the amendment to the resolution of the Senator from Ohio which I offered on Thursday last.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I was not present when the agreement suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] was made, but I suppose he is aware, as other Senators are aware, that the resolution will have to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. What is the suggestion of the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest that after the Senator from Massachusetts shall conclude his remarks, or any other Senator who may desire to speak to-day, then the resolution will have to be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, there are several Senators who have told me that they desire to be heard in regard to the amendment which I offered to the resolution of the Senator from Ohio. I know the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] both desire to be heard in regard to my amendment. So I do not think we can make any agreement to refer the resolution to-day.

Mr. ALDRICH. If any Senator desires to speak, I shall not, of course, press the motion, but I shall at the proper time move that the resolution be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. That can be done after the resolution shall have been adopted by the Senate.

Mr. ALDRICH. It can not be adopted by the Senate until it shall first go to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, whether this resolution should go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate or not, it is now under consideration in the Senate. When the resolution was brought up some days ago, it was understood then, or I understood, at any rate, that we should go ahead and debate the resolution if it was desired to debate it, and finally, when the debate was concluded upon it, it would go to the Committee on Military Affairs, but with the understanding that there would have to be provision made for the expenses to be incurred by the committee before any proceedings should be taken. I do not care whether that is done before the resolution goes to the Committee on Military Affairs or later.

Mr. ALDRICH. The rule of the Senate and the practice has been to refer resolutions which are a charge upon the contingent fund of the Senate to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. There will be no trouble about that. I do not care whether that is done before or after, so that at some time it is done.

Mr. President, what I rose for more particularly was to call attention to the fact that we have, as I understand it, a unanimous-consent agreement that at the close of the morning hour each and every morning, until it is disposed of, this resolution is to be taken up for consideration and be debated. That being the case, no Senator, it seems to me, ought to give notice that he wants to make a speech at the conclusion of any day's business, because he can not do it without interfering with that consent agreement; and during all the years I have served in this body we have never violated a consent agreement after we have made it.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. President, in justice to my colleague [Mr. GEARIN], I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Ohio to the fact that my colleague gave notice of his intention to address the Senate before this unanimous-consent agreement was reached.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I was about to say, and should have said it before this if the Senator had not interrupted me, that the circumstances connected with the giving of this particular notice are peculiar. The Senator from Oregon did give this notice before we had arrived at that agreement. But I want now to call the attention of Senators to the fact that we have this consent agreement, and that no notice can properly be given that will interfere with that consent agreement, and I shall deem it my duty to insist upon the consent agreement being acted upon each morning at the close of the routine morning business. Of course it has been said here that the giving of such a notice did not confer any right; but at the same time, whether it confers any right or not, we all respect the desires of a colleague in that sense and desire to comply with his wishes.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. FORAKER. I do.

Mr. CULBERSON. I ask the Senator from Ohio, if he has the RECORD before him, on what day the consent agreement to which he refers was entered into?

Mr. FORAKER. I understand it to have been entered into on last Thursday upon the suggestion of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. The language of it is simply that which was employed by the Senator, which was acquiesced in by the Senate. This was at the close of his remarks and is his last statement on the subject:

Mr. HALE. Let it be understood, Mr. President, that the resolution comes up at the end of the routine morning business, as it did to-day, and is before the Senate. If that is the understanding, I shall move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

That was acquiesced in by everybody. There is no statement to the contrary.

Mr. MCCUMBER. Mr. President——

Mr. FORAKER. Let me add another word, and then I will yield.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] has the floor.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] calls my attention to what I thought was in the RECORD, but I have not yet been able to find, in the hurry of the moment, when the suggestion was made that there was no agreement. I did not know that anybody questioned that that agreement had been made. Following the various suggestions that were made, on page 639 of the RECORD I find this:

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that, at the end of the routine morning business on the next legislative day, the resolution respecting the Brownsville matter be laid before the Senate. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HALE obtained the floor.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

I think that is all there is on that point; but clearly we have a unanimous-consent agreement that this resolution shall be the order of business to-day at the close of the routine morning business.

Now, I hope that nobody will try to interpose any other business to-morrow or any other day until we do dispose of this resolution. If they do, I want to give notice that I shall call the resolution up. We might have a consent agreement that it is to come up regularly. I give notice that I will call it up and insist on its consideration at the close of the routine business each morning of every day until there is a vote on it.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I desire to state to the Senator from Ohio that I gave notice at the same time the Senator from Oregon gave his notice that I would address the Senate on Senate resolution No. 200. Although it was on the same day, I think it was prior to the time the unanimous-consent agreement to which the Senator refers was made. Of course I have no desire to interfere with the resolution of the Senator from Ohio. I can go on at any time, but I want to say that the notice which I gave was before the unanimous-consent agreement was made.

Mr. FORAKER. Of course, then, I put the Senator from North Carolina in the same class with the Senator from Oregon. I would not have any right to complain of any Senator who wants to give a notice of this kind. I only want to call attention to the fact that we already had a unanimous-consent agreement which was in conflict with the desire of the Senator who gave the notice, and would be in conflict if it were to continue from day to day, as I suppose it is, with any other notice that might be given; but I was hoping that no other Senator would give any further notice. I understand, however, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] also has given a notice, which appears on the Calendar, and I suppose we shall have to respect that; but I only want now to have it understood that I shall press this resolution every morning until it is finally concluded.

Mr. MCCUMBER. Mr. President, I simply desire to call the attention of the Senator from Ohio to the fact that there has been no unanimous-consent agreement to take up this resolution except for the day. If it can be considered to be a unanimous agreement, it is for to-day only. Before the resolution was taken up last Thursday notice was given that I should call up the pension bill. I yielded with the understanding that the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] would go on with the discussion of this resolution, and that I could substitute another day. That other day was substituted. I called up the pension bill prior to the time at which it was agreed to take up this resolution for to-day. So, as the record now stands, neither of these notices are in the slightest degree inconsistent with the unanimous-consent agreement made at the request of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I do not wish to interfere with any of the notices which have been given, because, under the circumstances, Senators having given them, I think they ought to be respected according to the practice of the Senate; but I ask unanimous consent that it may be the order of the Senate that at the close of the routine morning business each and every morning, except the mornings for which these notices are given, the pending resolution may be taken up for consideration.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, before unanimous consent is given in that regard, I should like to inquire as to the status this resolution will have under this unanimous-consent agreement. I understand it to be the request that the agreement shall continue until the resolution is finally disposed of. What is the point of disposition to which the unanimous-consent agreement shall apply?

Mr. LODGE. The passage of the resolution.

Mr. HEYBURN. As I understand it, it is the suggestion of the Senator that it is the passage of the resolution. I understand that it is not contemplated that the resolution shall be discussed and voted upon before going to a committee. The question, as I understand it, is not shall this resolution be referred to a committee—that is not the question being considered. So the unanimous consent might result in tying up here, by the consideration of this resolution day after day to the exclusion of everything else, other matters which Senators may deem of equal or of more importance. I shall therefore feel inclined to oppose any unanimous-consent agreement that will place this resolution—which, in my judgment, is of minor importance—in such a position of advantage that all other legislation must stand still until it has been discussed, so far as Senators may desire to discuss it. There are other measures on the table which were considered of sufficient importance to be placed there in order that they might be brought up for discussion at an early day in the Senate, with a view of acting on them after such discussion. I shall object to unanimous consent being given that this resolution and the amendment to the resolution shall be taken up each morning at the end of the routine morning business to the exclusion of other matters which are entitled to be called up.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, before we pass from this resolution, and asking pardon of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. GEARIN], I desire to offer an amendment to it. I propose to add after the last word of the resolution the following:

The committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is further authorized, if deemed necessary, to visit Brownsville, Tex., inspect the locality of the recent disturbance, and examine witnesses there.

Mr. FORAKER. In so far as I have power to do so, I accept the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas.

Now, in view of some considerations that have been suggested to me since the request a moment ago for unanimous consent, I withdraw the request and shall present it later if circumstances warrant.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] will lie on the table and be printed.

TREATY WITH JAPAN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution submitted by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. GEARIN] on December 12, 1906, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas a controversy has arisen as to the rights of Japanese residents in the United States under the existing treaty with Japan and it is desirable that all cause of misunderstanding as to the scope and meaning of the terms used in that treaty should be removed to the end that the present friendly relations between the two Governments should continue; and

Whereas the Senate considers that the further unrestricted immigration of Japanese laborers into this country is not desirable: Therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that it is advisable that negotiations should be entered into with the Japanese Government by the proper executive officers of the United States with a view of securing such modification of the existing treaty with Japan as will clearly define and enumerate the rights guaranteed Japanese under said treaty, and will provide that the further coming of Japanese cooly laborers into the United States be prohibited altogether.

Mr. GEARIN. Mr. President, the question of Japanese immigration to the United States and the rights of Japanese residents within the United States is a question of immediate importance not only to the State of California, but to my own State as well, and largely to the West. I have felt, Mr. President, since the receipt at the opening of this Congress of the President's message, containing the President's views upon this subject, that there should some time come out of the West an answer to that message and its criticism. That answer will come later. This morning I shall content myself merely with outlining what I think will be the cogent reasons supporting that answer when it is given.

Although by the Constitution the power to make treaties with foreign governments is not vested in the Congress, yet, inasmuch as no treaty can be entered into until the action of the Executive in negotiating it is ratified by the Senate, it can not be deemed a presumption to suggest in advance to the President the desirability of a treaty, if one does not exist, or the modification of one already existing and which the Senate has heretofore ratified.

The right to make such suggestion exists, I take it, at all times and the propriety of exercising that right with reference to the present treaty with Japan, in the light of recent occurrences and Executive communications, must be apparent.

While a treaty during its life is the supreme law of the land, with reference to the matters and provisions and stipulations expressly declared in it, or reasonably within the sweep of the contractual obligations between the parties, yet it is, after all, but a mutual understanding reduced to writing, limited as to time and subject to change by the consent of the contracting parties, as all contracts are and necessarily must be.

The treaty to which I now wish to attract the attention of the Senate was proclaimed on the 21st day of March, 1895, and went into operation July 17, 1899, and by its terms was to continue in force twelve years. It was a satisfactory treaty then, and in its main provisions is satisfactory now. But great changes have come in the last twelve years—changes in conditions, changes in policies, changes in our relations with the nations and our relations with and knowledge of the people of Japan—but greatest of all, changes in Japan and her marvelous advancement as one of the great "world powers" of the earth. And during those years and while these changes were in progress, changes which, among other things, made us a close neighbor to Japan where our Eastern possessions are almost within the shadow of the Mikado's flag, there has never been a day during Japan's trouble or our own when there did not exist between the two nations the warmest feelings of friendship and mutual esteem. Those feelings between the two nations exist to-day and it is the desire and hope of the people of this country that they shall remain so. And it is because of that hope, and ministering in a way to its realization, that I ask for the passage of this resolution and Executive action in pursuance of it.

We are at peace now with Japan, but we shall not continue so without a better understanding of the rights guaranteed by the present treaty and the obligations imposed by its terms. When this treaty was written it was considered, I presume, to be clear in its terms and specifications as to all the rights to be enjoyed by the citizens of both the contracting parties—so clear and definite that disputes as to its meaning could never arise. And it was thought that both nations could continue to live in amity under it. But it seems that this reasonable expectation of those who formulated the treaty is not to be realized. A very serious trouble has come about—a trouble that may lead to other and more serious troubles—and I think it is the opinion of all fair-minded men that if there is any question about this treaty or what it means, or in any respect whatever, we should have a new treaty about which there could be no such question. And this in fairness to Japan as well as ourselves.

Up to a few months ago no difficulty had arisen—no contention by anybody that the rights of Japanese residing in the United States were other or greater than as enumerated in the treaty itself. And the peoples of the two countries were in perfect accord in all things. But suddenly and without any premonitory symptoms to announce the coming of a change, this peace and quiet was turned into turmoil and strife. Public meetings were called, resolutions were adopted, the public press day after day contained inflammatory articles on the strained relations between this Government and the Government of Japan, and even European newspapers took hold of the situation and added fuel to the flame. And all this confusion and uproar arose about what? A very simple thing. In the month of October, last year, the board of education of the city and county of San Francisco—a State board created by and carrying out the provisions of a State law—made a regulation providing for a separation of Japanese from white pupils in the public schools of San Francisco. Whether such regulation was wise or unwise is a matter with which we are not concerned. It was a regulation the board undoubtedly had a right to make, and did make, and it was fully approved by the people of San Francisco and, so far as public report may be credited, by the people of the whole State of California.

There were at that time (October 11, 1906) in the public schools only 93 Japanese pupils, and of this number 68 were born in Japan and 25 in the United States. These pupils had before that time been attending public schools in company with white children and no attempt had been made to separate them, and the board of education had adopted no rule on the subject. Possibly no rule would have been adopted, at least not at that time, were it not that the disastrous conflagration which destroyed more than one-half of the city, destroyed at the same time the school buildings where these Japanese had been accustomed to attend school, and they were forced into another part of town where school facilities were so meager that attention was called to their presence. Then the order was made that they attend a separate school. The right to make such an order always existed, but it was not exercised. When the right was challenged by the Japanese it was promptly asserted by the school board and the rule enforced. Complaint was made by the Japanese representative in San Francisco, and suddenly this matter—a matter exclusively under the control of the State in the administration and carrying out of its domestic policy—became a question of national importance. To what extent it came to be a matter of national concern may be judged from the following extracts from the President's message submitted to Congress December 4, 1906. After eulogizing the Japanese and stating that generally they were well received and welcomed by our citizens, the message proceeds:

> But here and there a most unworthy feeling has manifested itself toward the Japanese—the feeling that has been shown in shutting them out from the common schools in San Francisco, and in mutterings against them in one or two other places, because of their efficiency as workers. To shut them out from the public schools is a wicked absurdity, when there are no first-class colleges in the land, including the universities and colleges of California, which do not gladly welcome Japanese students and on which Japanese students do not reflect credit. We have as much to learn from Japan as Japan has to learn from us; and no nation is fit to teach unless it is willing to learn. * * *
>
> It is only a very small body of our citizens that act badly. Where the Federal Government has power it will deal summarily with any such. Where the several States have power I earnestly ask that they also deal wisely and promptly with such conduct, or else this small body of wrongdoers may bring shame upon the great mass of their innocent and right-thinking fellows—that is, upon our nation as a whole. * * *
>
> I recommend to the Congress that an act be passed specifically providing for the naturalization of Japanese who come here intending to become American citizens. One of the great embarrassments attending the performance of our international obligations is the fact that the statutes of the United States are entirely inadequate. They fail to give the National Government sufficiently ample power, through United States courts and by the use of the Army and Navy, to protect aliens in the rights secured to them under solemn treaties which are the law of the land. I therefore earnestly recommend that the criminal and civil statutes of the United States be so amended and added to as to enable the President, acting for the United States Government, which is responsible in our international relations, to enforce the rights of aliens under treaties. Even as the law now is, something can be done by the Federal Government toward this end, and in the matter now before me affecting the Japanese, everything that it is in my power to do will be done, and all of the forces, military and civil, of the United States which I may lawfully employ will be so employed.

Now, Mr. President, considering the subject-matter to which this portion of the message is directed, it is difficult to understand the meaning of this warning or its scope.

It must be remembered that the only "right" which it was claimed had been denied to the Japanese was the assumed right to attend the public schools of California in company with white children. But this is not a "right" at all; certainly not a "right" with which this treaty has any concern.

California is under no obligations to the Federal Government to have public schools, or any kind of schools at all. And if she does have them it is her province, and not that of the General Government, to say how they shall be maintained and how conducted, and who may attend them and under what conditions. If the legislature of California should enact that there should be free schools for girls and not for boys, or for boys and not for girls; or should provide for primary schools only, or graded schools, or high schools, the Federal Government could not review the action of the State legislature, and I assume that nobody will claim that it could.

That the State has such exclusive control over the establishment and management of public schools has been repeatedly decided by the courts. In the case of Cory v. Carter (48 Ind., pp. 360, 362), the supreme court of Indiana, having before it the question whether a State law of Indiana providing that colored children should attend separate schools from white children was in violation of the Constitution of the United States, said:

> There being no further restriction upon the legislative power and discretion, it necessarily follows that in providing for this system of schools the legislature is left free to fix the qualifications of pupils to be admitted to its benefits as respects age and capacity to learn—to qualify them with reference to age, sex, advancement, and the branches of learning they are to pursue; to provide for the erection and building of schoolhouses, and to designate to what schools and in what schoolhouse the different ages, sexes, and degrees of proficiency shall be assigned. For these all concern the good order and success of the system.
>
> It must follow that this policy or framework for that system vitally concerns and blends itself with the national affairs of the State, with its happiness and prosperity, its peace and good order, and depends upon the wisdom of the legislature, and of the agencies provided by the legislature, acting under its established rules, and comes within the power preserved by every sovereign State, and is clearly without the grants or inhibitions of such amendments to the Constitution of the United States. It being settled that the legislature must provide for the education of the colored children, as well as the white children, we are required to determine whether the legislature may classify such children by color and race, and provide for their education in separate schools, or whether they must attend the same school without reference to race or color. In our opinion the qualification of scholars on the basis of race or color and their education in separate schools involves questions of domestic policy which are within the legislative discretion and control and do not amount to an exclusion of either class.
>
> In other words, the placing of white children of the State in one class and the negro children of the State in another class, and requiring these classes to be taught separately, provision being made for their education in the same branches according to age, capacity, or advancement, with capable teachers, and to the extent of their pro rata share in the school revenue, does not amount to a denial of equal privileges to either, or conflict with the open character of the system required by the Constitution.

The same doctrine is announced it State ex rel. Garner v. McCann, 21 Ohio State, 210; People ex rel. King v. Gallagher, 93 N. Y., 447.

On the general principle touching the right of the State to legislate upon matters concerning its internal and domestic policy and the effect of such legislation, I desire to call attention to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Miln v. The City of New York, 11 Peters, 139, in which the court says:

> But we do not place our opinion upon this ground. We choose rather to plant ourselves on what we consider impregnable positions. They are these: That a State has the same undeniable and unlimited jurisdiction over all persons and things within its territorial limits as any foreign nation, when that jurisdiction is not surrendered or restrained by the Constitution of the United States. That by virtue of this it is not only the right, but the bounden and solemn duty of a State to advance the safety, happiness and prosperity of its people, and to provide for its general welfare by any and every act of legislation which it may deem conducive to those ends, where the power over the particular subject or the measure of its exercise is not surrendered or restrained in the manner just stated. That all these powers which relate to merely municipal legislation, or what may perhaps more properly be called internal police, are not those surrendered or restrained, and that consequently in relation to these the authority of a State is complete, unqualified and exclusive. We are aware that it is at all times difficult to define any subject with proper precision and accuracy. If this be so in general, it is emphatically so in relation to a subject so diversified and multifarious as the one which we are now considering. If we were to attempt it, we should say that every law comes within this description which conserves the welfare of the people of a State, or any individual within; whether it related to their rights or their duties; whether it respected them as men or as citizens of the State; whether in their public or private relations; whether it related to the rights of persons or of property, of the whole people of a State or of any individual within it, and whose operation was within the territorial limits of the State and upon the persons and things within its jurisdiction.

It must be conceded, then, that the right of the State to establish and maintain public schools and control and direct their management is one of the rights not parted with by the State upon its admission to the Union and is still in the State. California therefore has that right, had it when her public school system was adopted, and had it when the order complained of was made. Having the right, by what authority can the President, or anyone else, say she shall not exercise it?

The excuse, and the only excuse, for the extraordinary claim set up by the President is that the treaty with Japan guarantees to Japanese school children the right to attend the public schools of all the States in the Union, and to attend them in company with white children, and this regulation complained of is in violation of the treaty. To this contention there are two answers, either of which is conclusive. In the first place there is no provision in the treaty which by any sort of construction can be made to support such a claim. The treaty consists of twenty articles besides the introduction. It will not be claimed that the question of the right of the Japanese to enter the public schools is conferred by any of the articles unless it is contained in Articles I and II. I will read Articles I and II referred to:

ARTICLE I. The citizens or subjects of each of the two high contracting parties shall have full liberty to enter, travel, or reside in any part of the territories of the other contracting party, and shall enjoy full and perfect protection for their persons and property.

They shall have free access to the courts of justice in pursuit and defense of their rights; they shall be at liberty equally with native citizens or subjects to choose and employ lawyers, advocates, and representatives to pursue and defend their rights before such courts and in all other matters connected with the administration of justice they shall enjoy all the rights and privileges enjoyed by native citizens or subjects.

In whatever relates to rights of residence and travel; to the possession of goods and effects of any kind; to the succession to personal estate, by will or otherwise, and the disposal of property of any sort and in any manner whatsoever which they may lawfully acquire, the citizens or subjects of each contracting party shall enjoy in the territories of the other the same privileges, liberties, and rights, and shall be subject to no higher imposts or charges in these respects than native citizens or subjects, or citizens and subjects of the most-favored nation. The citizens or subjects of each of the contracting parties shall enjoy in the territories of the other entire liberty of conscience, and, subject to the laws, ordinances, and regulations, shall enjoy the right of private or public exercise of their worship, and also the right of burying their respective countrymen, according to their religious customs, in such suitable and convenient places as may be established and maintained for that purpose.

They shall not be compelled, under any pretext whatsoever, to pay any charges or taxes other or higher than those that are, or may be paid by native citizens or subjects, or citizens or subjects of the most-favored nation.

The citizens or subjects of either of the contracting parties residing in the territories of the other shall be exempt from all compulsory military service whatsoever, whether in the army, navy, national guard, or militia; from all contributions imposed in lieu of personal service; and from all forced loans or military exactions or contributions.

ART. II. There shall be reciprocal freedom of commerce and navigation between the territories of the two high contracting parties.

The citizens or subjects of each of the high contracting parties may trade in any part of the territories of the other by wholesale or retail, in all kinds of produce, manufactures, and merchandise of lawful commerce, either in person or by agents, singly or in partnership with foreign or native citizens or subjects; and they may there own or hire and occupy houses, manufactories, warehouses, shops, and premises which may be necessary for them, and lease land for residential and commercial purposes, conforming themselves to the laws, police and customs regulations of the country like native citizens or subjects.

They shall have liberty freely to come with their ships and cargoes to all places, ports, and rivers in the territories of the other, which are or may be opened to foreign commerce, and shall enjoy, respectively, the same treatment in matters of commerce and navigation as native citizens or subjects, or citizens or subjects of the most favored nation, without having to pay taxes, imposts, or duties of whatever nature or under whatever denomination levied in the name or for the profit of the government, public functionaries, private individuals, corporations, or establishments of any kind other or greater than those paid by native citizens or subjects, or citizens or subjects of the most-favored nation.

It is, however, understood that the stipulations contained in this and the preceding article do not in any way affect the laws, ordinances, and regulations with regard to trade, the immigration of laborers, police, and public security which are in force or which may hereafter be enacted in either of the two countries.

Now, Mr. President, to my mind these sections show that this treaty was compiled with care and it was intended by the contracting parties that it should enumerate specifically the rights, and all the rights, which were granted by each to each, and nothing should be left to inference. And nothing is said as to the right to attend public schools. This opinion is strengthened by the fact that later on, in Article XVI, patent rights are provided for.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. GEARIN. Certainly.

Mr. PERKINS. I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Oregon, who has given this subject much thought and consideration, whether he has considered the question of the most-favored-nation clause in the treaty in its bearing upon our duty to admit to our schools children of Japanese, the same as we do those of other nations.

Mr. GEARIN. I have considered it, and I will get to it just a little later and discuss it further on.

What I mean is this. It is evident from a reading of these two articles that those who prepared the treaty intended to put in the treaty all of the rights which they were giving to these people or to our people in Japan; and as I say that is strengthened by a reference further on to a provision in regard to patent rights, as follows:

The citizens or subjects of each of the contracting parties shall enjoy in the territories of the other the same protection as native citizens or subjects in regard to patents, trade-marks, and designs, upon fulfilment of the formalities prescribed by law.

Certainly, if the provisions of Sections I and II are broad enough to include the rights now claimed by Japan they are broad enough to include this question of patents. But evidently it was not so considered by the framers of this treaty. There is a clause in Article II, which I have just read, which seems to have been overlooked in the discussions on this treaty to which my attention has been called. It is this: After enumerating the various rights which the citizens and subjects of each of the contracting parties shall have in the territory of the other, the clause ends thus:

Conforming themselves to the laws, police, and customs regulations of the country like native citizens or subjects.

What does that mean? Whatever it may be understood to mean, Mr. President, with reference to American citizens in Japan, it means with reference to Japanese residing in this country that they may have the privileges enumerated and granted them, whatever they are, but they may enjoy them only by conforming to all the laws, police and customs regulations of the country like native citizens or subjects. The framers of that treaty knew that in this country we have a dual system of laws—Federal statutes and State laws—and when the broad terms were used "Laws * * * of the country" they meant to include all laws, State and Federal. If, then, by construction there can be read into this treaty a guarantee of common school privileges to the Japanese, they can enjoy them only by conforming to the laws of the country—the State law of California among others. And that law, speaking through the duly authorized officers of the State having authority to execute it, says they shall receive this education in separate schools. It would seem to me, therefore, in the first place, that no such right as is claimed by the Japanese is provided for in the treaty; but if it is guaranteed, either directly or by implication, it is subject to the limitation contained in the clause I have quoted and the rule adopted by the board is not in contravention of it.

This Government might well stand upon that interpretation and decline to consider the matter further. And in so doing it would be justified by reason and authority. This is not a new proposition at all. As long ago as 1849, in the Passenger cases, decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, in 7 Howard, page 472, Chief Justice Taney, writing a dissenting opinion, it is true, as to the main point decided in the case, but an opinion which is luminous throughout with legal thought and learning and will ever be a light upon the great constitutional questions involved, says, with reference to a similar clause in the treaty with Great Britain, rights under which were claimed in that case:

The same answer may be given to the argument on treaty stipulations. The treaty of 1794, Article IV, referred to relied on is no longer in force. But the same provision is, however, substantially contained in the first article of the convention with Great Britain, July 3, 1816, with this exception, that it puts British subjects, in this respect, on the same footing with other foreigners. But the permission there mutually given to reside and hire houses and warehouses and to trade and traffic, is in express terms made subject to the laws of the two countries, respectively. Now, the privileges here given within the several States are all regulated by State laws, and the reference to the "laws of this country" necessarily applies to them, and subjects the foreigner to their decision and control.

Later on the question came up in California, and was decided in the case of The People v. Naglee (1 Cal., 232).

The legislature of California passed a law requiring foreigners, in order to entitle them to the privilege of mining in California, to procure a license for that purpose, and prohibiting all foreigners who had not such license from working the mines. The constitutionality of this act, and the question whether it violated treaties with foreign nations, came before the Supreme Court on an information in the nature of a quo warranto instituted by the Attorney-General against the defendant Naglee, as collector of license fees from foreign miners. In discussing the objection that this act was in violation of the rights guaranteed under treaties with foreign powers, the court said (p. 245):

First, as to treaties generally. Perhaps the most satisfactory mode of testing the validity of the law, under this point, will be to take the treaty with that power to whose subject as extensive privileges are granted by our country as to those of any other nation. We will, therefore, consider the case as if it involved our treaty relations with Great Britain, and under the supposition that a subject of the Queen of Great Britain was the person from whom the sum of twenty dollars had been exacted.

By the fourteenth article of the treaty of 1794 (known as Jay's Treaty), which was substantially renewed by Article I of the treaty of 1815, the subjects of the King of Great Britain, coming from His Majesty's territories in Europe, had granted to them liberty freely and securely, and without hindrance or molestation, to come with their ships and cargoes, to the lands, countries, cities, ports, places, and rivers within our territories, and enter the same, to resort there, to remain and reside there, without limitation of time; and reciprocal liberty was granted to the people of the United States in His Majesty's European territories; * * * but subject always, as respects this article, to the laws and statutes of the two countries, respectively. By this treaty our inhabitants whilst in the British dominions were to abide by the laws of Great Britain; and the subjects and inhabitants of that country, when in our territories, were to abide by the laws of the United States and by the laws of the respective States where they might be. The only question, then, under this treaty is whether the act of the legislature falls within the scope of the powers of a sovereign nation, and, at the same time, is not included in the category of powers granted by the States to the General Government; for, if it falls within the former, and is excluded from the latter, then it is one of the laws which the treaty itself makes obligatory upon British subjects. But we have seen that the power of taxation, and the power of prescribing the conditions upon which aliens shall be permitted to reside in a State, are attributes of a sovereign nation, which have not, except in certain specified cases, of which the present is not one, been given up to the Federal Government. Our statute, then, is one of the laws or statutes to which the treaty by its own terms provides that the subjects of Great Britain shall be subject. * * * The act, then, is not repugnant to that treaty. But even if the provisions of the statute did clash with the stipulations of that or of any other treaty, the conclusion is not deducible that the treaty must therefore stand and the State law give way. The question in such case would not be solely what is provided for by the treaty, but whether the State retained the power to enact the contested law or had given up that power to the General Government.

If the State retains the power, then the President and Senate can not take it away by a treaty. A treaty is supreme only when it is made in pursuance of that authority which has been conferred upon the treaty-making department, and in relation to those subjects the jurisdiction over which has been exclusively intrusted to Congress. When it transcends these limits, like an act of Congress which transcends the constitutional authority of that body, it can not supersede a State law which enforces or exercises any power of the State not granted away by the Constitution. To hold any other doctrine than this would, if carried out into its ultimate consequences, sanction the supremacy of a treaty which should entirely exempt foreigners from taxation by the respective States, or which should even undertake to cede away a part or the whole of the acknowledged * * * territory of one of the States to a foreign nation. In the License cases (5 Howard, 613), Mr. Justice Daniels, speaking of the provision of the Constitution in relation to treaties, holds the following language: "This provision of the Constitution, it is to be feared, is sometimes expounded without those qualifications which the character of the parties to this instrument, and its adaptation to the purposes for which it was created, necessarily imply. Every power delegated to the Federal Government must be expounded in coincidence with a perfect right in the States to all that they have not delegated; in coincidence, too, with the possession of every power and right necessary for their existence and preservation; for it is impossible to believe that these ever were, either in intention or in fact, ceded to the General Government. Laws of the United States in order to be binding must be within the legitimate powers vested by the Constitution. Treaties in order to be valid must be made within the scope of the same power, for there can be no authority of the United States, save what is derived mediately or immediately, and regularly, and legitimately from the Constitution. A treaty no more than an ordinary statute can arbitrarily cede away one right of a State or of any citizen of a State.

Now, Mr. President, these two decisions state the law as I understand it. The principle announced is so in accord with reason and common sense that a mere statement of it should be sufficient without argument. But there is a reason in my judgment why it applies to this Japanese treaty more, indeed, than to any other treaty. There is a rule for construing treaties laid down by the Supreme Court in Ware v. Hylton (3 Dallas, 239), a case cited in all the books in defense of the doctrine that a treaty controls State legislation, and Mr. Justice Chase states the rule in these words:

The intention of the framers of a treaty must be collected from a view of the whole instrument and from the words made use of by them to express their intention; or from probable and rational conjecture. If the words express the meaning of the parties plainly, definitely, and perfectly, there ought to be no other means of interpretation; but if the words are obscure or ambiguous or imperfect, recourse must be had to other means of interpretation, and in these three cases we must collect the meaning from the words or from probable or rational conjecture or from both.

Now, applying that rule to this treaty, Mr. President, we find that at the time the treaty was proclaimed, and before it went into effect, we had been having a great deal of trouble with China, with almost a similar treaty. Cases had arisen, notably the case of Baker v. The City of Portland, from Oregon, and the Cue case in San Francisco, and quite a number of cases, in which the courts laid down the rule that under the treaty then existing between this country and China the State law fell in presence of the treaty, and that the treaty was paramount.

Now, if we compare the Chinese treaty existing at that time concerning which those decisions of the courts were made with this Japanese treaty, entered into with practically a similar nation, and if we find that this Japanese treaty contains provisions not in the Chinese treaty, and if in the Chinese treaty there are provisions not in the Japanese treaty, we are entitled to consider those things as throwing light upon what was the intention of the parties when they made the treaty with Japan with reference to public schools and the right of the State to control the Japanese who might come in here.

We find, in the first place, that in the treaty with China there is a provision that is entirely left out of the treaty with Japan. It is this provision in the treaty with China of July 28, 1868:

ARTICLE VII. Citizens of the United States shall enjoy all the privileges of the public educational institutions under the control of the Government of China; and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects shall enjoy all the privileges of the public educational institutions under the control of the Government of the United States, which are enjoyed in the respective countries by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation. The citizens of the United States may freely establish and maintain schools within the Empire of China at those places where foreigners are by treaty permitted to reside; and reciprocally, Chinese subjects may enjoy the same privileges and immunities in the United States.

Now, that is altogether left out of the Japanese treaty, a treaty that, as I said, was made immediately after the difficulties that we were having with China in the construction of and carrying out the provisions of and living under that treaty.

Now, why was it left out? It did not itself carry the privileges that are now claimed for this Japanese treaty, but it carried something. It showed that in our dealings with the Chinese people at that time we were intending that their children coming over here should have some school privileges anyhow, and the attention of the people was directed to it. Those who formulated the treaty had in their minds that they were conferring by that treaty some sort of school privileges. When it was left out of the Japanese treaty it is conclusive to my mind that it was intended by those who formulated it that there should be no treaty provision made in regard to these school privileges at all, and that the regulation of this subject should be left to the States entirely.

Furthermore, comparing the Japanese treaty with the Chinese treaty, we find that the clause "conforming themselves to the laws, police, and customs regulations of the country like native citizens and subjects" was not in the Chinese treaty. I have examined the treaty carefully and I have not found it. I do not think it is there. In construing the Chinese treaty, the courts said that no State law that was passed in regard to the Chinese could interfere in any way with the treaty.

I am not questioning now the correctness of those decisions. I am not going into that question. I am not going to discuss the broad constitutional question of how far a treaty may override a State law. I am not going into it because I do not think it is involved here, at least not in my view of this case. This treaty is so worded that it sustains the right of the State to legislate upon the question we are now considering. But I say that the Chinese treaty contained no provisions saving to the State the right to make any such law. Whether there would be a right to make it without that is a question I do not now propose to discuss.

Now, then, those who prepared the Japanese treaty put that clause in there for some reason. When they put that in the Japanese treaty, after this country had had such disastrous experience with the Chinese treaty—the Burlingame treaty—it was put in there because they found it necessary or at least advisable to put it there. They intended that it should carry with it the full effect that I am claiming for it now—that those people coming over to this country should have the rights this Government gave them, subject to the laws not only of the United States, but of each and every individual State in which they might come to remain.

Furthermore, on that same subject and with that same idea, and following out the rule laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States for construing treaties, I call attention to this portion of the Japanese treaty:

It is, however, understood that the stipulations contained in this and the preceding article—

That is what I have read—those two articles—contained in this and the preceding article do not in any way affect the laws, ordinances, and regulations with regard to trade, the immigration of laborers, police, and public security which are in force or which may hereafter be enacted in either of the two countries.

There is no such provision in the treaty with China. I do not know that such a provision is in a treaty with any other nation with which we have a treaty. It was not in the Chinese treaty at all. It was put into the Japanese treaty immediately following, as I said, the troubles we had had in construing the Chinese treaty, and it therefore meant what it said—that those people coming here shall take their rights subject to existing law, and all the laws. It was not necessary to put that in the treaty to give the Congress a right to pass an act changing the terms of the treaty by limiting the coming of Japanese here.

It was not necessary to put any provisions of that kind in there, because the Congress has that right anyhow without any provision in the treaty. But when they refer here to "laws, ordinances, and regulations" they cover the whole ground, and this whole contention that is set up here of rights in the Japanese residents of San Francisco, which are superior to the State's rights and can be asserted as against that school board carrying out the State law, is all sham. It has nothing to rest upon, and this Government might decline to go into any discussion with the Japanese representative upon the subject at all if it chose to do so.

But, Mr. President, that would not be a courteous way to treat a friendly nation. That is why I have introduced this resolution. Japan is a friendly nation, and we are upon terms of intimate friendship with her. Her people seem to have got an exaggerated and to my mind a mistaken notion about this treaty; but inasmuch as they have that notion I propose this action. I assume that they honestly entertain this notion. I give credit to every man for the same honesty of purpose that I claim for myself. When they say that they understood by this treaty or that they now understand by the terms of it that these common school priviliges were guaranteed them, and that is why they entered into the treaty, I say it is a proper thing for this Government, in a spirit of amity and friendliness to that nation, which has always been friendly with us, to take up the matter and discuss it, as I have provided in this resolution, and not pass any act here without such a discussion.

It is important, moreover, that this treaty be modified in another respect entirely separate from, though closely connected with, the underlying causes which led up to and brought about the present misunderstanding. So long as the unrestricted immigration of Japanese laborers is permitted to continue there will be a constant and growing feeling of dissatisfaction on the Pacific coast which eventually will bring about and must bring about a restriction of that immigration. And because I believe that such result must follow sooner or later, and soon at the latest, I think it should be accomplished now.

Some of us on the Pacific coast more familiar perhaps with the situation than those who seek to censure and instruct us, because more closely in touch with the industrial interests directly affected by the unrestricted immigration of Japanese laborers, have felt for a long time that remedial action of some sort was necessary to prevent what we believe to be a threatened peril, not only to the Pacific coast but to every industry and enterprise in the United States. We are not new in this business out there on the Pacific coast. We don't know many things, but we know some things—some things we feel rather than learn—some things that are taught us in the schools and some things that are written upon our hearts and graven upon our memories in the hardest of all schools—the school of bitter experience. It was in that school that we learned—learned so well that while life lasts we can never forget it—that the unrestricted immigration of Asiatic laborers to this country is a curse, an incentive to disorder, and a menace to the welfare and happiness and prosperity of the laboring man of America.

We had a treaty once with China—a treaty which permitted Chinese laborers to come to this country, and there was no restriction on their coming, and what was the result? They came by the thousand. They entered every avenue of labor, doing woman's work as well as man's work, although there came no women, or very few, among them. They worked cheaper than our people because they could live cheaper, and the white laborer had to cut the price of his wage to meet the competition, and he kept on cutting, and still the Chinaman cut under him, and finally it came to pass that he could cut no more and live, and then came the end. Some of the means adopted to bring about that end were perhaps questionable—might perhaps not measure up to the standard set by the sentimental, altruistic, amateur political economists who prattle about the brotherhood of man—might not perhaps meet the approval of the present Administration. But to those who understood the situation the revolt of labor against this ruinous and degrading competition was justifiable—not only justifiable but commendable—and the Chinese-exclusion act, which followed as a result of it, has always been regarded by our people as the best piece of legislation that was ever enacted for the Pacific coast and for the nation indirectly.

It might seem at first blush that the coming of laborers—unskilled laborers—was a question that affected only the unskilled labor of our people, and that skilled labor and capital invested was not affected. But no greater mistake could be made. That is the most stupid idea that ever found lodgment in the brain of a sane man. All productive industry is based upon labor. Labor—unskilled labor—is the great creative force that sets in motion the wheels of productive energy throughout the world. We need financiers to manage our banks and financial institutions, but there would be no banks or financial institutions were it not for the laborer, who goes down into the bowels of the earth to dig out with his pick the gold upon which their circulation is based.

We are proud of our great railroad systems, and point with pride to our 220,000 miles of railroads fully equipped and in operation, but there would be no railroads here or anywhere were it not for the man whose toil in the iron mines dug out the raw material, to be fashioned later on into steel rails and equipment, or the toil of that other man whose labor in the coal fields produced the fuel to aid in the fashioning. And so through every avenue where capital is invested or enterprise reaps a profit. And that legislation which relieves labor of unnecessary burdens, and betters the conditions and broadens the opportunities of the laboring man, is the very legislation which encourages investment and insures a profit to invested capital. The interests of labor and capital are interdependent, and as the years have gone by, and experience has taught us wisdom, more and more have we learned and come to understand that there can be no advancement, no growth, no real prosperity in this country except by ennobling labor and securing to those who toil a fair share of the profits and advantages their toil has helped produce. It was always conceded that the laborer was worthy of his hire, and the only question that has ever occupied the attention of political economists on this subject is: What shall his "hire" be understood to mean, and how shall it be measured.

Modern thought, modern progress, and modern civilization have said that in fixing that "hire" we must consider not only the labor of the toiler but also the wealth his toil has created. So that it has come to pass that we are elevating the conditions of the laboring man in this country, and there is still greater elevation and improvement of conditions in store for him. His wages have been increased, his hours of labor have been shortened, "pace making" has been stopped to a great extent, and will be entirely, and a limit be put upon the amount of work he shall be compelled to turn out in a day to earn a day's wages. And the result of all this is that he is happier and more contented and prosperous, and the employer gets better work and better results and greater profits and greater wealth than has ever been known in the history of the world.

And now we are confronted with a condition here which will reverse or tend to reverse all this. The American laborer can not compete with the Chinese or Japanese cooly and it is not right to ask him to try to do so.

I will not speak of the habits of these coolies, their morals or their social life or of its influence, except to say that experience has taught us that outside the question of wage competition and beyond it there are objections to their presence among us—objections that are unanswerable.

And let not the skilled laborer delude himself that he will be exempt from the evil results which will follow the coming of these Japanese laborers. He will not escape here no more than he has in Hawaii. The Japanese learn quickly, and the same competition that will force unskilled labor out of employment will in the end perform the same office for skilled labor and for the small dealer and the shopkeeper and the small farmer just as it has done in the Hawaiian Islands.

But it has been said, and I have seen it repeatedly stated in the newspapers, that Japan does not want her people to come here, and that they will not come in any large numbers and do not want to come themselves. Very well then—so much the better. Japan can not take offense, and surely will not if we provide a means in this treaty by which her desire can be accomplished and a possibility of failure in that respect be eliminated. But while this statement has been repeatedly published, as I have said, and doubtless in good faith, yet I question the accuracy of the information possessed by those who tell us so. The people of California claim, and I think upon data which can not be contradicted, that Japanese coolies are coming into the port of San Francisco at the rate of 1,000 a month. That is a pretty large immigration, and it has practically only begun, and I have not noted any effort on the part of Japan to stop it. I think that no sane man doubts that it will increase, and increase rapidly, so that in ten years from now the Pacific coast will be overrun by these Japanese coolies and the white laborer practically run out. In forecasting this result, or any result, to arise from the continuance of the present treaty, two things must be considered—the difference in the wage scale of Japan and the United States, and the population, with reference to geographical area and the proportion of the cooly population to the balance of the population of Japan.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Would it interrupt the Senator if I should ask him a question for information?

Mr. GEARIN. No; certainly not.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I was listening very closely, but I was not quite sure whether the Senator said he has information which shows that Japanese coolies are coming into San Francisco at the rate of 1,000 a month.

Mr. GEARIN. No; the Senator misunderstood me. I did not say that. I said the people of California, as I understand it, claim that that is true. I have no information myself upon the subject except what is contained in public reports and in the newspapers.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It would have been, of course, very important, if the Senator had such information as that, and I rose to make the inquiry as to whether it was merely the repetition of a rumor or whether the Senator had any evidence on the subject.

Mr. GEARIN. It is merely the repetition of newspaper rumor, and I think it is correct. The Senators from California may probably know more about it than I, but I take it for granted that it is correct.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That it is correct?

Mr. GEARIN. Yes; I think so.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Has the Senator any basis for that estimate except newspaper reports?

Mr. GEARIN. No; I have not. I have no official figures on the subject. I do not know what the official figures will show, if there are any obtainable, but I say it is reported that the Japanese are coming in at the rate of a thousand a month.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That would amount to 12,000 a year, so that in the ten years the Senator spoke of 120,000 would come in.

Mr. GEARIN. Yes; if only that proportion kept up, and I think it would increase and largely increase.

Now, I was proceeding to consider the difference in the wage scale between the United States and Japan, and the difference in population with reference to geographical area. The total area of Japan proper is 147,565 square miles, or, including Formosa and the Pescadores, 161,160 square miles—less than one-half the area of Oregon, Washington, and California, the three Pacific Coast States, and only 2,800 square miles more than California alone.

Upon this limited territory there is a population of over 46,000,000 of people—more than half the population of the United States—and of that number over 95 per cent of the entire population belong to the class designated in the reports to which I have had access as the common people (Heimin). I found it impossible to determine from available statistics how many of these could be classed as coolies proper. And I submit here, and ask that the same be made a part of my remarks, some tables prepared for me by the Department of Commerce and Labor:

Memorandum of information relating to Japan.

The total registered population of Japan proper on December 31, 1903, as reported in État de la Population de l'Empire du Japon, 31 Décembre, 1903, was 46,732,138. (It was 49,584,599 including Formosa and the Pescadores.)

The total area of Japan proper, as reported in Résumé Statistique de l'Empire du Japon, 20° Année, is 24,794.36 square ri (147,656.63 square miles). Including Formosa and the Pescadores, it is 27,061.93 square ri (161,160.57 square miles).

The only distinction of class that is made in the Japanese census report is that of Nobles (Kwazoku), Samurai, or ancient warriors (Shizoku), and the plain people. (Heimin). The number and proportion of these in Japan proper on December 31, 1903, were as follows:

	Number.	Per cent.
Nobles	5,055	0.01
Samurai	2,168,058	4.64
Others	41,559,025	95.35
Total	46,732,138	100.00

The following table shows the wages of working people in Japan, by occupations, in 1903:

Wages in Japan in 1903.

[Source: Résumé Statistique de l'Empire du Japon 20° Année, p. 39.]

Occupation.	Wages per day. [a]
	Yen.	Dollars.
Carpenters	0.59	0.29
Plasterers	.61	.30
Stonecutters	.68	.34
Sawyers	.58	.29
Roofers, shingle, thatch, etc	.57	.28
Roofers, tile	.65	.32
Bricklayers	.74	.37
Brickmakers	.52	.26
Mat makers	.51	.25
Screen, door, and shutter makers	.56	.28
Paper hangers	.56	.28
Joiners	.54	.27
Coopers	.47	.23
Sabot makers	.42	.21
Shoemakers	.54	.27
Saddlers, horse-collar makers, etc	.60	.30
Cart and wheel wrights	.49	.24
Tailors, Japanese garments	.47	.23
Tailors, European garments	.57	.28
Makers of pouches, purses, etc	.53	.26
Dyers	.33	.16
Scutchers, cotton	.40	.20
Blacksmiths	.52	.26
Jewelers, etc	.50	.25
Metallic utensil makers	.53	.26
Pottery workers	.42	.21
Makers of lacquered objects	.48	.24
Oil pressers	.41	.20
Paper makers	.34	.17
Tobacco cutters	.53	.26
Compositors	.41	.20
Pressmen	.36	.18
Ship carpenters	.61	.30
Gardeners	.55	.27
Agricultural laborers, male	.31	.15
Agricultural laborers, female	.19	.09
Spinners, silk	.20	.10
Weavers, male	.34	.17
Weavers, female	.19	.09
Confectioners	.36	.18
Fishermen	.37	.18
Sake makers [b]	9.30	4.63
Soy makers [b]	7.10	3.54
Servants, male [b]	2.97	1.48
Servants, female [b]	1.70	.85
Agricultural workers, male [c]	37.98	18.91
Agricultural workers, female [c]	20.13	10.02
Silkworm cultivators, male	.32	.16
Silkworm cultivators, female	.19	.09
Day laborers	.40	.20
Lacquer juice extractors	.38	.19
Rice pounders	.34	.17

[a] These are the average wages paid in a number of localities in each district in March, June, September, and December.

[b] Per month.

[c] Per year.

These figures represent conditions December 1, 1903. At that time, as shown by these tables, of the total population of 46,732,138 there were 5,055 "Nobles," 2,168,058 of the class designated Samurai, and 44,559,025 are designated as the common people—largely, I assume, the laboring class.

The wage scale, taken at its very highest, is about 22.7 cents per day. I arrive at this by averaging the 46 occupations in the list furnished me.

In Bulletin No. 65, of the Bureau of Labor, is given the average wages paid to certain selected occupations in the United States in 1904 and 1905 in certain cities. I have selected San Francisco and have compared the wages paid in San Francisco with those paid in Japan in the following trades: Carpenters, plasterers, stonecutters, bricklayers, blacksmiths, coopers, and compositors with the following results:

	Japan, per day.	San Francisco.
		Per hour.	Per day.
Carpenters	$0.29	$0.50	$4.00
Plasterers	.30	.75	6.00
Stonecutters	.34	.5625	4.48
Bricklayers	.37	.75	6.00
Blacksmiths	.26	.4035	3.20
Coopers	.23	.4388	3.24
Compositors	.20	.4221	3.36

I have estimated here a day's labor to mean eight hours.

Now, in view of these conditions—that immense population confined to such a small territorial area, and such an overwhelming per cent of that population being laborers whose daily wage is 22.7 cents per day—can any man doubt that those laborers will come to this country where they can earn twice, three times, four times, five times that much the day they land. Japan has felt the evil effects of a congested population, and is endeavoring, and for some time has been endeavoring, to find a place for its overflow. Korea and Manchuria are the two places where colonizing has been openly carried on. But the Japanese laborer will come here in preference because he can do better here. Labor is a commodity in the world's market, and will go like all other commodities where it can command the highest price, and we pay our laborers higher wages than are paid by any other country in the world.

Japan can send from one to five million of her people into the United States and never miss them. Suppose that should be done—and there is no reason why it should not be done—what then would be the condition of the American laborer? He would have to compete with those coolies or go without employment; and he would go without employment, because he could not compete with them. And the result would follow that there would be an army of unemployed white laborers with no possible way of earning a livelihood or supporting their families and forced out of employment by this cooly competition. What would we do with them? What would this country do with them or for them? What could it do? And this is no fancy picture—no dream impossible of realization. It is a description of a condition that may come to pass, and in all likelihood will come to pass if this treaty is not modified as suggested in this resolution. We should not invite this immigration. We should no longer leave open the gates by which and through which it may enter. But on the contrary in the interest of our people, our institutions, and our Government we should stop it now and forever. It is idle to say that this would be an affront to Japan—a friendly nation. It is not an affront. It is an act in my judgment of the wisest statesmanship in the interests of our own. We have a right to protect ourselves, and we must protect ourselves or go to the wall in the world's competition.

This is our country—for ourselves and our children—and we must protect it. We do not object to European immigration—we want it and welcome it when it comes. It is the stock from which we came, and the blood of the American citizen of to-day is the blood of the nations of Europe—the blood of the races that spread enlightenment and civilization throughout the earth and made a republic a possibility. We take our arts and our sciences, our laws and our institutions, our civilization and our religion from the white races who have preceded us in the world's history.

The history of the Christian world is the history of the white races, and it is our history. Though we are a new nation, and in one sense a new people, yet we are not new, and if to-day we stand as the representative in the farthest west of the best and fairest form of government the world has ever known, we can trace the growth of the evolution of the principles of that government through all the centuries of the past, from the time man first learned self-discipline and submission to authority down to the present day. Out of the trials of the past has come the intellectual greatness of the present. And all the changes in all the centuries have added little by little to the great potential intellectual force ministering to the civilized mind of to-day, in which inherited self-control, enlightened as to its duties and strengthened as to its powers, has at last fitted it to govern itself and to govern others, because it has learned first to govern itself. The white race will control and dominate the earth, not only because of its victories on the battlefield, but because of the training, mental and spiritual, that it has undergone through all the trials and sacrifices of all the peoples who have preceded us along the pathway of time. And it is because of that training and as a result of it that the white man is fitted for the duties and responsibilities of American citizenship.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. GEARIN. With pleasure.

Mr. PERKINS. With the permission of the Senator from Oregon, I should like to say in verification of his figures contained in the statement in reference to the number of Japanese immigrants to this country during the past year, that I have telephoned to the Commissioner of Immigration, and he reports 14,243 immigrants as the total for the period of twelve months ending June 30, 1906. His report verifies the statement just made by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. GEARIN. I thank the Senator from California, Mr. President. I stated at the time that my figures were from newspaper reports; that I had no data, but the figures just given by the Senator are official, and, as he says, confirm my statement.

Asia has had a civilization it is true, but it has never been our civilization. The yellow race of Asia has never mixed with the white race of Europe. Neither can the yellow man and the white man mix in America. There is something about these race antagonisms that perhaps we do not understand—perhaps it is not necessary that we should understand. The fact that they exist and have never been overcome is sufficient. And I say this without the slightest intention of reflecting upon the Japanese people. I do not say that they are inferior to us—they are different, that is all; and the difference is so striking—such a radical difference—that the two peoples can never become one people or become amalgamated at all.

The Asiatic and the American do not intermarry—will never intermarry except in rare instances. We can never absorb them or take them into our social life.

Mr. President, this nation is not without experience in the matter of trying to absorb into its social and political life a non-assimilating race. There was a time in the first years of our national existence—yes, before that even—when we were colonies, it occurred to some people that the introduction of slave labor would be a good thing, because it was cheap labor. And the slave ships came loaded with their human freight until many, many thousands of slaves were brought over, and they went mostly to the South and stayed there. And they increased in number so that when the war broke out in 1861 there were about four millions of them. And they were slaves still. And then we set them free.

When the war was over these four millions of colored men were made citizens, and the South, taking up the raveled threads of its commercial and industrial affairs, faced a problem that we on the Pacific coast will have to face if this immigration continues. That was forty years ago, and the problem is still unsolved. There are about ten millions of negroes now in the Southern States—in many localities they far outnumber the whites. The two races have never mixed and never will mix. There is and always will be a sharp line of cleavage between them and the irreconcilable conflict between these two peoples to-day in that fair and sunny land of so much promise is the hideous nightmare of social and political alignment, and the despair of the law-abiding people who have to grapple with it. It was the folly—the insane criminal folly of those who thought cheap labor, however obtained, a blessing—that brought these colored people here, and where is the man now bold enough to say that it has been a blessing?

There is trouble down there where the magnolias blossom—in that sunny South of song and story—and there will be greater trouble, I fear, before a solution of the problem is had. And we of the West sympathize with the South in the crisis through which she is passing; and we say to our brothers there, "It is your trouble, and we would help you if we could, but we can't. You understand the situation—deal with it as best you can in the interests of humanity, good government, and righteousness, and in fairness to all and it shall be 'hands off' as far as we are concerned, and we will trust to your honor, your loyalty, and your patriotism to deal with it justly. But we say to you, at the same time, in God's name do not aid by your advice nor assist by your endeavors the plans of those whose efforts, if successfully carried out, will bring down upon us a condition which will be worse, far worse, in the end—than the troublies which now beset you."

Following the parallel down further, we find that in 1844 we entered into our first treaty with China. In 1858 there was another one which was proclaimed after ratification by both parties January 26, 1860, and a tariff treaty concluded November 8, 1858, and ratifications exchanged August 15, 1859.

After this treaty of 1858 was entered into, and while we were living under it, certain well-meaning people conceived the idea that the Chinaman was a man and a brother, and as all men were created equal, we should bring him over here and take him into the family circle and make a good Christian of him, and they kept promulgating this doctrine, and soon they got everybody in favor of it. There were three active influences at work that brought about this result. First, the religious element. The Chinaman had a soul, and they wanted to save it. Second, the commercial element—the exporter of goods and products and merchandise. The Chinaman had money and he wanted it. And lastly, the profound political economist—the theorist, the visionary—the fellow who invariably figures out a result which always ought to follow, but never does. That fellow wanted the Chinaman, too. He wanted him because he would work cheap, and he believed in cheap labor. What we wanted, he said, was cheap labor and more of it, and then we would produce things cheaply and sell them dear, and soon we would have all the money, and if the millennium was not actually in sight it was just around the corner. Which one of these forces was the most potent in bringing about the result I do not know, but anyhow, on July 28, 1868, we concluded a new treaty with China which treaty was known as the Burlingame treaty, and was duly ratified and proclaimed February 5, 1870, and contained for the first time a provision allowing unrestricted immigration of Chinese to this country.

Every argument used in favor of Japanese immigration now was used then in favor of Chinese immigration and with just as much reason. I need not go over the results that followed the execution of that treaty. The treaty was in force but a very short time—just long enough to open the eyes of our people to the great mistake they had made—when agitation for the repeal of the immigration clause was started, and finally the further coming of Chinese coolies was forbidden. It had to be forbidden. The presence of Chinese laborers became such a source of irritation to our people, so productive of riots and disorder, so disastrous an experiment, and so ruinous in its effects upon white labor and the opportunities of white laborers that all political parties united in demanding that their coming should be stopped, and it was stopped. And now we are repeating in our relations with Japan the same costly experience that proved such a disastrous failure under the Burlingame treaty. It is said that no age ever understands the meaning of its own time, and it would seem that it must be so. With the experience our people had just passed through, struggling with the problem of Chinese immigration it is difficult to understand why they entered in this Japan treaty containing its immigration clause at all. Those in authority at that time did not understand the situation—didn't understand the meaning of their own time.

It would seem, Mr President, that a mere statement of the results of these two experiments in the line of introducing cheap labor to compete with our own laborers would be argument sufficient to prevent our trying a third experiment. We do not want cheap cooly labor here—Chinese or Japanese. We do not want to cheapen labor at all. Our system of government is different from that of China and Japan. In those countries the laborer is a mere machine to be used until he is worn out and of value only to the extent of his productive capacity. He has always been so and he will be so always. He has no part in directing governmental affairs, no part in making the laws under which he is forced to live, and no status whatever, except as a productive machine. He has been so for centuries, and he has inherited ideas of servitude and vassalage totally at variance with the ideas of responsibility and authority and dignity entertained by the American laborer. Here we have no classes, no nobles, no Samurai—we are all plain pleople. Our laborers are a part of the Government—they are the Government. Each one has a vote, each one has a voice in the shaping of the legislation which affects him, and each one feels in his heart that upon his shoulders and upon his loyalty and manhood rest in a measure the prosperity of the country and the honor and the glory of the nation.

The American laborer is not merely a productive machine. He is far more than that. He is an equal in our social life—a factor in our political life—a potential force entering into the fullness of our national life and broadening its possibilities. He is not a destroyer of wealth, he is a creator of wealth, and it is our duty—the duty of good government—to provide by law such instrumentalities as will secure for him a fair share of the wealth his labor has helped produce. The true principle—the only principle which should govern us—is not how little can we get him to work for by introducing cheap labor competition, but rather how much can we pay him to make him happy and at the same time insure to his employer a reasonable profit and no more, upon the capital invested. This is a truism I know, but it is a truism the statement of which meets with violent opposition at times from people who ought to know better. It is time that capital listened to it anyhow. If capital refuses to hear it now from the lips of its friends it will hear it later from the lips of those who are not its friends. We hear a great deal at times about the protection of American labor—about every four years the spellbinders go out and tell the dear people how the Government is protecting American labor. The consumers in this country are submitting to the highest tariff that was ever known in the history of the world, and submitting cheerfully, because they have been told that it is for the protection of American labor.

The American laborer himself pays a large part of the duty imposed by that tariff, and pays it cheerfully because he believes that it raises his wages and protects him from what at election time is designated as "the pauper labor of Europe." And this is how the thing works out. We put such an import duty on foreign goods that it is in many instances practically prohibitory and of course raises the price of the home product. Having done this and raised the price, the workingman has to pay for everything he eats and drinks or wears, whether of home production or European importation, we introduce cheap cooly labor from Asia to cut the price of his wage and take his job away from him. And this is called a "square deal" for the protection of American labor. It is one of the fallacies of the age, and the mystery of it all is that the American laborer has believed in it and been misled by it so long. I believe in the protection of American labor against the pauper labor of the world, and I believe the best way to secure that end is to keep the pauper labor of the world out of American factories and farms and workshops—out of every field of productive industry upon American soil where American labor is employed or American homes are dependent upon the fruits of that labor.

There is another view of the situation to which I wish to attract attention, and it is a matter of importance and not to be overlooked. While Japan is a great nation and well deserves all the complimentary things the President has thought proper to say about her in his message, yet China is a great nation also. If Japan has a "glorious and ancient past," so has China. If Japan has a civilization "older than that of the nations of modern Europe," so, too, has China. The two nations stand equal before us in every respect and we are on equally friendly terms with each of them. How long shall we remain so if we do not treat them with equal consideration. We exclude Chinese laborers because we found by experience that their coming here was no longer desirable, and we represented to the Government of China that it was our first duty to protect our own laboring people, and that the importation of Chinese cooly labor so affected the happiness and well-being of our laboring classes that we could not allow it to continue. And, China, recognizing the force of that argument, consented to the new arrangement and was satisfied—satisfied because Chinese statesmen saw at once that the reasons given by us were good reasons and our position could not be assailed. And the friendly relations between the two countries continued and were not in the least disturbed. But within the last year serious complaint has been made by the Chinese people to our treatment of China as a nation. And can any fair-minded man say that the complaint has no foundation to rest upon? China says to us now and has a right to say:

> You excluded our laborers—you gave as a reason that you could not permit cooly labor to compete with American labor, because such competition threatened disaster to the American laboring classes; we recognized the justness of your position and were satisfied. But now you admit Japanese coolies who are no better than our coolies. Why do you do so?

How are we going to answer the question? We are not going to answer it. We can not answer it. Either we are treating China unfairly in excluding Chinese coolies, or we are treating our own people unfairly in admitting Japanese coolies. And in this connection I would commend the essay on "Industrial morality," found on the thirty-fourth page of the message, to its distinguished author for reperusal and careful examination.

There is not one single objection that was ever urged against the Chinese laborer that does not apply with equal force against the Japanese laborer. Why then the discrimination? We can not continue to treat these two friendly nations in this manner. Either we will be compelled to stop the coming of Japanese laborers, or we will be compelled to again admit Chinese laborers.

There is no middle course. And the objections to again admitting Chinese can not be put better than it was put by the President himself in his message to Congress, December 5, 1905, and I wish to read it and put it opposite to what he says now about the Japanese. These coolies are all alike. If there is any difference between these two people, it is not in favor of the Japanese. This is what the President said in 1905, speaking of the Chinese:

> The questions arising in connection with Chinese immigration stand by themselves. The conditions in China are such that the entire Chinese cooly class, that is, the class of Chinese laborers, skilled and unskilled, legitimately come under the head of undesirable immigrants to this country, because of their numbers, the low wages for which they work, and their low standard of living. Not only is it to the interest of this country to keep them out, but the Chinese authorities do not desire that they should be admitted.

That is just what Japan is saying now, but the Chinese came all the same, and they kept on coming, and China did not try to stop them, and Japan is not trying to stop the Japanese.

> At present their [Chinese] entrance is prohibited by laws amply adequate to accomplish this purpose. These laws have been, are being, and will be, thoroughly enforced. The violations of them are so few in number as to be infinitesimal and can be entirely disregarded. There is no serious proposal to alter the immigration law as regards the Chinese laborer, skilled or unskilled, and there is no excuse for any man feeling or affecting to feel the slightest alarm on the subject.

Now, sir, that was the President's view in regard to Chinese immigration in 1905, and it applies now exactly to Japanese immigration in 1907. Every reason urged to exclude the Chinese can be applied with equal force to the Japanese. I wish to quote something here. In 1870, as I say, we entered into the treaty with China providing for the unrestricted immigration of Chinese labor. This country rejoiced at that time, and all over the country there was rejoicing over the treaty that we had entered into, and great things were expected to result from it. But here and there was one who saw clearer into the future and understood better than his fellows, and one of those who at that time saw into the future and saw what would happen in case this treaty was entered into, was the distinguished junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. WHYTE]. In an address delivered at the Maryland Institute October, 1870, of which he has kindly furnished me the manuscript copy—as it has never been published—there is a prophecy uttered by him at the time when the whole world was rejoicing over the treaty and thinking what a great thing we had accomplished. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. WHYTE] saw further into the future and with clearer eyes the trouble that was in store for this country, and he said:

Do not fear that I shall violate the political neutrality in what I am about to observe on this occasion. This is no party question.

It is no party question now.

This is no party question. It is higher and greater than any question or policy which divides the parties. It involves the fate of the mechanic and workingman of all parties. It makes an assault upon the energy and industry of our land and strikes a blow at our religious institutions.

The address goes on further on the same line and I regret that my time does not permit reading it all. The Senator from Maryland foresaw, back in 1870, just when the Burlingame treaty took effect, the evil results that would follow from entering into that treaty with China, and there are those now who see far enough ahead—the people upon the Pacific coast who have had the actual experience, which the Senator from Maryland at that time did not have—to see that ruin and desolation will follow in the track of this policy if it is pursued.

There is a report, Mr. President, which bears out what I have been saying here, which justifies every word of it, and justifies the belief I entertain that if this immigration is allowed to continue there will be such a condition upon the Pacific coast as will bring trouble to our country and to our people.

Dr. Charles P. Neill, who is Commissioner of Labor, and a man better qualified than any other man in the United States that I know of to make an examination of labor conditions and problems and to report concerning them, was sent out to make an examination of conditions in Hawaii, and he sent to the Department his report in 1906, which is Document No. 66. That report, Mr. President, is a note of warning to the American people. There are things in that report which might well make us pause and consider where we are drifting if we continue in the course that has been mapped out for us and that we are following now.

It appears that while those islands are nominally ours and under our Government, yet in 1900 74.52 per cent of the adult population was Chinese and Japanese, and the per cent is greater now. They have taken the islands away from us. We provide for their government; we have the nominal ownership and control; but the Japanese and the Chinese practically own those islands and will own them more than they do now, because they are increasing. They are growing every day, and the white people are being run out of there. If the Senate will pardon me, I will make a few citations from this report. This is the condition that Doctor Neill found:

The first effect of the incoming of the Asiatics was the taking over of unskilled labor of every sort, but the competition has now extended until it has become active in nearly every line of trade and in nearly all the skilled occupations. Most of the competition in the skilled trades comes from the Japanese, and it is insisted everywhere throughout the islands that this competition is growing rapidly, and that the number of Japanese in skilled trades is larger now than it was in 1900.

* * * * * * *

The clothing trades are almost entirely in the hands of Asiatics. A few white tailors are engaged in business in Honolulu, and there are several white tailoring firms in the town of Hilo, but all of these, with the exception of one firm, are reported to employ Chinese or Japanese workmen. There are practically no white wage-earners engaged in making men's garments or boots and shoes, although a few whites find employment independently in repairing and cobbling. The preparation of food and drink affords employment to a number of workers, who are mostly Asiatic. The Chinese take naturally to culinary vocations, often graduating from domestic service into the systematic manufacture of food products. Most of the bakeries, confectionery shops, and hotels and restaurants employ Chinese help, or, as a second choice, Japanese. Practically all domestic servants are Asiatic.

On account of the restricted field of employment, plumbing and tinning are usually carried on in conjunction as a single trade. The Japanese have for some time been steadily invading this field. They are now strong competitors in the plumbing trade, and in some places they have practically monopolized the work of making tinware for sale at plantation stores and elsewhere among the working people. This latter has been a profitable field of industry for the whites, but they are being driven from it rapidly.

The building trades have also been invaded aggressively by Asiatic workmen. The effect of Asiatic competition in this field has attracted particular attention on account of the fact that white mechanics in the various building lines have been steadily giving up the field in Hawaii and forming a procession back to the coast. When the Territory was annexed a decided building boom occurred at Honolulu, accompanied by a considerable influx of mechanics from the Pacific coast. It took only a few seasons, however, to supply the city with about all the business structures it was likely to need for a number of years to come. The construction of cottages and small residences has continued since that time, but this is a field of work where the Asiatics compete most successfully with white workers, and in which they are gaining control. As a result of failing employment large numbers of workingmen have left the islands and returned to California, and the population of white mechanics has fallen off considerably. Part of this movement undoubtedly represents merely a reaction from the abnormal condition produced by the excitement attending annexation. But the fact remains that building is still going on in the Territory to a considerable extent, and that Asiatic workmen are successfully competing for the work with white mechanics. The procession of unemployed back to the coast, therefore, represents to some extent the displacement of whites by Asiatics. Not only are they successful competitors in the construction of cottages and small residences, but they are making their competition strongly felt on a larger and more important building work. A white contractor in the islands, who used white and native labor only, reported that he had not had a contract of any importance for nearly a year and a half because he had been ruinously underbid either by Japanese contractors or by white contractors using Asiatic labor exclusively.

* * * * * * *

The only urban occupations not subject to Asiatic competition are the English printing trades and some forms of employment in machinery and metal working. Some forms of furniture are made in Asiatic shops in Honolulu, and Asiatics compete with whites in carriage making and repairing, wheelwright work, and in millwork and joinery. In the passenger carrying or hack business, both in Honolulu and throughout the inlands, the Japanese are rapidly gaining complete control. Oriental blacksmiths and horseshoers have shops in Honolulu, and the Japanese compete with boiler makers in making the large tanks used as receivers for the fuel oil now employed for steam making in the islands. Although the language difficulty as yet forms an insurmountable obstacle to the employment of Asiatics in English printing offices, there are several Japanese and Chinese newspaper and job printing establishments in the Territory, catering chiefly to the needs of the Oriental population, that occasionally do English work. The manufacture of sugar-mill machinery, skilled electrical work, brewing, and a fraction of the building trades, where the most highly skilled workmen are employed, are the main branches of industry not invaded by Asiatic working people.

* * * * * * *

The competition between Asiatics and white and native workingmen has been felt in some degree ever since the Asiatics first began to come into the islands, but not only is this competition now felt through all grades of labor, but it has also spread out into commercial lines. White merchants are now complaining of the effect of oriental competition as vigorously as are the white mechanics and white laborers. In the end the competition will be more disastrous to the merchant than to the mechanic. The mechanic can gather up his tools—his working capital—and return to the mainland, suffering, it is true, from the time lost and from the fact of having practically to start anew where once he may have had a patronage established, and embittered by the feeling that in an American territory there was no room for him, an American citizen, on account of the economic dominance of aliens. But the white merchant can not so easily withdraw from trade without such a sacrifice of his stock as may represent ruin to his small fortune. Many small merchants are now feeling the effects both of the depression and of encroaching Asiatic competition, and are doggedly carrying on a struggle which they believe to be hopeless, but still unable to bring themselves to the point of sacrificing their stock and withdrawing from business. A number of merchants were interviewed, outside of Honolulu, who felt that they had held on too long already and had allowed to pass the favorable moment for retirement.

* * * * * * *

The Honolulu Merchants' Association, in a recent correspondence with the Planters' Association, thus expressed their views upon the immigration and competition of Asiatics:

"This country has been inundated with an influx of Asiatic population that threatens to undermine its political security, so far as the ascendency and control of the white race is concerned. For the purpose of obtaining cheap labor there have been introduced here twice as many Asiatic laborers as have been necessary for working the plantations, and this has resulted disastrously to all but immediate sugar interests. The surplus labor, which numbers in the neighborhood of 50,000, is engaged in professional, mechanical, and mercantile pursuits that in a Territory of the United States or in any country legitimately belongs to its citizens."

The predominance of Asiatics in the population of Hawaii has thus come to be regarded not only as a peril to immediate trade interests, through the competition already existing, but as creating a grave menace to business security for the future.

* * * * * * *

It is not easy to give an adequate idea of the resentment and the bitterness felt by the white mechanic and the white merchant who see themselves being steadily forced to the wall, and even driven out of the Territory, by Asiatic competition. They feel that they are being defeated in the struggle, not because of superior mechanical skill or superior business instinct on the part of their successful competitors, but because of a lower standard of living, in the face of which they are helpless. They feel, furthermore, that the white citizen who goes into new American territory to cast his lot with a new community and to join in its upbuilding on American lines is entitled, if not to favored treatment, at least to protection against the kind of competition that the Asiatic alien represents.

* * * * * * *

The most recent developments in this line seem to indicate that the Asiatics are going into agriculture on a still larger scale. Since the report for 1902 was written, a Japanese cultivation company of some 55 members has taken a five-year contract to raise all the cane upon one of the smaller plantations. They thus gain control of all field operations, including administration, subject to the general supervision of the plantation manager. If this system should extend—and it has proved more profitable than the old in the case in question—the control of cane growing would be as fully in their hands as is coffee raising. In a Japanese paper published in Honolulu, under date of January 8 of the present year (1906), it is reported that a company has been organized in Tokyo for the purpose of leasing lands belonging to one of the large plantations and cultivating cane to be sold to the mill. The company has a capital of $250,000, and is reported to have secured 1,600 acres of land from this plantation, under a twenty-years' lease, and to have begun to clear it. The announcement continues: "The Japanese concern will furnish their own labor, build their own houses, furnish their own implements of agriculture, food, etc."

Thus, in mercantile lines, in the field of hand labor, and in small farming alike, the experience is the same. Between depression and Asiatic competition the whites are being driven out, and the Asiatics are succeeding. It is a struggle for survival, with the white element slowly and steadily losing ground.

* * * * * * *

EFFECT OF ORIENTALIZATION OF POPULATION UPON CHARACTER OF CITIZENSHIP.

Although the Asiatics have up to the present slight control of the wealth of the Territory, and although they exercise no appreciable control through suffrage, the orientalization of the population of the islands has already proved a serious detriment to their civic interests. It makes Hawaii a place to be exploited by a working population who endeavor to maintain the lowest standard of living in order to have the largest amount of saving with which to return home at as early a date as possible. The earnings and savings of this population do not enter into the industry of the islands, do not go to the building up of homes, or in any way enter into the development of the community.

As a further consequence of this orientalization there is practically in the Territory of Hawaii nothing corresponding to that element of citizenship which forms the backbone of our commonwealths on the mainland. An agricultural community in America ordinarily represents a very large proportion of independent, self-reliant farmers. In no other part of the community is the proportion of men working for wages so small and the proportion of independent producers so large. But in Hawaii, although a preponderatingly agricultural community, the citizens represent largely two classes—a small group of employers and an overwhelmingly large preponderance of wage-earners. There are no successive gradations from one economic class to another, as there is on the mainland, where the higher-paid wage-earner and the smaller employer approach each other in economic importance. In Hawaii there is a wide gap between employer and wage-earner, and it was neither an exaggeration nor a figurative expression when a Hawaiian editor spoke of the Territory as composed of feudal barons and predial serfs.

In American communities, however great may be the diversity or opposition of economic interests between employer and wage-earner, they have common social and political interests that draw them together and amalgamate them into the common body of citizens. But in Hawaii, with its oriental labor population excluded from citizenship by law and apparently indifferent to citizenship as a matter of fact, there is no common tie whatever, and the gap between employer and wage-earner is at once an economic gap, a social gap, and a political gap. There is no community of thought, nor of feeling, nor of sympathy. The character of an oriental cooly population degrades the idea of labor, as did slave labor in the South. The Asiatic laborers are looked upon with contempt by their white employers, but they in turn reciprocate thoroughly the race contempt which the white class feels for them. Even the second generation of orientals will develop a less desirable citizen class in Hawaii than would be the case on the mainland. The process of amalgamation and assimilation which might to some degree go on in a mainland community, with its American ideals and conditions fixed, settled, and dominant, and in which the population is overwhelmingly American, can not be expected in a community in which only a very small percentage of the population are even descendants of people who have known representative government and have long had traditions of free institutions.

But even if the white population of Hawaii were larger, more homogeneous, and more thoroughly imbued with American ideals and traditions, it could still exert but little influence on the Asiatics of the second generation. The two nationalities, though living side by side, are separated from one another by every possible bar. They differ in race, and their history and traditions have nothing in common. They differ widely in their experience of political institutions. They differ radically in their spiritual ideals and their religious beliefs. They differ wholly in their moral and social conventions, in their philosophy of life, and their habit of thought. They therefore live apart, each maintaining separate and distinct its conventions and ideals. The second generation of Asiatics, therefore, however much in such a community they may conform to American business customs, remain alien in thought and sympathy.

Mr. President, that report shows such a condition of things existing in Hawaii, where we have been only a short time, that we may be permitted to say that if this immigration is not stopped the same conditions will prevail upon the Pacific coast. It is no wonder, reading that report, and reading of the conditions that exist there, that our people look with dread and apprehension upon the prospect of the continued immigration of these people to our shores. We are not a lawless people on the Pacific coast. In the great western movement that peopled that country in the forties and early fifties of the last century there went out over the old emigrant trail, bearing its hardships and braving its dangers, the best stock of the South—the best stock of New England—and the rugged pioneers of the Middle West, who moved on again following the setting sun and carrying the principles of our Government and its flag with them. We are their descendants, and we possess some, at least, of their virtues and all of their loyalty.

It was a hard struggle in the early days, but they fought it out and bravely and loyally and helpfully stood by each other for the common good. And then others came and settled upon the prairies and in the valleys and built up little villages that have grown to be great cities, and community life went on and we were very happy in the pioneer days of the farthest West.

It was a white man's government we established there for a white man's country. And then again others came to us—came by the Isthmus, some of them, came by ox team wearily over the old emigrant trail, most of them—and a tide of immigration flowed in upon us that was unparalleled in the world's history. And Territories were organized there, and States came into the Union—California first, then Oregon, and out of the Oregon Territory was created Washington and Idaho and Montana. And the spirit that brought the early pioneer nerved his hand to the work, and great wealth was accumulated there and prosperity followed in the wake of industry, and it was still a white man's country—white men working for and with white men, each profiting by the labor of the other, and all happy and contented. And then there came among us a yellow invasion. Chinese coolies, under the Burlingame treaty and subsequent treaties, came by the thousand and took the places of employment, out of which they drove white men and women; and soon they were everywhere. And the white laborer stood it as long as he could stand it, and then a storm gathered and broke over that country, and those who saw it and went through it do not want to ever see it again.

And then Congress granted the relief so long prayed for and so long denied, and the exclusion act was passed that brought prosperity again to our laboring classes, and to-day there is not on all the earth a more happy, prosperous, or contented man than the laboring man of the Pacific coast. And we ask Congress and the President now to forestall the possible recurrence of the conditions that followed the introduction of Chinese coolies.

The Japanese coolies that are here may stay, but let there be no more competition of that kind forced upon our people. And if it be said that there are commercial advantages to us under this treaty, and we will injure them by insisting upon the exclusion of Japanese laborers, I answer that I don't care. I am not unmindful of the advantages that flow from commercial intercourse with the nations. I know that trade and commerce are among the great factors that build up a nation and make it great, and that great wealth has ever followed in the wake of the white sails of commercial activity. But there is something greater than mere money—something immeasurably more desirable than the amassing of great wealth—it is the peace and good order of the community and the welfare and happiness of our people.

The President says we have much to learn from Japan. That may be true, and the "Light of Asia" may be an inspiration to some. But there are other lights I would rather see. I would rather see the light of happiness shining in the eyes of the mothers and daughters of our land; I would rather see the light that glints and shimmers over fields of ripening grain in the fertile valleys of my native State, fields owned by American home builders and cultivated by American labor; I would rather see the light that shines from furnace and forge and factory in New England and the South, owned by American capital, operated by American labor, and carried on by the genius of American enterprise. And when I say that, I am voicing the sentiment of the West; I know what my people want. I was born out there when that country was so little known as to be described as a barren wilderness even in the halls of this Senate, and I have lived there and witnessed its growth and development through all the changing years that have brought so much of success and prosperity and happiness to that empire beyond the Rockies—the fairest land, as we see it, over which the flag flies to-day. And it is because I want that prosperity and happiness to continue that I urge the action contemplated by this resolution.

What is our interest is the interest of all. This nation must grow as a whole, or decline as a whole, and you can not bring prosperity to one portion of the country without the waves of that prosperity gathering force as they move, and dashing over every portion of the land and leaving some evidence, at least, of their presence in every American home. We are a homogeneous people, connected by blood and the ties of kinship, and from Maine to Oregon, from the Gulf to the Lakes, our people are one people, differing in many things, but united in loyalty to the flag and loyalty to the Government and institutions for which that flag stands as representative and symbol. And although we of the West are far away from the Nation's capital as the longitude marks, yet we are a part of the Nation's family and sheltered by the Nation's protection.

There are voices calling to us out there—voices of cheer and good will. And we hear them as our fathers heard them on the old emigrant trail—heard them in the noonday sun or in the gathering twilight or under the stars—heard them at the sunrise—borne upon the breezes of the morning from the mountains or from the sea. And we stop at times and listen, and they speak to us of a brotherhood of American labor and American capital—a brotherhood of American genius and American enterprise—a brotherhood of American loyalty and American patriotism. and it strengthens our hearts and cheers us on because we feel that we are brothers all, and that you will listen to us and sympathize with us and aid us—because of the brotherhood. [Manifestations of applause in the galleries.]

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie on the table.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL.

During the delivery of Mr. GEARIN's speech,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon will suspend while the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 5133) to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I am not advised that any Senator is ready to speak upon the unfinished business today, and therefore I ask unanimous consent that it be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Oregon will proceed.

After the conclusion of Mr. GEARIN's speech,

DISMISSAL OF THREE COMPANIES OF TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

Mr. LODGE obtained the floor.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. FORAKER. In view of the amendment that has been offered to my resolution and the numerous suggestions which have been made I offer as a substitute——

Mr. LODGE. I did not yield the floor to have an amendment substituted for mine.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts declines to yield the floor.

Mr. FORAKER. I have not offered a substitute for anything that the Senator from Massachusetts has offered; but I thought it was due to the Senator from Massachusetts that I should state, before he entered upon his remarks, that I was willing to change the resolution I had offered to the form now presented. However, if the Senator objects, I will offer it later.

Mr. LODGE. I wish the Senator would offer it later, as I should like to discuss my own amendment and perhaps to offer it in a modified form. I should like to present it myself.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not want to object to the Senator offering anything he wishes to offer, but I supposed I had a right to offer anything I saw fit to offer.

Mr. LODGE. Also I yielded the floor, but I did not yield it for that purpose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts will proceed.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I am entirely in favor of an investigation by the Senate committee of the occurrences at Brownsville, Tex., on the night of the 13th of August last, but the resolution offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] in its present form seems to me to go very much further than a mere inquiry into the transactions at Brownsville on that night. It involves practically an inquiry into the right of the President to take the action which he took following the incident at Brownsville. The resolution says that the committee is "to take such further testimony." Neither the Senate nor the committee has taken any testimony at all. Therefore the testimony referred to must be the testimony taken by the Department and upon which the President based his action. The resolution then continues to say, "as may be necessary to establish the facts connected with the discharge of the" soldiers, etc.

The discharge of the soldiers was an Executive act, in accordance, as I believe, and as I shall try to show, with the constitutional power of the Executive. But it was certainly an Executive act, and I do not think, Mr. President, that it is within our province as a body to review or to attempt to revise Executive action.

There is only one way in which we can deal with Executive action in the sense of reviewing or revising it, and that is by the method of impeachment, and in that case it does not lie with this body, which furnishes the judges under the Constitution, but with the House of Representatives, to inquire into Executive action.

My purpose in offering the amendment which I did was to exclude absolutely from the field of our inquiry the Executive action which has been taken. I was not at all satisfied with the very hasty amendment which I drafted, and I ask leave now—in fact, I believe I have the right—to modify that amendment, and I offer another, which is broader and more complete, and which excludes entirely from the action of the committee all reference to the Executive action. After it has been read I will briefly explain to the Senate why I think all questions of Executive power should be eliminated from this resolution. I will ask the Secretary to read the amendment, proposed as a substitute for the amendment I offered heretofore.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts proposes an amendment, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be, and hereby is, authorized to make inquiry and take testimony in regard to the affray at Brownsville, Tex., on the night of August 13, 1906, and that it be, and hereby is, authorized to send for persons and papers and administer oaths and report thereon, by bill or otherwise.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. CULBERSON. As that seems to be in the nature of a substitute——

Mr. LODGE. It is in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. CULBERSON. I ask the Senator if he has any objection to adding the sentence I offered this morning as an amendment——

Mr. LODGE. Not the slightest.

Mr. CULBERSON. To the effect that the committee be authorized, if they deem it necessary, to visit Brownsville.

Mr. LODGE. I recall the Senator's amendment, and have no objection at all to it.

I offer that amendment in the nature of a substitute, and it will be observed by the Senate that I have cut out every allusion to the discharge or to the soldiers, and I have left it simply as an inquiry into the occurrence at Brownsville on the 13th of last August, which is something that, unquestionably, a committee of either House of Congress has a perfect right to enter upon.

There are two questions involved here, Mr. President. There is a question of fact and a question of law. The question of fact is as to who committed or took part in the shooting at Brownsville on the 13th of August—not what individuals, but what groups or bands of persons did the shooting. It is admitted, and is not disputed by anyone so far as I am aware, that on the night of the 13th of August there was shooting in the streets of Brownsville, Tex. Houses were fired into. One man was killed. The lieutenant of police had his horse shot under him and was so severely wounded in the arm as to necessitate its amputation. Those facts, as I say, I believe are admitted by everyone. The question is, by whom was this shooting done?

The President of the United States, the Secretary of War, the officers of the Regular Army detailed to examine and report upon the case decided that the shooting was done by soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry stationed at Fort Brown. Upon the testimony which was furnished to them and which has been furnished to Congress accompanying the President's message the Executive took action.

The Constitution League, in behalf of the soldiers, alleges that the shooting was done by inhabitants of Brownsville, who disguised themselves in cast-off uniforms of the troops, supplied themselves with exploded shells and cartridges from the target ranges, shot up the town, and scattered the shells about so as to give the impression, as they were the shells used exclusively in the new model Springfield, that the shooting had been done by soldiers. That is the proposition of the Constitution League.

Mr. President, that shooting was done either by some of the soldiers or by some of the inhabitants of the town. It was done by some one. No vague beings drifted in from outside and did that shooting only to disappear next morning. Universal negations are useless here. The shooting was done by somebody, and it was done either by the soldiers or by the citizens under the circumstances described in the document furnished by the Constitution League, which is printed with the message.

If, Mr. President, it was done by troops of the United States, I think no reflecting man can question that the severest, the most exemplary punishment is deserved by the soldiers guilty of such an outrage. If it was not done by the troops, then they are entitled to the most complete vindication and redress which the Government and Congress can give to them.

On the other hand, Mr. President, if this shooting was done by the inhabitants of Brownsville, then it was one of the most diabolical plots ever conceived by civilized men, in which lives were sacrificed and other lives endangered for the odious purpose of casting the burden of guilt upon innocent men.

Justice to the troops demands that there should be no question as to their guilt or innocence, and justice to the people of that community demands that there should be no question as to their guilt or innocence.

Now, Mr. President, that is a question of fact. As a member of the committee which will be charged under this resolution with an examination of the testimony I do not propose to express or form any opinion at this time as to that question of fact. I want to hear all the testimony that can be furnished. I understand that the testimony on which Major Blocksom acted is to be brought before the Senate in the form of depositions and sworn affidavits. I have no doubt there is a great deal of other testimony to be presented, and until that testimony is presented it would be manifestly unbecoming in me as a member of the committee to express at this time any opinion in regard to it.

I therefore put aside the question of fact which I have endeavored to state, and I express no opinion whatever in regard to it. But the question of law which is involved in the resolution as it stands, and which I desire to exclude completely from the consideration of the committee or of the Senate, is a very different one indeed. On that proposition of law I have made up my mind after such investigation as I have been able to give to the subject.

The power of the President to make discharges without honor has been, if not denied, questioned here and elsewhere, and it is in regard to the power of the President that I desire to speak to the Senate to-day, and to show, so far as I can, not only that the power which he exercised was a constitutional and legal power, but that in its exercise he is not to be questioned by a committee of either House, and that the only way he could be questioned would be by impeachment under the Constitution. For that reason I desire by the amendment which I have offered to exclude it absolutely from the investigations of the committee.

Mr. President, the powers conferred upon the President of the United States by the Constitution are easily stated. He is made the Commander in Chief of the land and naval forces, and it is further provided in the Constitution that those land and naval forces shall be regulated by Congress. It is also to be noted in the fifth amendment, which is a part of the ten amendments constituting what may be called the "bill of rights," and which provides and guarantees to citizens charged with capital crimes presentment to a grand jury, that the land and naval forces are expressly excepted, showing that from the beginning it was recognized that the land and naval forces of the United States were under a law entirely different from the law which regulated the affairs of men in civil life.

When the framers of the Constitution made the President Commander in Chief it vested in him all the powers inherent in that office, which was one well understood, and the powers of which were thoroughly apprehended and appreciated by the men who framed the Constitution, and over whom Washington presided, who had been the Commander in Chief of the forces of the United States.

What, briefly, were the powers inherent in the Commander in Chief? Anyone who will take the trouble to look over the introduction by General Davis to his volume on Military Law will find a history of our rules and Articles of War succinctly stated there. It is enough for me here simply to point out historically the leading points in the development of our military law or in the Articles of War which are embodied in our statutes.

Of course, we are concerned principally with the rules and ordinances of war which have come down to us from Great Britain, for that was the source from which we took our military law. Ordinances and rules of war date back to the Norman conquest, and from that time on they were promulgated by the king, who was the commander in chief. They had no parliamentary sanction of any character. Whatever arrangements were made for the trial of an officer or the infliction of penalties on either officers or men it was within the decision and the power of the commander in chief—that is, of the king alone. The absolute power in the hands of the commander in chief down to the time of Elizabeth is illustrated by the familiar line in Othello, where he says:

> But never more be officer of mine.

That was the conception at that time of the arbitrary and complete authority of the commander in chief.

Modern articles of war are largely based on and derived from the ordinances of war established by Gustavus Adolphus, embodied in England in what was known as Prince Rupert's Code. Those were the rules followed by both sides in the civil wars of England; and when we meet with the first great change in the relation of military law to the civil power it is at the time of the accession of William of Orange, when the famous mutiny act was passed by Parliament. That mutiny act, as everyone knows, embodied the military law of the time in a statute, and provided for courts-martial in the case of mutiny and desertion, thus giving the protection of statute law to officers or men charged with those offenses. It provided further that the act should last only one year, in order that the jealousy of the standing army, so characteristic of the English-speaking people, should be satisfied by a provision which required the reenactment of that law every year by the British Parliament, and from that day to this I believe that the mutiny act has had its reenactment in every Parliament.

When we came to our Revolution we adopted the military laws of England. They were those that our officers had been accustomed to in the old French war, and in all military organization; and our modern Articles of War, which were embodied in the statutes soon after the adoption of the Constitution, the principal revision being, I think, in 1806, preserved still the characteristics of the military law which we took over from England.

I will read a single sentence from the opinion in Blake v. The United States, in 13 Otto, in which Mr. Justice Harlan, in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court, said:

> From the organization of the Government, under the present Constitution, to the commencement of the recent war for the suppression of the rebellion, the power of the President, in the absence of statutory regulations, to dismiss from the service an officer of the Army or Navy, was not questioned in any adjudged case or by any Department of the Government.

I read that merely to show briefly the very great powers inherent in the Commander in Chief down to so recent a time as that—powers which enabled him to dismiss even a commissioned officer from the service. If I may quote one word from General Davis's Military Law, he says:

> The Articles of War in force in the armies of the United States were derived originally from the corresponding British articles. As the colonial troops had served with the royal forces operating in America during the wars immediately preceding the outbreak of the war of the Revolution, and while so serving had been subject to the British Mutiny Act and Articles of War, they became as a consequence familiar with those articles.

Therefore, Mr. President, it is of interest to see what to-day is the attitude in Great Britain in regard to the power of the commander in chief as to summary dismissals. It is quoted in the papers accompanying the President's message from Clode's Military Forces of the Crown:

> Though an engagement is made for a term certain, the Crown is under no obligation to retain the soldier, either in pay or in arms, for that period, but may discharge him at any time. The safety of the realm may depend in some measure on the immediate discharge or dismissal of any man or regiment in arms, and, equally, that the cause of such dismissal should not at the time be disclosed by the responsible ministers of the Crown.

In England, in other words, the power of summary dismissal—that is, of terminating the enlistment—is absolute to-day, and as Clode, the authority I have quoted, says, it may be extended to an entire regiment, and no reasons need be given for the action beyond that of the good of the service.

Now, Mr. President, has that power of summary dismissal, unquestionably inherent in the Commander in Chief as originally established, been taken from him by any regulation or law of Congress? If it has not been specifically taken from him then he still possesses, as he does all other powers inherent in the office of Commander in Chief of which he has not been deprived or in which he has not been limited by law. I think it will be found that not only has the power of summary dismissal not been taken away, but that it has been expressly recognized. Article 4 of the Articles of War, which are a part of chapter 1342 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, provides that—

> No enlisted man, duly sworn, shall be discharged from the service without a discharge in writing, signed by a field officer of the regiment to which he belongs, or by the commanding officer, when no field officer is present; and no discharge shall be given to any enlisted man before his term of service has expired, except by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or by sentence of a general court-martial.

In other words, the fourth article of war recognizes explicitly the power of the President to discharge a man before his term of enlistment has expired, and excepts that power from the general operation of the article. When that form of discharge occurs, I quote the language of Davis in his Military Law—

> Although the engagement of the soldier, under his contract of enlistment, is for a term certain, the Government is under no obligation to retain him in service to the end of the stipulated period, and, under the authority conferred by this article, may "terminate at pleasure an enlistment without regard to the soldier." It is essential to the discipline and efficiency of the military establishment that the Government should "not only have, but should be able to exercise, this power without question or controversy," and at its discretion.

Then he says further:

> A third species of discharge, recently recognized, is "discharge without honor." It is employed in cases where there has been no sentence adjudging a dishonorable discharge, but where the discharge awarded is induced by conduct or circumstances not honorable to the soldier—where his status is not one of real honor, as where he has been sentenced to a term of imprisonment in a penitentiary by a civil court.

In the footnote on page 357 I find the following:

The causes for and occasions upon which this form of discharge may be resorted to are set forth in Circular No. 15, Headquarters Army, 1893 (par. 151, Army Regulations of 1895), which contains the requirement that this form of discharge will be used in the following cases only:

(a) When a soldier is discharged without trial on account of fraudulent enlistment.

(b) When he is discharged without trial on account of having become disqualified for service, physically or in character, through his own fault.

(c) When the discharge is on account of imprisonment under sentence of a civil court.

(d) When at the time of the soldier's discharge, at or after the expiration of his term of enlistment, he is in confinement under the sentence of a court-martial, which does not provide for honorable discharge. Circular 15, Headquarters Army, May 11, 1893; paragraph 151, Army Regulations, 1895.

(e) With forfeiture of retained pay on the approved finding of a board that he has not served honestly and faithfully.

(f) When discharged without honor is specially ordered by the Secretary of War for any other reason. Paragraph 151, Army Regulations, 1895.

The power is made, Mr. President, as sweeping as possible. It is merely the form of the discharge that is new; one, Davis says, "recently recognized," and which has been in force for the last thirteen years. The form does not affect in the least the general power of summary dismissal, which has always been inherent and recognized in the Commander in Chief.

Moreover, Mr. President, as is cited in the report of the Judge-Advocate-General, within the past year 352 men in the Army of the United States have been discharged from the Army without honor by order of the Secretary of War. If he had the right to do it for one man, he has the right to do it for ten or for twenty or for a hundred or for a regiment; the principle is precisely the same, and the power of summary dismissal has been inherent in the Commander in Chief since there has been such a thing as military law, and remains vested in him unless taken away by statute. That power is simply recognized and regulated by the discharge without honor.

Precedents are not wanting, and the fact that they occurred in time of war or in time of peace does not affect the principle. I do not propose to go into these precedents at any length. They are all printed here. I merely want to call attention to certain orders that were issued by two great generals and to the language that those generals employed. One is the case of General (then Colonel) Lee, before the breaking out of the civil war, in which the offense had been that the soldiers had lynched a bartender. A member of the company, Captain Hesse, makes the statement in regard to it, and he says, on page 540 of the message and accompanying papers:

The inquiry, although rigid, failed to fasten the blame on any person, and at its conclusion Colonel Lee ordered the company to be disbanded and the members transferred to other companies to be discharged at the end of their enlistments without honor; that is, without the right to reenlist in the Army.

That is, without the right to reenlist in the Army. What the final action was is not known, for the civil war shortly afterwards broke out, and the papers in the case, which were in Texas, disappeared. But we have another case, an order of General Lee, in which we have the explicit order itself, and which is important on account of the last sentence:

The ——— ——— Battalion, for cowardly conduct on every battlefield from Gettysburg to the present time, is unworthy of a place as an organization in the army of northern Virginia. It will be marched to division headquarters Wednesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, and surrender its colors and be marched to the rear in disgrace. The general commanding the army of northern Virginia regrets that there are some brave officers and men belonging to this organization who must share in this common disgrace, but the good of the service requires it, and they must bear it as brave soldiers.

That is General Lee.

Then there is the case of Grant's order, which is given on page 542, which had no connection whatever with the war or the military service. The men had broken into a store and stolen, and it had been found impossible to convict the individuals who were guilty, and General Grant ordered that the sum of the loss of $1,242.66 "be assessed against said regiment and the officers hereinbefore named, excepting such enlisted men as were at the time sick in hospital or absent with proper authority." In that case the principle of punishing the entire organization for what was necessarily the offense of a few men was fully recognized when the culprits could not be discovered.

I merely read these orders to show what has been the universal military practice.

Why, Mr. President, there is a famous case, which everyone must remember, in connection with the siege of Yorktown. One of the French regiments which took part in the capture of the redoubts at Yorktown was a regiment known as the "Royal Auvergne." They had their names, I think—their standards, I am sure—taken from them on account of bad conduct at some previous time. The disgrace fell upon them all, innocent and guilty alike. It was done by the power inherent in the Commander in Chief; and in recognition of their gallantry at Yorktown they were restored by the same power. Military history is full of punishments of that kind, some involving, like General Lee's case, summary dismissal, others involving other general punishments.

Mr. President, the enlisted men are under a contract. I need not go into that with any elaboration. It is stated in the very familiar case, which everybody who has looked at the subject has examined—In re Grimley (137 U. S.)—in which the court states in so many words that enlistment is a contract. It is a contract that is recognized and, as all the writers on military law recognize, a contract terminable at the pleasure of the Government; and in the terminating of that contract by the discharge without honor the President exercised the old power of summary dismissal, which has been characteristic of the power of the Commander in Chief from the beginning.

Mr. President, that power of summary dismissal rests on even broader grounds than military law. It is an absolute necessity in the power of anyone charged with the conduct of any organization, from the family upward. It is one of the powers by which social organization coheres. You can not imagine the possibility of conducting a household or a business if no man could be removed unless it was done on evidence which would convict him of a crime or a misdemeanor before a jury. We had the question in connection with our civil service.

It was long a matter of debate after the adoption of the Constitution whether the President had the unrestricted power to remove, and finally, in the bitter controversy that arose with Andrew Johnson, Congress passed the tenure-of-office act. I never myself believed, as an abstract question, that it was constitutional, but whether it was constitutional or not, it was found to be absolutely impracticable. That statute, passed in the heat and bitterness of party controversy, was modified under Grant and repealed under Cleveland. To-day I do not think there is any question whatever that the power of removal must rest in the Executive, and that unless he has that power over the men charged with the conduct of the civil service, it would be utterly impossible to carry it on efficiently or decently for any length of time.

Mr. President, what is true of the civil service of the Government is true with tenfold force of the military service of the Government. It lies at the very bottom of military discipline that this power of summary dismissal, always inherent in the Commander in Chief, should be exercised by him to-day. I am not now concerned in the least with the facts on which it was exercised in this particular case; that is of very little moment compared to the general principle involved in the attempt that has been made to question the power of the President in the premises—his general power to issue a discharge without honor. If the Commander in Chief—and this power is conferred by article 4 not only on the Commander in Chief, but on the Secretary of War and the department commander—if this power of summary dismissal were taken away, I do not believe that military discipline could be maintained with the slightest success in the United States. I myself believe that the questioning of the President's power, which has gone on in the press and elsewhere, has been already prejudicial in the highest degree to the discipline of the Army of the United States. What we may find the facts to have been at Brownsville is one thing, but it is a much broader and graver question when we attempt to overturn and cast doubt upon the authority of the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States. If military discipline is not maintained, the Army of the United States, instead of being what it is meant to be—a protection to the citizens of the United States, ready in case of war or insurrection to go to the support of order and law and liberty and property alike—instead of being that it will be a menace to every community where soldiers happen to be in garrison. Cases must constantly arise where it will be utterly impossible to find evidence which will convict a man before a jury of a crime or a misdemeanor, and yet where it is absolutely essential that the military power should be exercised to separate such a soldier from the service.

Mr. President, if I may briefly repeat the points which I have tried to make, I think it is clear to anyone who will examine the history of our military law that the power of summary dismissal was inherent in the Commander in Chief of the military forces from the beginning; that it has always remained undiminished in the commander in chief in England, from whom we took our system of military law; that when we made the President Commander in Chief under the Constitution we invested him with that power of summary dismissal; that it has never been taken from him, but, on the contrary, has been explicitly reserved to him in Article IV of the Articles of War, which are part of the statutes of the United States. If he did not have that power, if the Commander in Chief were not vested with that power over the Army, then it would be the very pressing duty of Congress, in my opinion, to place that power in his hands.

Military forces can not be dealt with under the provisions of law which regulate our civil affairs. That is recognized throughout the world and has always been recognized in every army and in every country. But, Mr. President, there is no doubt in the world in my mind that under the Constitution, which makes him Commander in Chief, under the Articles of War which I have cited, under the unbroken practice and custom of the Department, the President is fully authorized legally and constitutionally to dismiss from the service without honor soldiers, enlisted men, who, in his judgment, the good of the service requires to be dismissed. I think that is as plain as anything can possibly be on the face of the statute and of the Constitution.

But, Mr. President, if he has violated the Constitution and the laws in exercising this power of dismissal without honor, not merely in this case, but in 352 other cases during the past year, then it is a far more serious thing than the ascertainment of the facts as to the riot at Brownsville, because, if we once admit that, we then charge the Chief Executive with an impeachable offense.

Mr. President, for reasons which I need not rehearse, I think Executive action in this case is beyond our jurisdiction. I do not think we can undertake to review the action of the Executive any more than the Executive can undertake to review our action. He acts under the Constitution and laws as we do. In issuing this order of dismissal he was performing a purely executive function. If the Senate desires to inquire into the occurrences at Brownsville on the night of the 13th of August last, that is entirely right and proper. As I have said from the beginning, I shall cheerfully vote for a resolution of that character. I do not want to delay it one moment, and in offering my amendment I have no purpose whatever of delay—quite contrary. But, Mr. President, it will lead to long delay if we do not dispose of this question now and remove it from the resolution by which we direct the Committee on Military Affairs to make inquiry. I not only wish the resolution to pass in what I think the proper form, but I want it dealt with quickly. I have no desire to see it dragged out for another year, perhaps. I think we ought to deal with it now, and, in my judgment, the surest way to expedite it is to clear it of the legal and constitutional question which has been raised here; and not only been raised here, but which is inevitably involved in the resolution as it now stands phrased.

It is for that reason, Mr. President, that I have offered my amendment, so that the question of the constitutionality and legality of the President's action may be wholly excluded from the scope of the Senate's inquiry.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] criticises the resolution I offered, in the first place, because it authorizes the Committee on Military Affairs to take "further testimony." He reminds us that the Senate has not taken any testimony, and that, therefore, to direct the Committee on Military Affairs to take "further testimony" is not the proper direction for us to give, for it assumes that we have done something that we have not done. In the first place, Mr. President, I am not particular about the language that may be employed. I do not care whether the resolution is worded "to take further testimony" or simply "to take testimony;" but, in view of what the Senator from Massachusetts has said, it is in order perhaps for me to state that when I framed the resolution in the way to which he takes exception in the respect referred to I had in mind that the President of the United States had transmitted to the Senate a lot of affidavits and other statements, not under oath, to which he referred as testimony. The President told us in that message that the testimony he had thus sent to us was conclusive and overwhelming. I undertook to show, in answer to that statement, that it was neither overwhelming nor conclusive, but inadequate, insufficient, flimsy, and unsatisfactory. I do not know whether or not I employed any other adjectives. I would have done so if I could have thought of any others, for I quite agree with the Senator from Massachusetts in his suggestion that there is in fact no testimony before the Senate. But it was that that I had reference to when I employed the term "take further testimony."

This resolution shall not fail, however, let me say again, because of any mere technical objection to the language which may have been employed by me when I drafted it. I am after the substance. I will let all things that are not substantial be waived.

Coming now to the substance, the Senator has offered a substitute. He says the substitute, as he has offered it, is to have practically the same effect as would have been produced by the adoption of the amendment he offered last Thursday to the resolution which I had introduced, and he tells us that his purpose in offering the amendment he did offer to my resolution and now in offering his substitute is to recognize the fact that there are two great questions—one a question of fact, about which he concedes we have a right to make inquiry, and the other a question of law, or a question of constitutional and legal power on the part of the Executive to take the action that is under consideration. That, the Senator says, we have no power to take any notice of, and he wants us to separate these two questions, that not only the committee, but also the Senate shall be concluded from giving any consideration whatever to, or taking any action upon, the question of the constitutional and legal power of the Executive to take this action.

Mr. President, because the Senator so interprets his amendment to my resolution and the substitute he now offers I am opposed to both. It is not true, as I understand the law and the authorities—and I repeat in this connection that I may, of course, be mistaken about it, for it is only my opinion—that the President as Commander in Chief has inherent power to do that which he has done, and that Congress has never undertaken to deprive him of that inherent power.

What is the power of the President? It is twofold. In all the authorities it is spoken of as constitutional power and legal power. What is the constitutional power of the President? His constitutional power is to command. "He shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy." That is all the power the Constitution confers upon him. If there were nothing else said about the Army or the Navy, or about anybody else exercising any power with respect to the Army and Navy, it might well be argued, as the Senator from Massachusetts has argued, that the power of the Commander in Chief is the same power that the commander in chief of the British army was invested with and exercised.

The power of the President with respect to the Army and Navy is not, however, deduced from what was the practice or what was the power in the British army, but it is deduced from the Constitution of the United States. He has no power as Commander in Chief except only that which is by that Constitution conferred upon him. Under the Constitution he has no power to raise an army; he has no power to dismiss an army. He has power to grant discharges in certain cases only because the Congress of the United States has conferred that power upon him, a power not only with respect to discharges, but a power in connection with the Army in other respects. What he derives directly from the Constitution is his constitutional power; what he derives from the Congress of the United States is his legal power.

It is not an open question what is his power under the Constitution as Commander in Chief. We do not have to go to the British army and to British precedents to ascertain the limitations of that power. The Supreme Court of the United States has spoken on that point as long ago as in 9 Howard. The Supreme Court of the United States said, speaking on that subject, at page 615:

> As Commander in Chief he is authorized to direct the movements of the naval and military forces placed by law at his command, and to employ them in the manner he may deem most effectual to harass and conquer and subdue the enemy.

I might read further to the same effect. It is enough to say that in that case, and ever since in every other case in which the Supreme Court of the United States has had occasion to speak on that subject, what the Supreme Court then and there said has been repeated without modification or change of any kind whatsoever. In every instance, when the power of the Commander in Chief of the Army of the United States has been referred to, it has been said by that court that his constitutional power is the power to command. He can direct where the Army and Navy of the United States shall be quartered or stationed; how they shall be employed in time of war; how they shall be directed to move against the enemy; and all that is over and above and beyond the power of the Congress of the United States to control. That is his absolute, unqualified power, with which the Congress of the United States has no authority whatever to interfere.

In 16 Peters, at page 291, the Supreme Court of the United States again spoke on this subject in the case of The United States v. Eliason. The last paragraph of the syllabus reads as follows:

> The power of the Executive to establish rules and regulations for the government of the Army is undoubted. The power to establish necessarily implies the power to modify or to repeal or to create anew. The Secretary of War is the regular constitutional organ of the President for the administration of the military establishment of the nation, and rules and orders publicly promulgated through him must be received as the acts of the Executive, and as such are binding upon all within the sphere of his legal and constitutional authority.

Mr. President, what does that mean? It means simply this, as in this opinion is elaborated, that if with respect to any subject necessary in the regulation of the Army the Congress of the United States shall not have spoken, ex necessitate rei, the Commander in Chief may prescribe a regulation, and that it will be effective, but no regulation can be made by the Commander in Chief except only such as may be within the sphere of his legal and constitutional authority and power.

Mr. President, there is no autocracy in this country. There is no arbitrary and dictatorial and unrestrained and unrestricted power in even the Commander in Chief of the Army of the United States. All power is derived from the Constitution. The President's power as Commander in Chief comes to him directly from the Constitution, and his legal power comes to him from the Constitution, through the Congress of the United States. What he does not derive directly from the Constitution or through enactments of the Congress of the United States he is as absolutely without as though he were any other person or individual other than the Commander in Chief. I shall not take time to read from the body of the opinion. I have read the essence of it. I have read it to show that, as I said a moment ago, there are two kinds of power with respect to the President as Commander in Chief with which he is invested—one the constitutional power to be Commander in Chief, the other legal power conferred upon him by Congress, and conferred upon him by Congress because the Constitution says that the Congress shall have power to raise armies and to prescribe rules and laws and regulations for the government of the Army. In prescribing these rules the Congress can say "The President may have power in certain contingencies to dismiss men from the Army which we have raised;" but, without such a provision, if the Congress should have spoken upon it at all, the President would not have that power, except in conformity with the law of Congress. Wherever the Congress has spoken in the making of a regulation, that regulation is the law of the land, and it is binding on the President of the United States as well as upon everybody else.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. CULBERSON. I understand the Senator from Ohio to have referred to the regulations for the Army, which have been from time to time promulgated by the President. What I desire to ask the Senator is this: Does he take the position that the power of the President to promulgate such regulations springs from the statute alone or from his constitutional authority as Commander in Chief?

Mr. FORAKER. I spoke explicitly on that point. The Senator, of course, was not following me closely enough to catch what I said. I said if, with respect to regulations, the Congress failed to act as to the regulation on any particular point the President might ex necessitate make a regulation as Commander in Chief, but if the Congress shall have acted then, the President has no power to act except only in conformity with and by virtue of that authority of law.

Mr. President, in 169 United States, in what is known as the "Garlinger case," at page 316, it was held by the Supreme Court of the United States with respect to regulations made by the Treasury Department, which are determined upon the same principles precisely—that the regulation must conform to law—that it can not add to any right or detract from any duty. If the Congress of the United States shall have spoken upon the subject, no other power can speak except in conformity to the will of Congress as the Congress has so expressed its will.

Mr. President, has the Congress spoken on this subject? The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] tells us that the relation of the enlisted man to the United States is a contractual relation. That is true. Nobody, I believe, ever contended for anything else. And it is because it is a contractual relation that the enlisted man has rights beyond what he would have but for his contract. When I was speaking here a few days ago I called attention to the nature of his contract. It is set forth in the second article of war. There is nothing indefinite as to the obligation of the enlisted man, nor is there anything indefinite as to the rights of the enlisted man. In the second article of war it is provided that when he enlists he shall take this kind of an obligation:

I, A B, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America; that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the rules and Articles of War.

In other words, the rules and Articles of War are incorporated into this contractual obligation that the enlisted man assumes when he enters the service of the United States in the Army. "Rules" relate to regulations that are prescribed for the government of the Army. The Articles of War are directly enacted by the Congress of the United States.

Now, what are these Articles of War first? At great length I pointed out here a few days ago that the Congress of the United States in enacting the Articles of War which are incorporated in the enlisted man's contract, had specifically pointed out in advance and provided for almost every kind of offense that an enlisted man could be foreseen to be likely to commit, and with respect to every such it had specifically provided that he should have a right to trial by court-martial and his punishment should be such as the court-martial might inflict. And then, for fear something might be omitted, might not be covered, they enacted an omnibus clause, now the sixty-second article of war, in which it is provided that every offense—I will not stop to read it—no matter what its character may be, except only murder, which was to be taken care of otherwise, every offense prejudicial to good order and military discipline should be cognizable under the sixty-second article of war, and the punishment should be such as a court-martial might direct.

Mr. President, on that occasion I went to a good deal of trouble to show upon authority that what these unfortunate men who have been discharged from the Twenty-fifth Infantry had been guilty of, if anything, was an offense cognizable under the sixty-second article of war. I had not then seen Senate Document 155. It had been sent to the Senate by the President the day before and we had sent it to the printer. It was in his hands. It came to the Senate while I was speaking. I had no opportunity to look through it, but I did look through it a day or two afterwards. And one of the first things I discovered was that the War Department and the President and the Department of Justice had precluded themselves from denying that these alleged offenses were cognizable under the sixty-second article of war.

It will be remembered that thirteen men, one of them a discharged soldier, were singled out and arrested on civil process at Brownsville, charged with the commission of this offense, and incarcerated in jail and held there by the civil authorities until the time when the Twenty-fifth Infantry left there to go to El Reno. Just before they left an agreement was arrived at between the Government authorities and the civil authorities whereby the twelve soldiers were discharged. Immediately after the War Department and the President and the Attorney-General, who had been brought into the case to give his advice and opinion on these important subjects, were advised of that, they directed the department commander of the Department of Texas, General McCaskey, I believe it was, to proceed forthwith to file charges against each and all of the twelve men under the sixty-second article of war.

I at once wrote a letter to the Secretary of War and requested to be informed—for that record did not state anything about it—whether the charges had been so filed and, if so, what had become of them. In due time I received from him the charges and specifications, twelve in all. There should be that many here. I want to incorporate them into the record. They are all alike:

Charge and specification preferred against Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

He is the man who was sergeant of the guard on the night sixteen men went out, as claimed, from that fort with guns and arms, and climbed over the wall and shot up the town, and then returned without him or anybody under his command, although on duty and on the alert, looking for people coming from that direction, seeing one of them. Something was said by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] about a most astonishing and mysterious sort of plot that the Constitution League contended had been entered into. I do not know; I do not want to speak about the facts now, but I will say this much in passing: If what is contended for here to show that these men are guilty of this charge be true—that there was such a conspiracy, such a consummation of it, and that many men engaged in it, and the number of accessories before and after the fact necessary to enable it to be carried out—it is a thing that has happened without a precedent in all the history of criminal jurisprudence. In my opinion such a thing never happened, never could happen, and never will happen. But that is foreign to the point I was discussing.

I want to show that these men, if they committed the crime charged against them, are amenable to the law. There was a law created by which they were to be tried, by which, according to the obligations which they assumed when they enlisted, they had a right to be tried, and a right, as the Supreme Court has said, that no power on earth can take away from them. Now, here is what they are charged with:

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one (1) magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town. This on or about August 13, 1906. (Signed.) H. Clay M. Supplee, first lieutenant and battalion adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, officer preferring charge.

Then there is a list of witnesses, and then there is an indorsement to which I call attention. It is the first indorsement:

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

I send to the desk this paper, with eleven others just like it in form—there should be that many—and I ask that they may be incorporated in my remarks without being read. I wish to put them in the RECORD at some point, and they may as well come in here as at any other.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection the papers sent to the desk by the Senator from Ohio will be printed in the RECORD.

The papers referred to are as follows:

Charge and specification preferred against Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one (1) magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.

Rate of pay, $23 per month.

Previous convictions: One, September 8, 1905.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one (1) magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did singly, or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.

Rate of pay, ——.

Previous convictions: None.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX, August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Corpl. David Powell, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Corpl. David Powell, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant, Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.

Rate of pay: $20 per month.

Previous convictions: None.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Private James C. Gill, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Private James C. Gill, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did without authority take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did singly or in company with other party or parties unknown take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant, Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.

Rate of pay: Thirteen dollars per month.

Previous convictions: Two.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, and causing damage to property of inhabitants of town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.

Rate of pay: $14 per month.

Previous convictions: None.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C, Twenty-Fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did without authority take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did singly or in company with other party or parties unknown take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town. This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant, Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D, Private James C. Gill, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.
Rate of pay, $14 per month.
Previous convictions, four.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Private James W. Newton, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Private James W. Newton, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did without authority take from his or other companies stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one (1) magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, and causing damage to the property of the inhabitants of said town. This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.
Rate of pay: ——.
Previous convictions: Four—December 2, 1905; April 28, 1906; June 4, 1906; June 23, 1906.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Private Charles W. Askew, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Private Charles W. Askew, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one (1) magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, and causing damage to the property of the inhabitants of said town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Holloman, Company B; Corpl. Charles Madison, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry; Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.
Rate of pay, ——.
Previous conviction, none.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one (1) magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, and causing damage to the property of inhabitants of said town. This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D, Twenty-fifth Infantry; Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.
Rate of pay: ——.
Previous convictions: Four (4).

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did singly, or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town, and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town. This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.
Rate of pay: Fourteen dollars per month.
Previous convictions: None.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Private John Hollomon, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Private John Hollomon, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did without authority take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did singly or in company with other party or parties unknown take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant and Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Sergt. George Jackson, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl.

Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.

Rate of pay, $18 per month.

Previous convictions, 1.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, the charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Charge and specification preferred against Sergt. George Jackson, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Charge.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in violation of the sixty-second article of war.

Specification.—In that Sergt. George Jackson, Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry, did, without authority, take from the barracks of his or other company stationed at Fort Brown, Tex., one magazine rifle, caliber .30, model 1903, and did, singly or in company with other party or parties unknown, take part in a disturbance in the streets of Brownsville, Tex., in which disturbance one citizen of said town was killed and another wounded, by loading with ball cartridges and firing said rifle in said streets of said town and causing damage to property of inhabitants of said town.

This on or about August 13, 1906.

H. CLAY M. SUPPLEE,
First Lieutenant, Battalion Adjutant, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Officer Preferring Charge.

WITNESSES: Sergt. James R. Reid, Company B; Private John Hollomon, Company B; Sergt. Darby W. O. Browner, Company C; Corpl. Charles H. Madison, Company C; Corpl. Willie H. Miller, Company C; Private Charles W. Askew, Company C; Private James W. Newton, Company C; Private Oscar W. Reid, Company C; Corpl. David Powell, Company D; Private Joseph H. Howard, Company D; Private James C. Gill, Company D.

In confinement since August 25, 1906.

Rate of pay: $23 per month.

Previous convictions: None.

[First indorsement.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON, TEX., August 28, 1906.

Respectfully forwarded to the military secretary, Department of Texas, recommending trial by general court-martial. Under paragraph 962, Army Regulations, these charges have been investigated by the undersigned, as far as practicable with the means at hand, and I am of the opinion that it is doubtful if the allegations as set forth can be substantiated.

C. J. T. CLARKE,
Major, Twenty-sixth Infantry, Commanding.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, the point I make is that if these men were guilty as charged, there was a law, and it has been recognized by the Department that there was a law, under which they could be brought to trial, and The Military Secretary, General Ainsworth, in transmitting his order that the charges should be thus preferred says he does it with the approval of the President of the United States and the Attorney-General of the United States.

Now, what became of it? The Senate is already familiar with the fact that these twelve men were selected as the ones most likely to have committed this crime; and so they were, for they were the sergeant of the guard, and the men on guard, and the sergeants and other noncommissioned officers in charge of the quarters and the guns and the gun racks. They held the keys. No such conspiracy could have been formed and carried out without every one of them having knowledge of it. Their cases were brought before the grand jury at Brownsville. For three weeks, I have been told, the grand jury was investigating, and it finally dismissed the men on the ground that there was no testimony whatever on which to convict them. Then they were in time dismissed from the service of the United States, but dismissed without having been brought to trial under these charges and specifications against them, under the sixty-second article of war. So it is that these men have had no opportunity anywhere, although arrested by civil process and then later charged with a military offense and entitled to a military trial, to appear and say "We are not guilty, and here is the testimony by which we propose to establish our innocence."

Mr. President, the Senator from Massachusetts says, "Very well; go ahead and investigate all the facts connected with the transaction at Brownsville, but do not do anything that calls in question the constitutional or the legal power of the President of the United States to dismiss these men as he has done." Mr. President, if the particular state of facts may be immaterial, then is it immaterial whether there were any facts at all. If the President can discharge because there is a state of facts that causes him to suspicion, and suspicion when, as he says himself, he has no testimony, if upon that condition he can say, "I will dismiss and am warranted in doing it," he can say "I will dismiss without regard to whether there are any facts at all, and if you want to know about it I will simply tell you"—as the Senator from Massachusetts has, in effect, told us—"it is none of your business. I am Commander in Chief of the Army. I know my constitutional right and power. I know what it was in the British army. I know what it was in the American Army when George Washington commanded, before the Constitution of the United States was adopted, and I have that power, and I will not be questioned, and I will not be called to account."

Mr. President, the President may be right. He has his ideas of the law. He has doubtless studied this question. Others have also doubtless studied it and are in accord with him—the Senator from Massachusetts seems to be—and therefore it may be I am entirely wrong; but I am simple minded enough to think that it makes a great deal of difference whether there are any facts to call for such action as this. I think we have a right to make inquiry, and I think the Senate of the United States would be in a most ridiculous attitude before the country, and with respect to its own duty, if here now it should adopt a resolution, no matter who offers it or what may be its form, that could be interpreted to estop us from raising a question, when we come to consider this case upon the facts that will be developed, as to whether or not upon that state of facts the President acted within his constitutional or legal power, especially if it should turn out that the soldiers did not commit any offense whatever.

But, Mr. President, this becomes a pretty plain case when we run it down a little further. Before the war and down until the 20th of August, 1866, which is the date of the official termination of the civil war, the President of the United States did have power, whenever in his judgment he thought it proper to do so for the good of the service, to dismiss any officer in either the Army or the Navy, and he did have prior to that time far greater and more autocratic powers with respect to the enlisted men than he has ever had since or ever will have again in time of peace.

On the date I mentioned a law went into effect which had been passed in July, 1866—that is, it took effect on the 20th of August following, when it was declared that the civil war was at an end—providing that in time of peace no officer of the Army or the Navy or the Marine Corps should be dismissed without being given a trial before a court-martial. That has been the law ever since.

Now, when they thus legislated about officers, the Congress of the United States commenced also to legislate about enlisted men. They authorized the President of the United States to prescribe a code of regulations, subject to approval by the Congress of the United States, and one President after another prescribed codes of regulations—Army regulations. In no one of them, until 1895, was such a thing as a discharge without honor recognized. But then, for the first time, it was introduced. Before that time all discharges had been either honorable or dishonorable. On that date, however, it was provided also that discharges without honor might be granted.

Now, in what kind of a case? The Senator called our attention to the fact that the President's message discloses by one of its exhibits that during the past year 352 discharges from the Army were granted without honor, and he talks as though of necessity, if what I am contending for could be sustained, every one of them would be invalid and an undue exercise, a usurpatory exercise, of power. Not at all. I think the discharge without honor is proper enough in a proper case, in such a case as it was intended for; and what kind of a case was it intended for?

As I said the other day in speaking, if I had the list before me I would have numerous illustrations suggested to my mind immediately. But the illustration I gave then was of a boy seeking to enlist and succeeding in enlisting by misrepresenting his age. He serves a few months. His mother comes and finds him. He is homesick. He has imposed upon the enlisting officers. His enlistment was not honest. He is not entitled to that certificate of an honorable discharge which should be given only to a man who has rendered faithful and honest service, to employ the language used in the statute. Therefore they say, "The boy is doing no good. It is a case of hardship. He wants to be discharged. We will discharge him;" and the Secretary of War or the President, as the case may be, orders that he be discharged without honor; that his connection with the service be terminated, not in the way of punishment, but in the way of favor to him.

There is another man who has deserted. The officers do not think much of him perhaps as a soldier anyhow. He is arrested and brought back. There may be some great trouble about proving the case against him, or on account of some other difficulty or because of extenuating circumstances they may be willing to let him go without trial and without honor because he has requested that he may quit the service in that way. So he is granted a discharge without honor.

But, Mr. President, in no case whatever—and I challenge the War Department or anybody else who wants to speak on that side of the proposition to produce one single precedent—has a man been discharged without honor and without hearing because he was charged with a crime which he protested he was not guilty of and who protested against being so discharged. I challenge them to cite a single instance where he has been so discharged until after he has been given a trial. In all the 352 cases the Senator from Massachusetts will not find a precedent. In no instance will he find a precedent.

Mr. President, it is an elementary proposition, it is a birthright, as the Supreme Court of the United States has said, that every American citizen charged with crime shall have a chance to appear somewhere, before some court, some tribunal, and there meet his accusers and answer their witnesses.

Ah, but the Senator from Massachusetts says the fifth amendment to the Constitution does not apply, with its guaranties of due process when life, liberty, and property are put in jeopardy, to an enlisted man; that it is not intended for the Army, because the Army is expressly excepted. That is true, Mr. President. Nobody ever did contend that in and of itself that constitutional provision had application for the benefit of the excepted classes, but, Mr. President, the Congress of the United States, having scrupulous regard for the fact that the enlisted men were citizens of the United States and entitled to the protection of the law, as a substitute for that constitutional guaranty gave a statutory guaranty, which is written into every man's contract of enlistment, that if charged with crime he should have opportunity to defend himself before a court-martial. And, Mr. President, not only in the numerous articles of war to which I have referred are these provisions to be found, but they are to be found in the Army Regulations, and in the Army Regulations with special reference to discharges without honor.

Let me read what is provided in section 146 of the Army Regulations. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] suggests that I read also article 145, and I will do so:

145. A soldier, on his discharge from the service, will be given a certificate of discharge signed by a field officer of his regiment or corps, or by the commanding officer when no field officer is present. When more than one field officer of the regiment or corps is present the commanding officer may designate the particular field officer to perform this duty, and in any case the commanding officer may require the discharge to be submitted to him before delivery to the soldier.

Now, there is a provision about discharges at the end of service. Here is another provision. It has been claimed that it also applies exclusively to discharges at the end of the soldier's term of enlistment. But, Mr. President, not so, for you will observe, as I read it, how broad and unqualified its language is. It is a provision that is framed for the express purpose of making it impossible for injustice to be done to the soldiers by the exercise of the power to discharge without honor. It reads as follows:

The character given on a discharge will be signed by the company or detachment commander, and great care will be taken that no injustice is done the soldier.

No injustice shall be done the soldier.

If the soldier's service has been honest and faithful, he will be entitled to such character as will warrant his reenlistment—that is, to character at least "good." Where the company commander deems the service not honest and faithful, he shall, if practicable, so notify the soldier at least thirty days prior to discharge, and shall at the same time notify the commanding officer, who will in every such case convene a board of officers, three if practicable, to determine whether the soldier's service has been honest and faithful.

Now, listen to this:

The soldier will in every case be given a hearing before the board.

That is not all—

If the company commander is the commanding officer, he will report the facts to the next higher commander, who will convene the board. The finding of the board, when approved by the convening authority, shall be final. Discharge without honor on account of "service not honest and faithful" will be given only on the approved finding of a board of officers as herein prescribed.

Now, Mr. President, there is no pretense that anybody undertook in this case to follow this plain mandate of the law. Is the President of the United States over and above the law? Can he ignore it? Is not a law for all in this country charged with its administration as well as for all who are subject to it?

Suppose this order had been granted by the Secretary of War. He has precisely the same power under the statute to grant discharges without honor that the President has, for the power is conferred in the same sentence, in the same breath, as it were. It is as broad for one as the other. If the Secretary of War had ordered these men discharged no man would be heard here or elsewhere to claim that he had acted within the law if in doing so he had ignored that provision.

Now, is this an idle provision? Mr. President and Senators, let me call your attention to the fact that this section 146 has been floating around in the Army Regulations in one form and another ever since discharges without honor were first recognized in the Army Regulations in 1895, from time to time changed down until 1901. From 1895 it was provided that the company commander should notify the enlisted man that he would discharge him without honor, and then if the enlisted man wanted a board of inquiry he could make application for it, and upon such application it would be the duty of his commanding officer to give it to him. In 1901 the Army Regulations were so changed, while President McKinley was yet in office, as to provide that if an enlisted man when notified of the intention to discharge him without honor failed to demand a board of inquiry he should be deemed to have waived that right. That stood for two or three years; and then the regulation was put into its present form—namely, that it should be the duty of the company commander to give him notice, and then not the duty of the man to make application for a board if he wanted it, but the duty of the company commander to notify the post commander, and then the duty of the post commander, without consulting the man, to convene this board and notify the man to appear before it to make such defense against putting that kind of stigma upon him as he might be able to make.

Why that care on the part of Congress to change in that way this provision? Why, Mr. President, every man knows, when he stops to think, that the Congress of the United States was thinking of the helpless condition of enlisted men in most of such instances. The Congress of the United States was thinking of their lack of knowledge of legal provisions affecting their rights, and that many men doubtless were losing their rights because they had no knowledge with respect to their right to a board of inquiry. To cure all that, to make it absolutely safe that no man should be put out of the Army of the United States with a brand of crime on him, or any other stigma on him, by a discharge without honor until he had a day in court, the Congress of the United States approving these regulations, which are promulgated by the President of the United States and the Secretary of War, provided that there should be in no case whatever any discharge without honor until the enlisted man had been brought before a board and the court had so decided.

There is no pretense that anything of that kind was done here. If I have argued to any purpose, I have shown that it is the soldier's contractual right to have this inquiry and to have this opportunity to defend, especially where he is charged with a crime.

These regulations, as they now stand, as I have said, were in force, I think, when every one of the men discharged at Brownsville was enlisted on his last enlistment. Every one of them then had these provisions written into his contract of enlistment.

Ah, but we are told by the Senator from Massachusetts of what high importance it is that the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief, should be invested with this arbitrary power. He suggests that dire calamities may follow if in particular instances the President is not so authorized. If so, the responsibility would be not his, but the responsibility of Congress.

But, Mr. President, the Supreme Court of the United States has spoken on that point also. In the Milligan case, reported in 71 United States, the Supreme Court answered that kind of an argument. I perhaps should say to Senators that that was a case where Milligan was tried before a military commission during a time of war, and it was claimed that the State of Indiana, where he was tried, had not seceded, that war was not in effect there, that the courts were open, and that there was a denial of justice not to allow him to go into the duly authorized and constituted courts of the country. The answer was that the exigencies of the case were such that they were bound to take these extraordinary and unprecedented steps as against him. What did the Supreme Court say?

No graver question was ever considered by this court, nor one which more nearly concerns the rights of the whole people, for it is the birthright of every American citizen, when charged with crime, to be tried and punished according to law.

You can say the same as to the soldier, in view of the fact, which I pointed out, that every conceivable crime is provided for by law, only that he shall be tried before a court-martial instead of in the civil courts.

The power of punishment is alone through the means which the laws have provided for that purpose, and if they are ineffectual—

We are told they were ineffectual here; that here was murder, and perjury, and a conspiracy of silence, an unknown crime under the statutory law of the country, but nevertheless a high-sounding one, full of much meaning that is reprehensible; and that because they were guilty of all these things they were dismissed from the service. Why? Because they had no testimony to prove any of these things. The Inspector-General, General Garlington, himself reports that he thinks there was probably a conspiracy of silence, but he is unable to find any testimony whatever to that effect. Now, they say therefore this legal proceeding for trial by court-martial was ineffectual, and because he could not discover who the guilty ones were we will turn them all out, the innocent with the guilty. The Supreme Court says:

> And if they are ineffectual there is an immunity from punishment, no matter how great an offender the individual may be, or how much his crimes may have shocked the sense of justice of the country or endangered its safety. By the protection of the law human rights are secured; withdraw that protection, and they are at the mercy of wicked rulers or the clamor of an excited people. If there was law to justify this military trial, it is not our province to interfere; if there was not, it is our duty to declare the nullity of the whole proceeding. * * * By that constitution and the laws authorized by it this question must be determined. The provisions of that instrument on the administration of criminal justice are too plain and direct to leave room for misconstruction or doubt of their true meaning.

Speaking further on this subject, the Supreme Court says:

> The Constitution of the United States is a law for rulers and people, equally in war and in peace, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men at all times and under all circumstances. No doctrine involving more pernicious consequences was ever invented by the wit of man than that any of its provisions can be suspended during any of the great exigencies of government.

This was a time of war, when the nation was in a death grapple for its life, a very different situation from that which was presented at Brownsville, where the occurrence was in a time of profound peace, when the Army had nothing else to do of any importance to be compared with this except only to convene a court, as the law directed, and let these men appear and have their day in court, and present their defense, and have it ruled upon.

Now, here is something else to which I invite the serious attention of every Senator. The Supreme Court, dealing with this claim, that because of a great exigency they had the right to suspend the law, says they have no such right, and then adds this:

> Such a doctrine leads directly to anarchy or despotism, but the theory of necessity on which it is based is false, for the Government, within the Constitution, has all the powers granted to it which are necessary to preserve its existence. * * *

Speaking further as to the power of the President with respect to the ordering of the commission, the court says:

> They can not justify on the mandate of the President, because he is controlled by law and has his appropriate sphere of duty, which is to execute, not to make, the laws; and there is "no unwritten criminal code to which resort can be had as a source of criminal jurisdiction."

On a point I passed a few moments ago the court speaks in Ex parte Milligan as follows:

> Congress has the power not only to raise and support and govern armies, but to declare war. It has, therefore, the power to provide by law for carrying on war. This power necessarily extends to all legislation essential to the prosecution of war with vigor and success, except such as interferes with the command of the forces and the conduct of campaigns. That power and duty belongs to the President as Commander in Chief. Both these powers are derived from the Constitution, but neither is defined by that instrument. Their extent must be determined by their nature and by the principles of our institutions.
>
> The power to make the necessary laws is in Congress; the power to execute in the President. Both powers imply many subordinate and auxiliary powers. Each includes all authority essential to its due exercise. But neither can the President, in war more than in peace, intrude upon the proper authority of Congress, nor Congress upon the proper authority of the President. Both are servants of the people, whose will is expressed in the fundamental law. Congress can not direct the conduct of campaigns, nor can the President or any commander under him, without the sanction of Congress, institute tribunals for the trial and punishment of offenses, either of soldiers or civilians, unless in cases of a controlling necessity, which justifies what it compels, or at least insures acts of indemnity from the justice of the legislature.

Now, Mr. President, we are told by the Senator from Massachusetts of some precedents. He tells us of what General Lee did and of what General Grant did. Well, the Judge-Advocate-General, happily for my purpose, has also told us of those precedents. Here is what the Judge-Advocate-General says in Senate Document 155, in a statement submitted to us by the President as an exhibit to his message. The Judge-Advocate-General says, on page 311:

> The Secretary to the President, in a letter dated December 1, 1906, advises the Secretary of War that the President would like to have him "look up any precedents (Lee's or others) for the action taken in discharging the battalion of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, and if there exist any such, send them to the President."
>
> A protracted examination of the official records has thus far resulted in failure to discover a precedent in the Regular Army for the discharge of those members of three companies of the Twenty-fifth Infantry who were present on the night of August 13, 1906, when an affray in the city of Brownsville took place.

Without reading it, I will ask to have incorporated what he says about the Lee case, which he discusses to the extent of a page or more, concluding his discussion of it with the following:

> In view of the foregoing statement, it will be seen that the action taken in 1860, in the case of Company G, Eighth Infantry, is not a precedent for the action taken in 1906 in the case of members of the Twenty-fifth Infantry.

The matter referred to is as follows:

> The case referred to as "Lee's" by the Secretary to the President is undoubtedly the case of Company G, Eighth Infantry, concerning which an interview with Mr. J. C. Hesse was recently published in the Washington Post. In that interview it was stated that, by order of Lieut. Col. Robert E. Lee, the members of Company G were transferred to other companies of the same regiment and prohibited from reenlisting on the expiration of the terms of enlistment under which they were then serving. A search for papers containing details of the occurrence has resulted in failure to find them, the original papers having been returned in 1860 to the Department of Texas, where they were undoubtedly lost or destroyed at the time of the surrender of the troops in that department to the Confederate military authorities.
>
> The records show, however, that on March 18, 1860, members of Company G, Eighth Infantry, at Fort Davis, Tex., took from the guardhouse a citizen who was confined there and, without opposition from the guard, hanged him to a tree near by until he was dead. The records also show that by order of the regimental commander twenty-seven men of this company were detached from the company and attached to other companies of the regiment, "to restore their discipline," and that twelve other men of the company were transferred to other companies by order of the regimental commander without the cause of transfer being stated. The regimental orders are not on file, and it is impossible to state whether the reenlistment of these transferred men was or was not prohibited; but as the records show that some of the transferred men did reenlist, it is evident that if an order prohibiting their reenlistment was given it was not carried into effect.
>
> In view of the foregoing statement, it will be seen that the action taken in 1860 in the case of Company G, Eighth Infantry, is not a precedent for the action taken in 1906 in the case of members of the Twenty-fifth Infantry.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator allow me?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. There are two Lee cases.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; I am aware of that.

Mr. LODGE. The one that the Senator refers to is the Regular Army case.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. There are two Lee cases that I cited, and I cited from both Grant and Lee.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator from Massachusetts cited this identical case, the case of the Eighth Infantry company, happening before the war.

Mr. LODGE. I did, and I cited also a case occurring during the war.

Mr. FORAKER. I am coming to the other case. I can not speak of both at the same time.

Mr. LODGE. I see that.

Mr. FORAKER. I am dealing now with the first citation. The Senator cited it as a precedent for what the President did. The President himself cites it as a precedent, notwithstanding what the Judge-Advocate-General says—that it is not a precedent. Anybody reading it can see it is not a precedent. Why anybody should say it was a precedent, in view of such plain statements and in view of the fact patent on the face of the record that it can not by any possibility be a precedent, I do not know.

Now, the other was a case where in time of war General Lee dismissed a whole regiment because they had shown cowardice in every battle in which they had been engaged.

Now, Mr. President, I do not know what the powers of General Lee were. They were derived from the constitution of the Confederate States. They might have been broader, but whether they were or not is immaterial, in view of the fact that it was a time of war, and it is the rule running as an exception through all cases that where it is necessary to the protection of the army such radical orders and steps as these may be made and taken. That was one of the necessities of war. Will somebody find me a case where one individual has been dismissed in time of peace without honor, in the face of the army regulation giving him a right to trial, and yet denying it to him?

Mr. President, that reminds me of something I ought to have spoken of a moment ago. The President is careful to point out in his message that he discharged these men not as organizations. He did not break up the companies. He discharged each and every one of the members of these companies, in so far as he discharged them, by name—each individual by himself. Each individual by himself being so discharged, each individual by himself had a right, without any question, for that makes it conclusive, placing him right within the terms of it, to the benefit of the one hundred and forty-sixth regulation of the Army, that he should have a board of inquiry, and he should have it without asking for it; that it should be the duty of his superiors to know of his rights, advise him of his rights, and protect him in his rights.

So, too, it is with the other precedents that have been established. They are all in the volunteer service and they are all during a time of war. Take the first here that is cited as a precedent:

The members of Company A, First Eastern Shore Maryland Infantry Volunteers, were mustered out of service August 16, 1862, by order of the general commanding the Eighth Army Corps because they refused to serve in Virginia.

Now, when you run down the facts you find out they were not dishonorably discharged. They were honorably discharged. They said they had been enlisted to serve at home, in Maryland, and not to go away from their homes down into Virginia, to invade the sacred soil of their beloved sister State.

They wanted to stay at home and render their service, and they were told, "If you will not go, we will muster you out." They said, "Very well, muster us out;" and the record shows that they were honorably discharged and that they nearly all enlisted afterwards in other companies.

Here is a New Jersey company. I have a letter about that company, but I will not stop to read it:

The members of Company G, Tenth New Jersey Infantry Volunteers, were discharged without trial April 8, 1862, pursuant to orders from the War Department, because they refused to do duty as infantry, claiming that they were deceived into the belief that they were entering the cavalry branch when they enlisted.

How discharged? Without honor? No; honorably discharged. They were enlisted as cavalrymen and brought down to Washington.

Mr. KEAN. And every one of them reenlisted and served during the war.

Mr. FORAKER. I was not familiar with that fact. I thank the Senator from New Jersey for making me acquainted with it. They said: "We enlisted as cavalry; we will not go into this infantry regiment. We did not come here to serve in that capacity." They were told: "Very well; we will muster you out." And they were mustered out, and then, as the Senator from New Jersey has said, every one of them probably enlisted in some other company and served through to the end of the war.

Now I come to the Sixtieth Ohio, and I am going to make a few remarks about that. Mr. President, will somebody tell me why the Sixtieth Ohio was cited as a precedent for what was done in the Brownsville case? No; nobody will tell me, but I know, and every Senator here knows, why it was cited. Now, I will show the injustice done to as brave and gallant a regiment as ever wore the uniform or carried arms in defense of the national flag. Since that matter came up here in the Senate I have been flooded with letters from surviving members of that regiment. They have come to me not only from those residing in Ohio, but from all directions. I have one here, which I will first read. It comes from Caldwell, Kans. I read it because it is from a lawyer who knows how to state the facts, and who has stated them in a logical, intelligent way. He says:

CALDWELL, KANS., Christmas, 1906.

Hon. J. B. FORAKER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I see by the papers you are having some issue with the President in regard to the discharge of the Sixtieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

You will remember me. I was born in the same county with you—Highland—and I was a member of Company B, Sixtieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. This regiment was organized by Col. William H. Trimble in the fall of 1861, and also allow me to say, by way of parenthesis, a braver man never sat astride a horse.

Now, as to its organization, in no place in the records of this regiment can you find, in my opinion, anything to show that it was ever mustered into the United States service.

I wrote him in regard to that, telling him I understood that the record did show that they had been mustered in, and in answer he wrote me a letter from which I quote what he said on that point, as follows:

I know the records show at Columbus that we were mustered in the United States service on the 25th day of February, 1862, by Captain Dodd, but none of us ever knew of it, not even our company officers, as all of our discharges (mine the same) read we were discharged by reason of expiration of term of service. Some years after that in conversation with an officer of that regiment he informed me he had understood that Captain Dodd had come there at that time and had consulted the field officers, and they all expressed the opinion it would create a furore to muster the regiment at that time, and he just simply signed the muster rolls privately and went away.

I do not know what the facts are about that. It was a very unusual transaction, if it occurred; but the explanation for it is furnished in the fact that those men were enlisted, as I will now proceed to show by reading from this letter, during the fall of 1861, in Highland County and adjacent counties in the State of Ohio, that they were sworn into the service, taken into camp, put under discipline, and every man of them supposed that then his enlistment had already commenced, and he dated the beginning of his service from the time he put on the uniform and became a soldier. But now I will read what he says:

The men of the different companies were enlisted by recruiting officers, clothed only with authority to receive recruits and organize a company. The men were enlisted and sworn in by these recruiting officers. This regiment was enlisted for one year. There was some question as to when our time would expire, owing to the different dates at which enlistments were made. I, for instance, enlisted in October, 1861.

The regiment went into camp shortly after that near Hillsboro, and remained there until about the 1st of February, when it was sent to Gallipolis, where it remained until the following May, when we joined Fremont at New Creek, Va. We followed him in his Virginia campaign in West Virginia, and crossed the mountains with him and fought Jackson at Cottontown, Strasburg, Cross Keys, Harrisonburg, and Port Republic. We then moved down the valley gradually until in July, when we went into camp at Winchester.

When Lee went into Maryland in 1862 to fight the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, we evacuated Winchester and went to Harpers Ferry, where at the time of the battles mentioned the Confederates pounced upon us with overpowering force, with the result that our entire force was surrendered by Col. D. S. Miles, who was in command.

He was a Regular Army officer.

At no time in all these engagements did our regiment ever show a white feather, while on the other hand the One hundred and twenty-sixth New York, which was an important part of the force assigned to hold Maryland Heights, the key of our position, became panic-stricken and broke and ran from their place in line, with the result that after four days of defense we were surrendered, but at once paroled upon condition that "we were not to bear arms against the Confederate States of America, nor do any garrison, guard, or constabulary duty," as nearly as I can remember the language, "until exchanged."

I have examined the record, and his language is almost absolutely accurate.

We were sent to Camp Douglas, at Chicago. General Tyler was in command. He had there a lot of Confederate prisoners, and one of the first things required of us was to take guns and stand guard over these prisoners.

This we regarded as a violation of our paroles, and for that reason refused to obey the order. The trouble at once commenced. All the Harpers Ferry troops were in the same situation—the New York regiments, the Ninth Vermont, and the Thirty-second Ohio and other commands, as well as the Sixtieth Ohio.

One thing seemed to lead to another, but so far as I can recall, no one of the regiments was any worse than the others. All were compelled, on account of the conditions of their parole, to be kept without arms and in idleness.

The Sixtieth Ohio had the additional grievance growing out of the fact that the terms of most of the men had expired, as they claimed. They naturally did not want to be kept there under discipline when they knew, as everybody knew, they could not be again sent to the field.

They were no more disorganized than any other regiments, and they were no more mutinous or insubordinate, and so far as being worthless is concerned, they were worthless in no other sense than that their times were out and that there was nothing they could do or be allowed to do. They were finally discharged, but they were honorably discharged, and I never before heard that anybody claimed that there was anything discreditable in their record. As soon as they were exchanged many of them reenlisted and all were good soldiers to the end.

I send you this as the testimony of one who was a member of the regiment and who participated in all that experience. I send it not alone on account of the survivors, but also and more particularly on account of the dead comrades of that splendid regiment.

Inasmuch as I have not met you for many years, I refer you to Senator LONG and the Hon. VICTOR MURDOCK—who are both personal friends.

The Member of Congress from his district—

Very truly, yours, etc. C. C. RIDINGS.

I remember him very well—a man of most excellent family. I did not know he was still living, but this attack on the honor of his regiment brought him to my attention in that way.

I have another letter here which I want to read. First, however, I have here a discharge that one of the members of that regiment sent me. I want that to go into the RECORD as I read it:

To all whom it may concern:

Know ye that Zebulin Ford, a private of Captain George B. Gardner's company, Sixtieth Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry, who was enrolled on the 16th day of November, 1861, to serve one year, is hereby discharged from the service of the United States this 10th day of November, 1862, at Chicago, Ill., by reason of regiment being honorably mustered out of service.

No objection to his reenlistment is known to exist.

Said Zebulin Ford was born in Pickaway County, in the State of Ohio, is 21 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches high, fair complexion, blue eyes, brown hair, and by occupation when enrolled a farmer.

Given at Chicago, Ill., this 10th day of November, 1862.

GEO. B. GARDNER,
Captain Company C,
Sixtieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

I have here one more letter. It is a letter sent me by a survivor of the Thirty-second Ohio. In the battle at Harpers Ferry there were not only the Sixtieth Ohio, but also the Thirty-second Ohio and the Eighty-seventh Ohio—three Ohio regiments. While there were three Ohio regiments, there were also six New York regiments, all surrendered together. One of them, as I read a moment ago, was unfortunate enough to become panic stricken and to run. I do not mention that to the discredit of the regiment, but only because I am compelled to resort to history and take it as I find it. The regiment, I am happy to say, made afterwards a splendid record. It became one of the best regiments in the Union Army. There was nothing remarkable in the fact that, being suddenly attacked, as they were, by Stonewall Jackson's veterans in that the first battle in which they were engaged, they should have had the misfortune to make such a record as they did. I have here a history of the civil war, in which it is stated that they did misbehave, to the great chagrin and mortification of all the other New York regiments. But the unfortunate thing about it was that they happened, with their comrade regiments, to be holding the key to Harpers Ferry—Maryland Heights—and when they broke and fled the enemy swept through the space thus made and in a moment were in possession of the command of that position, and surrender necessarily followed. It was not the fault of the Sixtieth Ohio, not the fault of any Ohio regiment; perhaps not in a way to be criticised for it the fault of this regiment. It might have been the fault of the officers.

Now, I have the following letter from a survivor of the Thirty-second Ohio. I have here also the history from which he quotes, but I will read his letter. He says:

VAN WERT, OHIO, December 26, 1906.

Hon. J. B. FORAKER,
Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I see from correspondence introduced as evidence that the Sixtieth Regiment Ohio Infantry was discharged because it had become disorganized and mutinous while at Camp Douglas as paroled prisoners. This was a one-year regiment, whose term of service had expired, and when we take that into account, the bad treatment received at the hands of the Government in sending them out of their own State to a camp in another State, where they were treated more like malefactors than paroled prisoners, they were not so much to be blamed or censured as were the regiments who had two years or more yet to serve. The Thirty-second Regiment Ohio Infantry—of which I was a member—was among that batch of Harpers Ferry prisoners taken to Camp Douglas. I will now quote from the regimental history, which gives some of its experiences and happenings while there:

"There was much disappointment expressed by the regiment in being hurried through the State to a camp in another State. The fact is, those who directed this arrangement made a mistake. The Thirty-second should have been sent to a camp in its own State, promptly paid the money due them, and paroled until exchanged. This would have given satisfaction and would have been appreciated by the entire regiment. Instead, they were placed in Camp Douglas and strictly guarded, all privileges curtailed, and although they had been informed they would be promptly paid on reaching Camp Douglas, yet all pay was withheld and in every respect the service at Camp Douglas was much more disagreeable than at the front. They were ordered to do camp guard duty. The officers made the details and under command of their respective orderlies they reported at guard mount; but when other officers attempted to force arms into their hands they refused, and giving the guns a toss stood them butts up, the bayonet buried in the ground. The authorities ordered them to confine themselves to their quarters, but they came and went at will. The regulars were ordered out, the regiment formed line, armed with brickbats—

The Thirty-second Ohio armed with brickbats! This is not the Sixtieth Ohio. I want simply to show what other regiments did—

"The regulars were ordered to load with ball, and they did so, the officer commanding the regulars ordering the Thirty-second to their quarters, but they did not move. The condition was critical and a collision seemed imminent. At this moment a shout was heard, and looking to the westward the head of a column of troops was seen coming down on the flank of the regulars on double quick. It was the Thirty-ninth New York. That regiment had heard of the situation in the camp of the Thirty-second and determined to take a hand with their old comrades in suppressing the regulars—

The Thirty-ninth New York was captured at Harpers Ferry along with the Thirty-second Ohio and the Sixtieth Ohio—

"The latter, seeing that intimidation and force were alike impracticable, retreated in good order, followed by the jeers and groans of the Thirty-second Ohio and the Thirty-ninth New York."

Then he goes on and describes how later they were exchanged. The regiment was then called back to the front and reorganized; and from that time on to the end no regiment in the service made a better record than the Thirty-second Ohio. The Thirty-ninth New York made a like good record, and so did every other regiment that was captured on that unfortunate occasion.

But, Mr. President, the point to which I want to call attention is that the complaint of General Tyler shows on its face, according to the letter caused to be published by the War Department, that the complaint of these men was that it would be a violation of their paroles to require them to do this duty, and that their time was out, more than one year having expired since they were enlisted. In that same letter General Tyler says General Halleck was of the opinion that the men were right about their contention, and he was of the opinion that their time was out, at least nine-tenths of them.

How were they discharged? I have read one of the discharges. I might read many more. I might cite much other evidence. They were discharged, Mr. President, honorably. The regiment was mustered out because it had reached the end of its service, and no man in that regiment ever heard that there was such a complaint against their record until it was sent here to this body in an official communication signed by the President of the United States.

I felt that it was my duty—and I therefore make no apology for taking the time of the Senate on that account—to set forth as an act of justice to these men, most of whom at least I well knew, the record that they actually made.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I was forced to be absent when the Senator from Ohio made his speech on this subject before the holidays. Perhaps he has already indicated, but I did not understand him a moment ago, as to how it is that every Senator here knows why this regiment was picked out to be pilloried, as it has been, before the country as a lot of cowards or something else who deserved dishonorable discharges. I would be glad if the Senator would inform us what was the matter, what was the motive, what was the animus of it?

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I am not obliged to tell the Senator everything I know, especially when I know that the Senator knows. [Laughter.]

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator from South Carolina knew he certainly would not ask the question. It is not a mere play of words. The Senator owes it to the country, which is possibly not as well informed as Senators are, to let it know why this regiment has been disgraced, as it were, when it did not deserve it.

Mr. FORAKER. It is such a delightful experience to keep something back that I think I will disappoint the Senator tonight. [Laughter.]

I might speak at much greater length——

Mr. TILLMAN. I again appeal to the Senator if he will not tell us what his opinion on the subject is.

Mr. FORAKER. It is very late now, and I do not want to detain the Senate any longer.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator answer this question: I have been informed since I rose that the Senator himself was a member of this regiment at some time.

Mr. FORAKER. No; the Senator is mistaken about that. No wonder somebody got that impression, because some of the newspapers published that statement. I said when calling attention to this regiment on a previous occasion that I knew the regiment well; that I had tried to enlist in it in 1861, but they would not accept me. I was only 15 years of age at that time, so I had to stay at home another year. In 1862 I enlisted in the Eighty-ninth Ohio, the only regiment in which I ever served. I served in that from 1862 until the end of the war.

Mr. TILLMAN. Then the Senator never did belong to the Sixtieth Ohio?

Mr. FORAKER. I never belonged to the Sixtieth Ohio, but if I had belonged to it I would be as proud of it as these men are, and I would as indignantly resent any attempt to smirch their splendid records.

Mr. TILLMAN. After that I have nothing more to say, except that possibly somebody in the War Department may have thought the Senator did get in the regiment, and that was the reason why they brought it out. [Laughter.]

Mr. FORAKER. I do not know that anybody in the War Department thought of that, but it is possible that somebody in the War Department, or some other place, remembered that the Senator from Ohio lived in Ohio at that time. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, it is getting late, and Senators are asking me to forbear any further discussion this evening. I think, without concluding, I will stop at this point, with notice to the Senate that I may resume my remarks briefly to-morrow morning. I am almost through, if not entirely; but I want to look over what material I have, and perhaps I may put something more in the RECORD.

Mr. WARREN. I ask to have printed in the RECORD the papers which I send to the desk. They are the regular official blanks of enlistment and of discharge of enlisted men under the various conditions.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The papers referred to are as follows:

[Form No. 22, M. S. O., 1904.]

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

STATE OF ———, City or town of ———, ss:

I,* ——— ———, born in ———, in the State of ———, aged ——— years and ——— months, and by occupation a ———, do hereby acknowledge to have voluntarily —— enlisted this ——— day of ———, 190—, as a soldier in the Army of the United States of America, for the period of three years unless sooner discharged by proper authority: And do also agree to accept from the United States such bounty, pay, rations, and clothing as are or may be established by law. And I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America, and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever; and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States, and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the Rules and Articles of War.

(* See note.)

——— ——— [SEAL.]

Subscribed and duly sworn to before me this ——— day of ———, A. D. 190—.

——— ———, Recruiting Officer.

I certify that I have carefully examined the above-named man agreeably to the General Regulations of the Army, and that, in my opinion, he is free from all bodily defects and mental infirmity which would, in any way, disqualify him from performing the duties of a soldier.

——— ———, Examining Officer.

I certify that I have minutely inspected the above-named man, ——— ———, previous to his ——— enlistment, and that he was entirely sober when enlisted; that to the best of my judgment and belief, he fulfills all legal requirements, and that I have accepted and enlisted him into the service of the United States under this contract of enlistment as duly qualified to perform the duties of an able-bodied soldier, and, in doing so, have strictly observed the regulations which govern the recruiting service. This soldier has ——— eyes, ——— hair, ——— complexion, is ——— feet ——— inches high.

——— ——— [SEAL.]

——— ———, Recruiting Officer.

* NOTE.—The correct name of the recruit will be ascertained, and great care will be exercised in order that it may be correctly written and signed. The Christian name must not be abbreviated, but if it consists of more than one name, only the first will be written and signed in full.

NOTE.—Indelible or permanent marks found upon the person of a recruit will be here noted. [On side of paper.]

DECLARATION OF RECRUIT.

I, ——— ———, desiring to enlist in the Army of the United States for the term of three years, do declare that I have neither wife nor child; that I am of the legal age to enlist, and believe myself to be physically qualified to perform the duties of an able-bodied soldier, and I do further declare that I am of good habits and character in all respects, and have never been discharged from the United States service (Army or Navy) or any other service on account of disability, or through sentence of either civil or military court, nor discharged from any service, civil or military, except with good character, and for the reasons given by me to the recruiting officer prior to this enlistment.*

Given at ——— this ——— day of ———, 190—.

——— ———.

Witness:

——— ———.

Residence of soldier: ——— ———.

Name and address of person to be notified in case of emergency, giving degree of relationship; if friend, so state: ——— ———.

* Here add in case of an applicant for first enlistment: And that I am (or have made legal declaration of my intention to become) a citizen of the United States.

CONSENT IN CASE OF MINOR.

(See A. R. 859.)

I, ——— ———, do certify that I am in the ——— of ———; that the said ——— ——— is ——— years of age, and I do hereby freely give my consent to his enlisting as a soldier in the Army of the United States for the period of three years.

Given at ——— this ——— day of ———, 190—.

——— ———.

Witness:

——— ———.

——— ———, enlisted at ——— on the ——— day of ———, 190—, by ——— ———.

———enlistment; last served in ———. Discharged ——— ——, 190—.

DIRECTIONS.

One enlistment paper only will be made in the case of a soldier enlisted or reenlisted for the line of the Army. It will be forwarded to The Military Secretary of the Army, with the recruiting officer's trimonthly report. The recruiting officer will indorse on the enlistment paper of every general service recruit (in red ink, at top of second fold) the arm of service for which the soldier was enlisted; i. e., either foot service, white; mounted service, white; foot service, colored, or mounted service, colored—adding the more definite designation, "infantry," "coast artillery," "engineers," "cavalry" or "field artillery," as the case may be.

Enlistment papers of soldiers of a staff department will be executed and disposed of in accordance with the regulations governing enlistments for the particular staff department concerned.

In cases of reenlistment, i. e., within three months from date of last discharge from the Army, the declaration of recruit will not be filled in, but it will be stated on the margin whether the soldier is single or married and the number of children, if any. The name and address of person to be notified in case of emergency will also be given. The prefix "re" will be added to the word "enlisted" where it occurs.

Assigned to——— ——— of ———, U. S. A.

[Form No. 203, M. S. O., July 21, 1905.]

ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES.

To all whom it may concern:

Know ye that ——— ———, a ——— of ——— of the ——— Regiment of ———, who was enlisted at ——— on the ——— day of ———, one thousand nine hundred and ———, to serve ——— years, is hereby honorably discharged from the Army of the United States by reason of ——— ———.

Said ——— ——— was born in ———, in the State of ———, and when enlisted was ——— years of age, by occupation a ———, had ——— eyes, ——— hair, ——— complexion, and was ——— feet ——— inches in height.

Given under my hand at ——— ———, this ——— day of ———, one thousand nine hundred and ———.

——— ———,

Commanding.

CHARACTER.

No objection to his reenlistment is known to exist.

——— ———.

MILITARY RECORD.

Continuous service at date of discharge: ——— years ——— months ——— days. Previous service: ——— ———. Noncommissioned officer: ———. Markmanship: ———. Horsemanship: ———. Battles, engagements, skirmishes, expeditions: ———. Wounds received in service: ———. Physical condition when discharged: ———. Married or single: ———. Remarks: ———.

——— ———,

Commanding. ———.

[Form No. 19, M. S. O., 1904.]

ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES.

To all whom it may concern:

Know ye that ——— ———, a ——— of ——— of the ——— Regiment of ———, who was enlisted the ——— day of ———, one thousand nine hundred and ———, to serve ——— years, is hereby discharged without honor from the Army of the United States in consequence of ——— ———.

Said ——— ——— was born in ———, in the State of ———, and when enlisted was ——— years of age, by occupation a ———, had ——— eyes, ——— hair, ——— complexion, and was ——— feet ——— inches in height.

Given under my hand at ——— ———, this ——— day of ———, one thousand nine hundred and ———.

——— ———,

Commanding ———.

[Form No. 20, M. S. O., 1904.]

ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES.

To all whom it may concern:

Know ye that ——— ———, a ——— of ——— of the ——— Regiment of ———, who was enlisted the ——— day of ———, one thousand nine hundred and ———, to serve ——— years, is hereby dishonorably discharged from the Army of the United States in consequence of the sentence of a general court-martial ——— ———.

Said ——— ——— was born in ———, in the State of ———, and when enlisted was ——— years of age, by occupation a ———, had ——— eyes, ——— hair, ——— complexion, and was ——— feet ——— inches in height.

Given under my hand at ——— ———, this ——— day of ———, one thousand nine hundred and ———.

——— ———,

Commanding ———.

J. G. WHITE & CO. (INCORPORATED).

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Referring to section 32 of the act approved April 12, 1900, entitled "An act temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith an ordinance enacted by the executive council of Porto Rico on August 1, 1906, granting to J. G. White & Co. (Incorporated) the right to build and operate a line of railway between the towns of Rio Piedras and Caguas, in the island of Porto Rico.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

ANNUAL REPORT OF PANAMA RAILROAD COMPANY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress the fifty-seventh annual report of the board of directors of the Panama Railroad Company for the year ending June 30, 1906.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

ELECTRIC STREET RAILWAY IN PONCE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Referring to section 32 of the act approved April 12, 1900, entitled "An act temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith an ordinance enacted by the executive council of Porto Rico on August 13, 1906, amending a franchise granting to W. S. H. Lothrop, his heirs, successors, and assigns, the right to construct and operate an electric street railway in certain streets in the city of Ponce and between the city of Ponce and the playa thereof.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

TWO HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report by the Secretary of State concerning the presentation to the French Government of the impression on gold of the medal which, in pursuance of the act approved April 27, 1904, was struck to commemorate the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, January 8, 1907, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 7, 1907.

SURVEYOR OF CUSTOMS.

Thomas C. Elliott, of Illinois, to be surveyor of customs for the port of Cairo, in the State of Illinois. (Reappointment.)

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS.

Herbert D. Philbrick, of Maine, to be collector of customs for the district of York, in the State of Maine, in place of George E. Marshall, deceased.

William H. Daniels, of New York, to be collector of customs for the district of Oswegatchie, in the State of New York. (Reappointment.)

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY—INFANTRY ARM.

Lieut. Col. Charles L. Hodges, Twenty-third Infantry, to be colonel from January 1, 1907, vice Borden, Twenty-fourth Infantry, retired from active service.

Maj. Edwin F. Glenn, Fifth Infantry, to be lieutenant-colonel from January 1, 1907, vice Hodges, Twenty-third Infantry, promoted.

Capt. Zebulon B. Vance, Eleventh Infantry, to be major from January 1, 1907, vice Glenn, Fifth Infantry, promoted.

To be captains.

First Lieut. Josiah C. Minus, Tenth Infantry, from October 6, 1906, vice Johnston, Sixteenth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Charles M. Bundel, Twenty-fifth Infantry, from October 20, 1906, vice George, Sixteenth Infantry, retired from active service.

First Lieut. Laurence Halstead, Thirteenth Infantry, from October 20, 1906, vice Atkinson, Sixth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Frederick W. Van Duyne, Fourth Infantry, from October 31, 1906, vice Beall, Third Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Charles D. Herron, Eighteenth Infantry, from November 2, 1906, vice Lyon, Seventeenth Infantry, detailed as paymaster.

First Lieut. James Hanson, Fourteenth Infantry, from December 2, 1906, vice Nichols, Third Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Fred R. Brown, Ninth Infantry, from December 4, 1906, vice Wilkinson, Fourth Infantry, resigned.

First Lieut. William T. Merry, Twenty-third Infantry, from December 15, 1906, vice Nuttman, Ninth Infantry, detailed as commissary.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Commander Rogers H. Galt to be a captain in the Navy from the 11th day of December, 1906, vice Capt. Franklin J. Drake, retired.

Lieut. Luke McNamee to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy from the 12th day of June, 1906, vice Lieut. Commander George E. Burd, promoted.

Lieut. Charles J. Lang to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy from the 25th day of December, 1906, vice Lieut. Commander John H. Gibbons, promoted.

Lieut. Martin E. Trench to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy from the 1st day of January, 1907, to fill a vacancy created in that grade by the act of Congress approved March 3, 1903.

The following-named citizens to be assistant surgeons in the Navy from the 20th day of December, 1906, to fill vacancies existing in that grade on that date:

Renier J. Straeten, a citizen of South Dakota, and

James T. Duhigg, a citizen of Iowa.

Sailmaker Charles E. Tallman, United States Navy, retired, to be a chief sailmaker on the retired list of the Navy, to rank with, but after, ensign from the 29th day of June, 1906, in accordance with a provision contained in the naval appropriation act approved on that date.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

David J. Girard, of Eureka, Cal., to be register of the land office at Eureka, Cal., vice Charles B. Frost, resigned.

POSTMASTERS.

CALIFORNIA.

Philo Handy to be postmaster at Ukiah, in the county of Mendocino and State of California, in place of Philo Handy. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1906.

ILLINOIS.

Clarence F. Buck to be postmaster at Monmouth, in the county of Warren and State of Illinois, in place of Clarence F. Buck. Incumbent's commission expires February 9, 1907.

Abraham L. Coyle to be postmaster at Gridley, in the county of McLean and State of Illinois, in place of Abraham L. Coyle. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

Thomas M. Crossman to be postmaster at Edwardsville, in the county of Madison and State of Illinois, in place of Thomas M. Crossman. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

IOWA.

Asahel B. Chrysler to be postmaster at Lake Park, in the county of Dickinson and State of Iowa, in place of Asahel B. Chrysler. Incumbent's commission expires January 7, 1907.

Simon J. Mak to be postmaster at Inwood, in the county of Lyon and State of Iowa, in place of Simon J. Mak. Incumbent's commission expires January 7, 1907.

John Meyer to be postmaster at Alton, in the county of Sioux and State of Iowa, in place of John Meyer. Incumbent's commission expires January 14, 1907.

MARYLAND.

James C. Peddicord to be postmaster at Oakland, in the county of Garrett and State of Maryland, in place of John M. Jarboe. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

MINNESOTA.

William J. Cowling to be postmaster at Ely, in the county of St. Louis and State of Minnesota, in place of William J. Cowling. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

William Gallagher to be postmaster at Carlton, in the county of Carlton and State of Minnesota, in place of William Gallagher. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

NEW YORK.

Sidney B. Cloyes to be postmaster at Earlville, in the county of Madison and State of New York, in place of Sidney B. Cloyes. Incumbent's commission expires January 7, 1907.

Millard D. McNeil to be postmaster at Oxford, in the county of Chenango and State of New York, in place of Millard D. McNeil. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

Winfield S. Vandewater to be postmaster at Cedarhurst, in the county of Nassau and State of New York, in place of Winfield F. Vandewater. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1906.

Lucius A. Waldo to be postmaster at Canisteo, in the county of Steuben and State of New York, in place of Lucius A. Waldo. Incumbent's commission expires January 7, 1907.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Benjamin F. Hevener to be postmaster at Ardmore, in the county of Montgomery and State of Pennsylvania, in place of George H. Reitenbaugh, removed.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Dudley P. McLaurin to be postmaster at Clio, in the county of Marlboro and State of South Carolina. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

VERMONT.

James E. Pollard to be postmaster at Chester, in the county of Windsor and State of Vermont, in place of James E. Pollard. Incumbent's commission expires January 14, 1907.

WASHINGTON.

John M. Benedict to be postmaster at Centralia, in the county of Lewis and State of Washington, in place of John M. Benedict. Incumbent's commission expired June 27, 1906.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Frank S. Smith to be postmaster at Parkersburg, in the county of Wood and State of West Virginia, in place of Gordon B. Gibbens. Incumbent's commission expired March 8, 1906.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 7, 1907.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Russell H. Dunn, of Texas, to be collector of customs for the district of Sabine, in the State of Texas.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

Third Lieut. James Albert Alger to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from July 8, 1906.

Third Lieut. Frank Lynn Austin to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from July 10, 1906.

Third Lieut. Le Roy Reinburg to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from November 12, 1906.

Third Lieut. Howard Eugene Rideout to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from September 15, 1906.

POSTMASTERS.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Fred A. Tower to be postmaster at Concord, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts.

Frederick E. Pierce to be postmaster at Greenfield, in the county of Franklin and State of Massachusetts.

Carl Wurtzbach to be postmaster at Lee, in the county of Berkshire and State of Massachusetts.

James O. Hodges to be postmaster at Mansfield, in the county of Bristol and State of Massachusetts.

John Huxtable to be postmaster at Wareham, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts.

NEBRASKA.

Valentine Zink to be postmaster at Sterling, in the county of Johnson and State of Nebraska.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Clarence N. Garvin to be postmaster at West Derry, in the county of Rockingham and State of New Hampshire.

Thomas B. Moore to be postmaster at Lincoln, in the county of Grafton and State of New Hampshire.

NEW YORK.

David A. Doyle to be postmaster at Katonah, in the county of Westchester and State of New York.

PENNSYLVANIA.

J. Wersler Thomson, to be postmaster at Phoenixville, in the county of Chester and State of Pennsylvania.

Isaac T. Klingensmith to be postmaster at Leechburg, in the county of Armstrong and State of Pennsylvania.

William J. Boggs to be postmaster at Ford City, in the county of Armstrong and State of Pennsylvania.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Frank S. Smith to be postmaster at Parkersburg, in the State of West Virginia.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, January 7, 1907.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, January 4, 1907, was read and approved.

COMMITTEE APPOINTMENT.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces the following committee appointment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Representative WASHBURN of Massachusetts, a member of the Committee on Revision of the Laws.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs I submit a bill and report making appropriations for the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, and ask that it be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reports the bill the title of which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 23551) making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, if points of order have not been reserved, I desire now to reserve all points of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi reserves all points of order.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to give notice that I will call up this bill to-morrow for consideration.

The SPEAKER. The bill and report are referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and ordered to be printed.

REVISION OF LAWS.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the suspension of the rules for the present consideration of the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the bill (H. R. 17984) to revise the laws when reported shall have the privilege belonging to bills reported from committees having leave to report at any time.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman a question to understand his bill.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I think we may as well have a second, and I demand a second and ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. WILLIAMS. This question is preparatory as to whether I would demand a second.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I think we had better proceed in regular order, and then the gentleman can ask his question.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I ask the gentleman to explain what the bill is.

Mr. PAYNE. Let us get unanimous consent for a second; it is a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] demand a second?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Reserving the right to object——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can proceed by unanimous consent, reserving his right.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understood the Chair to say the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON] had asked unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. Precisely. Now, the only question before the House is, Shall a second be ordered? This is a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. This is a bill for the revision of the laws. House bill 17984——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have no objection to the second being considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON] is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] to twenty minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the twenty minutes extended to me given to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY].

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, just a brief word of explanation as to the reason for this resolution. The House will remember that at the last session of Congress this committee reported to this House this bill for the revision of the laws, including or embracing the criminal title only. Time was not found for the consideration of the bill at that session and a joint committee on the 19th day of June was appointed of five Senators and five Members of the House, which committee has been sitting during the recess of Congress. They came down here during the middle of November and have been sitting almost continuously ever since. There was considerable new work necessary to be done. It was found necessary to carry into the bill then reported all of the legislation of the last session of Congress, and some differences of opinion between the Senate committee and the House committee developed as to the form of legislation and as to the recommendations that were to be urged upon the House, and the present bill is the result of the action of that joint committee. Our object in asking this bill to be put upon the Calendar so that it may be called up for consideration, as provided in this resolution, is the recognized urgent necessity felt by the country for this codification and revision and which on account of its magnitude and of its importance and the length of time necessary for its consideration in committee has not been able to obtain such a position on the Calendar to obtain for it consideration at the present session without a resolution of this kind.

I do not desire to say anything more about the subject unless some gentleman desires information upon it.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Let me ask the gentleman what the purpose of the resolution is? There was so much confusion that I did not hear it.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. In order that this bill may have the privileges of bills that are entitled to be reported at any time.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And that is the only——

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. That is the only purport.

Mr. GROSVENOR rose.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON] yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR]?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I would like the gentleman from Pennsylvania to state whether or not the Committee on Revision have had time enough to examine the report of this bill or bills, so it can answer this question: Whether there have entered in the revision, as it came from the Commission, important and material modifications and changes in the statutes of the United States?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I would say to the gentleman that the bill, as it came from the Commission, did embody very serious and very extended modifications of the existing laws of the United States, but that this committee have rejected nearly all of those recommendations, and that practically the bill as reported, with very few exceptions, does not alter or modify in any respect the existing laws of the United States.

Mr. GROSVENOR. So that the bill as reported now is a revision and not new legislation in the ordinary sense?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. In the ordinary sense that is true. The gentleman will understand that when we are bringing together fragments of legislation, or eliminating obsolete laws, it has been necessary sometimes to alter the language of the bill, and in a few instances some new legislation has been recommended.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The committee can point that out?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. It is clearly pointed out in the bill, such new matter being printed in italics or brackets.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman refers to "the bill." Does the resolution refer to the bill.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. It refers to this particular bill; yes.

Mr. MANN. I thought it referred to a bill to be reported.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. The bill has not yet been reported.

Mr. MANN. How does the House know you are going to report that bill, or some other bill?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. We have practically reported this bill. It was reported at the last session of Congress and was unable to receive consideration, and has subsequently been before the joint committee of the Senate and the House. All the alterations or amendments made by that committee are indicated in this bill.

Mr. MANN. The Commission on Revision of the Laws have reported final action. They have reported an entire code, which was referred to the committee. Now, how does the House know which portion of this you are going to report?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I endeavored to explain that question of the gentleman by previously saying that this bill now before this House and referred to in this resolution is that part of the report of the Commission known as the penal code only.

Mr. MANN. So the gentleman only expects, if this resolution goes through, that it shall affect the bill relating to the penal code?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Only.

Mr. MANN. What did the resolution say on that?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. It refers to House bill 17984, which is a bill relating to the criminal code.

Mr. MANN. As I understand the resolution, it provides for a bill to be reported. This bill the gentleman names has long since been reported, and the resolution does not refer to that fact.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I have endeavored to explain to the House that this is the bill which is referred to.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, while I have no objection to the resolution, I think it fair to the Members of the House that they understand what it means. I do not wish the Members of the House hereafter to criticise the Speaker of the House or the Rules Committee or the rules themselves because of the operation of this resolution, which they probably will adopt. The effect of the passage of this resolution will be that there will be no other business transacted in this House between now and the 4th of March except current appropriation bills, because when this resolution goes into effect and that bill comes before the House it will take from now until the 4th of March before it is enacted into law.

Mr. PAYNE. I will ask the gentleman if it is not the fact that on any attempt of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to call up this bill, if he or any other Member of the House can not raise the question of consideration, and the question whether the House will transact other business will depend upon the majority of the House every time?

Mr. MANN. The distinguished gentleman, as always, is correct. It is within the power of the House under the rules at all times, and always has been, to absolutely control the course of legislation in the House. That is the rule periodically; and if this resolution is adopted it means that no other business will be brought before the House, except the appropriation bills, or bills coming from the committee of the distinguished gentleman from New York, or by unanimous consent. While I do not disapprove the resolution, I do not wish to hear Members on the floor of the House criticise the results of their own action between now and the 4th of March. Let it be understood what the effect is before the resolution is adopted.

Mr. PAYNE. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield a couple of minutes to me?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I yield a couple of minutes to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that if this resolution passes it simply gives this bill the same privilege as an appropriation bill—that it may be called up at any time, like any bill reported from a committee having the privilege to report at any time. It will not come up before the House unless it is called up by some Member; and whenever any Member of the House seeks to call it up it is competent for any other Member of the House to rise in his place and state that he objects to the consideration of the bill, raising the question of consideration, and then the rules provide that, without debate, the House shall decide by a majority vote whether they will consider the bill or not. So that it does not tie the House up, but leaves it with the majority of the House to say whenever this bill is called up whether they will consider it. And if there is any other bill on the Calendar that a majority of the House desires to consider it can vote against the consideration of this bill, and so go on and consider the business they want to transact. It simply gives the House an opportunity to get at this bill, if there is time, coming from this Commission and this Committee on Revision of the Laws, a policy which was entered upon by Congress some years ago, and a policy which ought to be carried out to the final rejection of the bill or the final passage of the bill. I hope the resolution will pass.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I desire to ask the gentleman from New York a question. Does the gentleman think now as serious a matter as the revision of our laws should be disposed of in a hop, skip, and jump sort of way that this resolution would mean. I am for a revision of the laws.

Mr. PAYNE. Well, I will say that I tried to get this matter up for consideration before the holiday recess, but the committee was not ready. I thought I foresaw what would happen in the future. When we met here last Thursday gentlemen were not ready with their bills and not ready to bring them before the House. That did occur. I went individually to a number of gentlemen having bills on the Calendar, which I understood they were anxious to bring before the House, and none of them were ready. We lost three days of last week.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no; we worked on Friday.

Mr. PAYNE. We had a session Friday, but we worked on a bill which the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] says was lost time. We might have devoted three days of last week to this bill if it had been ready. It is ready now. The committee are asking for consideration of the bill. I think we ought to give them the opportunity, so that whenever there is time at the disposal of the House in which this bill can be considered it may be done. This committee have devoted a great deal of time and given a great deal of care to the consideration of this bill, and I expect when they bring it before the House they will be able greatly to lighten the labors of each Member of the House, and that we can get at an intelligent consideration of it without every one of the 386 Members studying all the provisions of the bill. I am told by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON] that where they have made any change in the existing law it is indicated in italics, so that a Member can take the bill and go through these amendments and decide how he wants to vote. I do not think it will require so much time as the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES] thinks it will, but whether it does or not it seems to be the bill that is ready. The chairman of the committee is here pressing it for consideration, and, so far as my vote is concerned, I am willing to give him an opportunity.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Is it vital to the welfare of the people that we shall revise the laws at this session of Congress?

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, I think there are a great many things that we might do or that we might not do without affecting anything vital to the existence of the Republic. We have done a great many things that were not vital to the existence of the Republic.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does not the gentleman from New York think the time consumed in the consideration of this bill will prevent a Republican House from devoting its attention to worse measures?

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, no; a Republican House will enact all the legislation that is necessary.

Mr. WILLIAMS. There are so many worse things that they might be engaged in.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, during the last session of Congress the House Committee on Revision of the Laws reported a bill known as H. R. 17984, which purported to be a bill to provide a code of penal laws for the United States. Subsequently, in the closing days of that session, a resolution was passed appointing a joint committee of the House and the Senate to consider the work of the Commission on Revision of the Laws. That joint committee of the House and Senate met fifteen days prior to the meeting of this session of Congress, and has been in session almost continually ever since. They took the work of the House committee, as shown by the bill reported to the House, and modified it in many respects, cutting out of it nearly all of the law that was new and that was not simply a codification of existing law. It is now necessary for that report of the joint committee to be brought into the House, and I therefore ask unanimous consent that the motion made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON] be amended so as to read as follows:

Ordered, That the bill (H. R. 17984) to provide a code of penal laws for the United States is hereby committed to the Joint Committee on Revision of the Laws, and that the said joint committee have leave to report the said bill at any time, and that the bill shall have the privileges pertaining to bills so reported.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I accept that amendment to the form of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. Is it possible for a joint committee to make a report of a bill to the House or would that be made by the House members of the committee?

The SPEAKER. A joint committee, as the Chair understands it, can report to either House. That is, the section of the committee composed of Members of the House may report to this House, and the section of the committee on the part of the Senate may report to the Senate. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the bill (H. R. 17984) to provide a code of penal laws for the United States is hereby committed to the Joint Committee on Revision of the Laws, and that the said joint committee have leave to report the said bill at any time, and that the bill have the privileges pertaining to bills so reported.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the substitution of this resolution for the resolution offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON]?

Mr. DE ARMOND. I should like to know the difference between the resolutions.

Mr. SHERLEY. The difference is simply this: We reported a bill purporting to provide a criminal code of laws. That was reported by the House committee. Subsequently it was believed that it would facilitate the work if there was a joint committee working on the matter, so that when it was passed by one House the work would not have to all be gone over again in the committee of the other House. There was appointed a joint committee of the House and Senate which took up this bill; they have made sundry amendments to it, stricken out a good deal of new law that had been put into the bill as reported by the House committee. The effect of this resolution will be to permit the joint committee to report back this House bill as amended by that committee, and when so reported that it shall have equal standing with bills from committees having the right to report at any time.

Mr. DE ARMOND. And you ask unanimous consent to substitute this for the resolution offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON]?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes, because the other resolution was made under a mistake of fact that that bill had not been reported to the House. It had been reported to the House at the last session, and in order for the joint committee to report it is necessary to recommit that bill and permit the joint committee to report it.

Mr. DE ARMOND. And then the question comes upon suspending the rules.

Mr. SHERLEY. The motion made by myself is to substitute this resolution for the one made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and I presume, then, that unanimous consent having been declined as to his request, the matter would have the same status as the motion made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON].

Mr. DE ARMOND. The purpose is to suspend the rules and pass this resolution.

Mr. SHERLEY. That is the purpose now.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, who controls the time?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I control the time on our side and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY] on the other.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I would like to get two or three minutes myself to ask a question.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I will yield time to the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. The request now is for unanimous consent to substitute the resolution presented by the gentleman from Kentucky for the resolution that was offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DE ARMOND. And if unanimous consent is given, then will the resolution be pending subject to unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. It will be pending under a motion to suspend the rules. Is there objection to substituting the resolution offered by the gentleman from Kentucky for the resolution offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say only a word or two in regard to this matter. There seems to have been a little misapprehension as to the purpose of this resolution. It is simply to enable the Committee on the Revision of the Laws to bring forward this work for the consideration of the House when the House shall have the time to consider it. It does not mean that this bill is to interfere necessarily with any other matter which the House wishes to take up, and at any time the House may determine whether it will consider the bill or not. The committee has been at work upon this matter for a good many months.

Mr. FINLEY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SHERLEY. Certainly.

Mr. FINLEY. What times does the gentleman think would be reasonably necessary to give proper consideration to this bill?

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman asks a question that can not be answered with any degree of accuracy. It depends upon how far the House will be willing to accept the statement of the committee and how far they will want to go individually into a consideration of the matter.

Mr. FINLEY. The gentleman from Kentucky will realize that this is the short session, and, practically speaking, we have got less than about fifty working days. If a great deal of time is taken up in the consideration of this bill, it will be at the expense of other legislation.

Mr. SHERLEY. I would answer the gentleman by saying that if it developed that a great deal of time was necessary for the consideration of the bill, I presume provision would be made for night sessions to consider it; but I think the matter is of sufficient importance to be considered by the House whether there is other business pending or not.

Mr. FINLEY. Does not the gentleman think that a bill of this character could be much better considered at a long session of Congress?

Mr. SHERLEY. I will answer the gentleman by saying that if we put this report through at this session we will have all the work that we need to attend to during the long session in putting through the other branches of the substantive law. This Commission has been in existence for many years, and the House and Senate fixed a period for its termination. Their report has been before the committee for some time, and we have worked weeks on it, and, as I said, I think the matter is of sufficient importance to be disposed of at this session.

Mr. JOHNSON. The gentleman contemplates that other legislation carrying out the provisions of the penal code will be necessary?

Mr. SHERLEY. No; this bill as passed will cover the penal sections of the law, but it will not touch that title relating to the judiciary or any of the other titles relating to the various departments of the Government. I will say to the gentleman that the entire revision will cover about 9,000 sections. The present bill covers only some 300-odd sections, as I now recall it, so the gentleman can get some idea of proportion in that way.

Mr. JOHNSON. And the gentleman can not give an estimate of the time that will be necessary for proper consideration.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman knows as much about that as I do.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. How long has this committee been working on this code?

Mr. SHERLEY. The committee has been working since the 15th of November.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I mean the codifiers whom we employed here several years ago.

Mr. SHERLEY. Oh, they have been working on all of the laws some six or eight years, perhaps nine.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Now, then, is it contemplated that we shall inside of fifty working days, together with all the other work that we have to do, go over this work and see whether it is right or not, which these able lawyers—codifiers—have been doing for nine years?

Mr. SHERLEY. No, sir.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Where do you draw the line? How do you divide?

Mr. SHERLEY. I divide on the difference of the work they had before them and the work that is proposed to be brought before Congress. The gentleman knows there is very much more detail work necessary in committee than on the floor of the House.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. But we have to see whether it is done right or not, and whether the codifiers have done right or not. How long will it take us to do that, in the judgment of the gentleman?

Mr. SHERLEY. I presume the House ought to be able to pass this bill properly in the course of a week or ten days' consideration.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Working how many hours a day?

Mr. SHERLEY. Oh, I have not gone into the detail of it. It perhaps may depend on how much objection is made without basis to the report of the committee.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I desire to say to the gentleman that I do not object to the revision or a revision, but I do object to doing a thing which is not imperative, but which bars things that are imperative that we should do.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the attention of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] for a minute or two. Every bill has to be read in its entirety once, does it not?

Mr. PAYNE. It does unless the House, as it frequently does, by unanimous consent, dispenses with it. Any Member can compel the entire reading of it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. This proposition of the gentleman that this bill be unfinished business, to be taken up when the House feels like it and knocked out on a question of consideration, opens up the scheme to have one roll call here every day from now to the end of this short session, does it not?

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, no.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If anybody wants a roll call on that question of consideration he can get it, can he not?

Mr. PAYNE. Well, I think he might meet with some difficulties.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How long, on an average, does it take to call the roll?

Mr. PAYNE. I desire to say to the gentleman that on any proposition here the House can have a roll call if one-fifth of the Members present are in favor of it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes; that is true; but how long does it take to call the roll?

Mr. PAYNE. About half an hour.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How many hours make a working day of Congress?

Mr. PAYNE. Well, from one to five hours—call it five hours a day.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. You are providing, then, for roll calls to cover five days out of the fifty days that Congress can work, and I want to ask the gentleman another question. Suppose we enter on this scheme of considering this bill and get half through with it in this Congress, or two-thirds through with it, then that work is absolutely lost, and it will be unless we get entirely through with it.

Mr. PAYNE. Hardly, because a large number of the Members have been reelected, and the educational process will be going on, and when we meet here next Congress most of the Members will know all about the bill. It is a matter of education.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. This Congress, with all of its works, dies on the 4th of March.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, the bill has to be reintroduced in the next Congress, but then we will have the educational progress, the benefit of the education of the Members. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] and myself know something about the bill.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of the next Congress here is what will happen: The House will be organized on the first Monday in December. The President will send in his message. The Speaker will not announce his committees until the day before Congress adjourns for the holidays. There are about three weeks of time when nothing is ever done here except to make jimcrack speeches.

If this bill is brought in on the first day of next session then you will have three entire weeks that can be devoted to it, day and night if you want to, and thereby conserve time when it may be important to economize time.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the gentleman will yield to a suggestion.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Certainly.

Mr. SHERLEY. There are two reasons why the gentleman's proposition will not hold. One is that this committee ceases with the life of this Congress, and this work has been done by it, and there will have to be a new committee. The second proposition is, if there is a new committee it is hoped they will be able to work during the recess and use the time the gentleman speaks of between the meeting of Congress and the first of the year to report the other sections relating to the substantive law.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I take it the Speaker will reappoint the present Members, unless he wants to promote some of them. The House can do anything, so it is said, although I never saw it doing anything it wanted to without the consent of the Speaker; but if it can do anything, as the gentleman from New York insists, then by unanimous consent, on the first or second day of next session, we can take the report of this committee—there is not any law requiring a report from any committee here—and begin the discussion of it at the beginning of the next session and get through with it in an orderly way. I am as much in favor of revising the laws as anybody, but I want to see a thing so important done in decency and in order.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, just a word in answer to these queries. I will state to the gentleman that the work of the Revision Committee of 1874 was very much more extensive than that which is proposed in this bill, and that it was accomplished almost entirely without any interruption of the regular business of the House. It was found that the committee had reported little or no new law; that it was almost entirely the codification of existing law, and the bill was considered almost, if not entirely, at night sessions. Not a single hour that would have been devoted to appropriation bills was occupied, not a single hour of any other necessary legislation was interfered with by the consideration of that bill.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Will the gentleman state whether this was done in the long or short session?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. That I am unable to say, but at that time that committee attempted to accomplish a revision of the entire laws of the United States, involving several thousand sections, while the present bill covers less than four hundred. Now a word with regard to the reason why this bill is presented in this form—why it is confined to the penal code alone. It was because in the sense of this committee any attempt to put before this Congress, in one bill, 9,000 sections of law would make it utterly impossible for it, without interruption of existing business, to consider it as such legislation ought to be considered. Another important consideration was that the criminal law of the United States as well as the criminal law of every State is a separate and distinct part of the general law—that it is a part of the law which is capable of entire separation from the general body of the law. When the Commission whose term has just expired was first appointed in 1897, it was the purpose of Congress then only to revise and codify the criminal law and the original scope of the resolution under which that Commission reported was a resolution authorizing them to revise and codify the criminal law alone, and this portion of the work of the Commission was first completed and first referred to this committee. The criminal laws of this country are in a deplorable condition. They exist, scattered throughout numbers of our Statutes at Large, a part of general appropriation and other bills, without any index or any indication of their existence, and are accessible only to the members of the legal profession. We have here endeavored to present in an easily comprehended form, under appropriate titles and in logical sequence, all of the criminal laws of the country. The total number of sections involved in this bill is, I think, not more than 345. Of these 345 sections perhaps not 25 of them involve any consideration at all of any new law. They consist simply in bringing together statutes and parts of statutes and eliminating obsolete laws and laws that have been declared to be unconstitutional, and in bringing together in concrete form the existing laws of the country, and in my judgment very little of the time of this House will be occupied in considering most of the sections. I want to say that a careful study of the progress of the committee of 1874 shows this: That when the House recognized that the laws recommended were simply revised, that there was no new law recommended, and that the bill presented was limited to codification, the bill was not even read in its entirety. Many of the sections of the law were really passed by titles, upon the statement of the committee that there was no new law and changes in section under consideration. Therefore, in my judgment, if this House were to take up this bill in the daytime it would occupy not more than two or three days at the utmost, and if it were to adopt the method pursued by the committee of 1874, and give us night sessions for its consideration, we would not occupy one hour of the time of Congress necessary for other business.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Does this revision which it is proposed to bring in here change the laws in any essential, or is it simply a codification?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. It is almost entirely a codification. In a few respects, which will be found to appear in italics or inclosed by brackets, there is some new law recommended or some omissions in existing law. The sections of new law proposed, however, the committee did not think it right for them to recommend without a report of the proper committee of the House thereon, and it was introduced in a certain specific bill at the last term of Congress and was referred to the Judiciary Committee of this House and came back with a favorable report and was referred to this committee.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does this bill undertake to change the nature of the penalty for various crimes?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Yes; I was about to say that.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does it change misdemeanors to felonies and felonies to misdemeanors?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I will say in answer to that that it adopts a general provision which has been adopted by thirty-five States of the Union. In every State, I think, upon which any recent penal legislation has been had this provision makes a general classification between misdemeanors and felonies—that is, instead of classifying or denouncing a particular offense as a misdemeanor and another as a felony, they adopt a general classification which divides them according to their magnitude as measured by their punishment.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Where the committee's report changes the penalties for offenses it makes a misdemeanor out of an act that has been a felony, or vice versa. Does not the gentleman think that the Members of the House might want to express an opinion more or less elaborately on those important changes?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I think so.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. And that it might precipitate considerable debate on that proposed change?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I think that, but I think it all could be done at this session if we all felt as deeply impressed with its great importance as this committee, after its long and arduous labors, feels, and with the great importance of getting this legislation consummated.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOON] has expired. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY] has ten minutes remaining.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I shall not use my time.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I would like two or three minutes.

Mr. SHERLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND] three minutes.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I believe the subject-matter of this legislation is too important, its changes too many and too radical, to make it advisable to consider it in this session of Congress. One of two things would happen—either the Congress would take for granted what, first, the commission and then the committee has done, or all of the time practically of the Congress would be taken in the consideration of this report. Now, a portion of this code has been before the Judiciary Committee two or three or four or five times, withdrawn and presented again, amended, brought forward at another time, and it has gone through the processes of amendment and change and modification and rearrangement and rewriting and reclassification time and time almost without number. Nobody can know what is in it, nobody can know what it will do, nobody can know what the changes are, except upon the most careful consideration, and such consideration can not be given to it at this session.

The question was taken on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is in doubt.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 143, noes 35.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Speaker, is that a quorum?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Then I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman makes the point of order that a quorum is not present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and four Members are present; a quorum is present.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. PRINCE. A point of order. Is it not a little too late to call for the yeas and nays?

The SPEAKER. No; it seems to the Chair that the demand is in time.

Mr. PRINCE. I think the vote had been announced.

The SPEAKER. The vote had been announced, but the point was made that a quorum was not present. The Chair ascertained the presence of a quorum. The Chair thinks the demand was in time.

The question was taken on ordering the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. Twenty-three gentlemen have arisen; not a sufficient number; the yeas and nays are refused; and two-thirds having voted in the affirmative, the rules are suspended and the resolution is agreed to.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Sundry messages, in writing, from the President of the United States were communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. LATTA, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had approved and signed joint resolution and bill of the following titles:

On December 18, 1906:

H. J. Res. 203. Joint resolution to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives their respective salaries for the month of December, 1906, on the 20th day of said month.

On December 19, 1906:

H. R. 22584. An act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 6885. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Anderson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 6723. An act granting an increase of pension to Agusta P. Morgan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 6833. An act granting an increase of pension to Bettie May Vose—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 6558. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel A. Pearce—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 6514. An act granting an increase of pension to Alfred A. Stocker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 6505. An act granting an increase of pension to Theodore M. Benton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 5693. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret L. Houlihan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 5041. An act granting an increase of pension to George A. Tucker—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 4909. An act granting an increase of pension to Louis Sidel—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1240. An act granting an increase of pension to Dana W. Hartshorn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4389. An act granting an increase of pension to Florence B. Plato—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN ANNIVERSARY MEDAL.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and, with accompanying papers, ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report by the Secretary of State concerning the presentation to the French Government of the impression on gold of the medal which, in pursuance of the act approved April 27, 1904, was struck to commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

RAILROAD BETWEEN RIO PIEDRAS AND CAGUAS, P. R.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs, and, with accompanying papers, ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Referring to section 32 of the act approved April 12, 1900, entitled "An act temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith an ordinance enacted by the executive council of Porto Rico on August 1, 1906, granting to J. G. White & Co. (Incorporated) the right to build and operate a line of railway between the towns of Rio Piedras and Caguas, in the island of Porto Rico.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

ANNUAL REPORT OF DIRECTORS OF PANAMA RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and, with accompanying papers, ordered to be printed.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, the fifty-seventh annual report of the board of directors of the Panama Railroad Company for the year ending June 30, 1906.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

ANNUAL REPORT OF ISTHMIAN CANAL COMMISSION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and, with accompanying papers, ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith the annual report of the Isthmian Canal Commission for the year ending December 1, 1906.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 20, 1906.

ELECTRIC STREET RAILWAY IN PONCE, P. R.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs, and, with accompanying papers, ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Referring to section 32 of the act approved April 12, 1900, entitled "An act temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith an ordinance enacted by the executive council of Porto Rico on August 13, 1906, amending a franchise granting to W. S. H. Lothrop, his heirs, successors, and assigns the right to construct and operate an electric street railway in certain streets in the city of Ponce and between the city of Ponce and the playa thereof.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 7, 1907.

MAIL FRAUD ORDERS.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 16548) providing for a judicial review of orders excluding persons from the use of United States mail facilities.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman calls up for consideration the following House bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 16548) to provide for a judicial review of orders excluding persons from the use of United States mail facilities.

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) the Postmaster-General shall cause to be kept a record of such orders as may be made in the Post-Office Department whereby any citizen of the United States (or any firm or corporation organized under the laws thereof or under the laws of any of the States, Territories, or possessions thereof) shall or may be deprived of or excluded from the right or privilege of receiving letters, money orders, or other mail matter through or by means of the United States mail, and said record shall be designated "Fraud-order record," and shall be so kept as to show the name of each person, firm, or corporation against whom such an order shall be made, as well as the date and the nature and extent of such order, and the same shall be a public record of the United States.

(b) And any person, upon written application therefor, shall be entitled to a copy thereof, duly certified as correct by direction of the Postmaster-General, upon payment of a fee of $1 for copying the same.

(c) And a copy of any such order shall be served by delivery of a certified copy thereof by the United States marshal (within and for the district wherein he shall have been appointed) to the person, firm, or corporation against whom the same shall be directed in the district wherein said person, firm, or corporation shall have a place of residence or of business, or its chief office, as soon as such service can reasonably be made.

(d) In all cases where any person whose right to the use of any mail facilities shall be affected by said order has, at the date thereof, a residence or place of business within any part of the United States or its territories or possessions, said order shall not become operative or put into execution (except to the extent of holding undelivered all mail directed to said party at the delivery office thereof) until fifteen days after the service thereof, or fifteen days after its date if service thereof can not be made as aforesaid.

(e) Any such citizen, firm, or corporation aforesaid whose said right or privilege to the use of the United States mail service is limited or denied by any such order made in the Post-Office Department of the United States may apply to the circuit court of the United States, or to any judge thereof in vacation (within the district of residence of any such applicant and within the period now allowed by law for the review of judgments of said court upon writ of error or appeal), and in such application shall pray a review of the matters of law and fact involved in the issue of such order; and the said court or judge shall hear and determine said application summarily, and if it is found by said court or judge that any such order has been made to the effect aforesaid, whereby said applicant has been deprived or limited in the use or enjoyment of any such right or privilege aforesaid, in or to the use of the United States mail service, the said court or judge shall grant to said applicant a writ of certiorari to the Postmaster-General, directing him to return, or cause to be returned, into said circuit court the record of said order affecting said applicant, together with so much of the original papers and other evidence relating thereto as, in his discretion, may be compatible with the public interest and with the proper discipline and conduct of the Post-Office Department or of any Executive Department of the United States Government; and said writ shall be returnable within ten days from the date thereof, unless longer time (not to exceed thirty days) be granted by said court or judge, upon due application therefor, and said writ shall be served upon the Postmaster-General in such manner as the said court or judge thereof may direct, best calculated to give prompt and full notice thereof, and due return of such writ shall be made according to its terms; and thereupon within the time mentioned in said writ and within thirty days of the date thereof the Postmaster-General shall cause to be returned into said circuit court the said record and such of the papers and evidence in said matter as he shall deem compatible with the public interest as aforesaid, and thereupon said matter of the justice and correctness, both as to the law and the facts of said order of the Postmaster-General to which said application relates, shall be reviewed summarily and as promptly as may be practicable for the fair trial thereof anew, by said circuit court, as a civil action at law, with all the rights to either party incident thereto; said cause shall be entitled "The United States v. (names of the parties mentioned in said order of the Postmaster-General);" and such records and evidence as may have been returned into said court under said writ of certiorari shall be received in evidence in said court on behalf of either party at the hearing of said matter, so far as the same may be competent and relevant to the issues therein, as well as any other evidence which the United States or the defendant may submit at the trial of said cause and which may be competent and relevant according to the usages and practice of said court in the trial of actions at law; and the proceedings for the further hearing of the said matter of said order and the review of any judgment thereon shall be in conformity with the practice and proceedings provided by law for the review of records, verdicts, and judgments in said court in actions at law and in conformity with the ordinary rules and practice of the said circuit court of the United States (so far as the same may be applicable and in harmony with the terms of this law); and in such particulars of practice and procedure as may not be expressly defined or indicated by this act the said circuit court wherein said cause may be pending shall prescribe and regulate, by general rules, the mode and method of procedure for the hearing and trial of such causes, and any appellate court into which said cause may be removable as aforesaid may, by like general rules, prescribe the mode and method of procedure therein for review in due course.

(f) But no order for a writ of certiorari as herein provided shall be made by said court, or judge thereof, unless the applicant, or some one for him, shall file in said court a bond to the United States in the sum of at least $500 (and in the discretion of said court or judge a larger sum, not to exceed $10,000), with good and sufficient surety (to be approved by said court or judge), conditioned to pay all costs to accrue in said cause and any and all damages occasioned meanwhile to any person (who may be defrauded, injured, or damaged by reason of the matters and things charged in said order, or to which the said order of the Postmaster-General refers), in the event the said order of the Postmaster-General shall be confirmed or adjudged valid by the final judgment in said cause; and any person aggrieved by any breach of any of the conditions of said bond may maintain an action at law against the obligors in said bond for the amount of any such damages, in any court of the United States having competent jurisdiction of such demand, in like manner as in other suits upon penal bonds given in judicial proceedings in courts of the United States; and if upon the filing of an application for review, as aforesaid, in the circuit court of the United States a bond be filed by said applicant therein in the sum of at least $500, with surety approved by any judge of a court of the United States (or by any clerk of such court in vacation), conditioned as hereinbefore provided, the said order affecting the use of the United States mails by said applicant shall be stayed until the further order of said court (except as to the detention of mail in the delivery office, as aforesaid); and said court may furthermore, in its discretion, make such orders as may be just for the care, custody, and disposition of all mail affected by said order of the Postmaster-General pending said cause and until the final determination thereof.

(g) And in case two or more applications should be made to review the same order of the Postmaster-General directed at two or more persons, the first application filed by either of said persons shall alone be entitled to be first granted, heard, and determined, upon the proper facts appearing, and any other application for such writ shall be postponed and continued until the determination of any and all prior applications praying a review of the same order.

(h) And the issue to be tried and submitted, as aforesaid, upon such writ of certiorari shall be whether or not the defendant or defendants in the application for said writ are guilty of the charge upon which the said order of the Postmaster-General under review is based, or whether or not the facts exist to warrant the said order of the Postmaster-General; and the court wherein said matter is pending shall distinctly express in writing the issue to be determined, according to the facts of the particular case, before the trial thereof is begun.

SEC. 2. That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, the bill now before the House is a bill to authorize a judicial review of questions of law and fact involved in fraud-order cases under the practice now in vogue in the Post-Office Department of the Government. The present law provides that whenever there is evidence satisfying the mind of the Postmaster-General that any person, corporation, or association is using the mails to promote lotteries or for other criminal purposes or for the purpose of obtaining money or property by means of false and fraudulent representations and promises, he may deny such person, corporation, or association the use of the mails absolutely. The statute is peculiar in its language. It does not provide that when any person may be guilty of certain misconduct he shall be denied the use of the mails, but whenever evidence satisfying the mind of the Postmaster-General of his guilt has been submitted, that office has power to issue a fraud order withholding from that person the privilege of the mails. The question is not the guilt or innocence of the suspected person, but the belief of the Postmaster-General upon that subject. The statute vests an unqualified discretion in the Postmaster-General and does not provide for any investigation in which the adverse party may have a part. It does not require that the person who may be affected by the proposed fraud order shall be notified or be given an opportunity to appear before the Postmaster-General or anywhere else and show cause why the fraud order should not be issued; but it vests absolutely and unqualifiedly in the discretion of the Postmaster-General, whenever evidence is submitted to him satisfying his mind that any person is abusing the privilege of the mails, the power to issue a fraud order and absolutely deny that person the right of the mails. That discretion is not, properly speaking, an administrative discretion. Everyone familiar with government and with administrative duties must know that in the course of administration discretion, and often a final discretion, must be vested in a Department or a bureau officer.

Such, for instance, is the case in connection with the administration of the land laws. Where a homesteader applies for a patent under the land law, some one must decide, and decide finally, whether he has complied with the law and is entitled to a patent for the land he claims. That duty is in the direct course of the administration of the law, and it is finally and properly vested in administrative officers. In the administration of the pension laws it is necessary to determine whether the applicant for a pension has made the proof that the law requires, whether his status is such that the law will authorize the granting to him of a pension. The duty of settling these questions is an essential part of the administration of the law and logically belongs to the administrative officers. The immigration law likewise devolves upon the immigration officers the duty of deciding whether an applicant who applies at one of our ports for admission to the United States has complied with the law upon the subject, and the courts have universally held that when Congress has authorized Department officers to decide such questions, although they partake of the nature of a judicial power, the decision of the officer upon all questions of fact is final. Those questions are classed among administrative powers as a matter of necessity, for if they had to be determined in the courts the delay would greatly embarrass the proper administration of the great activities of the Government.

Mr. KEIFER. I do not want to interrupt the gentleman, but I understood him to say that this discretion was made final with these officers.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is.

Mr. KEIFER. Absolutely not in the case of the Secretary of the Interior in issuing a patent to a homesteader, for there is a decided case where the Supreme Court compelled a Secretary of the Interior to issue and deliver a patent that he had once concluded the man was not entitled to.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. When I said that the discretion vested in administrative officers in these cases was final, I meant in relation, of course, to questions of fact. The Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly held that where an administrative discretion is vested in a department or a bureau officer, unless there is express provision for appeal to the courts, the courts have no power to review questions of fact; but the courts have always had and always insisted upon the power to inquire into jurisdictional propositions, questions of law involved in the action of the department or bureau officer.

Now, the power to issue fraud orders given to the Postmaster-General under the statutes is not an administrative power in the strict sense. It is not involved, necessarily, in the administration of the postal service of the country. It is collateral, it is incidental, it partakes of the nature of a police power for the regulation of the morals of the people of the country. It is not directly involved in the administration of the postal laws. The object of the fraud-order law is to prevent evil-minded people from imposing upon credulous members of society and obtaining from them money and property by means of false promises and pretenses, a function that in every other feature of our system of government belongs to the judicial department. It is essentially a judicial function to investigate frauds and crimes and to administer punishment with a view of promoting morals and protecting the gullible people against the arts and machinations of evil doers. But the courts have given the fraud-order power the same character as a purely administrative discretion. In numerous decisions it has been held that when the Postmaster-General issues a fraud order it is final and conclusive in so far as all questions of fact are involved. The courts do hold, and of course properly hold, that a question of jurisdiction may be inquired into. That is a principle familiar to every lawyer in the House. That question is always open to inquiry and investigation by the courts. The only question that can be inquired into by the courts in fraud-order cases is whether the transaction upon which the fraud order is based comes within the purview of the statutes.

Mr. DALZELL. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Certainly.

Mr. DALZELL. I ask for information. Has this bill been submitted to the Post-Office Department?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I do not know; I presume it has. The Post-Office Department is familiar with its provisions.

Mr. CLAYTON. May I answer the gentleman from Pennsylvania? The Post-Office Department is fully advised of this bill and its provisions. The Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department appeared before the Committee on the Judiciary in its hearings and made an argument against the bill.

Mr. DALZELL. Have we any expression of opinion from the Post-Office Department upon the provisions of the bill?

Mr. CLAYTON. None other than that the official Attorney-General of the Post-Office Department opposed the bill.

Mr. DALZELL. I am in entire sympathy with the object of the bill, but I would like to ask the gentleman what was the objection urged by the Post-Office Department to this particular bill? Was it to the bill itself or to the object of the bill?

Mr. CLAYTON. In substance, I may say, it was that it would greatly impair the power of the Postmaster-General and very much militate against the usefulness of the power now exercised by the Postmaster-General.

Mr. DALZELL. The Department is not in harmony with the purpose intended to be accomplished by the bill?

Mr. CLAYTON. I can not say that, except that this particular Assistant Attorney-General connected with this branch of the service was opposed to it.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, in the recent report of the Postmaster-General substantially the same argument made by the Assistant Attorney-General before the Committee on the Judiciary against the bill is incorporated and submitted to the country as the report of the Postmaster-General. I intend to discuss some of the criticisms made by the Post-Office Department during the course of my remarks.

Mr. PERKINS. If the gentleman from Indiana will allow me, I would like to answer the gentleman from Pennsylvania by saying that the Department now exercises a very arbitrary power. Gentlemen will agree with me that no one has ever been found who was willing to yield an arbitrary power which once he has exercised. Of course, they say that the exercise of this power is in furtherance of the interests of the Government.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The law as it stands provides for no notice to the person to be affected by the order. It affords him no opportunity to appear and show cause, if he is able to do so, why the order should not be issued against him. It is the custom of the Department, however, purely as a matter of grace, to notify, as a rule, not always, but as a rule, the person suspected to appear and show cause why he should not be denied the privileges of the mail. The notice usually contains a succinct statement of the reasons why the Postmaster-General is about to issue the fraud order. The "suspect" may then appear either in person or by counsel and submit his defense. There is no evidence introduced on the part of the Government. Information comes to the Postmaster-General through the channels of the inspection service, through post-office inspectors, of whom there are three or four hundred traveling about the country at all times investigating general conditions and particularly the character of business of men who make extended use of the mails.

When a complaint is made to the Post-Office Department that some individual or institution is abusing the privileges of the mail, the matter is referred to an inspector for investigation. The inspector conducts a secret investigation; he interviews people supposed to have knowledge and gets information from whatever source he can, incorporating that information into a report, which he forwards to the Postmaster-General. The report is referred to the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department, who investigates the questions of law and the facts contained in the confidential report of the inspectors and makes up his mind whether a fraud order ought to be issued or not. Having decided the case against the accused, he notifies him to appear and disprove, if possible, the charges lodged against him in the Department. He is not permitted to see the report of the post-office inspector, he is not permitted to know who gave information against him or the character of the information, but he is accorded the high privilege of disproving, as far as he is able in the dark, certain general charges without any specifications as to what they may be.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will.

Mr. MANN. I presume the gentleman's statement is made after an investigation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is.

Mr. MANN. It is not exactly my own idea of what takes place, and I would like to ask the gentleman what is the character of evidence presented to the Post-Office Department. Is it what the gentleman in his bill calls "legal and competent evidence?"

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No; oh, no. That is the crux of the whole question.

Mr. MANN. So that I understand, if the gentleman's bill becomes a law, all of the evidence which is collected by the inspectors in the way of letters and other matters from people who have been swindled would be of no avail before the court.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That depends. The court would investigate the questions of law and fact according to established procedure and I presume the court would admit only competent evidence. The court would admit only evidence that had behind it the sanction of an oath. The court would hear witnesses and give an opportunity for cross-examination. The court would not permit hearsay evidence. The court would conduct the examination in the open, so that witnesses who saw fit to come and give testimony would carry the responsibility that witnesses in controversies between citizens usually carry in courts of justice.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman pardon another question along that line?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will.

Mr. MANN. Suppose the concern that wants to live by its wits and not by its wisdom establishes itself in Portland, Me., and proceeds to advertise very extensively in California and to swindle the people of California. Under the existing law the Post-Office Department, through the aid of the mails and the receipt of letters from people who have been swindled, considers that sufficient evidence to debar the Portland, Me., concern from the use of the mails. Under the gentleman's bill would it be necessary in order to sustain the contention of the Government to bring all these witnesses, or more or less witnesses, from California to Portland, Me., or to Washington, while the concern itself would have no such expense and would have no trouble?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No, indeed.

Mr. MANN. How does the gentleman reconcile the statement?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I have in my mind an order in which I hope to discuss the question, and I will get to the provisions of the bill later on.

Mr. MANN. I do not wish to interrupt the gentleman.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will say just now that this bill authorizes the Postmaster-General to continue in the future just as he has proceeded in the past. It provides that fraud orders shall not be final, however, until fifteen days after he has decided to issue them, and in that time any person who feels that he ought to have the questions of fact investigated in court, by giving a sufficient bond may go into court and have a trial of the case upon the law and the facts, a summary trial according to established procedure, and have the court determine whether he is guilty of such misconduct as to authorize the issuing of a fraud order against him. And in the meantime the gentleman will bear in mind, pending this, during these fifteen days, the Postmaster-General may order the mail impounded in the delivery office, and if fifteen days is not time enough to dispose of the case the appellant, the person who files the bill for review of the fraud order, may obtain a further postponement of the issue of the fraud order by filing a bond subject to the approval of the court, and the mail that accumulates is subject at all times to the disposition of the court. The law provides ample protection to the public.

Mr. MANN. It provides a bond of only $10,000. That would not go very far if people were swindled.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Certainly not. It provides a bond of $10,000, and in addition every safeguard that exists now. It provides a bond of $10,000 and provides for the impounding of the mail during the investigation, and that is all a fraud order would do. It brings additional safeguards for the protection of the public over and above those that exist under the law to-day.

Mr. MANN. I would not agree with the gentleman.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I regard this whole fraud-order business as an unusual proceeding. The law would never have found its way on the statute books were it not for the peculiar adaptability of the mails to the purposes of the criminal and the perpetrator of frauds. As the gentleman said, a citizen in Portland, Me., may reach citizens in California and obtain money from them by fraudulent schemes, possibly in small sums. It would be exceedingly difficult and a great hardship for them to go into the courts and sue for damages or be required to go to Portland or some other distant place to testify. That is the reason why the fraud-order law was enacted in the first place, and if its execution had been confined to institutions and practices that were essentially fraudulent, or were inherently bad and criminal, such as "green-goods" concerns, lotteries, fly-by-night institutions, get-rich-quick establishments, as was originally contemplated by Congress, there perhaps would be no complaint; but this law, this vast power vested in the Postmaster-General, has extended and ramified until it now reaches almost every class of business in the United States. It covers old, substantial, responsible establishments conducted by men of reputation and character. Their advertising matter is scrutinized and, if the virtues of wares sold the public are exaggerated, a fraud order is issued or the concern is compelled to submit to the humiliation of having the Assistant Attorney-General edit its advertising matter and make it conform to his standard of advertising ethics.

The Postmaster-General's report shows that during the two years ending the 30th of June last 630 fraud orders were issued, 71 more than were issued during any four years of the history of the Department.

Mr. OLMSTED. I would like to ask if the gentleman thinks that a postmaster, not the Postmaster-General, but a postmaster, should have authority on his own discretion to exclude from the mails a newspaper because it contains an advertisement which he thought, or claimed to think, was improper.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I do not think he ought to have that power, and I would be greatly surprised to learn that he did have it.

Mr. OLMSTED. I have learned this morning, through a case which came to my knowledge, that a postmaster excluded the whole issue of a county newspaper from the post-office because it contained the advertisement of a milling company offering to give a picture with every five sacks of flour. I would like to ask if that is an improper use of his powers or whether, if so, your bill would provide any remedy for such an act as that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No; not such a case as that. My bill simply deals with fraud orders, and I do not understand that postmasters over the country have power to issue such orders. There is no statute conferring such power upon them, and the instance mentioned by the gentleman is certainly a flagrant abuse of authority.

Mr. MANN. It is easy to make that remark, but the gentleman is making a remark about something he does not know.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, I would be surprised to know of such a law.

Mr. MANN. That is a better statement.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I say there is no——

Mr. MANN. There is a law on the subject passed by Congress.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Authorizing local postmasters to exclude mail?

Mr. STAFFORD. If the gentleman will permit an interruption, there is a law authorizing the Postmaster-General to determine what papers are entitled to the second-class privilege, and under departmental regulations the Postmaster-General refers the finding to determine whether a paper ought to be admitted at the second-class rates to the postmaster at the office of publication, and his report thereon is reviewed, with all the papers, by the Department officials.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is a different proposition. The law confers that power upon the Postmaster-General, not upon the local postmaster.

Mr. OLMSTED. In this case the paper was excluded by the local postmaster.

Mr. MANN. But evidently the law conferring the power upon the Postmaster-General does not mean the Postmaster-General personally examines things. The gentleman is well aware of that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. When such a question arises the local postmaster must submit it to the Postmaster-General or some one else who acts for him.

Mr. MANN. He does; but in the meantime he excludes the matter which he considers improper from the mails and reports. That was what was done in this case.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. When I said the law vested in the local postmaster no discretion to exclude mails, I think I was correct in the statement.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. If the gentleman will permit an interruption, I think the question propounded by the gentleman from Pennsylvania to the gentleman from Indiana is calling attention to something entirely irrelevant to the so-called "fraud-order law." In addition to the fraud-order law, there are laws regulating the admission to the mails of matter of the second class, and under its terms are rules and regulations prescribed lawfully by the Postmaster-General for the admission to the mails of matter of the second class. I think that this instance which the gentleman from Pennsylvania has cited is one which falls within that law and not within the so-called "fraud-order law." Very naturally, if a periodical, once having been granted the privilege of the second class, is so changed in its character as to preclude that admission, the postmaster would stop it until he has examined it.

Mr. OLMSTED. The character of the paper has not changed at all. It is a regular, reputable county newspaper which happened to contain a little innocent advertisement of a milling company in this particular issue.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. That is correct, because that particular issue was prohibited by the law.

Mr. OLMSTED. I do not think so in that case.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. That might be true; but you will find in the case you yourself cited that undoubtedly there was such specific violation or presumed violation on the part of the publisher of that particular periodical.

Mr. OLMSTED. That is what I wanted to inquire, whether the postmaster himself had the discretion to pass upon a particular article in a newspaper.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. He is guided by the terms of the regulations under the law admitting matter to the second class.

Mr. OLMSTED. Suppose he makes a mistake in applying that regulation. Here is a newspaper publishing a perfectly innocent advertisement, and the whole issue of that paper is excluded from its subscribers; is there any remedy?

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Undoubtedly; and I have had it occur at my home post-office, where the publisher is given the privilege to stamp out that prohibited advertisement, when the issue would go right into the mail.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Now, Mr. Speaker, I think I will have to——

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. I see that the interruption is irrelevant, but I did not want the colloquy to go unexplained. It does not pertain to the law to which the gentleman from Indiana is now addressing himself.

Mr. OLMSTED. I had not had opportunity of reading it, and I did not know whether it applied to such a case.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That case does not come within the fraud-order statutes, and my bill has reference solely to those statutes. Now, the question of the constitutionality of the statutes has been raised in a number of instances, and the courts have held them to be constitutional. Citizens have complained that rights and privileges of the mails were denied them without due process of law, but the Supreme Court of the United States in several cases has decided that the privilege of the mails is not a property right; that it is not a right of citizenship; that it is not a vested right within the meaning of the Constitution, but that it is a mere privilege conferred by the Federal Government, and Congress has authority to vest the control in the Postmaster-General that is carried by the statutes that are now in force.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Will my colleague submit to an interruption?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Certainly.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. In view of the statement which the gentleman has just made, does he intend by the phraseology of this bill, where he uses the word "right" in connection with "privilege of the mail," to change that authority of law and create a right to the use of the mail instead of a privilege, as the Supreme Court has held?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I do not have in mind exactly what I meant by the use of that particular word. It is doubtful if in a constitutional sense Congress can create vested rights. The fundamental rights of citizenship I think are perhaps beyond the power of Congress to enlarge or diminish.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. But I observe in different places in this bill, a copy of which I do not now have, that the gentleman has coupled with the expression "privilege of the mail" the word "right."

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. If I had a copy I could point it out to the gentleman.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The word "rights," I suppose, means the rights of citizens in a popular sense.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Then, as I understand the gentleman, it is not his purpose to enlarge that privilege to a right?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, I would not say that. In a way, yes; in a way, no. I think it ought to be. I think every citizen ought to have the right to use the mails as long as he complies with the law. It is the common right of all citizens of a common country, and I think it exists to-day, and that the Constitution ought to recognize it as a fundamental right of citizenship.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Will the gentleman permit me one word further? The gentleman will appreciate whether the use of the mail is a vested right and property right, or whether it is merely a privilege under the control of the existing laws, that it would make quite a difference in the interpretation of the so-called "fraud-order law."

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, it might.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Pardon me; I mean by that that the gentleman should have explained to the House, and should yet explain before concluding his statement, that the fraud-order law was inspired because the use of the mails is a privilege and not a right, and therefore the post-office, through its proper officials, are bound to that guardianship or supervision of the character of the mail itself, which is a privilege, rather than to leave it as between citizen and citizen.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Oh, no; I do not agree with the gentleman in that respect.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. The history of this law undoubtedly will bear out the suggestion which I have made, that the supervision or guardianship of the purity of the mail, its control over the fraudulent and vicious efforts on the part of vicious minds to defraud citizens, was what inspired the fraud-order law.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I understand that. Now, I have just explained that the law was held constitutional upon the theory that the right to the mails, speaking in a technical sense, is a privilege only on the part of the Government. The Post-Office Department has no guardianship over the mails except such as Congress confers. The whole subject is under the control of Congress, and the Post-Office Department is a department of the people, who contribute the money to administer it, and upon principles of equality of citizenship each citizen of the country, unless he has been declared to be a common outlaw, should have the same enjoyment of its benefits as every other citizen. If he has the right, we should call it the right. That is all that is meant by the phraseology in the bill under consideration.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. I think the bill ought to have a complete explanation in that respect, if the gentleman will permit me. If it is a right, and can be under the terms used in your bill, you make it a right instead of a privilege. Maybe in that you incur the danger that when you have established this right by terms of law and created this method of procedure, there may arise a question under that right in an action for damages against the Government on the part of some person who has been denied this right.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In the first place, the Government is responsible for no damages that may be done by the delinquency of an administrative officer.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. It may arise from the administrative officer being subject to an action of damage, perhaps.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is a matter of history that the liberty of the English-speaking people was never completely established until administrative officers were made responsible to citizens for an abuse of power in civil and sometimes in criminal affairs. The king can do no wrong, but his minions can. The purpose of the bill is plain. Its purpose, taken as a whole, is to confer upon citizens the right to go into court and have an investigation of the questions of law and of fact involved in the issuing of a fraud order.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Then would it not be better to leave out the word "right" and let it be "privilege," which the Supreme Court has decided it was?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I have no pride in the phraseology; I am no stickler for words; I am not a literary purist or anything of that sort. I simply want to accomplish by proper legislation a vital purpose, and I am no stickler for any particular phraseology.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. And the Supreme Court has recognized it does have the right to exercise the universal privilege.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. As I said to the gentleman a while ago, rights of citizenship and equality of citizenship include the right of the mails in the popular mind regardless of refinements made by the courts, but this bill is burdened with no complications respecting distinctions between "rights" and "privileges."

Mr. CLAYTON. If the gentleman will permit me to interrupt him, I will say this bill does not enlarge that right or privilege in any respect. It merely seeks to preserve or better secure that right or privilege to the citizen. It gives the citizen a remedy, whereas he has no remedy now because the courts have held—Judge McPherson has held—that the findings of the Postmaster-General as to the facts in a given case were conclusive; that the courts can not inquire into the facts as to whether the alleged sender of mail was guilty of any fraudulent transaction or not. The court is precluded from an inquiry into the facts. The facts can not be inquired into by anyone except the Postmaster-General.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is exclusively within his jurisdiction.

Now, I want to say a few words in regard to the evidence upon which a Postmaster-General acts in the issuing of fraud orders. I stated a moment ago that his action was based in the main upon confidential reports which were the result of secret investigations by post-office inspectors. They constitute the bulk of the evidence. The Assistant Attorney-General of the Post-Office Department is himself first convinced and then he notifies the person affected by the proposed action of the Department to appear and show cause, without allowing him to see the report or know what it contains. He is at once the prosecuting attorney, judge, and executioner, and the privilege of appearing before an officer who has already made up his mind to refute the evidence that he can know nothing about is one without any practical value.

The Supreme Court has held that the fraud-order power may be conferred upon the Postmaster-General because the right to the mail is a privilege and not a vested right, and that the proceeding is not criminal in its character. While this may be the correct constitutional theory, yet the party against whom a fraud order is issued is branded as a criminal and stigmatized as a perpetrator of fraud. It makes him an outlaw as far as one of the most important branches of the Government is concerned. The issuance of such an order covers all his mail and deprives him of the right to communicate with his friends, his wife, or his mother, or to receive any communication from them by means of the mails.

All of this is done upon confidential reports, the result of secret investigations based upon ex parte statements of persons whose motives can not be known, who may be responsible or who may be irresponsible, who may not be competent witnesses, and who are not sworn and do not carry the responsibilities of ordinary witnesses. Their names and identity are not disclosed, and their evidence does not contain one single safeguard against fraud or one single test of credibility. Such evidence would not be received in the humblest magistrate's court of the country in a case involving the investigation of the most inconsequential right of person or property.

The confidential nature of such reports and the statements they contain, including the names of persons giving information, is such that they are never made public or disclosed to the parties vitally affected by them. About a year ago this House adopted a resolution requesting the Postmaster-General to furnish it with the facts upon which a certain fraud order was issued and copies of the inspector's reports in the case, and that officer politely and respectfully returned the resolution to the House with the statement that it would not be compatible with the public interest to comply with the request.

The investigation and decision of fraud-order cases under the practice in the Department is necessarily made by the Assistant Attorney-General. During the two years ending June 30 last 660 fraud orders were issued and a number of cases investigated where the accused agreed to modify his advertising matter so that it would conform to the ideas of propriety of the Assistant Attorney-General, thereby obviating the issuing of an order excluding him from the mails. Over one case a day had to be examined and decided, and it would be out of the question for the Postmaster-General to give his personal attention to the examination and decision of these cases and attend to the other arduous and multifarious duties of his office. The Assistant Attorney-General devotes the bulk of his time to the fraud-order business. He refers complaints to post-office inspectors, examines reports, decides questions of law and fact, hears matter in defense, and practically has the decision of the ultimate question as to whether a fraud order shall be issued or not, although the work is done in the name of the Postmaster-General. It is a matter of common experience that men who represent the Government in hunting down and ferreting out fraud and in conducting prosecutions become imbued with an official prejudice to such an extent as to unfit them to deal justly between their own client and paymaster and one whose interests may be adverse. I do not say this in disparagement of this class of officials, but a man who has the zeal and enthusiasm necessary to make a success of the work in which he is engaged, unless he be exceptionally even tempered and well poised, is most apt to become inoculated with that official bias that will prevent his dealing justly with those whose interests he may have in charge.

The Assistant Attorney-General is a detective in a large sense, to hunt down frauds, and is the prosecutor to convict the perpetrators, and in the fraud-order practice he is the judge and jury to pass upon their guilt or innocence. In view of the vital questions that are involved directly and impliedly in the fraud-order practice, it is a most unsafe thing to intrust an officer of this kind with such unlimited power. This Government is said to be a Government of law and not of men. The personal and property rights of the citizens should not be vitally affected by any Department of Government, excepting in pursuance of law. In the execution of the fraud-order law much may depend upon the temperament and the ideals of the Assistant Attorney-General. One person occupying that position may have peculiarly high notions of business ethics and little or no patience with men who do not deal absolutely fairly with their fellows. On the other hand, another may have lax ideas respecting these matters and much sympathy for wrongdoers. Under a practice where the result must of necessity be largely colored by the temperament and sentiment of a departmental official, the vital concerns of the citizens ought not to be reposed.

I desire to impress upon the House, in addition, the dangerous character of the method of presenting proof on the part of the Government in fraud-order cases. The same zeal that I have referred to in connection with the Assistant Attorney-General characterizes the action of the post-office inspectors. There seems to be a belief or feeling on the part of these functionaries that unless they are able to discover official irregularities or individual delinquencies in connection with the mails their records as efficient officers will suffer. Their investigations are made secretly and contain, largely, interviews with citizens in various communities which are always private, and the names of the citizens who give information are to be kept inviolate.

How many men, prompted by feelings of envy or jealousy against a business rival, with the understanding that their names will not be disclosed under any circumstances, will be prompted to give information that may be largely colored by business jealousy or personal envy—information that as citizens carrying the responsibilities of a witness in public they would under no circumstances feel at liberty to give. Such testimony is a positive menace to the safety of person, reputation, and property under any system of administration. It is contrary to the commonest notions of justice and fair dealing. Due process of law, as is commonly understood in our system of government, means that process of law that is administered in the open, where the accused party may have a right to confront his accusers; where those who give testimony on either side must carry the solemn responsibilities of their conduct before the public.

I have no sympathy with or respect for the policy that affects the important rights of person, reputation, or property by means of confidential reports of secret emissaries of the law. Reports containing evidence respecting the rights of the citizen should always be made public. No consideration of delicacy or embarrassment should justify the Government in blasting the reputation and ruining the business of a citizen without giving him an opportunity to know exactly who has testified against him and to what he has testified. The reports of inspectors under any practice should be open to the person who may be affected by the fraud order. He should be allowed to know who have given information or testified against him, and citizens who are interviewed should understand that their names and statements would be open to inspection by the person against whom they testify or give information. This would have a most wholesome and salutary influence. Men would see that the statements that were written up by the post-office inspectors and credited to them were fair and just and absolutely true. There should be no inducement or opportunity for men to attempt to stab the business or reputation of rivals in the dark.

Even under the present law the investigation of fraud-order questions should be conducted in as open a manner as possible. Star-chamber procedure has no place in the administration of rights in this Government. It is contrary to the spirit of the age. The whole fraud-order practice in the Post-Office Department, however honest and pure the intentions and purposes of its administrators may be, is out of harmony with the principles of individual liberty, and it ought to be discontinued. There is no adequate excuse for it. It is claimed, I know, that if reports were made public and the names of men who give information were disclosed it would be difficult, if not impossible, for post-office inspectors to secure necessary information in this class of cases. I make the assertion that a citizen who will not give testimony except upon condition that his name be withheld from the public, and particularly from the individual against whom he testifies, as a rule is not worthy of credence. His testimony is to be suspected and should not be regarded as sufficient to deprive any citizen of any substantial right.

The Federal criminal code imposes penalties for almost every act that would justify the issuing of a fraud order. If post-office inspectors, in investigating crimes and frauds, would investigate them with a view of detecting the perpetrators and their reports should be immediately transmitted to the Department of Justice, where instructions could be sent to arrest the criminals, it would largely tend to stop the practice of debauching the mails. The Postmaster-General, in his recent report, claims that under the fraud-order practice lotteries and other criminal concerns have almost been driven out of existence. In my humble judgment, if there were no penalty excepting that of a fraud order, the country would be overrun with lotteries, "green-goods" institutions, and other criminal concerns to-day. The criminal laws have suppressed lotteries and "green-goods" dispensers. They have been the efficient power in purifying the mails and protecting them against the schemes and devices of evil doers.

In making these criticisms of the fraud-order practice, it is not my intention to reflect in any degree upon the Postmaster-General, the assistant attorney-general for the Post-Office Department, or of any other official. The result is the necessary and logical outcome of the arbitrary system of investigation authorized by the statutes. It is not the fault of the officers personally, but the fault of the system, and it is the system that I am complaining about and which I believe ought to be materially modified.

A number of years ago it was the practice in the administration of the pension laws to have special agents make secret examinations of pension claims with a view of detecting frauds, and thousands of veterans of the civil war were dropped from the pension rolls upon these confidential reports without notice, without having been given an opportunity to present their defense, and the sense of justice of the entire country was so aroused that Congress quickly passed a law providing that in all investigations of pension claims by special examiners the applicant should have notice before a single witness was examined, and allowed to be present and cross-examine the witnesses and be given an opportunity to submit testimony in his own behalf, and that he should have at all times access to the reports of the special examiners. Under the law now a veteran who is drawing a pension of only $6 a month can not be deprived of that token of his country's gratitude upon confidential reports of special agents. He can not be deprived of it except by notice with an opportunity to confront the witnesses who testify against him and with an opportunity to submit evidence on his own part, and the whole proceeding must be conducted publicly and in the open, while under the fraud-order practice the reputation of an individual may be blasted, his business destroyed, he may be branded as a perpetrator of crime and a common outlaw on confidential reports of secret emissaries, without the privilege of knowing what is contained in the reports or who has given information against him or what the character of that information may be.

Even the practice of giving notice to those to be affected by fraud orders and according them an opportunity of making a defense is a mere matter of favor on the part of the Postmaster-General prompted by his sense of justice and fair play. The law does not require it, and no citizen should be subjected to the humiliation of depending upon the favor of a Department officer for the right to disprove, if he has the power to do it, charges of crime and fraud that may have been made against him affecting his standing before the public and his right to the use of the mails. The privilege of making a defense ought to be embodied in the law. It ought to be the legal right of the citizen, and not a mere favor coming from the sense of fairness of a Department officer.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. And all the evidence is taken in the absence of the man to be affected?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Of course. He has no right of cross-examination; he can not know anything about it.

Mr. PERKINS. The gentleman said that as a result of such an order the person affected was branded as a criminal. Is it not also a necessary result of such an order that he is not only branded as a criminal, but that his business is destroyed?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Necessarily ruined. I thank the gentleman for the suggestion. It is one of the inseparable incidents, and his reputation is blasted forever, because no man may ever outlive the stigma of a fraud order.

Mr. PERKINS. He can not do business without the mails.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I was just going to inquire of the gentleman from Indiana whether it is also a fact that a fraud order is based upon a condition of facts involving criminal conduct on the part of the man to be affected, and, therefore, indirectly, the man is convicted of being a criminal without having been heard, under the method of practice that obtains in the Department?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes; convicted by the prosecuting attorney. The principle would be the same if a grand jury, with its secrecy and its confidences, should hear evidence and indict a citizen for a crime, and then he should be haled before the same grand jury to plead to the merits of the case, and they should notify him by the indictment of the general nature of the charge, and say to him, "The evidence on behalf of the State has already been introduced. It is confidential and secret, and will not be disclosed to you. You now have the high privilege of proving yourself innocent if you are able to do it." In fact, the situation is worse, because witnesses before a grand jury testify under the sanction of an oath, and are liable to prosecution for perjury. In some instances they may possibly be liable in the civil courts for damages for malicious prosecution. Yet a witness who is interviewed by a post-office inspector regarding the character and conduct of a citizen or his business carries with him absolutely no kind of responsibility in the criminal courts for perjury and no kind of responsibility for malicious prosecution, slander, defamation of character, or anything of that sort.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is probably correct as to what could be done under the law, but is the gentleman correct as to what is actually done under the law?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am correct when I state that the Post-Office Department always refuses to communicate to the person to be affected by a fraud order the information contained in the confidential reports of the inspectors. The person to be affected by the order, the person cited to show cause, is not allowed to see the report of the inspector. He is not allowed to know who gave testimony against him, or who informed the inspector respecting his methods of doing business.

Mr. MANN. Has the gentleman himself had any personal experience in connection with cases of this kind?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No; I never have.

Mr. MANN. Then, I will say to the gentleman that he is entirely mistaken as to the course of practice of the Post-Office Department.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I beg to differ from the gentleman.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that I have had personal experience with cases of this sort——

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman is still permitted to use the mails. [Laughter.]

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I will say to the gentleman that this experience has not been in any matter concerning which I was personally interested myself.

Mr. MANN. It is unnecessary for the gentleman to make that statement. My remark, of course, was simply intended to be humorous.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. But I will say to the gentleman that I have personal knowledge of the way these investigations are conducted, and I can say that the statement of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] is absolutely and unqualifiedly true.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman may make that statement; but I have had a number of these cases before me. I believe the city which I happen to represent in part swarms with these people, and I can say that the gentleman is entirely mistaken.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department, in his statement before the Committee on the Judiciary, admitted everything I have stated to the House in relation to that proposition.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman, I think, speaks correctly as to the rights that are assumed to be given before the Postmaster-General, but not as to the practice of the post-office inspectors themselves. I venture to say there is not a case where a fraud order has been issued where the post-office inspector has not repeated to the person against whom the order was issued the charges that were made against him and obtained from him his side of the case.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman is begging the question. That is not the proposition up for consideration at all. I stated that the citation contained a succinct and concise statement of the charges made. What I have been undertaking to demonstrate to the House is that the reports of the post-office inspectors, containing the interviews with various citizens, not under oath, responsible and irresponsible, competent and incompetent, are not submitted to the person to be affected by the order.

When you come to the question of right, the citizen has no right under the law, he has no right to be heard, he has no right to be notified. The law provides for no notice, and provides for giving him no opportunity at all to exonerate himself.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Does not the gentleman from Indiana feel that it is entirely fair that he should make a statement to the House of what the practice is in the Department?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am proceeding to do it.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. I think the gentleman is in error when he stops where he has now stopped, and leaves the impression that there is absolutely no hearing.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I did not intend to do that; I think I have said three times, at least, that the practice of the Department is, generally, but not always, to give notice, and that notice is the indictment, as you might say, a succinct statement of the reasons why the fraud order ought to issue, and he is given an opportunity to go before the assistant attorney-general and disprove the charges in entire ignorance of the evidence that was given against him.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. And a reasonable time in which to be heard.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I presume that is the rule, but that is purely a matter of grace and not a matter of right.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. I am asking about the practice. The gentleman from Illinois inquired as to the practice.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman from Illinois took issue as to the statement I made that the confidential reports of the post-office inspectors were not submitted to the party to be affected.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. I think it is proper that the gentleman should confine his arraignment to the law and not of the officials.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am not traducing the officials; I hope I shall not be so understood. I am discussing the law and the practice of the Post-Office Department in connection with the fraud-order power.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. The gentleman from Illinois made some statement about the practice of the Department. I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana if the practice of the Department in these matters is at all uniform?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is not, because cases are not all alike. The assistant attorney-general, when testifying before the Judiciary Committee, said in some cases they did not give any notice at all. He said that he practically determined when notice should be given and when notice should not be given. Perhaps there is a reason for it, because if notice were given in some instances and an opportunity given to be heard, some of these fly-by-night institutions that are here to-day and over in Chicago to-morrow and St. Louis in a week would escape the effect of the fraud order altogether, and in those cases it may be necessary to grant the order without notice or hearing.

Now, it is discretionary with the assistant attorney-general of the Post-Office Department whether any notice shall be given at all. He determines the question, and he may determine it justly.

In the report of the Postmaster-General of this year he says that there have been over thirty applications to courts of equity to enjoin the enforcement of fraud orders, and in every instance the courts refused relief except one, and that case is pending now, and he hoped to win that. He said it was a very significant circumstance that the courts have denied relief in all applications, showing that they had got the right man every time.

Now, I have in my mind one of the States of the Union where in the last twenty-five years there have been thirty lynchings, and I undertake to say that they got the right man in every instance—that is to say, they lynched the man that they set out to lynch. They made no mistakes in the victims. [Laughter.] When you consider the fact that the person against whom the fraud order is issued has no standing in court on questions of fact, that he can only have the court inquire into the question of jurisdiction, does it signify anything that thirty have appealed to the courts for relief, and the courts in every instance have decided that the attorney-general of the Post-Office Department has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, the court having no power to inquire into the facts? The judgment of a court is of no significance unless it is based on the merits of the case.

Mr. MANN. Who decided that—a district judge of the United States?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Judge McPherson.

Mr. MANN. Is it possible that with all the fraud orders that have been issued they have never been able to get a case in the upper court?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Why, there have been a number of cases in the upper courts.

Mr. MANN. What have the upper courts decided?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will read the syllabus in the case of Bates v. Payne (194 U. S., 106). There the court says, in relation to the administration of affairs, "Where the decision of questions of fact is committed by Congress to the judgment and discretion of the head of a Department, his decision thereon is conclusive." That is what the Supreme Court of the United States has decided.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman claim that the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the decision of the Postmaster-General on a question of fact as to a fraud order is conclusive upon the court.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Always, in every instance.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman claims that that is the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is the first gentleman whom I have met with yet who has read that decision in that way, and the gentleman's opinion is entitled to great weight, because I know no better constitutional lawyer, or other kind of a lawyer, in the House.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I thank the gentleman for that very high compliment, for I know the gentleman in handing out his compliments is always sincere. [Laughter.]

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. And just.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And just.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is always sincere when he is telling the truth, as he was just now. [Laughter.]

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. And he passes out so few that they are valuable when they do come.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I want now to quote from an opinion by the honorable Smith McPherson, a Federal district judge, in a fraud-order case.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman propose to have him overrule the Supreme Court of the United States or does he want to have the Supreme Court reenforced by the opinion of a district judge?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman a moment ago said that nobody had ever made the assertion I just made in respect to the decisions of the Supreme Court. I want to say that here is one other man who officially and judicially, after an exhaustive consideration of all the cases on the subject, reached that conclusion. Let me read it.

Mr. MANN. Of course if a decision of the Supreme Court is reenforced by the opinion of the district judge, that ought to settle it.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The district courts have to administer the law and to follow the precedents. Judge McPherson on the 19th day of July, 1905, rendered an opinion after reviewing the decisions of the Supreme Court upon that question. I desire to say that I have read, I suppose, twenty-five or thirty cases myself—fraud-order cases—probably every one that has been reported, and I have not yet found a decision where the principle was not either expressly and emphatically asserted or impliedly recognized that in relation to questions of fact the decision of the Postmaster-General was conclusive. When the question was up before Judge McPherson it was contended there, as is always contended, that in relation to questions of law the courts may review the decision of the Postmaster-General. I think that is generally settled. I read from what Judge McPherson held:

> The proposition conceded by all, that if the Postmaster-General committed an error of law this court should enjoin the enforcement of the fraud order, is made the basis of an attack thereon by complainant's counsel. It is urged that if the evidence on which the fraud order was issued was meager or lacking, then the Postmaster-General committed an error of law. There is no authority to sustain the contention in any of the reported cases. To sustain such a contention would be equivalent to a writ of error from this court to review the decisions of that officer on the ground that his findings are not supported by the evidence. But he did have evidence before him. That evidence may or may not have been legal evidence according to the standard of the text-books. It may have been hearsay; it may have been secondary; it may have been delivered by an incompetent witness; or it may have been such as the courts would receive. But whatever it was, it was evidence satisfactory to him.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> The Postmaster-General had, under the power with which he is clothed, the right to investigate the subject-matter. It was his right and duty to ascertain whether the methods of the bank were to further a scheme by the use of the mails to obtain money by fraudulent means. His findings of fact were that such practices were carried on. He had the power to act. He committed no error of law, and his findings of fact are not open to inquiry by the courts.

That opinion was printed by the Post-Office Department at public expense and is being sent out over the country as a public document, stating the law in fraud-order cases.

I say there is not a decision by a district judge, a circuit judge, a court of appeals, or a decision by the Supreme Court of the United States to the contrary. Every single decision is predicated upon that theory of the law. Courts do investigate facts to find out whether the given transaction comes within the statute. As to the Coyne case, cited in the report of the Postmaster-General, it is claimed that the courts have asserted their right to investigate questions of fact. The court investigated the questions of fact in that case simply to determine whether the transaction came within the law and therefore was within the jurisdiction of the Postmaster-General. That is as far as it had a right to go. If the case was covered by the fraud-order statute, the decision of the Postmaster-General as to the guilt or innocence of the person accused would not be examined.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman stated he was going to read the opinion of Judge McPherson, for whom, by the way, I have a great respect and who was a former Member of this body, to sustain the opinion of the Supreme Court, and I did not catch that part of the decision. Now, may I ask the gentleman whether the decision of the Supreme Court, in the volume which he has upon his desk, relates to a fraud-order case at all?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The volume contains two cases, the Coyne case, which involved a lottery, and the Payne case.

Mr. MANN. But the gentleman quoted from the syllabus, I suppose, of the Supreme Court case.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Was that case, in fact, a fraud order?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No.

Mr. MANN. Either of them?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That case involved the discretion of the Postmaster-General in relation to the classification of mails for purposes of postage. The Coyne case is a fraud-order case.

Mr. MANN. As to the rate of postage?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No; classification of mails.

Mr. MANN. Which means the rate of postage. Congress can confer upon an administrative department the determination of a fact which decides the rate of postage. Certainly the court would not be required to determine whether matter should be second, third, fourth, or first class. That would be silly.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The principle is as old as jurisprudence itself. Whenever a Department is vested with the authority to determine the facts, unless the law provides otherwise, the judgment or decision of the Department officer is final and conclusive, and there is no decision of any court of ordinary respectability in all this country to the contrary. It is a familiar principle. Every person who is familiar with the elementary principles of law and of the science of government knows that proposition to be a true one.

Mr. MANN. Of course gentlemen always say about an opponent with whom they do not agree that anybody who knows the elementary principles of law believes so and so. That is a little bit too old for the gentleman himself to use. Now, the fact is, as I understand it, the Post-Office Department itself never has claimed that these orders were not reviewable by the court, and that the court has never sustained any such claim.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. But the gentleman must be talking at random. There never has been a case before the court, but an assistant attorney-general, standing for the Government or the Post-Office Department, has not insisted that in relation to questions of fact it was not reviewable.

Mr. MANN. It is very strange, then, the Supreme Court never has decided that question.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Why, the Supreme Court has decided it repeatedly. In the Coyne case, which involved a fraud order, the Supreme Court justified its investigation into the facts to determine the question of jurisdiction. I have among my papers here two or three cases decided by the Supreme Court of the United States under the fraud-order statute, holding that the court could investigate questions of law only. There is one case where the fraud order was issued against a person who was administering what was called "absent mental treatment" for diseases, and the Post-Office Department issued a fraud order against him. The Supreme Court of the United States reversed the judgment of the Post-Office Department on the ground that a question of law was involved. It discussed all these questions in the opinion and held that the court had no power to review questions of fact where the proceeding was within the jurisdiction of the Postmaster-General. Now, I must insist on concluding——

Mr. MANN. We will give the gentleman all the time he wants. If necessary, I will get an hour and yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. I do not think the gentleman should object to the consideration of his measure or the questions which may be asked of him.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be allowed to continue until he concludes his remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Indiana be extended without limit to conclude his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, I am under additional obligation to the amiable and affable gentleman from the State of Illinois for the courtesy he induced the House to bestow upon me.

Mr. MANN. It is no compliment to the gentleman from Illinois; nobody could be otherwise with the gentleman from Indiana. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Now, I said at an earlier period in my remarks that the fraud-order power of the Post-Office Department had been carried beyond what was ever contemplated by Congress in the enactment of the original statutes. Everybody, I think, recognizes the propriety of the fraud-order statutes, if they were confined simply to institutions or concerns that were essentially criminal, that had no virtuous features or elements whatever, such as green-goods institutions and enterprises of that character. But they have been greatly extended. The present Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department has gone out and investigated the conduct of all kinds of business.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Let me ask the gentleman if it does not frequently occur in connection with competition between men in business that a man makes a complaint to the Post-Office Department and does it to get advantage of a competitor in the same business?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman and the House understand human nature and know how men may give secret information respecting methods of competitors in business when they are assured that their names shall never be made public. I do not know how many worthy institutions, having permanent habitations, institutions that are financially responsible, old establishments, have been compelled to come here to Washington and have the Assistant Postmaster-General blue pencil and edit their advertising matter. And he has established rather a high standard of advertising ethics. He scrutinizes advertisements and places limitations upon the old common-law right of a vendor to puff his wares, to exaggerate their virtues somewhat, and if a person goes beyond what he thinks to be a safe and virtuous limit, a fraud order comes forth. I have in mind a case in Missouri that got into the courts, where a citizen of Kansas City was engaged in the wholesale liquor business, and had been for fifteen years. He did quite an extensive business, as the evidence showed, amounting to perhaps $150,000 a year. He was financially responsible and was a reputable citizen. He sold bottled liquor through the mails—that is, his orders were received and the money transmitted through the mails. He guaranteed satisfaction with his goods. He gave a guaranty to the effect that if anyone, after testing the liquors they bought of him, were dissatisfied they might return the goods and receive their money back. He sold to thousands and thousands of customers and made good in every instance, but he advertised some whisky as being 9 years old and some as being 14 years old, when it was claimed they were not that old, and the Post-Office Department notified him to appear and show cause why a fraud order should not be issued against him for obtaining money by false promises and representations. He came down here and made his fight, but the order went, and he was put out of business.

Mr. MANN. Because he was selling raw alcohol for 14-year-old whisky. That man ought to have been put out of the business.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am glad to know the gentleman is familiar with that man's goods.

Mr. MANN. I am familiar with the practice of the liquor dealers. I know what they sell.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. If this law is right, I would like to ask the gentleman why he devoted so much of energy and enthusiasm to secure the enactment of the pure-food law in the last session of Congress? The fraud-order branch of the Post-Office Department can easily regulate the food question, and do it more quickly and more cheaply and more effectually than it can be done under the law that was enacted by Congress under the leadership of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. The applause that greets that statement shows how much ignorance still prevails in the House of Representatives. [Laughter.]

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield to a question? In the case the gentleman has just cited, was there any fraud committed?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I was proceeding to explain that case. It is a question.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. The gentleman will certainly admit that if there were fraud practiced in that case, it became the duty of the Postmaster-General, under this fraud-order law, to do just what he did do, and I can call the attention of my colleague to the suggestion of the limitation of his arraignment of the law, and he should not leave the impression that there has been, under the exercise of this discretion, a playing fast and loose on the part of the officials. If the law needs changing, change the law, but not because the Postmaster-General has done something that is fraudulent.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am not accusing the Postmaster-General of having done any wrong. If the gentleman will possess his soul for a few minutes, I will explain this case fully and show the result. The fraud order was enjoined by Judge Amidon, judge of the western district of Missouri, upon the ground that the case was not covered by the statute, and an appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals in the eighth circuit, where the judgment of the lower court was reversed and the Postmaster-General upheld. The circuit court of appeals held, in effect, that if Montgomery, Ward & Co., of Chicago, the great mail-order and catalogue house, should advertise a particular kind of goods as "all wool and a yard wide" and some citizen down in Alabama or somewhere else should buy the article under that advertisement and it proved to contain a little cotton, the Post-Office Department had the power, without giving any notice to Montgomery, Ward & Co., to issue a fraud order against that institution and put it out of business absolutely and forever as a mail-order house.

Now, I cite this case to illustrate the scope of the law and its dangerous character; how that discretion as vested in the Postmaster-General under the statute may become a menace to the liberty and the prosperity of the people of the country.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. But does not the gentleman's argument, arraigning it in the way that he has been arraigning the law, logically lead to the repeal of the entire law?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is a question that I have not given much thought to. I contend that the law ought to be modified.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. That is the suggestion I am making to the gentleman.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Let it apply to persons and institutions that have no permanent habitations. The courts of the country can apply remedies to crimes and frauds against men and concerns that have fixed habitations and financial responsibility.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Will the gentleman allow me just a minute? I want to ask the chairman of the Committee on the Post-Office a question. Will the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. OVERSTREET] be kind enough to say whether or not his attention has been called, in connection with the exercise of the discretion of the Post-Office Department as to the fraud-order law, of very grave and serious complaints of the abuse of that discretion?

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Why, undoubtedly every individual who has infringed upon the law and found himself before the Department has, of course, complained. That is the suggestion which I made to my colleague in charge of this measure, whether there was not much good in the provisions of the law in view of the credulity of the people in believing all that is seen in the press, and they are so easily and frequently led into transactions wherein they are defrauded, and because of the supervision of the Government over the mails this law was enacted. There are undoubtedly cases where the law was wrongly administered.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. And there have been very grave and very serious complaints about the exercise of this discretion in certain instances.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Oh, certainly; but I do not think those complaints should lead to the repeal of the law; and I called the attention of my colleague to the fact that his argument would logically lead to the repeal of the law. If there can be some modification which will eliminate these dangerous pitfalls, well and good; but I am afraid the Committee on the Judiciary, in exercising its jurisdiction and recommending this bill, is going to take away much of good in the existing law. But there will be many, many cases of fraud on individuals whose credulity allows them to believe any statement seen in advertisements, and for that reason I ask, in the very case he cited, if there was actual fraud committed would he defend that fraud? Why, if the Judiciary Committee, in its desire to meet these criticisms which the gentleman from Maine now calls my attention to, so broadens the law that it will afford pitfalls into which the people may fall, it had better in changes in a few ways safeguard this measure, because there is no measure that will escape criticism.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I want to say just one word. The committee in offering this bill does not undertake to repeal the fraud-order provisions of the existing law, but it does undertake to regulate and control its application and say that the men who are to be affected thereby shall have the right to be heard. Now, with reference to the case cited by my friend from Indiana, I will say that whether that be fraudulent or not, I know of no good reason why that party should not have had some chance to be heard before some good proper authority before the order is issued.

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. It looks to me that this institution has never been restricted in the slightest is ample proof that there was no injury done it.

Mr. DALZELL. I would like to ask the gentleman a question for information.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I first yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Is it not true that this bill does not deprive the Post-Office Department of the authority which it now exercises in issuing fraud orders?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is true.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. And it only gives the right to have the case reviewed by the court?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is the purpose of the bill.

Mr. DALZELL. Now will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DALZELL. As I understand it, the cause cited in the report of the committee itself, in The United States Bank against Gilson, in which the party went into court and applied for relief against a fraud order, the reason why he did not get relief was because the court said that the findings of the Postmaster-General were not open to inquiry by the court.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. DALZELL. Now, it is to get rid of that decision that this bill is intended, is it?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Oh, no. I do not think the Committee on the Judiciary reports bills of a general character to get rid of particular decisions.

Mr. DALZELL. Oh, no; not at all. I do not mean that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The object of the bill is this: Upon a question of such vital importance as that affecting the reputation and business of a citizen, and carrying imputations of fraud and crime, it is safer and better to open the courts and have those questions determined according to established judicial procedure, a procedure that is the result of generations and centuries of wisdom and experience. Every citizen of the land should be accorded the right to have his vital affairs determined in courts according to that kind of procedure. The courts are sanctuaries of liberty and bulwarks of safety.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I am with the gentleman. I just want to arrive at the reason——

Mr. MANN. Wait until you hear the other side.

Mr. DALZELL. I want to arrive at the reason why we should spread ourselves over seven pages, setting up a cumbersome method of procedure, when you can reach the result that you say you want to reach by providing that in all cases where a citizen is aggrieved by the decision of the Postmaster-General he shall have the right to relief in the courts.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes; after he is hanged he may be tried and condemned!

Mr. DALZELL. Not at all. Let him get out an injunction.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. After his business and reputation are ruined he can go into the courts, but what good will that do him?

Mr. DALZELL. Not at all. The courts are open to injunction in every case, just as they were in this case. The courts fail only because they do not have jurisdiction. Now, I want to know, why set up a cumbersome piece of machinery, such as is provided in this bill, when you can do the whole thing in a paragraph?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I beg to differ with the gentleman. I do not think it can be done in a paragraph and correct the evils that now exist in the fraud-order statute.

Now, I do not want my colleague [Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana] to get the impression that I am attacking the Postmaster-General, or the Assistant Attorney-General, or any officer of the Post-Office Department personally. I am discussing to this House the fraud-order law, how it has been administered, its scope, and what I conceive to be its arbitrary and dangerous character. It involves the most vital questions, of persons, of reputation, of property. The citizen is shut out of the courts, those institutions that lie at the very foundation of the safety of person and property. He is absolutely shut out and denied relief.

Mr. PAYNE. May I ask the gentleman a question, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. Does this bill cover the question of a lottery, for instance?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It covers all questions that come under the fraud-order business of the Post-Office Department.

Mr. PAYNE. If some neighboring nation should want to go into the lottery business at the expense of the people of the United States, and this bill should be passed, and they did their business through the United States mails, there would be no way to stop it until after a long litigation in the courts.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Oh, yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This bill is confined to citizens and institutions in the United States, and we have criminal laws. We have laws making the conducting of lotteries a crime.

Mr. PAYNE. We had all that before, and we had the Louisianna lottery. Then, after we got rid of that, we had all the law and all the machinery of the courts and everything of the kind, and we had the Habana lottery, and there was more fraud and injustice upon the people of the United States going on under those lotteries than this bill can prevent in fifty years.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Now, does the gentleman believe that it is good politics and that it is good government to vest in the chief of a bureau a collateral power to enforce police and criminal laws of the country without giving the accused person the right to a hearing, the right to cross-examine witnesses, the right to insist that the witnesses shall testify under oath, the right to insist that the witnesses shall be competent; that their testimony shall not be hearsay? Does the gentleman think that is good government?

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman thinks this, that in carrying the mails of the United States, where the Government carries the advertisements of a lottery company—I only speak of that as an example—the Government forms a sort of partnership with that kind of business, and we ought to guard very carefully against any copartnership of that kind and not aid in the promotion of lottery schemes and the swindling and stealing and robbery of the people's money by carrying those things through the mail. Now, if they can prevent that by preliminary hearing before an executive officer and give him the right to make a preliminary order to stop the sending of such stuff through the mails before thousands, and perhaps more than thousands, of the citizens of the United States have parted with their money upon these fraudulent schemes, and then give the party an opportunity to come into court and get his injunction and bring an action against the Postmaster-General or against the Government of the United States and let the courts say whether those things should be carried, before the final hearing, if it can be done in such a way as that, it seems to me that we are more apt to do justice than we are——

Mr. CRUMPACKER. If the gentleman will allow me, that is about what this bill provides for.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, no; the bill goes further than that, and if it did not he might accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania and instead of having all of this procedure that is laid out in the bill, let them go to the court and get a preliminary injunction enjoining the executive officer from carrying out the fraud order until the hearing is had in court.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania was that after the Postmaster-General has issued the fraud order and it has been made public, after the local postmaster has been wired to stop the mail and it is stamped as fraudulent and returned, sent out all over the country——

Mr. DALZELL. Oh, no; that is not the practice.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is the practice.

Mr. DALZELL. Oh, no; the report of the Judiciary Committee says that the Postmaster-General gives notice to the person under investigation and gives him an opportunity to appear in person. Now, the moment he gets the notice, if the law was changed properly, he could go to the proper court and ask for an injunction and have the matter heard before any damage was done.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That would practically repeal the law. If the accused were allowed to go into court in that way, the case might be pending there months perhaps, and during that time, as the Assistant Attorney-General says, one-half of the population of the United States might be defrauded.

Mr. DALZELL. No; it could be attended to in two or three days.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I would accept the proposition, but the Post-Office Department would under no circumstances accede to it. The Postmaster-General desires speedy action, and whenever he is convinced that fraud is being perpetrated he issues a fraud order now. Under the bill I propose he will give the notice and wire the local postmaster to hold up the mail until the question is finally settled.

Mr. PAYNE. What speedy action is left in the bill for the Postmaster-General?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. He can at any time order the mail impounded by the local postmaster, not to be delivered until the fraud order is determined. If the person comes into court and wins out the mail is subject to his order. It is not delivered to him until the matter is settled both as to the law and the facts.

Mr. PAYNE. In the meantime the people are sending in their money, and it is all tied up.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Only for fifteen days.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. If they send in money, it is held subject to the order of the court. The court in its discretion may appoint some one to receive the mail and notify the correspondents; he has the power to do it. The bill contains provisions to safeguard the correspondents and protect the people against fraud and imposition, and at the same time gives the citizen the right to have this investigation.

Mr. PAYNE. I understand under this bill that the Postmaster-General can do everything that he is now doing except to stamp the mail "fraudulent" and return it.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes; in a way.

Mr. PAYNE. Will the gentleman please explain what he means by "in a way?"

Mr. CRUMPACKER. He can stop the mail, and it is held up for fifteen days, and then, if no action is taken in the courts, the order is made final and the mail stamped "fraudulent" and sent back. If the accused applies to the court, the proceeding is to be summary and the mail is under the control of the court, and the issue of the fraud order may be further postponed on giving a satisfactory bond. Everybody is protected.

Mr. PAYNE. I do not see the use of changing the present law except to allow a party to go into court.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman will have an opportunity to express himself later. Now, I started to explain the Kansas City case, and my time is rapidly expiring.

Mr. PAYNE. I hope the gentleman will have unlimited time.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. But the gentleman's endurance is not unlimited. [Laughter.]

Mr. STAFFORD. Will not the effect of your bill be to actually check the practice of the Department with reference to fraud orders, because at present the Department is not required to obtain legal evidence? Under your bill a person aggrieved can go into court within fifteen days after the issuance of the order and give a bond for $500, upon which all proceedings will be stayed, and upon the trial of the case de novo nothing will be admissible except legal evidence. Will it not force the Post-Office Department, when they pass upon the issuance of the fraud order in the beginning to act upon only such evidence as would be competent in a court of law?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Oh, no; not at all. The Post-Office Department will proceed in the same manner that it conducts investigations now.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the opinion of the Postmaster-General it should not be required in the original instance to be issued upon so-called "legal evidence." For the prevention of fraud, in many cases, it is necesary to have the fraud order issued forthwith.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Precisely. The Postmaster-General's proposition is that he will issue them with or without foundation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is the practice.

Mr. STAFFORD. Well, he has that authority at present under the law. It is not the practice to issue them without investigation and foundation.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. No; but he wants to.

Mr. STAFFORD. They are issued for the benefit of the largest number of people in preventing fraud.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I want to say to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] that he wholly misunderstands or misconceives the effect of the bill in that respect. The Postmaster-General may proceed under the operation of this bill just as he proceeds now, and when he is satisfied that a citizen is abusing or prostituting the privilege of the mail he may issue a fraud order, and put it on record, and then serve notice on him. He may do that on the same kind of evidence as he does it now, and probably not in one case in ten will the person affected by the fraud order go to the expense and trouble of employing a lawyer and giving a bond to sue out an injunction. If he is a perpetrator of fraud, if he is a criminal, he will not do it, and then the fraud order of fifteen days will be made final. If there is an honest difference of opinion and the accused goes into court his case is tried in court upon legal evidence. That is all.

Mr. STAFFORD. I beg to differ with the gentleman as to the effect of the bill, for the Postmaster-General will not likely inaugurate a fraud order if it can not be sustained subsequently, except upon the presentation of legal evidence. Furthermore, I take exception to the gentleman's statement that these orders will not be appealed from, because in the majority of cases based upon fraud it will be to the interest of the fraudulent concern to appeal within fifteen days.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In what way?

Mr. STAFFORD. Under that bill, within fifteen days he may make an application and furnish a bond in the small sum of $500, and that will stay the proceedings.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It will not. The bill expressly provides that the Postmaster-General shall impound the mail in the delivery post-office until the case is disposed of.

Mr. STAFFORD. It does not prevent the Postmaster-General from paying the money orders that may be issued.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It does. The gentleman had better read the bill before he makes such a criticism. I decline to yield to him further on that phase of the question.

Mr. MANN. But the gentleman is mistaken in that.

Mr. STAFFORD. I beg to challenge the gentleman's statement, as nothing is said in the bill pertaining to the restriction of the payment of money orders.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Why does not the gentleman get from the gentleman from Indiana his idea on that point?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The bill is clear and shows for itself.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Here is the part of the bill I think the gentleman is referring to, on page 2, beginning on line 17:

> Said order shall not become operative or put into execution (except to the extent of holding undelivered all mail directed to said party at the delivery office thereof) until fifteen days after the service thereof, etc.

That would include the money-order mail as well as any other.

Mr. STAFFORD. The money orders may be received through an express company.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. They can be sent through express companies, of course, but that I think is a captious objection, because the probability is so remote.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. If that is not covered, I think it ought to be.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, I started to explain the Missouri case, for the purpose of illustrating the scope of the law. The local judge in determining that case found that the whisky was not 9 and 14 years old, as advertised, but he said it was worth the price charged for it, that the selling price was a fair and reasonable price, and in his opinion the fraud-order law was not intended to be applied to transactions of that kind, where the purchaser got a fair equivalent for the money he invested; and he decided that the Postmaster-General had no jurisdiction of the case. An appeal was taken by the Government of the United States to the circuit court of appeals and the circuit court of appeals reversed the lower court, holding that the law applied to all kinds of cases—that it made no difference if a man through the mails, on the statement or representation of another individual, bought an article and got his money's worth, if he was promised more than his money's worth and did not get more than his money's worth, it was a fraud in the sense of that law. Now, the bill under consideration, I think, adequately protects the public. It undertakes to provide that questions of fraud and of criminality, always of such vital importance, shall be tried and determined according to established methods and usages of civilized countries. It undertakes to relieve the public from the danger of despotic and, possibly, tyrannic bureaucracy. I believe there is no more glaring instance of bureaucratic government, with irresponsible and despotic power vested in a head of a department, in any country that pretends to constitutional government or any degree of individual liberty on earth than that contained in the fraud-order power in the statutes under consideration. I believe that when a citizen is charged with fraud—charged with criminality—he ought to have the right to insist that these charges affecting his reputation and his business shall be established by competent evidence, by responsible witnesses testifying under the sanction of an oath; that he should have a hearing according to established procedure. Established procedure is just as essential to the liberty of the person and safety of property as any constitutional guaranties of liberty possibly can be. It might be said that when a citizen is lynched, if the victim is guilty, no harm is done; but it is a crime against government, a crime against civilization, breeding contempt for law and social order. If a man is guilty of any sort of crime he has the right to have that guilt determined by the courts of the land according to procedure that has been established as the result of generations of wisdom and experience. It is the right of the humblest citizen of the land—a right guaranteed by the Constitution and demanded by every instinct of true liberty. It is one of the very fundamental features of our Government.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman have reference to the Brownsville soldiers; to the soldiers in connection with the Brownsville incident?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am not going to be sidetracked, Mr. Speaker, into a discussion of the Brownsville controversy. In the first place I regard the fraud-order statute as illogical. I believe it is unscientific; I believe it is undemocratic. I do not believe any executive department of government or bureau officer ought to be vested with the collateral power to go out and condemn citizens without a hearing, to enforce the police laws of the country. But in view of the fact that the mails afford such easy facilities for the perpetration of fraud throughout all parts of the country, it may be that the fraud-order statute ought to continue, provided persons who are aggrieved by the decisions of the Postmaster-General shall have the right to go into the courts and have an investigation of questions of law and facts publicly, with an opportunity to demonstrate their innocence, if they be innocent.

Mr. MANN. At some time in the gentleman's remarks I would like to ask him a few questions about the bill.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am substantially through now, and I will answer any questions about the bill.

Mr. MANN. I may say to the gentleman, so far as the proposition of having some reviewing authority in some way or a public hearing in some way is concerned, I quite agree with him; but the questions I desire to ask are relative to principles and details of the gentleman's bill. I notice, first, that the bill seems to apply only to citizens of the United States. Do I understand it to be the purpose of the gentleman that any foreign person who makes use of the mails of the United States shall still be debarred from the use of the mails upon the mere ipse dixit of the Postmaster-General?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Where is that provision?

Mr. MANN. First page, "whereby any citizen of the United States, or any firm or corporation organized under laws thereof, or under the laws of any of the States, Territories, or possessions thereof," etc.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, perhaps that ought to be amended so as to read, "any person residing in the United States."

Mr. MANN. Well, not necessarily residing in the United States even. Suppose somebody in Germany——

Mr. PERKINS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MANN. I will be glad to if the gentleman from Indiana will yield to the gentleman to ask the question.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will be pleased to do so.

Mr. PERKINS. Does not the gentleman recognize a difference in principle between the right of citizens of the United States to the free use of the mails of the United States unless deprived by action of law and the right or the mere courtesy extended to a foreigner?

Mr. MANN. I had not made any suggestion myself as to that. I was trying to ascertain from the gentleman in charge of the bill what he meant by the bill, and was going to suggest to him, as I will now to the House, that if it should be contended that the privileges of this bill will only be extended to citizens of the United States, and the attempt be made to bar foreigners, I wish to suggest that most of the treaties we have would still permit the foreigners to avail themselves of the privileges of this bill.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I do not believe it ought to be limited to citizens. I think it ought to be limited to persons residing in the United States.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Residents doing business?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I thought the gentleman had a reason for making it "citizens."

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. That would make it firms or corporations doing business under the laws thereof.

Mr. MANN. I should say that if it were made to apply to anybody, it ought to be made to apply to any persons using the mails of the United States.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Or corporations.

Mr. MANN. Corporations are included by the word "persons." May I ask the gentleman in reference to paragraph d, on page 2? It says:

> Said orders shall not become operative or put into execution (except to the extent of holding undelivered all mail directed to said party at the delivery office thereof).

And so forth. In other words, it is proposed by a mere parenthetical clause to give to the Government the right to retain the mail in the post-office. It seems to me that that is not quite the right way to get at it, but I want to ask the gentleman whether it will not have the effect under this bill, as it would under the existing law, to drive a man out of business if you would issue an order declaring that he is a fraudulent concern, holding his mail up for fifteen days, and if he does appeal, then holding it up until decision of the court, which might be in one year or two years? What will be left of the man's business at the end of that time, with his mail undelivered all the while?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois what side of this question he is on?

Mr. MANN. "The gentleman from Illinois" is not on either side of the question. He is trying to ascertain a proper method to legislate to correct an abuse which everybody recognizes without creating a greater abuse in the new legislation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I want to say this to my friend, that we can not enact any law that will leave this power with the Postmaster-General that will not bring some hardship to somebody, and the purpose is to devise a plan that will result in the least embarrassment and the least hardship. Under existing conditions a fraud order is issued peremptorily. The mail is returned, stamped "fraudulent," to all parts of the country, and the defendant, if he may be so properly termed, has no relief. Now, the proposition is to give him an opportunity to go into the courts.

Mr. MANN. What good would it do him?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I want to say that it would do him some good. My friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] says that all he needs is the right to go into the courts.

Mr. MANN. The right is not given him to go into the courts and get his mail. What good will it do a man to give him the privilege of getting his mail at the end of two years' time, or maybe four?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The Government and the defendant himself are the parties interested, and the bill provides for a summary hearing, whatever that may be, and it confers upon the court a discretion to dispose of the mail. The court may, upon proper bonds, perhaps, turn the mail over to the defendant pending the litigation.

Mr. MANN. You limit the bond to $10,000 in this case.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is a bond for a stay of the order.

Mr. MANN. The court has no authority to take any other bond?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The bill provides, in an independent paragraph, that the disposition of the mail shall be subject to the order of the court, but does not say what security the court shall take. It is a discretionary matter with the court as to what shall be done with the accumulated mail. The court has power to dispose of it and to fix the terms. The additional bond of from $500 to $10,000 is to further postpone the time when the fraud order may issue. That is all.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman contemplates that the mail shall not be retained in the post-office, but shall be turned over to the defendant, or the person against whom the fraud order is directed, under an order of court, then I think we ought to legislate upon that subject and not leave it to any man to determine one way or another.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. We can not get an ideal plan. The only ideal plan would be to repeal the fraud-order statutes altogether. That would be in harmony with the system of administering justice throughout this country, but there is objection, and perhaps valid objection, to it.

Mr. MANN. Nobody wants to repeal it, I suppose.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Therefore, the next best thing is to secure the defendant a right to go into the court, and, along with that, protect the public against concurrent impositions and frauds, and we have devised this plan. If the gentleman can think out a better plan and put it in form, I am willing to accept it.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] has already thought out a better form.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Then the gentleman can support it.

Mr. MANN. I will say to the gentleman, so far as I am personally concerned and my views are concerned, it is not so much the interests of the persons who are inhibited from the use of the mails by the fraud orders as it is the interests of the Government that concern me.

It looks to me, if I may make the suggestion, in order to obtain his views on the subject, it looks to me as if this would be the result: Take a firm in Portland, Me., that is engaged in defrauding the people of Illinois and Indiana—and they are very easily defrauded—by glaring and glowing circulars, and a fraud order is directed against him. Within the fifteen days' time he appeals to the court and has all the evidence of what he is doing. It will not be easy for the Government to obtain evidence at the end of two or three years' time, after the business has completely ceased. After he has lost all the trade, after he has secured a judgment in his favor in court, he promptly comes to Congress with a moral claim, which even the gentleman from Indiana would not be able to withstand, insisting that the Government of the United States should pay him for the business which the Government has destroyed. I have not the slightest doubt that within a few years' time we would have claims for millions, and claims not only pending, but paid.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I have no apprehension as to that. I think that is altogether chimerical.

Mr. MANN. I think if the gentleman will listen to my remarks for a little while upon this bill he will not think it is so fanciful.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I will listen to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. May I ask the gentleman what he means by this in his bill, on page 4: After providing that a record of all the evidence of the United States Post-Office Department shall be transmitted to the court within thirty days' time. Thirty days, by the way, would not enable the court through the course of the mails to receive the record from the Philippine Islands?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This law does not go to the Philippine Islands.

Mr. MANN. I beg the gentleman's pardon; why not?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Because it does not.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. That is merely directory and not mandatory.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Because the statutes for the Post-Office Department do not go to the Philippine Islands.

Mr. MANN. It goes to Alaska?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The same rule applies to Alaska?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman mean to say that a man engaged in the United States in the fraudulent use of the mail can immediately step over to the Philippine Islands and make use of the mails and it has no power to bar him from doing so or have a debarment removed?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This bill does not change or affect the power of the Government over him there.

Mr. MANN. Then he is to be left without redress under the gentleman's bill. It is either one way or the other. Now, which do you say?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is one way or the other. As I understand it, the Postmaster-General, in the regulation of affairs in the Philippine Islands, will not be affected one way or the other.

Mr. MANN. Then there is no redress against this so far as the Filipino is concerned?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Perhaps not.

Mr. MANN. Now, may I ask the gentleman, having provided the record shall be turned over to the court, what is meant by this:

> And such records and evidence as may have been returned into said court under said writ of certiorari shall be received in evidence in said court on behalf of either party at the hearing of said matter, so far as the same may be competent and relevant to the issues therein.

The gentleman has stated in the course of his remarks that this evidence which was produced was not sworn testimony.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. If that is so, then this provision that this shall be received is mere idle verbiage.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. There may be some original documents in the evidence.

Mr. MANN. Then what does the gentleman mean by competent evidence? Does that mean competent evidence that is competent in a court or competent evidence of a person that is competent to be a witness in the ordinary way?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I mean evidence that would be admissible in the administration of justice in the courts.

Mr. MANN. Then I think the gentleman has used the wrong term. I have no doubt, myself, that under the provisions of the term which the gentleman uses every particle of evidence that is in the hands of the Post-Office Department that relates to this subject-matter, letters or evidence of any sort, would be admissible, including any kind of a statement which the defendant chose to make before the post-office inspectors.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman thinks that is competent evidence, does he?

Mr. MANN. That is competent evidence, in the use of the term here.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think not.

Mr. CLAYTON. That would be for the court to decide.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no; that is for the Congress to decide in the first instance, as to what is intended.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I undertake to say that the term "competent" there means admissible evidence, evidence admissible to prove or disprove an issue of fact in a court of justice.

Mr. MANN. Evidence is admissible. That means one thing. The question as to how it is presented is another thing entirely. If you can present it by sworn witnesses, that is one thing.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is the only kind of evidence that is competent.

Mr. CLAYTON. It might be a written document.

Mr. MANN. "Competent evidence" means one thing. The competency of witnesses is an entirely different thing.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Competent evidence means evidence, oral or documentary, that is admissible to prove or disprove a question of facts in a court of justice.

Mr. MANN. Assuming the gentleman's position to be correct, then, as I understand it, if a fraudulent concern in Chicago chooses to advertise principally in Louisiana or California (and the common experience is that these fraudulent concerns do not advertise at home, but abroad) the Government, in order to sustain its case, must bring those witnesses from abroad to prove its case.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Or take their depositions.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Or take their depositions, yes; because the bill provides a civil proceeding and, therefore, they may take depositions of witnesses anywhere.

Mr. MANN. They may take their depositions.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is not a hardship, is it?

Mr. MANN. These people must be produced from abroad.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Their testimony must be obtained. Is that a hardship? If you are trying a $5 lawsuit in court, you must bring sworn testimony.

Mr. MANN. I am trying to ascertain from the gentleman what the fact is.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman is telling me what the bill means.

Mr. MANN. I am trying to ask the gentleman what the bill means. I have been utterly unable, after careful study of the bill, at least such study as I was able to give it, to get much idea of what the bill means, which the gentleman says is so clear in its language.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Then it is a question whose misfortune it is, the gentleman's or mine.

Mr. MANN. It is my misfortune that I have not the legal light of the gentleman from Indiana, and I hope he will pardon me for coming before him and asking for the light which I ought to have acquired naturally, but missed in that way.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Has the gentleman from Illinois concluded his remarks?

Mr. MANN. No. Now, the gentleman from Indiana refers to a bond of $10,000, providing that any person aggrieved by any breach of the conditions of said bond may maintain an action at law against the obligors. Will the gentleman tell us what that means? How does the bond that the gentleman provides for reach anybody who is aggrieved?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. If anybody is aggrieved by the proceeding, it reaches him. If nobody is aggrieved, then the bond will not concern anybody.

Mr. MANN. If anybody is aggrieved by the proceedings, a bond of $10,000, it seems to me, is utterly insufficient. I do not see what the term means there.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The main object of the bond is as a safeguard, to require good faith. Now, under the provisions of the bill it is very difficult for me to understand how anybody can be aggrieved. The correspondents who send the mail through the post-office can not be. Their mail is not delivered to the defendant, so they can not lose. If he wins the case in the courts, it will be because he shows that he is not engaged in criminal or fraudulent practices, and the accumulated mail can be safely turned over to him.

Now, in order to prevent a man who might not go into the courts in good faith a bond is required. In the first place, a bond of $500 is required. In order to get a postponement of the date for issuing the fraud order, the court can require an additional bond of $500 or $10,000. A man who goes to the trouble of giving a $10,000 bond is to that extent stamped with a badge of good faith that if anybody should be aggrieved or suffer damage, he would be reimbursed. I do not know who might be aggrieved, but it certainly tends to add to the safeguards and prevent irresponsible people from going into the courts for the purpose of litigation.

Mr. MANN. If nobody is aggrieved, I do not see the object of putting it in, but as it is in, I wondered to whom it referred.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is to secure the Government against vexatious litigation by men who might not carry it on in good faith.

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman a further question. The gentleman realizes that there are a large number of individuals who have been carrying on fraudulent business under different aliases. Does the gentleman think it would be competent evidence on a claim of fraud by the Government in one case to introduce in evidence the fact that these same people had been engaged in the same kind of business at another time and another place?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is a serious problem.

Mr. MANN. And still it would not be competent evidence under the ordinary rules of law?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It might be for the purpose of proving fraudulent or criminal intent. That question has been very nicely argued and discriminated by the supreme court of my own State.

Mr. MANN. This is not a case of criminal intent. This is an order directed against the people at this time who are engaged in the fraudulent use of the mails. As a matter of fact, we know that it is very important evidence, but I submit to the gentleman from Indiana that under the rules of law it would not be considered competent evidence.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think it would be.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman thinks it would be?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think it would be, under the statement made by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I want to suggest to my friend from Indiana that it might be proper to answer the criticism of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE]. That gentleman suggested that this bill, if passed, might open the door for all kinds of lottery schemes, and that it would enable newspapers to carry advertisements of lotteries. I want the gentleman from Indiana to state, what is according to my own impression, that there is a special law prohibiting lotteries, and under that law the Post-Office Department would certainly be authorized to inhibit the advertisement of a lottery in any newspaper, irrespective of this act.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman from Missouri is right, and I want to state that this bill in no respect changes the right of the Postmaster-General to issue a fraud order against institutions and citizens using the mail for the purposes of the lottery, excepting to authorize the person affected by the order under the conditions contained in the bill to go into the court and have a review of the questions of the law and the facts.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. That is what I wanted the gentleman from Indiana to state, because I think an erroneous impression has been created.

Mr. MANN. The difficulty with the gentleman from Missouri is that he has not read the bill, and the gentleman from Indiana has evidently forgotten the first section of the bill, which expressly provides—

> That (a) the Postmaster-General shall cause to be kept a record of such orders as may be made in the Post-Office Department whereby any citizen of the United States (or any firm or corporation organized under the laws thereof, or under the laws of any of the States, Territories, or possessions thereof) shall or may be deprived of or excluded from the right or privilege of receiving letters, money orders, or other mail matter through or by means of the United States mail, and said record shall be designated "Fraud-order record."

So it covers lottery cases, and it covers any kind of a case. What is the use of quarreling about the language of the bill when it is stated in plain words?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman from Illinois misunderstands my attitude entirely. I say that it does cover lotteries; it applies to the whole fraud-order business.

Mr. MANN. I thought the gentleman from Indiana stated that he agreed with the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I said it only affected lotteries in the same manner that it affected other transactions that may be made the basis of a fraud order. It does not repeal the law authorizing the Postmaster-General to issue fraud orders against lottery concerns, as the gentleman from Missouri may have implied in his question.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I wanted to call attention to the fact that the lottery is covered by a special law.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is; it is a crime, and the persons guilty of engaging in it are amenable to the criminal laws of the country in addition to other liability.

Mr. MANN. But the bill sustains precisely the statement of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] with reference to lotteries.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, I do not know. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] seems to be peculiarly and unusually contentious this afternoon. I don't know that I ought to say that, and perhaps ought to withdraw the statement.

Mr. MANN. Oh, it will be news to most of the Members of the House to know that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] was unusually contentious. [Laughter.]

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It would be a pretty bad situation. Now, I have concluded all I have to say in opening the discussion on the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I propose to offer an amendment to the bill, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert as follows:

"That in all cases where any party is aggrieved in person or property by the action of the Postmaster-General, under sections 3929 and 4041 of the Revised Statutes, such party aggrieved shall have the right to have such action of the Postmaster-General reviewed by the Federal court of the district in which said party resides."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LACEY). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. The bill has not been read for amendment, as I understand it.

Mr. DALZELL. But we are proceeding under the House rules. This is on the House Calendar open to amendment at any time. The bill was read as a whole under the rules, and is open to amendment at any time, as I understand it.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. It does not have to be read for amendment.

Mr. DALZELL. Not at all.

Mr. GILBERT. Does not that authority exist now under the present law?

Mr. DALZELL. No.

Mr. MANN. The bill was read a first time? Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. What is the status of the bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is open for amendment in any place.

Mr. MANN. Has the bill been read a second time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It has had its second reading and is before the House.

Mr. MANN. I understood the bill had been read only the first time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. We always waive the first reading.

Mr. DALZELL. It is not necessary to have a bill on the House Calendar read for amendment. It is open to amendment at any time.

Mr. MANN. It is necessary to have the first reading. I did not know whether that has been had or not.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to occupy the attention of the House at any length. I am in entire sympathy with the object sought to be accomplished by the bill of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER]. My only objection to it is that it builds up a new machine that is utterly unnecessary to accomplish the purpose he seeks to accomplish. It is perfectly apparent that the existing machinery of the courts is entirely sufficient to afford the citizen relief. We have a case here where a party went into court to have his case adjudicated, but it turns out that the only reason he could not get relief was that the law provided that the decision of the Postmaster-General in the case should be final. If the machinery is perfect as it is, the methods prescribed, the form of pleading, and the form of notice, and all that—in other words, the entire machinery is perfect to afford the citizen relief, if the court has the necessary power, all he has to do is to have the court have jurisdiction to adapt the machinery to his case. What necessity is there for our building up a new procedure, such as is sought in this bill?

Mr. PERKINS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DALZELL. Yes.

Mr. PERKINS. What procedure does the gentleman claim would now be possible for any citizen? He can sue out a writ of certiorari. What else can he do?

Mr. DALZELL. He can ask for an injunction.

Mr. PERKINS. But he can not secure an injunction as the law is now.

Mr. DALZELL. He can not get an injunction as the law is now, because the court has held that the decision of the Postmaster-General upon the facts is conclusive and can not be reviewed.

Mr. PERKINS. How would the amendment the gentleman has suggested relieve that?

Mr. DALZELL. It would give the court jurisdiction to administer the law under the existing machinery.

Mr. PERKINS. But I am not sure of that. I should fear very much that the result the gentleman seeks to attain would not be reached by his amendment. I think the gentleman and I concur as to the object to be attained, but I should hate to vote for his amendment, because I fear we might fail of our object. The bill offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] may perhaps be criticised in some of its details. It might be made shorter. Still it does describe a method and procedure by which undoubtedly a man can have his rights tried in court.

Mr. DALZELL. Let me illustrate. Here is the case of the United States Bank against Henry J. Gilson, brought in the United States court under existing law. The complainant did not fail because of any lack of machinery, any lack of method, of getting his case before the court. On the contrary, under existing law his case was fully heard and the court was ready to decide it and to decide it either for or against him on the merits, if it had had jurisdiction, but it did not have jurisdiction, but said, "You have brought in a court a case where you ask us to review a decision of an officer of the law who is clothed with the right of final decision in the matter." Now, I propose to take away that right of final decision from the officer of the law and let the existing machinery of the court be called into action to enforce the right of the citizen by a review.

Mr. PERKINS. If your amendment accomplishes the same result, then the procedure would be necessarily the same as under the bill of the gentleman from Indiana. If jurisdiction is given as you desire, action would be brought and witnesses would have to be present and——

Mr. DALZELL. But why give in detail—why prescribe some new method when existing methods are all right?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. What new method is prescribed?

Mr. DALZELL. There is a lot of detail here about orders, etc.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. You propose to go into court with your proposition and we go in with this proposition. I would like to know where there is any provision in the bill that creates any new affirmative legal right or changes the practice of the courts or does anything except prescribe where and how these rights are to be established.

Mr. DALZELL. Then what is the necessity for the bill of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The necessity is this: This bill in terms expressly provides so that the action of the Postmaster-General in matters of law and fact can without any question be reviewed by the court and the court be allowed to say whether the decision should be sustained or not, and then it further provides details, by virtue of which these orders can go into effect for a while. The gentleman's proposition would allow the order to be suspended immediately.

Mr. DALZELL. I did not yield the floor for a speech.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I beg your pardon, but as a member of the committee I felt I ought to call the attention of the House to the fact that there is no substantial distinction except the bill makes it certain the court can revise these decisions from their point of view lawfully on questions of fact, and I submit to the consideration of the gentleman from Pennsylvania whether his amendment does go quite as far as that.

Mr. DALZELL. I submit to the gentleman the evidence before us in the report of the committee is that the machinery of the courts as now existing is adequate to supply a remedy if it were not for the fact the decision of the Postmaster-General in the premises is conclusive and not a subject of review. Now, I propose to make it a subject of review. That is all.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Well, it is already reviewed. It is now reviewed by the district court on the application for injunction, and the result of the review is that the determination of the Postmaster-General is final. Now, you simply provide also for a review, but are you going to allow the review to go both to the facts and the law?

Mr. DALZELL. Certainly.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Your amendment does not say so, but the bill from the committee makes it certain. I have not the slightest doubt the gentleman from Pennsylvania agrees with us in the result desired to be accomplished by the legislation, but the bill of the committee makes some restrictions and gives the Post-Office Department some leeway——

Mr. DALZELL. I see the point made by the gentleman.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. There is this element of fifteen days, which we think is a perfectly reasonable proposition——

Mr. DALZELL. And I am willing to add to the amendment, if the gentleman thinks it is lacking in that respect, "both law and fact."

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I have not any authority to make any change in the bill. I am not responsible for any of its provisions. I was not in the committee when it passed, but my own judgment is the bill is perhaps longer than entirely necessary; but it has been well considered by the committee, and, however diffuse it may be in detail, there is one thing certain, and that is it will adequately protect the rights of the Department and the rights of the men to be affected by the order. The committee felt, I have no doubt, that without this detail we would not be sure to accomplish this result.

So far as I am concerned personally, I do not think that the bill goes far enough. I am willing to agree to it, however, under the circumstances, and we think it is very conservative on the lines suggested. I do not wish to antagonize the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL], except to say that the committee has spent a good deal of time on this bill, and are satisfied that it reasonably takes care of all the rights of the Department and reasonably takes care of all the rights of the people affected by these orders, and it seems to me it is a bill that should be adopted, and I think we may go further and say, while I was not present at the hearings, that the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania would be vastly more offensive to the Post-Office Department and very much more a subject of their criticism from their point of view than is the more conservative measure which is before the House, and I hope under these circumstances the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania will not prevail.

Mr. HINSHAW. Will the gentleman permit me to ask a question?

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to amend my amendment as I have indicated. I have inserted the suggestion of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD].

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LACEY). The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "review," in the seventh line, add, "both as to law and fact;" so as to read: "review both as to law and fact."

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. That covers that point.

Mr. HINSHAW. Does the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] understand that on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, or the bill as it is now here, that before a court of review testimony must be taken de novo or simply upon the record presented by the Postmaster-General?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Under the bill presented by the committee testimony can be taken de novo. Whether under the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania it could be done I do not want to say, but I think probably it could.

Mr. HINSHAW. The testimony taken is not on cross-examination or oath.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The testimony "taken below," and I have had some experience with the practice of the Department, is not testimony, and nobody undertakes to pretend it is, except as an original paper may be filed, or a letter may be filed that in the nature of the case would be evidence against a man writing the letter. I do not think anybody would pretend, even for a moment, that there is anything on file in the Department outside of records and correspondence that would be in the sense of testimony anywhere.

Mr. HINSHAW. But the man whose mail is impounded; he could put in his affidavit or his showing, or whatever he might have, against the order.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. In case of a hearing before the court, as I understand the bill, the whole matter would be taken up de novo, and it is up to the Department, if it wants to keep a man from the use of the mail, to show by competent evidence that he is engaged in fraudulent practices and ought to be deprived of the use of the mails, and on that issue he would have a right to be heard by legal and competent testimony. Do I make that clear?

Mr. DALZELL. I understand the gentleman; yes.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a suggestion in opposition to the amendment offered by the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL]. The purport of his amendment is to give jurisdiction to some Federal court to determine the right of the Postmaster-General to issue a fraud order. Now, what court is intended we do not ascertain by the proposed amendment, which is a substitute for the bill under consideration.

Mr. DALZELL. The Federal court of the district in which he resides.

Mr. KEIFER. Does it so state?

Mr. DALZELL. Yes.

Mr. KEIFER. Then in that case you must serve the Postmaster-General and not proceed according to the method adopted in the case of the People's Bank of the United States v. Gilman, where it was sought to regulate the Post-Office Department through some of its subordinates. There has been no case attacking the head of any one of the Departments of the Government in seeking to control it by injunction or by mandamus or quo warranto anywhere in any of the States or Territories, except in the District of Columbia.

If we are going to give jurisdiction to the Postmaster-General, we should have to bring suit where you could get personal service upon him, and that would be in the District of Columbia, unless, possibly, he was found outside of it.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Well, I do not suppose the gentleman will contend that in a United States court the United States would not have jurisdiction?

Mr. KEIFER. Perhaps so, if you had a measure full enough to provide for acquiring jurisdiction elsewhere, and that is necessary to its exercise; but the amendment does not provide for all this.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I agree with you there.

Mr. KEIFER. Take a case that arose some years ago in this city—the case of United States upon relation of one McBride against Carl Schurz, who was then Secretary of the Interior. In the supreme court of the District of Columbia a mandamus was applied for against the then Secretary of the Interior to compel him to deliver a patent for certain homestead lands in Utah. That court decided that it had no jurisdiction to determine whether the Secretary of the Interior should deliver the patent or not. In that case the patent, however, had been prepared, signed, and made ready for delivery when the Secretary of the Interior directed a subordinate clerk to cut into slips and thus annul it as far as he had power to revoke it. The relator, McBride, asked the supreme court of the District of Columbia to issue an order for the delivery of that patent, mutilated, as it was. That court held against its right to do it. The Supreme Court of the United States (102 U. S., 378) by a majority of the judges held that the supreme court of the District had jurisdiction, and should have issued the order against the Secretary, and the Supreme Court of the United States directed the supreme court of the District of Columbia to issue its mandamus requiring the Secretary of the Interior to deliver the patent to the homesteader. Now, it did it by virtue of a personal jurisdiction that was acquired over the Secretary of the Interior. He appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States afterwards to know whether he should be charged with the cost, alleging that he should because he had acted in an official character. The court again decided that it was a personal action against him for that purpose, and they adjudged that he should personally pay the cost of the procedure to compel him to issue the writ of mandamus.

Mr. GILBERT. Where did the suit originate—here?

Mr. KEIFER. It originated in the District of Columbia.

Mr. GILBERT. And it was because they secured personal service of the process.

Mr. KEIFER. They secured personal service of the process, and that would have to be obtained through some provision of law wherever you might proceed against the Postmaster-General to require him or enjoin him—and that is what is contemplated—to enjoin him from issuing these fraud orders; and every litigant would have to come to the District of Columbia.

Mr. DALZELL. Why, certainly not. The process would issue against the local postmaster through which the mail is to be distributed, just as it was in the case reported in which Judge McPherson made the decision.

Mr. KEIFER. Oh, no. It would not be efficacious. If you enjoin the postmaster of a little town out in Utah, the mails would still not be distributed in the cities of the United States. The proceeding would, in order to be efficacious, have to be against the Postmaster-General and enjoin him from issuing the order; and it might have to be mandatory and require him to revoke the order already issued. Under the amendment, everybody, every person, would have to come to the supreme court of the District of Columbia to bring his suit. It seems to me that there is not enough in the proposed amendment for the purpose of issuing summons and writs of summons and service upon the Postmaster-General. Service upon or suit against a mere postmaster in a city or village in one of the United States would not be the equivalent of a suit against the Postmaster-General, and would not affect the suspension or require the revocation of a fraud order. It may be possible that gentlemen can work out a mental theory about how they would proceed in a case of this kind, but it would not work out in practice. The case of the People's Bank of the United States at St. Louis against Gilman furnishes no precedent at all. It is no precedent; and if you are going to do anything in the way of giving the parties who feel aggrieved a remedy, it will have to be done in a bill of the character under consideration.

[Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I have had some doubt at different times whether the existing law was too liberal or too strict. I have no doubt whatever that it is the sentiment of the people everywhere that a man shall be entitled to some kind of hearing before he is condemned.

Mr. BEIDLER. Even colored troops. [Laughter.]

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The colored troops that fought so nobly.

Mr. MANN. And even in the House here it is fair that we hear the gentleman from Indiana before we condemn his measure. But, Mr. Speaker, the assumption has been made that under the present law the Post-office Department is ruthlessly engaged in wiping out legitimate business concerns of the United States. I hold in my hand a daily paper of yesterday, containing a number of advertisements which the existing law has not been able to reach. The gentleman proposes to make the law more liberal instead of more strict.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. It does not change it in the slighest, in that respect.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman, under the advertisements, has the opportunity offered to him to engage in various investment enterprises. Here is an advertisement covering half a page of a daily newspaper:

Chicago to New York in ten hours. Stock in Chicago and New York Electric Air-Line Railroad will advance to $32 by January 12, and a week later to $35. Great results accomplished in four months. Rare opportunity to make a fortune. January a record breaker.

And so forth.

The great work that has been accomplished has been accomplished at South Bend, in the State represented by the distinguished gentleman who is presenting this bill [Mr. CRUMPACKER], and it consists in this:

The St. Joseph county commissioners have passed franchise giving Air-Line 10 miles of double-track right of way to South Bend on county road for branch for main line.

Here is an advertisement, and the only practical work that has been accomplished is the right to build 10 miles of a branch line over a county road—on a road the main line of which is to extend from Chicago to New York and run its trains through in ten hours. That advertisement has been printed in numerous papers in this country time and time again, bleeding the people of this country by its fraudulent purposes and representations, and the gentleman would extend the liberality of the law, where it ought to be made more strict.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I should like to inquire what the Post-Office Department have done with what my friend refers to as a prima facie fraud, under the existing conditions, which enable them to issue an order on practically nothing. Have they stopped this institution? Have they found a way to do even that, assuming it to be a fraud? I know nothing about it.

Mr. MANN. They have not stopped this institution, because it is impossible to get the character of evidence which the gentleman would require under this bill. There is no human power to obtain legal and competent evidence to-day to show that this advertisement is a fraud, and yet there is not a man with any sense in his head who does not know that every word of it is a fraud and a lie.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Then let me say that this bill would not affect that condition one way or the other a particle. It would leave what my friend refers to as a colossal fraud where the Department now has left it. It would be hereafter just exactly as it has been heretofore, and the position would not be changed by a hair.

Mr. MANN. Now, Mr. Speaker, that is not the only advertisement of this kind in this same paper.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I understand the gentleman's theory to be that where a man is guilty he has no right in the courts.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman can understand whatever he pleases. I can not prevent that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is the logic of it, that if a man is guilty it makes no difference how he is convicted, whether by a mob or otherwise.

Mr. MANN. I did not suppose the gentleman would get frightened so early in my remarks. I will endeavor to reach the gentleman's bill later.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I want to get at the gentleman's real attitude.

Mr. GILBERT. I understood the gentleman to say that was a patent fraud on its face from end to end. Now, why does the gentleman make the additional statement that, that being true, there is no legal evidence obtainable to establish the fraud?

Mr. MANN. I do not think that requires an answer. It is too simple for the gentleman from Kentucky to require an answer.

Now, Mr. Speaker, here is another advertisement:

The riches of Cobalt are beyond human belief. Greatest silver camp in the world's history. Government protects investors. Enormous fortunes being made. Dividends to stockholders for generations to come.

And a great deal more of the same kind in this advertisement. In this same edition of the same paper is the following:

How $20 can make $1,000. A proposition indorsed by bankers, manufacturers, wholesalers, railroad men, judges, and men of wealth and prominence.

I am surprised that it does not mention Members of Congress on the Judiciary Committee. [Laughter.]

Only a few days more at 10 cents a share. This stock has already jumped 100 per cent.

And various other statements of the same kind.

Mr. KEIFER. I want to find out what you are reading from.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman will find the same advertisements in all the prominent Ohio daily papers.

Mr. KEIFER. Will the gentleman tell me what paper he reads from?

Mr. MANN. I will not.

Mr. KEIFER. Is it a Chicago paper?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman can ask what he pleases. I do not propose to discriminate between the numbers of papers publishing these fraudulent advertisements by the connivance of Congress and to discriminate by naming one of them. The same advertisements are in the prominent papers of the gentleman's State, and the same advertisements are in the prominent daily papers of the State of the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. KEIFER. I deny that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I deny that statement. The only advertisements of that kind that come into Indiana are contained in Chicago papers. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. While I have said that Indiana is the most fruitful field for advertisements of this kind emanating from Chicago, I deny that the only papers that go into the gentleman's State containing these advertisements are from Chicago. If the gentleman from Indiana and the gentleman from Ohio dare make the statement that their daily papers do not publish these advertisements, I will produce the papers containing them.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. They have made that declaration.

Mr. KEIFER. I only deny so far as the papers generally in Ohio are concerned. We possibly have got a paper in Ohio somewhere that is as bad in the way of the publication of advertisements as the one from Chicago which the gentleman reads from. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. I notice, Mr. Speaker, that notwithstanding the insinuations of the gentleman, it is the Member of Congress from Chicago that insists on the strictness of the law, and it is the gentlemen from Indiana and Ohio that are insisting on letting down the bars. Why? That Chicago may swindle their people. I admit that it is not a difficult enterprise. [Laughter.]

Mr. OLMSTED. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. MANN. I will yield.

Mr. OLMSTED. I understood the gentleman to say that the postmaster had authority in the case I stated to exclude from the mails a little country newspaper which published advertisements of a milling company that offered a picture with every five sacks of flour.

Mr. MANN. It is unfortunate that the gentleman from Pennsylvania, usually so well informed about everything that comes before the House, should know so little about this subject.

Mr. OLMSTED. I am trying to get information.

Mr. MANN. I have never considered myself able to teach the gentleman from Pennsylvania. I have always knelt before him to receive instruction.

Mr. OLMSTED. I know; but I understand that information flows from the gentleman from Illinois, as Mark Twain would say, "like otter of roses from the otter." [Laughter.] I simply wanted information as to the power of the postmaster.

Mr. MANN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have read from several advertisements in one daily paper, and gentlemen will find them in every daily paper of prominence in the country. These are not the only ones. I picked up at random one part of a Sunday daily paper and put it in my pocket this morning. There are four or eight pages probably out of the thirty-two, or such a matter, containing I do not know how many advertisements of this nature. Here is another one calculated to receive special inducements from an excited and somewhat hysterical people:

Fortunes for all who invest now. The electric signograph and semaphore would positively have prevented all the recent horrible collisions. Had these instruments been in use these wrecks would have been avoided.

Then they name a number of wrecks. Then they continue with a lot of statements such as this:

There are, on an average, 500 railroad collisions on the railroads every month.

That is a lie.

More than 95,000 persons were killed in railroad wrecks last year.

That is a bold, unblushing lie. And yet these daily advertisements go on to show how speedily people may become rich who invest in this stock, and the purpose of the bill now before the House is to protect these people from the enforcement of the law denying them the use of the mails. These are the ones who advertise in the daily papers. There are hundreds of them in every large city who advertise in the monthly papers; there are many papers which live on the advertisements of this class of fraud. They are papers published in one city several hundreds of miles from home. Now, under this bill, there will be practically no method provided by which the Government can protect the weak against the strong.

Mr. PERKINS. I would like to ask the gentleman to explain to the House any possible way in which this bill could aggravate this evil. Merely saying it has that effect is not satisfactory to the House.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. If under existing law the Department can not rectify the menace contained in these advertisements mentioned by the gentleman from Illinois, would it not be a good idea to have the law changed?

Mr. PERKINS. I think so; yes.

Mr. MANN. Why does the gentleman say that under the existing law the Postmaster-General and the Post-Office Department can not rectify these frauds that are charged? There never has been a Postmaster-General and there never will be who can rectify and correct every fraud the moment it commences. The gentleman would prevent its correction at any time. These advertisements are fraudulent to-day. It takes time to make an investigation. The Post-Office Department does not act without an investigation, as the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] would have us believe. It takes time to make these investigations, and by the time they reach the investigations and enter the order the gentleman would have a bill passed prohibiting the Postmaster-General from acting upon anything but legal and competent evidence. Who can say, as a matter of competent evidence, that they will not be running trains from Chicago to New York in ten hours, or ten minutes? Does the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] pretend to say that he can swear in court, as a matter of competent evidence, that this company can not construct a road which will run trains in ten hours between Chicago and New York? A few years ago the gentleman would have said it would be impossible to communicate between Chicago and New York in less than ten days, and yet now it is done in ten seconds. Who can say as a matter of competent evidence? Yet we all know that the purpose of these advertisements is to defraud the purchaser of the stock.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Sixty or seventy years ago if this fraud-order statute had been in operation, advertisements proposing communication between Washington and Chicago in ten minutes would have been tabooed and driven out of existence under a fraud order.

Mr. MANN. Yes; and they would have been inserted for the purpose of defrauding people. The men who actually do these things are not advertising stock in this way. If they had this thing which they believe was good, they would not be offering the stock for a mere song. The purpose of this enterprise is to fleece the public out of the money in its pocketbook, taking it away from the innocent constituents of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] and of the able gentleman who represents the district of Rochester [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. Does the gentleman mean to say to this House that if he were a prosecuting attorney he could not prove those advertisements were fraudulent before any court?

Mr. MANN. I say that nobody can prove they are fraudulent.

Mr. PERKINS. If he says so, then he is a very much poorer lawyer than I had always supposed him to be.

Mr. MANN. That is very likely. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] makes no pretensions to be as distinguished a lawyer as the gentleman from New York [Mr. PERKINS]. I have often heard the gentleman from New York [Mr. PERKINS] prove things that were not true [laughter], and I have often listened to him split hairs in the House. I have not yet reached his height in the legal profession, but I doubt whether even he will be able, with all of his acumen, to prove, as a matter of competent testimony, this thing.

Mr. PERKINS. I would like to go to the jury on that question with the gentleman.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is very sincere and conscientious as well as able. [Prolonged laughter.]

Mr. MANN. Oh, now!

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Well, I thought there ought to be a bouquet coming from this side to the other instead of having them all come the other way. The gentleman has read these advertisements upon the assumption that they justify him as a Member of the House in asserting that they are prima facie fraudulent, and they are the basis of his statement. Does he not believe that the advertisement itself, assuming that it justifies his conclusion, and I do not criticise that—doesn't he think that that of itself would substantially make a prima facie case, assuming now that he feels justified in making the assertion that he does?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, it is a remarkable circumstance that the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] criticises the action of the Post-Office Department because it acts without evidence and then proposes to do more than the Post-Office Department ever has done in arbitrary action.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Oh, not at all.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] would take the advertisement and rule a fraud order at once, and yet in its most tyrannical day the Post-Office Department has never done that.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I beg the gentleman's pardon. The gentleman from Maine did not make any such suggestion.

Mr. MANN. I beg the gentleman's pardon. It is sometimes difficult for me to understand what the gentleman from Maine means. His words and sentences are sometimes slightly involved, though always clear.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Yes; that is true; but the gentleman from Maine regrets his inability to express himself clearly.

Mr. MANN. Oh, the gentleman from Maine is always clear.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. But the gentleman from Maine is trying to get an opinion from the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] on the basis of his own statement, and not to suggest his own construction or statement. I regret very much that I did not succeed in making myself clear. Perhaps I have now.

Mr. MANN. I am not proposing a bill. I am not asking the House to pass a measure which I have proposed. It is not a part of my province to do anything but lay the facts before the House as I see them. The fact is that these advertisements are inserted. They are published throughout the country. Nobody yet has been put on the fraud-order list because of them, and yet the gentleman's bill, if the Post-Office Department should put them on the fraud-order list, does not put them out of business——

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Until they have had a chance to be heard.

Mr. MANN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to call the attention of the House to what seems to me to be the gist and foundation of this bill. I agree with the gentleman from Indiana and the gentleman from Maine and the gentleman from Pennsylvania that there ought to be some method by which the Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department shall not have the right on his own dictum to determine whether somebody shall use the mail. I think there ought to be in the Government a method provided, either by a hearing by the administrative officers that is public in its character or a review before a court; but the bill which is now proposed before the House, besides being cumbersome, accomplishes not the result which the gentleman proposes, but an entirely different result. Let us see what the bill says. The bill provides that if a fraud order is issued the mail shall be held for fifteen days; that during the fifteen days the person against whom the order runs can enter suit in the United States court, and thereupon the mail shall continue to be held by the Post-Office Department until the determination of the suit or until some different disposition shall be ordered by the judge. The disposition of the mail depends upon the final result of the suit. There will ordinarily be no order for the disposition of the mail until the final determination, so that this bill provides that the mail of the party shall be held until the final trial of the case. That probably will not come for one or two years. The proceedings may be in Maine, probably, and the witnesses will live in Indiana. That is where most of them probably will live, or possibly in the Rochester, N. Y., district, and it will take some time to produce the testimony; it will take a considerable length of time to reach the testimony and to obtain it, so this case goes on. Gentlemen well know that it takes a long time to get these cases heard in a court. Meanwhile the mail is accumulating and the party has been deprived of the use of the mail and has gone out of business.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. May I call the attention of the gentleman to this fact, that the bill in terms provides that the disposition of the mail shall be subject to the order of the court?

Mr. MANN. Well, if the gentleman had listened to what I just said he would have discovered I have just covered that whole question.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. MANN. But the gentleman diverts his attention to have a conversation with somebody else and misses the best part of my remarks.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Of course it is very unfortunate I do not hear every word the gentleman says.

Mr. MANN. It is unfortunate; the gentleman from Maine would be greatly instructed.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The misfortune is mine.

Mr. MANN. Not mine.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Not at all; it is not your fault.

Mr. MANN. Now, what is the result, Mr. Speaker? The gentleman from Indiana said that the suggestion which I made a while ago was idle fancy. I said then, and I say now, in all seriousness that every time a proceeding of this sort is had and the United States is defeated in its efforts and a fraud order is set aside, the man's business having been ruined, he will knock at the doors of Congress for relief with a claim morally valid. The gentleman from Indiana makes light of it. It is a serious proposition.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Let me ask the gentleman how many claims have been presented to Congress for damages under the existing fraud-order law?

Mr. MANN. How many claims?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes; how many have been presented? Does the gentleman know of a single claim that has ever been presented under the present arbitrary method where the citizen is denied absolutely any of the rights that are afforded men in the courts of the country?

Mr. MANN. There are just as many claims presented as the courts have decided cases against the United States. Of course there could be no claim presented to Congress up to the present time, where in every case the exercise of authority by the Postmaster-General has been sustained, but the gentleman's bill proceeds upon the theory that there will be cases where the Postmaster-General will be overruled, and I say that in every one of those cases there will be a claim presented to Congress for ruining the man's business.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman's idea is this, that when a man wins in a contest he has a right of action for damages, but when he loses he has none. Is that the theory of the gentleman? When he wins out he suffers damage and when he loses there has been no damage to him?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman certainly is not serious in making the remark he does. If he is serious let me explain to him his own bill. Here is a proposition to hold a man's mail up for two or three years. How many people will have any business left at the end of that time? Here is a concern doing business, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] says, in Kansas City—a liquor house. How much business would the Kansas City liquor dealer have at the end of two or three years' time if he could receive no mail during that time?

Mr. JAMES. His whisky would have aged. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. Some gentleman makes the remark that the whisky would have aged, but it would have added nothing to the value of the whisky in that case, because that whisky was composed of poor neutral spirits colored with caramel and flavored with a rye flavor.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. How does the gentleman know that? Did he buy any of it? Was he a consumer?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman knows it in this way. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] says that the proposition of the gentleman from Kansas City was that he would send out whisky; you could drink it, and if it was not what he represented it to be, you could send it back. [Laughter.] That was the statement of the gentleman from Indiana.

Now, it is not well to say that these claims will not be presented. What have we now on the Calendar in the way of claims? The United States some years ago passed a law providing that there should be no seal catching in the Bering Sea off of the Pribilof Island. That law applied to the citizens of the United States and of the world. It was afterwards held in the arbitration with Great Britain that the United States had no authority to pass that law so far as foreign subjects were concerned. We seized a large number of vessels of American citizens for violation of that law, a plain, simple, straight violation of the national law; and the great Committee on the Judiciary, which has reported this bill, has also reported in a bill to reimburse the citizens who violated the law of the United States and engaged in the seal fisheries contrary to the statutes. No one would have thought when that bill was passed that Congress would ever consider a proposition to pay a man for a violation of the law, and I do not believe that the Committee on Claims, which has proper jurisdiction of this bill, would have reported it; but the Committee on the Judiciary—amiable gentlemen, sometimes easily imposed upon by fairy tales—swelling their hearts with sympathy for the defrauded, have indorsed a proposition to pay these people for a violation of the law of the United States.

A few years ago the State of Missouri presented a claim to the United States for money contracted in the equipment and pay of the enlisted Missouri Militia. Shortly after that claim was presented the State officials of Missouri put on record the statement that those claims were based on forgery, that they were fraudulent, that the great majority of them ought not to be paid, and yet we find upon the Calendar, reported from the Committee on War Claims, a bill already passed in the Senate of the United States, favorably reported to the House, which practically would mean the payment of all of these claims.

It is not difficult to make a claim against the Government. Claim agents never tire. They never cease. And I warn the Congress that when a man has had his business closed up by the method proposed in this bill, if he succeeds in court, he will have a claim against the Government with so much moral equity in his favor that in the end it will be paid. If we confer any right, as I think we ought, upon these people against whom the order runs, we ought to confer that right in such a way that the case can be settled at the beginning, when there can be no claim against the Government.

I do not know whether the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] is sufficient or not, but it seems perfectly patent to me, at least, that the bill proposed by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] is not sufficient protection to the Government, and I think, personally, that when this matter comes again before the Judiciary Committee, at another session of Congress, it will give more careful consideration to the rights of the Government and the rights of the innocent as against the rights of those who live by their wits. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL].

Mr. OVERSTREET of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I want to say just a word. We ought not to allow ourselves to be carried away with any prejudice which may arise from any extraordinary cases. This fraud-order law is intended as a protection to the innocent public against the numerous efforts to separate those people from their money through fraudulent methods. When we remember that the media of advertisements aggregate millions and millions, emanating from more than 40,000 separate periodicals enjoying the second-class privileges, and that hundreds of thousands of individuals and corporations using the mails other than by advertisement may use different media for getting their fraudulent methods to the public, we can appreciate the necessity of some restrictive measure for the protection of the people. Therefore in the passage of any law which would change this present arbitrary power under the fraud-order law care should be exercised that the basis of our efforts should be for the protection of the largest number and not a basis which should be for the protection of the persons against whom the orders may have issued.

The cases cited by the gentleman from Illinois, many of which advertisements I have myself seen in various papers of reputable standing, are to be found in greater or lesser degree with reference to numerous other projects. It is impossible for the Post-Office Department to inquire as to all of them. But the more flagrant cases which have come under the notice of the Department have been prosecuted with great diligence. I admit that this fraud-order law is an exceedingly powerful law. It is necessarily arbitrary, because of the purpose of the law to protect the great masses of the mail-using people. If, therefore, this bill, which is now brought in from the Committee on the Judiciary, should be passed as it is now before the House, I fear, with the hasty examination which I have given it, that its power for the investigation of actual frauds, frauds which will unquestionably deprive innocent people of their money, will be sufficiently depreciated or lessened that Congress will have made a very great mistake.

I am therefore, Mr. Speaker, against the bill. I do not believe the House ought to pass it, for the reason that it will in all probability result in greater harm than good. Yet, on the other hand, I am very frank to admit that there may be abuses of this arbitrary power. All arbitrary power that is conferred is subject to abuse. A dishonest official, an incapable official, a narrow-minded official, may exercise that arbitrary law to the great disadvantage of the people and might depart from the purpose of the law. But by the action of the liberal-minded official, the person who believes in the greatest possible liberality, an abuse may be permitted through his exercise of it. But the most of the people are protected in great degree against the thousands of fraudulent schemes which are laid before them by these various enterprises in advertisements given to them through the mail to exploit their plans of separating the people from their money. I think that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, which gives the right of review of the proceedings of the Department by a proper Federal court, is perhaps a wise provision. I would not oppose that amendment. I would prefer to see even that amendment so changed that a case which has been made by the Department under its method of investigation, if you please, may be regarded as a prima facie case.

That is, let the court determine whether or not on that prima facie case, when modified by any other evidence which may be presented by the party to the court, the order should have been issued. To bring into this House such an extremely important measure as the committee has brought, with a method of procedure that notice after a certain period of time that a case may be heard with provision for a bond which may or may not be sufficient for the protection of the Government, and other provisions equally uncertain, is a mistake. I think we will be subject to the danger pointed out by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that it might occasion numerous applications for damages against the Government or at least appropriations by Congress to cover supposed losses. So that I think it is better to let the whole subject fall rather than we should incur these dangers. I think, Mr. Speaker, that the public is entitled to some sort of protection by the Government in the use of the mails against fraudulent schemes. You might not provide any better method than the present law gives, except possibly the right of review by a competent court. I think, therefore, that the House will best meet the situation by refusing to approve the bill, even though it should adopt this amendment.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, only a word or two on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL]. The fundamental difference between his amendment and the original bill is that under his amendment there can be no review of the law and the facts of a fraud-order decision until after the order had been issued and the person affected by it had been publicly branded as a criminal or a perpetrator of fraud. Under the bill it is attempted to provide a way by which the fraud order shall not be finally effective until the person affected by it shall have had an opportunity to go into court and by proper proof show that his conduct has not been such as to justify the issuing of the order, and thereby obviate the entering of a record against him that will stand forever.

What has been termed the cumbersome machinery of the bill has been found necessary in order that this right may be established, and at the same time the Postmaster-General may have the power to protect the public, pending an investigation, against individuals and institutions that may be fraudulent.

The bill does not in any degree interfere with the power of the Postmaster-General to hold up the mails where he is satisfied that they are being used for criminal or fraudulent purposes. The rights of the public are safeguarded, and at the same time the individual is secured the privilege of having questions of law and fact determined in courts of justice according to established procedure where he can, in the open and before the public if he is able to do so, establish his innocence of the misconduct which may be imputed against him.

The criticism made by my friend from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that claims may be presented for damages is, I think, hardly worthy of notice. We can not pass any law to prevent a Member of Congress from introducing a bill providing for the payment of damages to this, that, or the other person for one grievance or another, real or fancied. There is no legal liability, and this bill creates none. It simply proposes to give the citizen a chance to go into the courts, and to have questions of such vital importance to him determined according to established procedure. It is the policy of the law to permit even the guilty to have a day in court, to face the witnesses, to be allowed to cross-examine them, to insist that they shall testify under oath, that they shall testify publicly, and I think it is asking very little to ask that men against whom fraud orders are about to be issued shall be accorded the same privilege. [Applause.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendments to the final passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. LACEY]. The gentleman from Indiana moves the previous question on the bill and amendments to the final passage.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 111, noes 1.

Mr. MANN. I asked for a division in order to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MANN. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count.

Mr. MANN (pending the count). I withdraw the point.

Accordingly the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is upon the amendment to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL].

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. DALZELL) there were—ayes 51, noes 82.

Accordingly the amendment to the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL].

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. OVERSTREET. What is the motion the Chair is now putting?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment, in the nature of a substitute, offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL].

Mr. OVERSTREET. What was voted on before?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The amendment to that substitute. The question now is upon the substitute itself.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, what was the amendment that was offered?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. An amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania to his own substitute.

Mr. DALZELL. I simply asked leave to change my original motion. I am satisfied that the last vote shall determine the question.

The substitute was rejected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CRUMPACKER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to report the following House joint resolution for immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana reports a House joint resolution, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there be printed 16,000 copies of Senate Document No. 144, Fifty-ninth Congress, second session, being a special message of the President of the United States concerning the Panama Canal, to be accompanied by a map to be prepared under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing, 5,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 10,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, to be distributed through the folding room, and 1,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, to be distributed through the document room.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Indiana yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I do.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, we have not been able to hear what the resolution is. We were not able to hear just what the resolution provides.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I want to inquire of the gentleman where the documents are to be placed?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. In the folding room. Ten thousand copies in the folding room of the House, 5,000 copies in the folding room of the Senate, and 1,000 in the document room of the House.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. What do you want to put 1,000 in the document room of the House for?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Where they will be convenient.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. And some fellow will go out and gobble the whole lump. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana if the message is to have the illustrations printed with it?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Yes; as they accompanied the message originally.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Well, Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to that provision for 1,000 copies in the document room.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I object.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. This is not a question of unanimous consent, it is a privileged report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman reports it from his committee?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I do.

The SPEAKER. It seems to the Chair that it is privileged.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Well, Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment that the 1,000 copies provided for the document room be stricken out and be added to the quantity to be distributed through the folding room.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the words "one thousand copies for the use of the House of Representatives to be distributed through the document room," and in the second line from the end, change "ten thousand" to "eleven thousand;" so it will read "eleven thousand copies for the use of the House of Representatives to be distributed through the folding room."

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I will say, Mr. Speaker, that the provision for a thousand copies to be distributed through the document room of the House was made because the committee desired that that thousand copies be printed accompanied by the map as it originally appeared. Under the provisions of the joint resolution, the committee is clothed with the power of preparing a map for the 15,000 copies that are to be printed for the House and Senate, to be distributed through the folding room. We make that provision because we can get out the publication at about one-half its original cost. The Senate, by reason of a Senate resolution, had 2,000 copies distributed through the document room of the Senate. There have been none at all, as originally presented, distributed through the document room of the House, and we felt that at least a thousand copies, with the map as originally prepared, ought to be at the disposal of the House.

Now, the map, as it will be prepared under the joint committee, will be as intelligent as the map that accompanied the message originally, but the publication, if gotten out as originally presented, would cost in the neighborhood of $250 a thousand, whereas with the map as prepared by the committee it will cost $100 a thousand.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Why not print them all under the cheaper plan?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Because we felt that the House ought to have at least a thousand copies with the map as it originally accompanied the message.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Indiana says that the original cost of the message, with the map as originally sent out, was $250 a thousand. I talked with a gentleman connected with the Isthmian Canal Commission, who told me that the cost was nothing like that.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. That is the report that the Committee on Printing has from the Public Printer.

Mr. MANN. The original map belongs to the Isthmian Canal Commission, and all the cost there is is the presswork and binding.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I do not think that the plans belong to the Isthmian Canal Commission.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. The information the committee had was that as the map was originally prepared the cost would be $250 a thousand.

Mr. MANN. The reason I asked the gentleman is because I was told through the document room that a new edition of this publication would cost $250 a thousand. It seemed to me so exorbitant that I took the trouble to ask, and was told that they owned the plates; that it would cost nothing so far as the use of the plates was concerned, but that the only cost would be the presswork, paper, and binding.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. We secured our estimate from the Public Printer.

Mr. MANN. Well, the Government Printer assumed a case, then, which did not exist.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. May I ask the gentleman a question? If it be true that this thousand copies that are going to the document room are going to be more valuable than the others by reason of having better maps, is not that all the more reason why they should be sent to the folding room so that each Member of the House should have his equal share?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Well, in view of the fact that the Senate distributed 2,000 copies through the document room of the Senate, where they were available to those who wanted them immediately, we felt this thousand copies, gotten out sooner than the whole edition, would be available at an earlier date, and that those Members who were pressed for copies would have an opportunity of securing them.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Would it not be better for us all to wait a little while and let each Member have his proper share through the folding room than to put them into the document room, where just a few Members will get more than they ought to have and others none?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. That will give each Member only about three copies.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Well, that is what each Member ought to have, and each Member won't get that if they go to the document room, because some of them will get none.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend the resolution by providing that the plates now owned and in possession of the Isthmian Canal Commission be used in the preparation of the maps which it is proposed to have prepared under this report.

The SPEAKER. But there is an amendment pending, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], and that is first in order.

Mr. MADDEN. Then I move to amend the amendment.

Mr. MANN. It is not germane.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's amendment would be in order after this amendment is disposed of.

Mr. MADDEN. Very well.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Indiana a question. If this amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] is adopted by the House, would it cut off the printing of the thousand copies with the original maps?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I do not understand it would. It would simply provide for their distribution through the folding room. I have no objection to distributing the thousand copies through the folding room of the House.

Mr. PAYNE. Why does the gentleman then state that 15,000 copies are to be issued on plates or maps to be prepared by the Committee on Printing and 1,000 on the original maps?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. That is what the chairman of the Committee on Printing did announce.

Mr. PAYNE. If the resolution does not provide for it, where do you get that?

Mr. GROSVENOR. It does provide for it.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. The resolution does not provide for that, but the Committee on Printing would have control of it to that extent.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, that is something the committee has up its sleeve, so to speak.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Yes, sir.

Mr. PAYNE. I was afraid if the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] struck out this provision about the thousand copies that it might result in striking out any authority of the Committee on Printing to print the 1,000 copies with the original maps.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question? As I understand, when this message came to Congress it was not ordered by the House to be printed with the illustrations. Is that correct?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. It was printed out of money appropriated by Congress for the Panama Commission.

Mr. MANN. I understand; but when it came to the House it was not ordered to be printed by the House with the illustrations.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. It was not.

Mr. MANN. Ordinarily when a document comes to the House and is printed a certain number go to the document room. It is from that number that the newspaper men are supplied. It is from that number that the various Government officials are supplied, so that if the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] should prevail there would be no quota out of which the newspaper men could be supplied or out of which Government officials could be supplied, the entire number going to the folding room to the credit of the individual Members of the House.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. The usual number is in process of printing under the Senate order.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman is mistaken. The document has already been printed by the Senate.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I would say this, that the usual number has not yet been placed in the document room, but is now in the process of printing under the Senate order. They will be available for the newspaper men and others, as the gentleman suggests.

Mr. MANN. The House did not order the original message printed with illustrations. Now the Senate ordered it printed with illustrations.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. But under the rule the usual number is printed.

Mr. MANN. Is not the gentleman mistaken about the usual number being printed when it is a second printing? This is a second printing.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. But I say under the rule the usual number will be printed, and the usual number has not yet been given to the document room.

Mr. PAYNE. The usual number will be printed whether this resolution is passed or not.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. The usual number will be printed, whether this resolution is passed or not, and will be placed in the document room, where those whom the gentleman has mentioned have access to it.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman is again mistaken about that. The law provides that these documents shall not be printed with illustrations unless it is especially authorized. Now, when this message came to the House, it was not directed to be printed with illustrations, so there is no usual number printed and the usual number goes in the air on this proposition.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. My information from the document room was that the usual number would be received in a few days and would be available.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken; and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MADDEN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I propose the amendment I suggested a few moments ago, namely, that the report be printed from the plates in possession of and owned by the Isthmian Canal Commission. I can not understand, Mr. Speaker, why it costs more to print a thousand with the original map than it is proposed to pay for the printing of the 10,000 which go to the document room or folding room, unless it is that the Committee on Printing proposes to make a smaller map than the one which was supplied with the report submitted by the President some time ago.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Illinois will pause until the amendment is reported to see if it is in the shape in which he desires it. The gentleman from Illinois offers the following amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add, after the words "folding room" at the end of the resolution, the following:

"The plates owned by and in the possession of the Isthmian Canal Commission shall be used in printing the said document hereunder."

Mr. MADDEN. I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Mr. Speaker, I will say in this connection that the estimate the committee received on this publication, accompanied by the map as originally presented to the House, will cost $250 a thousand. As presented with the map, as it will be reduced and changed, they will cost $100 a thousand.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I will.

Mr. MADDEN. I presume that report is based on the theory that a new plate would have to be made, or upon another theory that the plate which it is proposed to make will be so small that it will not compare at all with the plate from which the original map was made.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. It is based upon the theory that the information of the committee was that this plate was not owned by the Isthmian Canal Commission, but they simply ordered this map prepared at so much a thousand.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman answer this question? Who made the plate?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. It was made in New York.

Mr. MADDEN. Who authorized it to be made?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. The Isthmian Canal Commission.

Mr. MADDEN. Who paid for it?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. The Isthmian Canal Commission.

Mr. MADDEN. That was paid for out of Government funds?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. It was.

Mr. MADDEN. Then it ought to be owned by the Government.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. But it is not.

Mr. MADDEN. Why is it not?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Because the Government did not buy the plate, but did buy the map, just as the Government did not buy the Jefferson Bible plates. The Jefferson Bible plates are owned by the contractor in Chicago.

Mr. MADDEN. The statement made by my colleague from Illinois is to the effect that he has information, which is reliable, to the effect that the plates are owned and in possession of the Isthmian Canal Commission.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Well, the information the committee had was to the contrary, and I will say to the gentleman from Chicago that this map would be reduced about half its present size and would not be printed in colors, but would have just as much in it as it is now prepared.

Mr. MADDEN. I see no reason, Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding the statement of the gentleman, why we should be compelled to make a new plate. The Government has paid for making a plate once, and if that plate is in existence it ought to be the property of the Government, and there ought to be no further expenditure for making the plate in order that we may have the map in the report.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Mr. Speaker, I will say that that same suggestion was made when the Jefferson Bible was originally printed. It was contended on the floor of this House that inasmuch as we had bought and paid for 10,000 copies of that publication we ought to own the plates, but we did not own the plates, and we never have owned the plates.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a statement?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, when this measure came before the House and was not printed I made inquiry in the document room in regard to it, and was told there that the Printing Office had reported that it would cost $250 a thousand to print the message. I saw Mr. Bishop, the secretary of the Isthmian Canal Commission, and made the statement to him that it had been reported to me that it would cost $250 a thousand to print this message with the illustrations, because the Government did not own the plates. I will say that the plate with reference to the map was not specifically mentioned.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I will say to the gentleman that the other plates are owned by the Government, but not the map plate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Bishop stated to me that there was no reason why it should cost $250 a thousand, or, in his judgment, more than $50 a thousand, because the Isthmian Canal Commission owned all the plates, and that they were at the service of the Government Printing Office at any time without expense and that the Commission was ready to turn them over.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. Did Mr. Bishop say that the Isthmian Canal Commission owned the map plate?

Mr. MANN. The map plate was not specifically mentioned, but the cost was mentioned, and he spoke of all of the plates. Either Mr. Bishop was very much mistaken or else he did not know what was in the message.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I want to get a little more information on that point. The gentleman undertook just now to state, and did state, that this was a case similar to the case of the Jefferson Bible. He said that the Jefferson Bible was printed by plates that were owned by some private firm. Well, these plates are owned by the Panama Canal Commission and the Panama Canal Commission is controlled by the United States, and all the money that it takes to make plates for them ought to make any other Government work the Government of the United States pays for. Why should we not take these plates away from the Panama Commission, which we control, and use them in printing these maps?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee that the information of the Committee on Printing is to the effect that the plate from which the map was printed was not owned by the Panama Commission.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Who owns it?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. It was owned by some contractor, as I understand it, in New York or Philadelphia—New York, I think.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. He just loaned it to the President to have it printed?

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. He prepared this plate and sold the Government so many maps for so much money, just as we originally bought 10,000 of the Jefferson Bible for so much money.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Of course, if a private individual owns that map plate, we can not control it, but I think the resolution the gentleman has offered should be modified so as to eliminate that and let us have the balance of the plates. Of course we control the Panama Canal Commission and give them all the money they want.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS. I will say, if the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is voted down, that the publication will be issued with all the plates except the map plate, as they appeared in the original publication. Then the map that will accompany the publication will be of reduced size, but be just as intelligent as the map that accompanied the original publication, and will not cost half the price and will not be a detached map.

Mr. OLMSTED. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the amendment by adding at the end thereof the following:

"So far as the Isthmian Canal Commission owns and controls the free use of the necessary plates."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was according read the third time, and passed.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON LATE HON. ROCKWOOD HOAR.

Mr. WASHBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the order which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That there be a session of the House on Sunday, February 10, 1907, at 12 m., which shall be set apart for memorial addresses on the life, character, and public services of Hon. ROCKWOOD HOAR, late a Representative from the Third Congressional district of Massachusetts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken, and the order was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following telegram, which was read:

CHICAGO, ILL., January 7, 1907.

Hon. JOSEPH G. CANNON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

For the past two days I have been laid up sick at home. I started for Washington yesterday, but had a relapse on train and had to return from Fort Wayne. I will appreciate it if you will secure a leave of absence for me on account of sickness.

WILLIAM LORIMER.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the leave of absence will be granted.

There was no objection.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 43 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, submitting a preliminary report as to legislation requiring reports as to proceeds of sales of public property, with a statement of payments from such funds—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Catharine Kelton against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of the heirs of Theodorick Bland, deceased, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of C. J. McKee, administrator of estate of David B. Johnson, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting an estimate of appropriation for meandering the north bank of the Popo Agie River and the south bank of the Big Wind River, Shoshone Indian Reservation, Wyo.—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting a statement of the mail matter entered at the Washington City post-office by the Treasury Department, under the penalty privilege from July 1 to December 31, 1906—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of State, submitting a request that Samuel R. Gummeré be empowered to receive a sword from the Sultan of Morocco—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting papers in the claim of the Charleston (S. C.) Light and Water Company—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the president of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia submitting an estimate of deficiency appropriation for the public schools of the District—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, submitting a statement of the expenditures of the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the year ended June 30, 1906—to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of William Erwin against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of E. M. Tate, administrator of estate of David N. Tate, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of W. A. Montgomery, administrator of estate of Willis Lowe, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Mary J. Brown, administratrix of estate of Jesse A. Brown, against the United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of William Bryant against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of W. J. Penn, administrator of estate of William Penn, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Cain Leach against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of John D. Long against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of G. W. Elmore, administrator of estate of George W. Pierce, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of George C. Strauss, administrator of estate of Peter Strauss, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of the harbor of Hilo, Hawaii—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting reports of deliquencies of officers of the Government in accounts and balances—to the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Director of the Geological Survey, transmitting the annular report of the Survey for the fiscal year 1905–6—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. MANN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21689) to increase the limit of cost of five light-house tenders heretofore authorized, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5882); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MARTIN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22543) granting to the town of Pawnee, in Pawnee County, Okla., certain lands for park, educational, and other public purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5883); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22203) granting an increase of pension to Oliver J. Burns, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5631); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22217) granting an increase of pension to George W. Boughner, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5632); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22214) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Prouty, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5633); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22270) granting an increase of pension to Michael Hogan, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5634); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22272) granting a pension to George W. Rodefer, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5635); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22280) granting an increase of pension to Emily V. Ackley, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5636); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22288) granting an increase of pension to Samuel L. Davis, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5637); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22424) granting an increase of pension to William Faulkner, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5638); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22431) granting an increase of pension to Alden Youngman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5639); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22442) granting an increase of pension to John Clark, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5640); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22448) granting a pension to F. Medora Johnson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5641); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22451) granting an increase of pension to John McCaslin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5642); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22500) granting an increase of pension to Minor Cleavenger, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5643); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22551) granting an increase of pension to Wilson Siddell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5644); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22566) granting an increase of pension to Joseph L. Six, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5645); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22602) granting an increase of pension to John H. Passon, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5646); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22607) granting an increase of pension to John T. Hetherlin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5647); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22624) granting an increase of pension to Louisa M. Carothers, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5648); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1150) granting a pension to Emma J. Turner, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5649); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22651) granting an increase of pension to Emily J. Cadmus, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5650); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22684) granting an increase of pension to William Sherk, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5651); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22717) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Brick, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5652); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22734) granting an increase of pension to Marshall Maier, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5653); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22749) granting a pension to Della S. Easton, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5654); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22756) granting an increase of pension to Levi Curtis, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5655); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22766) granting an increase of pension to Soren V. Kalsem, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5656); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22771) granting an increase of pension to William J. Courter, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5657); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22776) granting an increase of pension to James E. Converse, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5658); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20929) granting an increase of pension to Thomas D. King, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5659); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22853) granting an increase of pension to Burden H. Barrett, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5660); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22937) granting an increase of pension to Edward Murphy, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5661); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22976) granting an increase of pension to Milton Stevens, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5662); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22994) granting an increase of pension to Lucinda C. Musgrove, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5663); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22997) granting an increase of pension to Edmond D. Doud, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5664); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22995) granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel Y. Buck, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5665); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22416) granting an increase of pension to Barbara E. Schwab, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5666); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 23036) granting an increase of pension to John Cutler Mitchell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5667); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20973) granting an increase of pension to Henry Lufft, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5668); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21837) granting an increase of pension to James W. Kasson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5669); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14378) granting an increase of pension to Charles Settle, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5670); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 742) granting an increase of pension to James Wintersteen, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5671); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21836) granting a pension to Mary C. Hall, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5672); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21832) granting an increase of pension to John W. Wilkinson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5673); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21828) granting an increase of pension to Noah Perrin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5674); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21808) granting an increase of pension to Levi Mitchell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5675); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21798) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Spencer, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5676); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21724) granting an increase of pension to John D. Martin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5677); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21702) granting an increase of pension to John Cyrus Rinehart, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5678); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21660) granting an increase of pension to Emma Fehr, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5679); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21651) granting an increase of pension to Jacob B. Butts, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5680); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21626) granting an increase of pension to Calvin Barker, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5681); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21617) granting an increase of pension to William Miller, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5682); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21575) granting an increase of pension to Calvin E. Morley, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5683); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20586) granting an increase of pension to Calvin Judson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5684); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21551) granting an increase of pension to Alfred E. Lucas, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5685); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21519) granting an increase of pension to Montezuma Saint John, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5686); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21524) granting an increase of pension to Elison Gatewood, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5687); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21483) granting an increase of pension to George S. Wood, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5688); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21448) granting an increase of pension to Jesse Jackman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5689); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21428) granting an increase of pension to Cornelius H. Lawrence, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5690); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21375) granting an increase of pension to John S. Cornwell, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5691); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21307) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Fauver, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5692); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21344) granting an increase of pension to Edward S. Lightbourne, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5693); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21347) granting an increase of pension to Jeanette M. Guiney, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5694); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22155) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Armstrong, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5695); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13201) granting a pension to Sarah A. Jones, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5696); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22090) granting an increase of pension to Severt Larson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5697); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22094) granting an increase of pension to Albert J. Hamre, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5698); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22088) granting an increase of pension to Gottlieb Schweitzer, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5699); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22069) granting an increase of pension to Caroline W. Congdon, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5700); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22067) granting an increase of pension to Levi E. Miller, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5701); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22065) granting an increase of pension to Henry Utter, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5702); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22052) granting a pension to James A. Meredith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5703); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22039) granting a pension to Alethia White, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5704); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22015) granting an increase of pension to William Reese, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5705); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21997) granting an increase of pension to Martha Joyce, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5706); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21961) granting an increase of pension to Harvey F. Wood, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5707); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21906) granting an increase of pension to John M. Bruder, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5708); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1185) granting a pension to Josiah C. Hancock, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5709); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21896) granting an increase of pension to George H. Field, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5710); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21881) granting an increase of pension to Mahala Jones, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5711); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21856) granting an increase of pension to John G. Viall, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5712); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21848) granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Arthur, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5713); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21852) granting an increase of pension to James M. Eaman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5714); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21843) granting an increase of pension to Robert H. Delaney, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5715); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20557) granting a pension to Webster Miller, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5716); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21283) granting an increase of pension to Frederick De Planque, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5717); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21258) granting an increase of pension to James Dopp, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5718); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21256) granting an increase of pension to William Foster, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5719); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11141) granting an increase of pension to Jesse S. Miller, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5720); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21227) granting a pension to Cora A. Lasley, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5721); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H R. 21157) granting an increase of pension to George C. Peak, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5722); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21139) granting an increase of pension to Willa Fyffe, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5723); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21086) granting an increase of pension to Jerry Johnson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5724); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21077) granting an increase of pension to Andrew M. Dunn, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5725); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21060) granting an increase of pension to Gottlieb Kirchner, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5726); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20966) granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. Jones, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5727); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21000) granting a pension to Jessie F. Evans, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5728); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19943) granting an increase of pension to E. La Coste, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5729); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20967) granting an increase of pension to Samuel W. Hines, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5730); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20930) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Ronge, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5731); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20862) granting an increase of pension to August Weber, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5732); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 23051) granting an increase of pension to Volney S. Topping, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5733); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 23263) granting an increase of pension to Michael Downs, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5734); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20715) granting an increase of pension to Charles Ballantyne, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5735); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20727) granting an increase of pension to William Conwell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5736); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20717) granting an increase of pension to Adelbert E. Bleekman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5737); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20719) granting an increase of pension to James O. Price, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5738); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20737) granting an increase of pension to William G. Whitney, reported the same with an amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5739); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20856) granting an increase of pension to Catherine A. Greene, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5740); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20852) granting an increase of pension to T. T. Tate, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5741); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20842) granting an increase of pension to Henry Joyce, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5742); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20689) granting an increase of pension to Francis Doughty, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5743); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20558) granting an increase of pension to Mark W. Terrill, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5744); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20571) granting an increase of pension to Frederick J. Dowland, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5745); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20614) granting an increase of pension to James Howardson, sr., reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5746); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20618) granting an increase of pension to George W. Brinton, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5747); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20686) granting an increase of pension to Joshua S. Jayne, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5748); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20568) granting an increase of pension to Chester R. Pitt, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5749); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 23166) granting an increase of pension to William S. Voris, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5750); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21113) granting an increase of pension to Emma E. Chamberlain, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5751); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21246) granting a pension to Margaret Gilroy, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5752); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20729) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Lyons, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5753); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20822) granting an increase of pension to Milton L. Howard, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5754); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20882) granting an increase of pension to Luther W. Harris, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5755); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21148) granting an increase of pension to Jacob A. Graham, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5756); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1512) granting an increase of pension to Melvin T. Edmonds, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5757); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1252) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Mathes, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5758); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 725) granting a pension to George E. Smith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5759); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 637) for the relief of William H. Bone, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5760); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16340) granting an increase of pension to William M. Harris, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5761); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 17058) granting an increase of pension to J. H. O'Brion, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5762); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16487) granting an increase of pension to Martha Lavender, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5763); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13956) granting an increase of pension to Alfred Featheringill, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5764); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20589) granting an increase of pension to Amanda Cherry, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5765); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13805) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Gordon, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5766); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15463) granting an increase of pension to John Robb, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5767); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6519) granting an increase of pension to Samuel W. Whybark, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5768); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6424) granting a pension to George Price, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5769); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6165) granting an increase of pension to Nelson Everson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5770); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20834) granting an increase of pension to Franklin Comstock, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5771); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6088) granting an increase of pension to James R. Chapman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5772); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6060) granting an increase of pension to Lorenzo B. Fish, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5773); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20613) granting an increase of pension to Hiram Steele, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5774); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20851) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hamme, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5775); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5829) granting an increase of pension to George Anderson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5776); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5801) granting an increase of pension to Algernon E. Castner, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5777); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5595) granting an increase of pension to Elisha Brown, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5778); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5187) granting an increase of pension to Robert John, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5779); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4833) granting an increase of pension to S. F. Anderson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5780); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4719) granting a pension to Mary J. Trumbull, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5781); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4692) granting an increase of pension to Levi Welch, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5782); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22502) granting an increase of pension to Orren D. Haskell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5783); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4673) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Rowe, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5784); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4151) granting an increase of pension to John W. Howard, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5785); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 3989) granting an increase of pension to Hiram T. Houghton, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5786); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 3740) granting an increase of pension to John G. H. Armistead, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5787); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2769) granting an increase of pension to Ethan A. Valentine, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5788); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2726) granting an increase of pension to John C. Keach, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5789); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2286) granting a pension to Jacob Miller, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5790); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2056) granting an increase of pension to Lucas Longendyke, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5791); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1937) granting an increase of pension to Joseph B. Williams, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5792); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 8553) granting an increase of pension to Thomas E. Aylesworth, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5793); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 12497) granting an increase of pension to Allen M. Haight, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5794); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10219) granting a pension to George S. Boyd, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5795); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20728) granting an increase of pension to Ira D. Hill, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5796); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10033) granting an increase of pension to Samuel C. Roe, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5797); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7666) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Mahaffey, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5798); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9278) granting an increase of pension to Melville A. Nichols, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5799); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5174) granting an increase of pension to Patrick Turney, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5800); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21960) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Betts, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5801); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9921) granting a pension to Ann Lytle, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5802); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7393) granting an increase of pension to Ferdinand David, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5803); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22092) granting an increase of pension to Simon McAteer, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5804); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21343) granting an increase of pension to James C. Murray, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5805); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21446) granting an increase of pension to William W. Crum, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5806); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22748) granting an increase of pension to Willard P. Fisher, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5807); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22718) granting an increase of pension to William Dean, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5808); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22501) granting an increase of pension to Austin B. Truman, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5809); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22376) granting a pension to William M. Colby, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5810); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22452) granting an increase of pension to William A. Narrin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5811); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22281) granting an increase of pension to Leonard Tyler, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5812); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22207) granting an increase of pension to William A. Harlan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5813); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20860) granting an increase of pension to Charles T. Chapman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5814); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7551) granting a pension to Daniel Robb, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5815); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7378) granting an increase of pension to John L. Brown, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5816); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6537) granting an increase of pension to William Jackson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5817); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 6524) granting an increase of pension to Amos Snyder, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5818); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4149) granting an increase of pension to Thompson Wall, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5819); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5776) granting a pension to Priscilla A. Campbell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5820); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18881) granting an increase of pension to Alexander B. Mott, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5821); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18723) granting a pension to William E. Hannigan, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5822); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18681) granting an increase of pension to William E. Gray, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5823); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18323) granting an increase of pension to Richard B. Rankin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5824); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18242) granting an increase of pension to Francis Anderson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5825); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18042) granting an increase of pension to James H. Sinclair, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5826); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18014) granting an increase of pension to Elbridge P. Boyden, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5827); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 17773) granting a pension to Carel Lane, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5828); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 17642) granting an increase of pension to Roland M. Johnson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5829); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 17620) granting an increase of pension to Michael Pendergast, alias Michael Blake, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5830); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 17331) granting an increase of pension to D. V. Donnelly, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5831); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20734) granting an increase of pension to Amos Kellner, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5832); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22506) granting an increase of pension to James F. Smith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5833); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22568) granting an increase of pension to John H. Christman, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5834); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21255) granting an increase of pension to Thomas McDowell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5835); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22528) granting an increase of pension to Daniel Fuller, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5836); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20855) granting an increase of pension to George Hierl, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5837); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21909) granting an increase of pension to George W. W. Tanner, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5838); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 17330) granting an increase of pension to William Tuders, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5839); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16283) granting an increase of pension to A. H. R. Calvin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5840); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16222) granting an increase of pension to Napoleon B. Ferrell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5841); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16181) granting an increase of pension to Ann Rafferty, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5842); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15874) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin B. Ream, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5843); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13031) granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. Leslie, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5844); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14860) granting an increase of pension to William D. Campbell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5845); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14715) granting an increase of pension to Norman W. McDonald, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5846); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19762) granting an increase of pension to Clara C. Edsall, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5847); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16886) granting a pension to James W. Murray, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5848); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 23171) granting an increase of pension to Harmon Veatch, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5849); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5173) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Henninger, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5850); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19133) granting an increase of pension to Fergus P. McMillan, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5851); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19294) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Hatton, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5852); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19400) granting an increase of pension to Washington M. Brown, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5853); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13253) granting an increase of pension to R. M. C. Hill, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5854); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 12523) granting an increase of pension to Gancelo Leighton, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5855); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11959) granting an increase of pension to Henry J. Rice, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5856); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11869) granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Geduldig, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5857); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11362) granting an increase of pension to Nicholas A. Bovee, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5858); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11307) granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Roberts, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5859); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10721) granting an increase of pension to Harriett J. Lewis, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5860); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 12124) granting an increase of pension to Howard Brown, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5861); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10317) granting an increase of pension to Clarissa A. Frederick, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5862); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10402) granting an increase of pension to Albert H. Campbell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5863); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11708) granting an increase of pension to Jesse Ask, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5864); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20244) granting an increase of pension to Alfred Hayward, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5865); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20236) granting an increase of pension to W. E. Richards, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5866); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOPKINS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20224) granting an increase of pension to Philip Hamman, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5867); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20201) granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Airey, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5868); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19976) granting a pension to Nelson Isbell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5869); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2764) granting an increase of pension to George L. Robinson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5870); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19967) granting an increase of pension to Martin L. Ohr, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5871); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19969) granting an increase of pension to Henry K. Burger, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5872); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19863) granting an increase of pension to Walter B. Swain, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5873); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19772) granting a pension to Mary L. Kirlin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5874); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19770) granting an increase of pension to James G. Van Dewalker, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5875); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19581) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Bookhammer, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5876); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19526) granting an increase of pension to Judson H. Holcomb, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5877); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19448) granting an increase of pension to Abiram P. McConnell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5878); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20215) granting an increase of pension to Riley J. Berkely, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5879); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21331) granting an increase of pension to Robert O. Bradley, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5880); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. KAHN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the joint resolution of the Senate (S. R. 13) authorizing the Secretary of War to award the Congressional medal of honor to Roe Reisinger, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5884); which said resolution and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HULL, from the Committee on Military Affairs: A bill (H. R. 23551) making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908—to the Union Calendar.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 23552) to authorize the withdrawal from entry of all gas, oil, lignite, and coal upon the public lands and providing for the leasing of the same—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23553) to authorize the withdrawal from entry of one-half of the remaining coal, gas, lignite, and oil in the public lands, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23554) to authorize the creation of coal, gas, and oil reserves, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. ROBERTS: A bill (H. R. 23555) to amend an act entitled "An act amending section 4708 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in relation to pensions to remarried widows, approved March 3, 1901," approved February 28, 1903—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 23556) prohibiting the purchase or procurement, sale, gift, or disposition of intoxicating liquors to minors by unlicensed persons—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BATES: A bill (H. R. 23557) to cause a survey to be made of Erie Harbor—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. MADDEN: A bill (H. R. 23558) amending an act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BURTON of Delaware: A bill (H. R. 23559) to amend, modify, and simplify the pension laws of the United States—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JONES of Washington: A bill (H. R. 23560) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River between Benton and Franklin counties, in the State of Washington, by the North Coast Railroad Company—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23561) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River between Walla Walla and Benton counties, in the State of Washington, by the North Coast Railroad Company—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SHACKLEFORD: A bill (H. R. 23562) regulating life insurance companies and the issuing and delivering of life insurance policies in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LAMAR: A bill (H. R. 23563) to levy and collect an import duty on long staple cotton imported into the United States from foreign countries—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23564) to provide compensation for carriers of rural free delivery mail—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23565) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to review the cases of certain Choctaw Indians claiming citizenship in the Choctaw tribe—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. WILEY of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 23566) to establish a subtreasury at Montgomery, Ala.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 23567) to encourage agriculture in the Philippine Islands by granting certain concessions and guaranties to a corporation to be known as the Philippine Agricultural Bank, the business of which shall be the making of loans to agriculturists in the Philippine Islands upon real estate, growing crops, or other security duly authorized by this act, for the purpose of enabling them to pay off existing debts, to make improvements upon their lands, to purchase agricultural implements, farm animals, fertilizers, and seed, and to make other similar expenditures desirable and proper for the advancement and improvement of agriculture in the Philippine Islands—to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. PARSONS: A bill (H. R. 23568) to secure a better system of report and accountability by the governments of the insular possessions of the United States—to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. MURPHY: A bill (H. R. 23569) to amend section 3243 of chapter 3 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to special taxes—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ELLIS: A bill (H. R. 23570) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to construct a bridge across the Missouri River at a point between Kansas City and Sibley, in Jackson County, Mo.," approved March 19, 1904—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ANDREWS: A bill (H. R. 23571) to ratify and confirm elections held under and by virtue of the provisions of an act to amend an act to prohibit the passage of special or local laws in the Territories, to limit the Territorial indebtedness, etc.—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: A bill (H. R. 23572) to authorize the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to remove certain restrictions upon the manufacture of alcoholic spirits, so as to facilitate the erection of distilleries producing alcohol to be denatured—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. YOUNG: A bill (H. R. 23573) authorizing the purchase of a fish hatchery owned by the State of Michigan and located at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. DE ARMOND: A bill (H. R. 23574) to authorize the Secretary of War to detail officers of the Army for service in the construction of good roads in the several States—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HEDGE: A bill (H. R. 23575) appropriating the sum necessary for completion of addition to the public building at Burlington, Iowa—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. WATSON: A bill (H. R. 23576) to provide for the extension of New Hampshire avenue, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: A bill (H. R. 23577) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Waterville, Me.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. MACON: A bill (H. R. 23578) to authorize the county of Clay, in the State of Arkansas, to construct a bridge across Black River at or near Bennetts Ferry, in said county and State—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GREENE: A bill (H. R. 23579) to regulate the salaries of letter carriers in free-delivery offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. OTJEN: A bill (H. R. 23580) granting thirty days' leave of absence with pay each year to every member of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BEALL of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23581) to extend the privileges of the transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement to the city of Dallas, in the State of Texas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BENNET of New York: A bill (H. R. 23582) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MILLER: A bill (H. R. 23583) to provide for the investigation of the water resources in the United States—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. BOWIE: A concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 47) accepting the statue of Jabez Lamar Monroe Curry, to be placed in Statuary Hall—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. HAY: A resolution (H. Res. 677) as to certain tests made by the Department of Agriculture—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. AMES: A resolution (H. Res. 678) to pay to Charles H. Mann, superintendent of the Press Gallery of the House, a certain sum of money—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. DAWSON: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 212) making each Saturday after 12 o'clock noon during the months of July, August, and September only, in each year, a legal holiday for certain officers and employees of the United States—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 213) authorizing the appointment of a special commissioner for the Jamestown Exposition—to the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: A bill (H. R. 23584) granting an increase of pension to E. B. Milligan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23585) granting an increase of pension to D. G. Roney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23586) granting an increase of pension to Reuben Sanders—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. AMES: A bill (H. R. 23587) granting an increase of pension to Phineas P. Trowbridge—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: A bill (H. R. 23588) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, try, and determine the land claims of the heirs of Jacques Clamorgan, deceased—to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

By Mr. BRADLEY: A bill (H. R. 23589) granting an increase of pension to William Van Gorden—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BROWNLOW: A bill (H. R. 23590) granting an increase of pension to James W. Bedell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23591) granting an increase of pension to Henry McNeil—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23592) granting an increase of pension to James R. Harrover—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURNETT: A bill (H. R. 23593) granting an increase of pension to Charles M. Buck—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23594) granting an increase of pension to Rolin J. Southerland—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23595) granting an increase of pension to Robert Guttery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURTON of Delaware: A bill (H. R. 23596) granting an increase of pension to H. O. Bennum—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CASSEL: A bill (H. R. 23597) granting an increase of pension to George W. Bireley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23598) granting a pension to Robert R. Clendenin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHANEY: A bill (H. R. 23599) granting an increase of pension to Alfred B. Stansil—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 23600) granting an honorable discharge to James T. Brown—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 23601) granting an increase of pension to Emil Wiegleb—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CUSHMAN: A bill (H. R. 23602) granting an increase of pension to Ashley W. Holland—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DE ARMOND (by request): A bill (H. R. 23603) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Desbrow—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DAWSON: A bill (H. R. 23604) for the relief of William Pfeiffer—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DEEMER: A bill (H. R. 23605) to correct the military record of C. W. Walker—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23606) to correct the military record of Mifflin R. Moyer—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23607) granting a pension to Martha E. Doebler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23608) granting an increase of pension to John Manley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23609) granting an increase of pension to Samuel P. Wallis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23610) granting an increase of pension to George W. Bowman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23611) granting an increase of pension to Abram L. Crist—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DIXON of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 23612) granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. Adams—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23613) granting an increase of pension to Henry Daum—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23614) granting an increase of pension to James M. King—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23615) granting an increase of pension to John W. Conard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23616) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Kelble—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23617) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth J. Miles—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23618) granting an increase of pension to John M. Guley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23619) granting a pension to Josephine Dumont—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLACK: A bill (H. R. 23620) granting an increase of pension to Emma L. De Gou—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLOYD: A bill (H. R. 23621) granting an increase of pension to Wilson Graham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23622) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Maple—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FRENCH: A bill (H. R. 23623) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Johnston—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23624) granting an increase of pension to Albina M. Williams—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23625) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Bartshe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULLER: A bill (H. R. 23626) granting an increase of pension to Richard C. Taylor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GAINES of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 23627) granting a pension to William B. Walton—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 23628) granting an increase of pension to Clara E. Daniels—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GARNER: A bill (H. R. 23629) for the relief of A. M. Gildea—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GOULDEN: A bill (H. R. 23630) authorizing the President to nominate and appoint Birchie O. Mahaffey, John A. Cleveland, and Traugett F. Keller as second lieutenants in the United States Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HALE: A bill (H. R. 23631) granting a pension to Francis M. Oglesby—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23632) granting an increase of pension to Isaac M. W. Keller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23633) granting an increase of pension to Calvin Patterson—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23634) granting an increase of pension to Gabriel Mangus—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23635) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin F. Houston—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23636) granting an increase of pension to John B. Schroll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23637) granting an increase of pension to John A. Collier—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23638) granting an increase of pension to Calvin Frost—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23639) granting an increase of pension to John Lobach—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23640) granting an increase of pension to Cleon Berry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23641) granting an increase of pension to Isaac B. Beals—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23642) for the relief of George W. Mabry—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23643) to remove charge of desertion standing against H. B. Jones—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HEDGE: A bill (H. R. 23644) granting an increase of pension to Charles J. Schreiner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HENRY of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 23645) granting an increase of pension to Isaac L. Griswold—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HERMANN: A bill (H. R. 23646) for the relief of I. B. Hammond—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. HINSHAW: A bill (H. R. 23647) granting a pension to Lucy A. Tibbetts—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23648) granting an increase of pension to Willet Shottenkirk—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23649) granting an increase of pension to George H. Ross—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOGG: A bill (H. R. 23650) to quiet title to lands on Jicarilla Reservation, and to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to cause allotments to be made, and to dispose of the merchantable timber, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HOLLIDAY: A bill (H. R. 23651) granting an increase of pension to John W. Wilson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23652) granting an increase of pension to William H. Zimmerman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUBBARD: A bill (H. R. 23653) granting an increase of pension to Dewit C. Chapman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska: A bill (H. R. 23654) granting an increase of pension to William P. Snowden—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23655) granting an increase of pension to Edward Yarton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLAUDE KITCHIN (by request): A bill (H. R. 23656) granting an increase of pension to John Kilpatrick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN: A bill (H. R. 23657) correcting the military record of William Rommel—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23658) granting a pension to Carrie G. Yates—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LE FEVRE: A bill (H. R. 23659) granting an increase of pension to John G. Aitken—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23660) granting an increase of pension to Harriet U. Burgess—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23661) granting an increase of pension to John W. Moak—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23662) granting an increase of pension to William Bronson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23663) granting an increase of pension to Charles A. Bartholomew—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23664) granting an increase of pension to George M. Austin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23665) granting an increase of pension to Henry W. Witbeck—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAFEAN: A bill (H. R. 23666) granting a pension to Cornelius Beecher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMB: A bill (H. R. 23667) granting an increase of pension to Mary J. Richards—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23668) granting a pension to H. H. Kidwell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMAR: A bill (H. R. 23669) granting a pension to John H. Ayers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23670) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Moody—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23671) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Crosby—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS: A bill (H. R. 23672) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Perrin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23673) granting an increase of pension to John T. Grayson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23674) granting a pension to Elizabeth E. Carr—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LOUD: A bill (H. R. 23675) granting an increase of pension to Watson F. Bisbee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23676) granting an increase of pension to William J. Hoey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McKINLEY of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 23677) granting an increase of pension to John D. Dryden—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23678) granting an increase of pension to Eli Norton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MADDEN: A bill (H. R. 23679) granting an increase of pension to John F. Hart, alias Edward Hart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAYNARD: A bill (H. R. 23680) granting a pension to John W. Davis—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23681) granting a pension to Nannie T. Harris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOUSER: A bill (H. R. 23682) granting an increase of pension to Joseph R. Bartlett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MURPHY: A bill (H. R. 23683) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Phillips—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23684) granting an increase of pension to Harry C. Cadwell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23685) granting an increase of pension to Robert Brake—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OLCOTT: A bill (H. R. 23686) granting an increase of pension to William H. Kehlbeck—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PADGETT: A bill (H. R. 23687) granting a pension to Blanche C. Polk—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PAYNE: A bill (H. R. 23688) granting an increase of pension to William H. Hawley—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PUJO: A bill (H. R. 23689) for the relief of Martin Guillory—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23690) for the relief of the estate of Leon Lemelle, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23691) for the relief of the estate of Hillaire Paillett, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23692) for the relief of the estate of Victor Lastrapes, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. REEDER: A bill (H. R. 23693) to correct the military record of George Morse—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23694) granting an increase of pension to Wellington B. McCurdy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REYBURN: A bill (H. R. 23695) granting a pension to John Hearn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Arizona: A bill (H. R. 23696) for the relief of F. W. Volz, of Canon Diablo, Coconino County, Arizona—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SMITH of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 23697) granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Wadding—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SNAPP: A bill (H. R. 23698) granting an increase of pension to William H. Wyman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23699) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Countryman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: A bill (H. R. 23700) granting a pension to Margaret Rice—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 23701) for the relief of James E. Arnold—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr THOMAS of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 23702) granting an increase of pension to James A. Mowrey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VREELAND: A bill (H. R. 23703) granting an increase of pension to Clarendon Kelly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEEKS: A bill (H. R. 23704) to reimburse A. Herbert Bailey, of Boston, Massachusetts, for duties illegally paid—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WILEY of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 23705) granting an increase of pension to Frederick P. Gaudineer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS: A bill (H. R. 23706) for the relief of the estate of Jacob Oates, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23707) for relief of the estate of Rebecca E. Sexton—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23708) for the relief of the estate of Elizabeth Hemphill, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23709) granting an increase of pension to James M. Dick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ZENOR: A bill (H. R. 23710) granting an increase of pension to Henry Bliss—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ACHESON: A bill (H. R. 23711) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Hornbake—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MEYER: A bill (H. R. 23712) for the relief of the estate of Raymond Pochelu, deceased, late of New Orleans, La.—to the Committee on War Claims.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committee was discharged from the consideration of bill of the following title; which was thereupon referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 23152) granting a pension to Edward Hunt—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of Denison, Tex., Board of Trade, for an appropriation of $100,000 to clear channel of the upper Red River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, papers to accompany bills for relief of Joseph Rodgers Day, Joseph Swihart, and Reuben Sanders—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. AIKEN: Petition of South Carolina State Federation of Women's Clubs, for Appalachian Forest Reserves—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Joseph H. Grant—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of citizens of South Carolina, for forest reservation—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. ALEXANDER: Petition of Pomona Grange, No. 33, Patrons of Husbandry, Akron, N. Y., for parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Peter G. Straub—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of Colonel S. Y. Syrum Camp, United States War Veterans, for restoration of army canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BATES: Petition of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Meadville, Pa., against Senate bill 5133, restricting hours of employment—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Erie Tageblatte, Morning Despatch, and Erie Herald, Erie, Pa., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky: Petition of citizens of Ninth district of Kentucky, against legislation in copyright bill inimical to mechanical musical instruments—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of Vanceburg Council, No. 2; Success Council, No. 84, and Lawton Council, No. 85, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Patterson Moore, alias Andrew Jackson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BENNET of New York: Papers to accompany an act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy in the United States," approved July 1, 1898—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BOUTELL: Petitions of business firms, organizations, and citizens of cities and towns as follows, for parcels-post law: Michigan—Benton Harbor, Cigar Makers' Union, No. 457; Detroit, Stationary Firemen, No. 32; International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, No. 20; International Association of Steam, Hot Water, and Power Pipefitters, No. 8. Minnesota—Duluth, Bricklayers and Masons' International Union, No. 4; Bricklayers and Masons' International Union, No. 5; Steamfitters' Union. Ohio—Cincinnati, International Association of Steam, Hot Water, and Power Pipefitters. Wisconsin—Milwaukee, Beer Bottlers, No. 213; International Association of Marble Workers, No. 9; Pattern Makers' Association of Milwaukee. Indiana—Hammond, Cigar Makers' Union, No. 335. Missouri—Hannibal, Cigar Makers' Union, No. 76. Illinois—Freeport, Freeport Trades and Labor Council; Chicago, Typographical Union, No. 16; Brick Makers' District Council; Post-Office Clerks' Union; Carpenters and Joiners' Union, No. 54. Utah—Salt Lake City, International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, No. 166; Cigar Makers' Union, No. 224; Brewery Workmen's International Union, No. 64. Washington—Spokane, Cigar Makers' Union No. 325. Maine—Bangor, Cigar Makers' Union, No. 179. New Jersey—Newark, Leather Workers on H. G., No. 91. Rhode Island—Providence, Lithographers' International and Protective Association, No. 26. Board of supervisors of county of Oahu, Hawaii; members of Steamfitters' Union, Duluth, Minn.; citizens of Hammond, Lake County, Ind., and Morgan Park, Cook County, Ill.; Bookbinders and Rulers' Union, No. 20, Detroit, Mich.; citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., Vicksburg, Mich., Rochester, N. Y., and Chicago, Ill.; Local Union No. 160, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paper Hangers of America, Milwaukee, Wis.; citizens of Monmouth, Ill., Milwaukee, Wis., Spokane, Wash., Freeport, Ill., Duluth, Minn, and Columbus, Ohio; Foster Literary Club, Roseland, Ill.; Lithographers' International Protective and Beneficial Association, Local No. 24, Pittsburg, Pa.; citizens of Davenport, Iowa, Champaign, Ill., West, Cook County, Ill., Moline, Ill., Salt Lake City, Utah, Cincinnati, Ohio, Aledo, Ill., South Chicago, Ill., and Detroit, Mich.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BRADLEY: Petition of Argus Publishing Company, Middletown, N. Y., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: Petition of McKinley Council, No. 67, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BURTON of Delaware: Petition of Patriotic Council, No. 31, and Perseverance Council, No. 17, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania: Petition of Mantayukee Council, No. 106, Daughters of Liberty, Darby, Pa., and Strickersville Council, No. 975, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. CASSEL: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Robert R. Clendenin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: Petition of John M. Mott, for repeal of tax on State bank circulation—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. DAVEY of Louisiana: Petition of New Orleans Board of Trade, for appropriation to improve navigation on Red River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Palfrey Robb Pursell Company, New Orleans, La., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DAWSON: Petition of Corn Beef Meat Producers' Association of Iowa, against change in meat-inspection law—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota: Petition of Northfield News, Northfield, Minn., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DOVENER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Will R. Hall—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, and Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Division 166, Carbondale, Pa.; Division 263, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and D. and H. members, Division 172, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, against restriction of hours of labor by railways—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Division No. 58, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, against bill S. 5133, introduced by Senator LA FOLLETTE—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ELLIS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of William S. Blair—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against utterances of the President relative to Japanese in public schools of said city—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of American artists, for repeal of duty on art works—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Devin Post, No. 148, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New York, for restoration of Army canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FLOYD: Petition of citizens of Missouri for permission to make available waters of White River for electrical power purposes (H. R. 21385)—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Sarah E. Terrill—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of James Drake—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Thomas F. Adkins, for the Crumpacker bill for court review of postal-fraud orders—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Richard C. Tailor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of the Register-Gazette, Rockford, Ill., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts: Petition of Sunday Record, Haverhill, Mass., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GAINES of Tennessee: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Col. W. B. Walton—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GOEBEL: Petition of United Spanish War Veterans, of Cincinnati, Ohio, for restoration of Army canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Harmony Council, No. 50, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Cincinnati, Ohio, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of German-American Alliance, Cincinnati, Ohio, against Dillingham-Gardner immigration bill—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GRANGER: Petition of Betsey Williams Council, No. 2, Daughters of Liberty, Providence, R. I., and Eagle Council, No. 8, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HALE: Petition of Manufacturers and Producers' Association of Knoxville, Tenn., for investigation by Congress into cause of railway disasters—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HENRY of Connecticut: Petition of Chamber of Commerce, New Haven, Conn., for establishment of forest reserves in White Mountains—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of the Herald, and the Eastern Herald, New Britain, Conn., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HEPBURN: Petition of train and engine men of Wabash system of railways, Stanberry, Mo., and train and engine men of Chicago, Burlington and Quincy system, Ottumwa, Iowa, against legislation to limit hours of service of railway employees—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of General Protective Board, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Union Pacific system, against legislation limiting hours of service of railway employees—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HERMANN: Petition of Portland Chamber of Commerce, for appropriation of $15,000,000 for construction of marine torpedo boats for Pacific coast defense—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HINSHAW: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Jacob H. Culver—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Order of Railway Conductors, of Lincoln, Nebr., against legislation restricting hours of labor on railways—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Beatrice Commercial Club, for appropriation to enlarge United States post-office building at Beatrice, Nebr.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of General Protective Board of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, Union Pacific system, against legislation restricting hours of labor on railways—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HOUSTON: Paper to accompany bill for relief of W. B. Corley and John M. Gilbert—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey: Petition of citizens of Cliffwood, N. J., Long Branch, N. J., and Toms River, N. J., favoring McCumber-Sperry-Tirrell bill (H. R. 5292)—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of National Camp, Pennsylvania State Camp, and New York State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of harbor master of Philadelphia, Pa., for deepening channel of Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Seaman's Union of America, against ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. HULL: Petition of McCorkle Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, and civil war veterans, National Soldiers' Home, Tennessee, for restoration of canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HUNT: Petition of Camp Louis A. Craig, Army of Philippines, for bill H. R. 18276 (badges to veterans of Philippine war)—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska: Petition of Commercial Club of Omaha, for increase of salary for post-office clerks—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of South Omaha Live Stock Exchange, against car shortage and short train service for handling live stock—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of State legislative committee of Order of Railway Conductors of Nebraska, against the La Follette bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Ohio: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Christian Roessler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN: Petition of Pennsylvania State Camp and New York State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, and National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of J. M. Reece, Greensboro, N. C., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Mrs. Carrie G. Yates—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KNAPP: Petition of Chamber of Commerce, Watertown, N. Y., for increase of salaries of clerks of first and second class post-offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. LAFEAN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Cornelius Beecher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, and National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Federation of Trades, York, Pa., against employment of Chinese, Japanese, et al., Asiatic cooly labor, in Panama Canal Zone—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LAW: Papers to accompany bills for relief of Henry Bauerlin and Mary C. Leavens—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LEE: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Frederick Ellison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LEVER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Caroline Vicks—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LOUD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of William Hoey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Watson F. Bisbee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Fourth Immune Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, for restoration of the Army canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LOUDENSLAGER: Petition of National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, and State Camp of New York, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of citizens of Merchantville, Camden County, N. J., against sale of liquor in Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee: Petition of Thomas F. Adkin, Rochester, N. Y., for the Crumpacker bill, relative to fraud-order law—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McKINLEY of Illinois: Petition of Journal and Gazette, Mattoon, The Gazette, Champaign, Mattoon Morning Star, Champaign News, and The Herald, Decatur, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MAHON: Petition of People's Register, Chambersburg, Pa., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Lewistown, Pa., for consideration of third and fourth class mail matter at rate of 1 cent per pound—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. MAYNARD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John W. Davis—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles H. Harris—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. OLCOTT: Paper to accompany bill for the relief of William H. Kehlbeck—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PADGETT: Paper to accompany bill for relief of George W. Robinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PAYNE: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Myron C. Marshall—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Richard Welch and William B. Yawger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. POLLARD: Petition of Division No. 227, Railway Conductors, Lincoln, Nebr., and convention of railway conductors, against reduction of hours of labor by railway employees—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Lincoln, Nebr., against sale of liquors in Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. PRINCE: Petition of Galesburg Evening News, Quincy Whig, and Star-Courier, Kewanee, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PUJO: Petition of International Seaman's Union of America, against ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of The Signal, Crowley, La., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of general assembly of Louisiana, for investigation relative to the dam in Mississippi as impediment to navigation—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Elsie David, heir of Theophile Lanvald—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of estate of Victor Lastrapes, estate of Hillaire Paillet, Martin Guillory, and estate of Leon Lemelle—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. REYBURN: Petition of Workingman's Protective Tariff League of Philadelphia, for 35-foot channel in Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RIXEY: Paper to accompany bill for relief of William R. Stabb—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Alexandria (Va.) Council, No. 33, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. RYAN: Petition of Patriotic Order Sons of America, Corning, N. Y., favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, relative to Japanese school question against President's utterances relative to same—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Colonel S. Y. Seyburn Camp, No. 13, Spanish War Veterans, for restoration of canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SCHNEEBELI: Petition of Thomas F. Adkins, Rochester, N. Y., for the Crumpacker bill relative to the fraud-order law—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SHARTELL: Petition of Commercial Club of Joplin, Mo., for increase of salaries of first and second class post-offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Camp Louis A. Craig, Army of Philippines, Kansas City, Mo., favoring bill H. R. 18276, relative to bestowal of badges to those who fought in Philippines—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Peter Francis, for $50,000 appropriation for improvement of rivers and harbors of Missouri—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of citizens of Fifteenth Congressional district, for $50,000 for river and harbor improvements in Missouri—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SHEPPARD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of legal representatives of Samuel Dickens—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Joseph F. Knighten and John M. Smith—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Stephen D. Jordan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHERMAN: Petition of F. C. Warner Camp, Spanish War Veterans, Ilion, N. Y., for restoration of Army canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Utica Council, No. 50, and Guiding Star Council, No. 29, Daughters of Liberty, Utica, N. Y., favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SMITH of Arizona: Petition of citizens of Tucson, against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of Yuma County Commercial Club and board of supervisors of Yuma County, for an appropriation of $2,000,000 for turning Colorado River for Salton Sea—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Bisbee Daily Review, the Republican, Phoenix, and the Enterprise, Phoenix, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SMITH of Pennsylvania: Petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against utterances of the President relative to Japanese in schools of said city—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Sons of America, and National Camp, Patriotic Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SNAPP: Petition of Daily News, Elgin, Ill., and Daily News, Aurora, Ill., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Elgin Merchants' Association, for increase of salaries of clerks in first and second class post-offices—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: Petition of Ohio State Dental Society, for bills relative to dental service in the Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John A. Hulen—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. TAWNEY: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Lewis L. Bingham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Ohio: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Richard J. Fanning—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VAN WINKLE: Petition of International Seamen's Union, against the subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, and National Camp, Patriotic Order of Americans, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. WACHTER: Petition of ministers of the Methodist Episcopal churches of Baltimore, Md., for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Pennsylvania State Camp, National Camp, and New York State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. WALDO: Petition of George A. Orrok, George W.

Tillson, and Edwin Sanderson, for continuance of appropriation for measurement of water flow in rivers by the Hydrographic Bureau—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of Augustine L. Roderiguey, for annexation of Cuba to United States—to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. WILLIAMS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of estate of Jacob Oates, Warren County; estate of Rebecca E. Sexton, Warren County; estate of Elizabeth Hemphill, Hinds County; estate of J. P. Davis, Yazoo County, and Burwell V. McGuffie—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ZENOR: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Isaiah Carter and George Peyton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, January 8, 1907.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. EDWARD E. HALE.

Mr. WILLIAM B. ALLISON, a Senator from the State of Iowa, appeared in his seat to-day.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. BURROWS, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal stands approved.

KLAMATH INDIAN AGENCY, OREG.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting an increase in the estimate of appropriation for the support of the Indians of the Klamath Agency, Oreg., from $5,000 to $8,000; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 16548. An act to provide for a judicial review of orders excluding persons from the use of United States mail facilities; and

H. J. Res. 214. Joint resolution to provide for the printing of 16,000 copies of Senate Document No. 144, Fifty-ninth Congress, second session.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of the preachers' meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church of New York City, N. Y., praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Townsend, Mont., and of Mitchell County, Kans., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Augusta, Ga., praying for the establishment in Africa of a free and independent government for ex-slaves and their offspring under the protection of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Rochester and New York, N. Y., and of Chicago and Blue Island, Ill., remonstrating against any investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. CULBERSON presented the petition of Godfrey R. Fowler, of Texas, praying for the enactment of legislation for the relief of Joseph V. Cunningham and other officers of the Philippine Volunteers; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. NELSON presented petitions of the congregation of the Evangelical Church, of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Preston, of sundry citizens of Argyle, of the congregation of the Baptist Church, and of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Anoka, all in the State of Minnesota, praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MILLARD presented memorials of sundry railway employees of North Platte and Omaha, Nebr., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. DEPEW presented a memorial of Local Division No. 154, Order of Railway Conductors, of Binghamton, N. Y., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation limiting the hours of service of railway employees; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FRAZIER presented a petition of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, of Saulsbury, Tenn., praying for the payment of their claim against the United States, as recommended by the Court of Claims; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CULLOM presented memorials of sundry citizens of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against any investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. FULTON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Ashland, Oreg., praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HEMENWAY presented memorials of sundry employees of the western division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, west of Pittsburg, Pa., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BEVERIDGE presented a petition of sundry citizens of South Bend, Ind., and of sundry citizens of La Porte, Ind., praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of Local Division No. 186, Street and Electric Railway Employees' Association, of Anderson, Ind., remonstrating against the repeal of the present Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions of the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church of Hartford City; of the congregation of the Third Presbyterian Church of New Albany, and of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church of Kingston, all in the State of Indiana, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Graessle Mercer Company, of Seymour, Ind., praying for the enactment of legislation to remove the duty on composing and linotype machines and the parts thereof; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of Crescent City Council, No. 14, United Commercial Travelers of America, of Evansville, Ind., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "parcels-post bill;" which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the San Francisco Labor Council, of San Francisco, Cal., relative to the exclusion of Japanese from the schools of that city; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the city council of Chicago, Ill., praying that the outflow from Lake Michigan be controlled solely by legislation and not by treaty with any foreign government; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Hartford City, Dubois County, and Sullivan County, all in the State of Indiana, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. BERRY. I report back favorably without amendment, from the Committee on Commerce, the bill (S. 7211) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to construct a bridge across the Missouri River at a point between Kansas City and Sibley, in Jackson County, Mo.," approved March 19, 1904, and I submit a report thereon. I call the attention of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] to the bill.

Mr. WARNER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill just reported by the Senator from Arkansas.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PENSIONS TO ARMY NURSES.

Mr. SCOTT. I am authorized by the Committee on Pensions to report back favorably the bill (S. 695) increasing the pensions of Army nurses. I report the bill without amendment, and submit a report thereon. At as early day as possible I shall try to call up the bill by unanimous consent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. McCUMBER. As a minority of the Committee on Pensions, I submit adverse views upon the bill reported favorably by the Senator from West Virginia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The views of the minority of the committee will be printed in connection with the report.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 7612) granting an increase of pension to Amos Brough; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FRYE introduced a bill (S. 7613) granting an increase of pension to Joseph T. Woodward; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7614) to amend the act entitled "An act to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes," approved July 7, 1898; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HOPKINS introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7615) granting an increase of pension to James M. Brown; and

A bill (S. 7616) granting an increase of pension to Ezekiel C. Ford.

Mr. MILLARD introduced a bill (S. 7617) granting an increase of pension to Victor H. Coffman; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BURKETT introduced a bill (S. 7618) providing for the control of grazing upon the public lands in the arid States and Territories of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. BURKETT. I ask that 5,000 copies additional of the bill be printed for the use of the Senate. It is a bill similar to one I introduced at the last session, and there was an extra number printed at that time. The bill in its present form embodies some amendments in which certain organizations are concerned.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that in addition to the usual number 5,000 copies of the bill be printed for the use of the Senate. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. TELLER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7619) granting an increase of pension to Ella L. Deweese;

A bill (S. 7620) granting an increase of pension to Robert E. McBride (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 7621) granting an increase of pension to John Lynch.

Mr. FORAKER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7622) granting an increase of pension to George K. Taylor; and

A bill (S. 7623) granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Kumler.

Mr. ELKINS introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7624) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Ogle;

A bill (S. 7625) granting a pension to Perry H. Johnson;

A bill (S. 7626) granting an increase of pension to Enoch Childers;

A bill (S. 7627) granting a pension to Waldo W. Gifford; and

A bill (S. 7628) granting an increase of pension to John P. Wildman.

Mr. ELKINS introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 7629) for the relief of Harmon Snyder;

A bill (S. 7630) for the relief of the estate of Sarah J. Ronemous, deceased; and

A bill (S. 7631) for the relief of Jasper Workman.

Mr. KNOX introduced a bill (S. 7632) granting an increase of pension to Elias Garrett; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. KNOX (for Mr. PENROSE) introduced a bill (S. 7633) to encourage and temporarily assist the construction, equipment, operation, and maintenance of railroads in the district of Alaska, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. KITTREDGE introduced a bill (S. 7634) granting an increase of pension to Charles Shattuck; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. WARREN introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7635) granting an increase of pension to Louis Grade; and

A bill (S. 7636) granting an increase of pension to Samuel M. Breckenridge.

Mr. HEMENWAY introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7637) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Brown;

A bill (S. 7638) granting a pension to Spencer Woods;

A bill (S. 7639) granting an increase of pension to Paul H. Burns;

A bill (S. 7640) granting an increase of pension to Stephen H. S. Cook;

A bill (S. 7641) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Ostheimer; and

A bill (S. 7642) granting an increase of pension to Oliver H. Rhoades.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 7643) for the promotion and retirement of Col. John B. Rodman, United States Army, retired; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MONEY introduced a bill (S. 7644) for the relief of the estate of James S. Wilson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. KITTREDGE submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to pay the judgment obtained by Jane E. Waldron in the United States circuit court for the district of South Dakota in the case entitled "Jane E. Waldron against Black Tomahawk and Ira Hatch, agent of the Cheyenne River Agency," intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HEYBURN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $50,000 for compensation and actual necessary traveling expenses of special agents to investigate trade conditions abroad, with the object of promoting the foreign commerce of the United States, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Manufactures, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment relative to the appointment of three clerks of class 4, one of whom shall act as chief clerk, in the Bureau of Manufactures, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Manufactures, and ordered to be printed.

PROTECTION OF PACKAGES IN THE MAIL.

On motion of Mr. CARTER, it was Ordered, That 1,000 additional copies of the bill (S. 6923) for the better protection of packages sent through the mails be printed for the use of the committee.

COMMITTEE ON VENTILATION AND ACOUSTICS.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there shall be added to the select committees of the Senate the Committee on Ventilation and Acoustics.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the following constitute the Select Committee of the Senate on Ventilation and Acoustics: Mr. DU PONT (chairman), Messrs. GALLINGER, GAMBLE.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Select Committee on Ventilation and Acoustics be authorized to employ a messenger at $1,440 per annum, the same to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be authorized and instructed to provide for a clerk of the Select Committee on Ventilation and Acoustics, at an annual salary of $1,800.

COMMITTEE ON MANUFACTURES.

Mr. HALE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That Mr. DU PONT be appointed to fill the vacancy in the Committee on Manufactures.

JOANNA C. KELLEY.

Mr. RAYNER submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, from the contingent fund of the Senate, to Joanna C. Kelley, widow of T. A. Kelley, late a fireman in the employ of the Senate of the United States, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his demise, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

ESTATE OF JAMES MAKOY, DECEASED.

Mr. MONEY submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

Resolved, That the bill (S. 1296) for the relief of the estate of James Makoy, deceased, with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims for a finding of facts under the terms of the act of March 3, 1887, and generally known as the Tucker Act.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. LODGE. I asked the other day that Senate Document No. 165, being the letter from the Secretary of War transmitting, pursuant to Senate resolution, a report relative to allowances made by the Quartermaster-General's Department upon the claims of D. M. Carman, of Manila, P. I., etc., and Senate Document No. 166, being the letter from the Secretary of War relative to allowance made by the Quartermaster-General's Department on the claim of Brooks & Co., of Santiago, for the loss of the lighter Maria, etc., be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. The bills to which those documents relate I find have been referred to the Committee on Claims, and the reference which I requested was a mistaken one. I ask that the reference may be changed, and that Documents 165 and 166 may be referred to the Committee on Claims, where the bills are pending.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, that change of reference will be made.

ANNUAL REPORT NATIONAL PUBLICITY BILL ORGANIZATION.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, there is a bill pending in the House and in the Senate that relates to publicity of political contributions in national elections. A national organization was established for the purpose of advancing the interests of the measure. Lately that organization held its first annual convention. I have the proceedings of that convention, and I ask unanimous consent that they be printed as a Senate document for the use of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Colorado? The Chair hears none, and the proceedings mentioned will be printed as a Senate document.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

H. R. 16548. An act to provide for a judicial review of orders excluding persons from the use of United States mail facilities; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. J. Res. 214. Joint resolution to provide for the printing of 16,000 copies of Senate Document No. 144, Fifty-ninth Congress, second session; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

DISMISSAL OF THREE COMPANIES OF TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. FORAKER rose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. FORAKER, as modified, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be, and hereby is, authorized to take such further testimony as may be necessary to establish the facts connected with the discharge of members of Companies B, C, and D, Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, and that it be, and hereby is, authorized to send for persons and papers and administer oaths, and report thereon, by bill or otherwise.

The committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is further authorized, if deemed necessary, to visit Brownsville, Tex., inspect the locality of the recent disturbance, and examine witnesses there.

Mr. FORAKER. I received a communication a few moments ago from the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], stating that he is so ill with the grippe and cold, from which he has been suffering for a few days, that he is unable to be in attendance, informing me further that he desires to speak upon this resolution, and requesting me to allow it to go over until to-morrow. That I am quite willing to agree to, but I understand that there are other Senators who desire to speak. If so, I will waive any right I may have under the notice I gave yesterday to speak further at this time, and speak later, if I find it agreeable to do so.

Mr. DANIEL. I would be glad to speak to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. FORAKER. I will say further that on yesterday we arrived at an agreement, as I understood it, that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN], who had given notice that he would address the Senate at this hour, should not be interfered with, but be allowed to proceed.

Mr. DANIEL. I would be glad if it could be understood that when the Senator from North Carolina gets through I may take the floor. I have no idea of interfering with him.

Mr. FORAKER. Then I will ask that the resolution may be temporarily laid aside until after the Senator from North Carolina has completed his remarks.

Mr. OVERMAN. I wish to say that I knew nothing about the unanimous-consent agreement, and there was no unanimous-consent agreement when I gave the notice. As I understand the rules of the Senate, I can only proceed by the courtesy of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from North Carolina.

EXTENSION OF FEDERAL POWERS.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask the Secretary to read Senate resolution No. 200, on which I propose to make some remarks.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read at the request of the Senator from North Carolina.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. WHYTE December 17, 1906, as follows:

1. Resolved, That the people of the several States, acting in their highest sovereign capacity as free and independent States, adopted the Federal Constitution and established a form of government in the nature of a confederated republic, and for the purpose of carrying into effect the objects for which it was formed delegated to that Government certain rights enumerated in said Constitution, but reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people thereof, all the residuary powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the States.

2. Resolved further, That the extension of the Federal powers beyond those enumerated in the Constitution can only be rightfully accomplished in the manner provided by that instrument, and not by a strained construction of the Constitution which shall obliterate all State rights and vest the coveted, but not granted, power where it will be exercised by the General Government.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, written in the constitution of the great State of North Carolina, which I have the honor in part to represent, is the following clause, which at the present time is very significant:

A recurrence to first principles is absolutely necessary to the preservation of our liberties.

Judging from newspaper articles, magazine articles, and certain banquet speeches, the very significant utterances of men of prominence, great leaders of the Republican party, who fearlessly and candidly declare the doctrines of the old Federalists, and who propose in a measure to shape the policy of their party and declare its issues, and, judging from certain measures which are proposed here, it is high time that we should recur to fundamental principles and maintain those immortal truths and tenets upon which rest the very framework of this great Republic; and it is about time to stop and take our bearings and see whither we are drifting, to guard against being dashed to pieces against the rock of anti-republicanism or against being driven into unknown seas.

Chief Justice Marshall never stated a greater truth than when upon one occasion he stated that delegated powers are often abused. If they were liable to abuse in his day, how much more now, when men are thirsting for more power, are they liable to abuse to suit the purpose of those in authority, who, acting perhaps as they think for the best interests of the country, are tempted to put the most strained construction upon the commerce clause of the Constitution?

Bills have been introduced in this Congress to regulate child labor in the factories and mines of the States. One bill introduced by the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

And a bill proposed by the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], which is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That six months from and after the passage of this act no carrier of interstate commerce shall transport or accept for transportation the products of any factory or mine in which children under 14 years of age are employed or permitted to work, which products are offered to said interstate carrier by the firm, person, or corporation owning or operating said factory or mine, or any officer or agent or servant thereof, for transportation into any other State or Territory than the one in which said factory is located.

SEC. 2. That no carrier of interstate commerce shall transport or accept for transportation the products of any factory or mine offered it for transportation by any person, firm, or corporation which owns or operates such factory or mine, or any officer, agent, or servant of such person, firm, or corporation, until the president or secretary or general manager of such corporation or a member of such firm or the person owning or operating such factory or mine shall file with said carrier an affidavit to the effect that children under 14 years of age are not employed in such factory or mine.

SEC. 3. That the form of said affidavit shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor. After the first affidavit is filed a like affidavit shall be filed, on or before July 1 and on or before December 31 of each year, with the interstate carrier to which such factory or mine offers its products for transportation; and after the first affidavit subsequent affidavits shall also state that no children under 14 years of age are employed or permitted to work in said factory or mine or have been employed or permitted to work in said factory or mine at any time during the preceding six months.

SEC. 4. That any officer or agent of a carrier of interstate commerce who is a party to any violation of this act or who knowingly violates any of the provisions of this act shall be punished for each offense by a fine of not more than $10,000 nor less than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than six months nor less than one month or by both said fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. Any person by this act required to file the affidavit herein provided for who fails or refuses to file such affidavit or who shall make a false statement in said affidavit, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $20,000 nor less than $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year nor less than three months, or by both said fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

This bill has also been proposed as an amendment to the bill now pending to regulate child labor in the District of Columbia.

Mr. President, the enactment into law of either one of these bills, in my judgment, would be not only to stretch almost to the breaking the commerce clause of the Constitution, but would be a usurpation of the rights of the States or the people, an assumption of that power which they reserved when the tenth amendment to the original Constitution was adopted.

Mr. President, the old Confederation entered into after our independence was established for the benefit of the colonies proved a dismal failure. With no provision for the regulation of commerce, no provision for the raising of revenue or the laying of imposts, all was inharmonious, distress came, and the people were not only humiliated but degraded. Then, upon the invitation of several of the States, a convention was called for the purpose of establishing a more stable government and the adoption of a constitution. In this convention all the States were represented.

The Constitution then adopted was submitted to the States for ratification and was adopted by nine of the States, that being the number required for its ratification. Some of the States, however, refused to ratify until they were assured that it would be amended so as to protect the people in their rights, home rule and local self-government; so that it should be clearly understood and written in the instrument itself that the government to be established should be one of limited powers only, and that all the powers not granted therein should be reserved to the people. I doubt if the State of Massachusetts would have ever ratified the Constitution if she had not been assured by John Hancock that certain amendments would be adopted, one of which she herself proposed, among others, was almost in the language of the tenth amendment itself. The State of North Carolina, always conservative, but always jealous of her rights, absolutely refused to adopt the Constitution until it was made certain that the ten amendments were or would be adopted. She was not in the Union and did not participate in the election of the first President, and refused to join until November, 1789, when she ratified the Constitution. She was one of the last to go in as she was the last of the Southern States to secede.

The very prefix to the resolution of the Congress submitting these amendments to the States for their adoption stated that a number of States at the time of the ratification of the Constitution expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction and abuse of its powers, that further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added. It is therefore evident that not only the States, but the Congress itself, in every way they could endeavored to throw around it every safeguard to prevent strained constructions and abuses of power which seemed to have been anticipated, as well as to extend the grounds of public confidence in the Government.

In this connection and for the purpose of this argument I will read the tenth amendment or article, as well as the ninth article to be taken in connection therewith.

ARTICLE IX. The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X. The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, not prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people.

Now, Mr. President, it is well not only to quote the language as it is written, which seems simple and plain enough and which is in no way involved. In the great case of Gibbons v. Ogden (9 Wheat., p. 188) Chief Justice Marshall says, in relation to this clause:

As men whose intentions require no concealment generally employ words which most directly and aptly express the ideas they intend to convey, the enlightened patriots who framed our Constitution and the people who adopted it must be understood to have employed words in their natural sense and to have intended what they have said.

But let us see how these principles were understood and expounded at the time of their adoption. Mr. Jefferson declared the duty of the Government to be—

The support of the State governments in all their rights as the most competent administration of our domestic affairs, the surest bulwark against antirepublican tendencies, the preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad.

And Mr. Madison declared the purposes of the Government to be under the Constitution—

To support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities; to respect the rights and authorities reserved to the States and to the people and equally incorporated with and essential to the success of the general system.

As there was in those days of its adoption, there is to-day, it seems, a strong sentiment growing in this country for a consolidated or centralized government, for the extinction of the rights of the States, and abolition of State lines. This sentiment has grown with the inordinate desire for the dollar; the desire for grandeur and glory has increased with the growth of commercialism, the building up of mighty fortunes, the growth of a moneyed aristocracy, the centralization of great wealth in the hands of the few, produced by the great trusts and monopolies, many of which were organized for the purpose of crushing out competition and which have been robbing the people of untold millions.

A great writer years ago said:

With the aristocracy which great wealth brings comes the desire for power and glory, conferring greater power and necessarily reducing many to weakness, misery, and oppression.

And, I will add, with it comes corruption, if not despotism, and with the power that great wealth brings comes the desire for centralization of power in the Government, and with these desires realized a government of the people, for the people, and by the people will be a thing of the past.

Under our dual system of government, the reserved and delegated powers respected and no intrenchment upon one nor the other, this country has progressed beyond the wildest dreams of the fathers, our civilization has rapidly advanced, our increase of wealth has been marvelous, and there is no reason why the system should be changed and the limitations placed in the Constitution be obliterated; there is no reason for any departure from the fundamental principles as construed and expounded by the founders of the Republic and by the highest court of the land.

There is no question but that this Government derived all the power it has from the people of the States, and its Constitution was adopted by them with its written limitation and checks against abuses and usurpations. Shall the Congress not respect the limitations of the Constitution? And in the language of that great charter of our liberties, Shall it disparage the rights retained by the people?

No, Mr. President, the rights reserved to the States or to the people must be peacefully but efficiently protected against any encroachment by the General Government. And this great body which represents the States should see to it that there shall be no invasion upon these powers, should see to it that the fundamental principles of our free institutions are maintained in their full strength and vigor. For an encroachment upon these reserved rights to the extent which the tendencies of the time seem to be leading would be for the Central Government to interfere with, administer upon, and control the industrial, the local, and the domestic concerns of the people in the States, and when once begun and the precedent established there is no telling where it would lead nor where it would end, and State sovereignty would finally be no more. Instead of impairing the sovereignty of the State it is the duty of Congress to uphold and protect it to the last.

If more power is needed for the successful operation of the Government owing to changed conditions, the way is clearly pointed out; the method is provided for in the Constitution by Article V. Let an amendment be submitted to the States. In any event, let the people be consulted; let their sacred will be known, let their consent be given to the surrender of any of their rights, and without their consent let nothing be done by an unwarranted construction.

I will here read, Mr. President, the interstate-commerce clause of the Constitution:

The Congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes.

It might be important here to observe that in the debates in the Constitutional Convention history shows that much more extensive grants of commercial power were proposed, asked for, and most strenuously advocated, but all such propositions were voted down and this simple clause adopted by the wise men who composed that convention and who, being fresh from the people, respected their will.

Under the power here given, which was absolutely necessary for the General Government to have in order to harmoniously and efficiently regulate the commerce between the States and foreign nations, it is now claimed and seriously contended by some in this day and time that there is no limit to the extent of the power of Congress in commercial matters, and this is claimed in the face of frequent deliverances of the Supreme Court construing this clause.

There is probably, Mr. President, no limit to the power of Congress to deal with commerce as soon as it begins its transit or journey and until it ends and to deal with it while in transit between the States, and also it has full power to prescribe all the rules, regulations, and conditions under which it is governed. But as Congress has the exclusive power over interstate commerce, so the State has the exclusive power to control its own domestic and internal affairs, and it should be permitted to do so without question. Without the consent of the State the Congress has not only no business, but no power to interfere. And for any fancied act of omission of commission, I must say it is going very far for one citizen of another State or one high in authority in this Government to condemn and threaten the extinction of her rights as a State.

I am free to admit, Mr. President, that in some matters affecting the interstate commerce where citizens or corporations of one State are so conducting their business as to work an injury to citizens of other States, and where the other States, even under their reserved power, are powerless to protect themselves against the wrong done them on account of the power which has been surrendered to the Government, it is necessary for Congress to interfere and legislate for the purpose of controlling and regulating in these matters—such as the rate bill, the pure-food bill, and the food-inspection law, all of which receive my most hearty indorsement—and in my opinion no legislation for a century has done more for the good of all the people.

But when it is proposed to regulate and control these matters which can be controlled whether the State will or will not, as regards articles of commerce which in themselves can possibly work no injury upon citizens of other States, I deny the power of the General Government to interfere in any respect to the point where it begins its transit.

Though commerce and the scope of Congress over its regulations, under these laws, have been extended so as to include manufacture, the mere fact that goods are manufactured in the State for export to another, this fact in itself does not constitute in them interstate commerce within the meaning of the Constitution. This is so held by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Coe v. Erroll (116 U. S., 517).

In that case certain logs cut at a place in New Hampshire had been hauled to the town of Erroll, on the Androscoggin River, in that State, for the purpose of transportation beyond the limits of the State to Lewiston, Me., and were held at Erroll for a convenient time for shipment, and taxes were assessed on these logs for city and county and State purposes, and the question was whether these logs were subject to taxation like other property in New Hampshire, as they were to be exported into another State, and Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court, says:

"Do the owner's state of mind in relation to the goods—that is, his intent to export them and his partial preparation to do so—exempt them from taxation? This is the precise question for solution.

"There must be a point of time when they cease to be governed exclusively by the domestic law and begin to be protected by the national law of commercial regulation, and that moment seems to us to be a legitimate one for this purpose in which they commence their final movement for transportation from the State of their origin to that of their destination. When the products of the farm or the forests are collected and brought in from the surrounding country to a town or station serving as an entrepôt for that particular region, whether on a river or a line of railroad, such products are not yet exports, nor are they in process of exportation, nor is exportation begun until they are committed to the common carrier for transportation out of the State to the State of their destination or have started on their ultimate destination to that State.

"Until then it is reasonable to regard this as not only within the State of their origin, but as a part of the general mass of property of that State, subject to its jurisdiction and liable to taxation. Then if not taxed by reason of their being intended for exportation, but taxed without any discrimination in the usual way and manner in which such property is taxed in the State, * * * the point of time when State jurisdiction over the commodity of commerce begins and ends is not an easy matter to designate or define, yet it is highly important both to the shipper and to the State that it should be clearly defined so as to avoid all ambiguity or question. But no definite rule has been adopted with regard to the point of time at which the taxing power of the State ceases as to goods exported to a foreign country or to another State. What we have already said, however, in relation to the products of a State intended for exportation to another State will indicate the view which seems to us to be the sound one on that subject, namely, that such goods do not seem to be part of the general mass of property subject as such to its jurisdiction and to taxation in the usual way until they have been shipped or entered with a common carrier for transportation to another State or have been started upon such transportation in a continuous route or journey."

The courts have held that the police power of a State is as broad and plenary as its taxing power. This being the doctrine as to the taxing power, Mr. President, all property in the State, therefore, is subject to the police power of that State so long as it remains in the State and before it starts upon its journey as commerce from one State to another.

If Congress can regulate child labor in our factories and mines under the interstate-commerce clause or any other clause of the Constitution, it has the power and can with the same reason regulate child labor upon the farm, can regulate the ages at which the boys and girls of the farm can pick from the boll the fleecy staple which is taken to the gin and then to the factory to be manufactured into cloth. It can regulate the ages at which the farmers' children shall work in the great wheat fields in the States of the Northwest, for the farmers have in mind when the wheat is produced that a greater portion of it is for interstate commerce, and it is to be shipped abroad to other states and foreign countries. The production of wheat and its manufacture into flour, though intended for such, is not interstate commerce. Neither is the production of cotton and its manufacture into cloth interstate commerce, though intended for such. As Justice Bradley says, "It is not the owner's or producer's mind which makes the commodity interstate commerce."

The cotton farmer knows that more than nine-tenths of his cotton will be shipped abroad; he knows that the price of cotton is fixed in Liverpool, a foreign market. While we manufacture about 2,500,000 bales in this country, about 7,500,000 bales are shipped to foreign countries. This does not make the raw material nor the manufactured products articles of interstate commerce. It does not become so until placed in cars or boats of the carrier for shipment.

If Congress is to regulate the cotton mills, why not let it go into the regulating business generally? Regulate the flour mills, the steel mills, the shoe factories, the clothing factories, and regulate the farms; regulate the laws in regard to health; let it regulate every branch of industry which contemplates an interstate or foreign market, and then there will be little left for the State to do.

I wish to say, Mr. President, that I am heartily in favor of reasonable child-labor laws. I favor a child-labor law for the District of Columbia, and, with some amendments, shall support the bill for that purpose now pending. I have favored a reasonable child-labor law for the mines and factories of my own State. We have such a law upon our statute books passed in 1903, a law passed by the legislature of that State, which had the power and whose concern it was, and not by the Congress, which has not the power and whose concern it was not. Such legislation by the General Government I am opposed to as being a step toward centralization and an invasion upon the rights of the State. The President, in his message, recognizes the fact that the power to control child labor is in the States and does not belong to Congress, for he says in his message to this session of Congress:

"The horrors incident to the employment of young children in factories or at work anywhere are a blot on our civilization. It is true that each State must ultimately settle the question in its own way, but a thorough official investigation of the matter, with the results published broadcast, would greatly help toward arousing the public conscience and securing unity of State action in the matter."

I am glad to state, too, Mr. President, that our cotton-mill children have the opportunity afforded them of an education. Many of our factories maintain the very best schools for from four to eight months, with the very best school buildings with modern equipment, and employ the best teachers, all at their own expense, and every opportunity is given for the education of the children.

While there may be much truth in it, and there may be, and perhaps is, an evil that should be corrected in the proper way, yet, in my judgment, there is a good deal of claptrap in all this cry about the crimes against humanity and slavery in the cotton mills.

Where the evils exist the States can and will correct them. I insist that in this Christian land of ours there is no less of higher moral ideas and humanitarianism—the brotherhood of man—in one State than another. We are all living and moving on a higher, nobler, and more Christian-like plane, I trust, and where one State has seen its duty and legislated in favor of humanity and corrected these evils you may soon expect that the Christian and patriotic sentiment in other States will cause their legislatures to act in these matters until we have the uniformity that is so much desired.

And again, Mr. President, the law which will suit one State might not prove satisfactory to the people of another State, where conditions are entirely different, and the regulation should be left to each State, which knows its own conditions best. The power to pass such a law is exclusively in the State. The States never surrendered to the General Government the power or its right to legislate upon questions affecting the life and liberty of its citizens. It never surrendered its right to legislate upon the rights of person or property or upon questions affecting the good order of society, the public health, or upon any of its internal, industrial, or domestic concerns. It never surrendered its police power, and it never will. These rights they not only did not surrender, but the people have always jealously guarded them and reserved them. This was clearly understood when the Constitution was adopted, and to properly safeguard them was the reason for the adoption of the ten amendments.

These questions have been before the Supreme Court and, in my opinion, have been settled in a variety of cases.

In the case of Kidd v. Pearson (128 U. S., 1), Justice Lamar, writing the opinion of the court, says (p. 16):

"The line which separates the province of Federal authority over the regulation of commerce from the powers reserved to the States has engaged the attention of this court in a great number and variety of cases. The decisions in these cases, though they do not in a single instance assume to trace that line throughout its entire length, or to state any rule further than to locate the line in each particular case as it arises, have almost uniformly adhered to the fundamental principles which Chief Justice Marshall, in the case of Gibbons v. Ogden (9 Wheat., 1), laid down as to the nature and extent of the grant of power to Congress on this subject, and also of the limitations, express and implied, which it imposes upon State legislation, with regard to taxation, to the control of domestic commerce, and to all persons and things within its limits of purely internal concern.

"According to the theory of that great opinion the supreme authority of this country is divided between the Government of the United States, whose action extends over the whole Union, but which possesses only certain powers enumerated in its written Constitution, and the separate governments of the several States, which retain all powers not delegated to the Union. The power expressly conferred upon Congress to regulate commerce is absolute and complete in itself, with no limitations other than are prescribed in the Constitution; is to a certain extent exclusively vested in Congress, so far free from State action; is coextensive with the subject on which it acts, and can not stop at the external boundary of a State, but must enter into the interior of every State whenever required by the interests of commerce with foreign nations, or among the several States. This power, however, does not comprehend the purely internal domestic commerce of a State which is carried on between man and man within a State or between different parts of the same State.

"The distinction is stated in the following comprehensive language:

> The genius and character of the whole Government seem to be that its action is to be applied to all the external concerns of the nation and to those internal concerns which affect the States generally, but not to those which are completely within a particular State, which do not affect other States, and with which it is not necessary to interfere for the purpose of executing some of the general powers of the Government. The completely internal commerce of a State, then, may be considered as reserved for the State itself. (P. 195.)

* * * * * * *

"No distinction is more popular to the common mind or more clearly expressed in economic and political literature than that between manufactures and commerce. Manufacture is transformation, the fashioning of raw materials into a change of form for use. The functions of commerce are different. The buying and selling and the transportation incidental thereto constitute commerce, and the regulation of commerce in the constitutional sense embraces the regulation at least of such transportation. The legal definition of the term as given by this court in County of Mobile v. Kimball (102 U. S., 691, 702) is as follows: 'Commerce with foreign countries and among the States, strictly considered, consists in intercourse and traffic, including in these terms navigation and the transportation and transit of persons and property, as well as the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities.' If it be held that the term includes the regulation of all such manufactures as are intended to be the subject of commercial transactions in the future, it is impossible to deny that it would also include all productive industries that contemplate the same thing. The result would be that Congress would be invested, to the exclusion of the States, with the power to regulate not only manufactures, but also agriculture, horticulture, stock raising, domestic fisheries, mining—in short every branch of human industry. For is there one of them that does not contemplate, more or less clearly, an interstate or foreign market?

* * * * * * *

"The power being vested in Congress and denied to the States, it would follow as an inevitable result that the duty would devolve on Congress to regulate all of these delicate, multiform, and vital interests, interests which in their nature are and must be local in all the details of their successful management.

* * * * * * *

"This being true, how can it further that object so as to interpret the constitutional provision as to place upon Congress the obligation to exercise the supervisory powers just indicated? The demands of such a supervision would require, not uniform legislation generally applicable throughout the United States, but a swarm of statutes only locally applicable and utterly inconsistent. Any movement toward the establishment of rules of production in this vast country, with its many different climates and opportunities, could only be at the sacrifice of the peculiar advantages of a large part of the localities in it, if not of every one of them. On the other hand, any movement toward the local, detailed, and incongruous legislation required by such interpretation would be about the widest possible departure from the declared object of the clause in question. Nor this alone. Even in the exercise of the power contended for, Congress would be confined to the regulation, not of certain branches of industry, however numerous, but to those instances in each and every branch where the producer contemplated an interstate market. These instances would be almost infinite, as we have seen; but still there would always remain the possibility—and often it would be the case—that the producer contemplated a domestic market. In that case the supervisory power must be executed by the State, and the interminable trouble would be presented that whether the one power or the other should exercise the authority in question would be determined, not by any general or intelligible rule, but by the secret and changeable intention of the producer in each and every act of production. A situation more paralyzing to the State governments and more provocative of conflicts between the General Government and the States, and less likely to have been what the framers of the Constitution intended, it would be difficult to imagine.

* * * * * * *

"These questions are well answered in the language of the court in the license-tax cases (5 Wall., 462, 470): 'Over this commerce and trade (the internal commerce and domestic trade of the States) Congress has no power of regulation, nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens tranacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject.'"

In Wilkerson v. Rahrer (140 U. S., 545) the justice, in writing the opinion of the court, says (p. 554):

"The power of the State to impose restraints and burdens upon persons and property in conservation and promotion of the public health, good order, and prosperity is a power originally and always belonging to the States, not surrendered by them to the General Government nor directly restrained by the Constitution of the United States, and essentially exclusive.

"And this court has uniformly recognized State legislation, legitimately for police purposes, as not in the sense of the Constitution necessarily infringing upon any right which has been confided expressly or by implication to the National Government.

"The fourteenth amendment, in forbidding a State to make or enforce any law abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, or to deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or to deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws, did not invest and did not attempt to invest Congress with power to legislate upon subjects which are within the domain of State legislation.

"As observed by Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court in the Civil Rights cases (109 U. S., 3, 13), the legislation under that amendment can not 'properly cover the whole domain of rights appertaining to life, liberty, and property, defining them and providing for their vindication. That would be to establish a code of municipal law regulative of all private rights between man and man in society. It would be to make Congress take the place of the State legislatures and to supersede them. It is absurd to affirm that, because the rights of life, liberty, and property (which include all civil rights that men have) are by the amendment sought to be protected against invasion on the part of the State without due process of law, Congress may therefore provide due process of law for their vindication in every case; and that, because the denial by a State to any persons of the equal protection of the laws is prohibited by the amendment, therefore Congress may establish laws for their equal protection.'

"In short, it is not to be doubted that the power to make the ordinary regulations of police remain with the individual States and can not be assumed by the National Government, and that in this respect it is not interfered with by the fourteenth amendment. (Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S., 27-31.)

"'Commerce undoubtedly is traffic,' said Chief Justice Marshall, 'but it is something more; it is intercourse. It describes the commercial intercourse between nations and parts of nations in all its branches and is regulated by prescribing rules for carrying on that intercourse.' Unquestionably, fermented, distilled, or other intoxicating liquors or liquids are subjects of commercial intercourse, exchange, barter, and traffic between nation and nation and between State and State, like any other commodity in which a right of traffic exists, and are so recognized by the usages of the commercial world, the laws of Congress, and the decisions of courts. Nevertheless, it has been often held that State legislation which prohibits the manufacture of spirituous, malt, vinous, fermented, or other intoxicating liquors within the limits of a State, to be there sold or bartered for general use as a beverage, does not necessarily infringe any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States or by the amendments thereto. (Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S., 632, and cases cited.) 'These cases,' in the language of the opinion in Mugler v. Kansas (p. 659), 'rest upon the acknowledged right of the States of the Union to control their purely internal affairs, and in so doing to protect the health, morals, and safety of their people by regulations that do not interfere with the execution of the powers of the General Government or violate rights secured by the Constitution of the United States. The power to establish such regulations, as was said in Gibbons v. Ogden (9 Wheat., 1, 203), reaches everything within the territory of a State not surrendered to the National Government.'"

And in Knight case (156 U. S., 1) the Chief Justice, in delivering the opinion of the court, says (p. 11):

"The fundamental question is whether, conceding that the existence of a monopoly in manufacture is established by the evidence, that monopoly can be directly suppressed under the act of Congress in the mode attempted by this bill.

"It can not be denied that the power of a State to protect the lives, health, and property of its citizens, and to preserve good order and the public morals, 'the power to govern men and things within the limits of its dominion,' is a power originally and always belonging to the States, not surrendered by them to the General Government, nor directly restrained by the Constitution of the United States, and essentially exclusive. The relief of the citizens of each State from the burden of monopoly and the evils resulting from the restraint of trade among such citizens was left with the States to deal with, and this court has recognized their possession of that power even to the extent of holding that an employment or business carried on by private individuals, when it becomes a matter of such public interest and importance as to create a common charge or burden upon the citizen; in other words, when it becomes a practical monopoly, to which the citizen is compelled to resort and by means of which a tribute can be exacted from the community, is subject to regulation by State legislative power. On the other hand, the power of Congress to regulate commerce among the several States is also exclusive. The Constitution does not provide that interstate commerce shall be free, but, by the grant of this exclusive power to regulate it, it was left free except as Congress might impose restraints. Therefore it has been determined that the failure of Congress to exercise this exclusive power in any case is an expression of its will that the subject shall be free from restrictions or impositions upon it by the several States, and if a law passed by a State in the exercise of its acknowledged powers comes into conflict with that will, the Congress and the State can not occupy the position of equal opposing sovereignties, because the Constitution declares its supremacy and that of the laws passed in pursuance thereof; and that which is not supreme must yield to that which is supreme. 'Commerce undoubtedly is traffic,' said Chief Justice Marshall, 'but it is something more; it is intercourse. It describes the commercial intercourse between nations and parts of nations in all its branches, and is regulated by prescribing rules for carrying on that intercourse.'

"That which belongs to commerce is within the jurisdiction of the United States, but that which does not belong to commerce is within the jurisdiction of the police power of the State. (Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat., 1, 189, 210; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat., 419, 448; The License cases, 5 How., 504, 599; Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S., 691; Bowman v. Chicago and N. W. Railway, 125 U. S., 465; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S., 100; In re Rahrer, 140 U. S., 545, 555.)

"The argument is that the power to control the manufacture of refined sugar is a monopoly over a necessary of life, to the enjoyment of which by a large part of the population of the United States interstate commerce is indispensable, and that, therefore, the General Government, in the exercise of the power to regulate commerce, may repress such monopoly directly and set aside the instruments which have created it. But this argument can not be confined to necessaries of life merely, and must include all articles of general consumption. Doubtless the power to control the manufacture of a given thing involves in a certain sense the control of its disposition, but this is a secondary and not the primary sense; and although the exercise of that power may result in bringing the operation of commerce into play, it does not control it, and affects it only incidentally and indirectly. Commerce succeeds to manufacture, and is not a part of it. The power to regulate commerce is the power to prescribe the rule by which commerce shall be governed, and is a power independent of the power to suppress monopoly. But it may operate in repression of monopoly whenever that comes within the rules by which commerce is governed or whenever the transaction is itself a monopoly of commerce.

"It is vital that the independence of the commercial power and of the police power, and the delimitation between them, however sometimes perplexing, should always be recognized and observed, for while the one furnishes the strongest bond of union, the other is essential to the preservation of the autonomy of the States as required by our dual form of government; and acknowledged evils, however grave and urgent they may appear to be, had better be borne than the risk be run in the effort to suppress them of more serious consequences by resort to expedients of even doubtful constitutionality.

"It will be perceived how far-reaching the proposition is that the power of dealing with a monopoly directly may be exercised by the General Government whenever interstate or international commerce may be ultimately affected. The regulation of commerce applies to the subjects of commerce and not to matters of internal police. Contracts to buy, sell, or exchange goods to be transported among the several States, the transportation and its instrumentalities, and articles bought, sold, or exchanged for the purposes of such transit among the States, or put in the way of transit, may be regulated, but this is because they form part of interstate trade or commerce. The fact that an article is manufactured for export to another State does not of itself make it an article of interstate commerce, and the intent of the manufacturer does not determine the time when the article or product passes from the control of the State and belongs to commerce."

Mr. President, it has been contended by some that the decision in the lottery cases governs this matter, and that under those decisions we have a right to pass such bills as this. These decisions are based upon an entirely different proposition, however. They are based upon the power which the Constitution gives to Congress to establish post-roads and post-offices; they are based upon that power which was conferred by the people. But there is one case, Mr. President, and that is also a lottery case, where is held constitutional an act making it unlawful to send lottery tickets by a private express company in a box. I want to read what the court says there, showing that this question has not been finally decided in that matter. I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that this is decided by a divided court—five to four—but the learned judge, in writing the opinion of the court, says this:

"It is said, however, that if, in order to suppress lotteries carried on through interstate commerce, Congress may exclude lottery tickets from such commerce, that principle leads necessarily to the conclusion that Congress may arbitrarily exclude from commerce among the States any article, commodity, or thing, of whatever kind or nature or however useful or valuable, which it may choose, no matter with what motive, to declare shall not be carried from one State to another. It will be time enough to consider the constitutionality of such legislation when we must do so. The present case does not require the court to declare the full extent of the power that Congress may exercise in the regulation of commerce among the States. We may, however, repeat in this connection what the court has heretofore said—that the power of Congress to regulate commerce among the States, although plenary, can not be deemed arbitrary, since it is subject to such limitations or restrictions as are prescribed by the Constitution."

Mr. President, the cloth when manufactured and the ore when mined, no matter what the intention may be, does not become interstate commerce until delivered to the carrier for transit or exportation. Then, and not till then, does the jurisdiction of the General Government, under the commerce clause of the Constitution, attach, and prior to that time it is subject only to the jurisdiction of the State to legislate concerning it as other property in the State. This seems to me, and is, in my judgment, the construction of the court upon this matter.

Mr. President, there are many wholesome laws in some of the States which, in order to have uniformity, and for the good of the country, should be adopted by all the States. However, there are many laws which are necessary, and their enactment would be wise and wholesome for one section of the country, which would not be for another section and to that section would prove injurious and burdensome.

I should like to see uniformity in the divorce laws and the insurance laws, but uniformity can be obtained without Congressional action, and without the usurpation of the reserved powers of the States. A few years ago there was a wide difference in the negotiable instrument laws of the States, and the business of the country was suffering on account of it. There was a demand for uniformity, and the commercial interests, the public sentiment of the country forced uniformity, and they corrected this evil, so that now a large majority of the States have the same negotiable instrument law, and Congressional action was neither sought nor demanded, was not even thought of. The evil remedied itself, as many other evils affecting and acting to the detriment of all the people will do in time.

The laws of Congress must affect and bear upon all the people alike, and the usurpation by Congress of the rights to legislate upon these matters of domestic concern would work a great wrong and hardship upon some and cause jealousy and bitterness, which might prove disastrous. Time and mutual intercourse and commercial dealing among the people of the States will in time bring uniformity wherever there should be uniformity.

If Congress should so forget its duty to the people and to the States as to legislate in regard to education in the States and undertake to administer upon and control our schools, should make a law which would require the black child and the white child, the white child and the Chinese and the Japanese child to be admitted to the same school, while it might be perfectly acceptable and satisfactory to some States, it would shut the door of every schoolhouse in the South and the extreme Western States, and besides, Mr. President, would cause bitterness, riot, and bloodshed. The General Government must not interfere in these local matters. There are problems to settle and burdens to be borne which the States themselves can best deal with. The Government can not understand them; only the people who are daily brought face to face with them can.

The powers surrendered by the people to the United States for this great Federal Union are supreme and have been in the past and are now, ample and sufficient for any and all necessary purposes of the General Government, and so are the powers which the people reserved to themselves. They are supreme for any State purposes and the people are satisfied to continue as they are under the system of government under which we have prospered as no other country in the world has prospered; under which we have grown to be the greatest nation upon the face of the earth.

Centralization against the dual government, the State and the Federal, delegated power against reserved powers, consolidationists against the people. Are we to have such an issue? Let it come and the people will know how to settle it. They will never submit to having any of their rights taken away or State lines extinguished or their reserved powers merged into a great consolidated Government at Washington, for they will know it is sooner or later bound to result in the destruction of happiness and the robbing them of their liberties.

Shall the States be degraded and the people humiliated? Mr. President, the people will never submit to it. There is more of patriotism, there is more love and pride of country now than ever before in the history of the Government. The people are proud to know that our flag is honored abroad as it has never been before. If the issue is to come, the sooner the better. But when they, from whom the source of all our power comes, properly understand it, there will be a revolution, not at arms, but at the ballot box, and the party which champions the cause of centralization, I predict, will be overwhelmingly defeated. There can never be another civil war in this country. Thank God that day is past. The people of the various sections understand each other better. There is less of jealousy and more of fraternity between them; there is no hatred, and the sectional prejudice of the past is fast dying away. The railroads, the telegraph, and the telephone companies, commerce and commercial relation, mutual dealings have brought the sections of the country closer together and made them neighbors and friends. There is more of prosperity, more of concord and amity existing than ever before.

And no one section of the country is more loyal to the Government or takes more pride in her greatness than another, and should she be assailed the South as well as the North, the East and West, all together would rally to its support, each vying with the other in giving it its most loyal support. Pride of State and love of the Union would make us invincible. Under these conditions it would be a crime to change our present system of government, a crime to take from the people the right of local self-government in the States. Let the powers enumerated in the Constitution remain limited. Let the reserved powers in the people be undisturbed. Let the integrity and autonomy of the States be upheld; encourage State pride. Centralization would be a constant menace to the liberties of the people, breeding corruption and oppression. These reserved powers are in the people of the States. It is theirs to hold, it is theirs to surrender; but when once surrendered it can never be regained. I say with a great judge who wrote it, that that government is best which while performing all its duties interferes the least with the lawful pursuits of its people.

DISMISSAL OF THREE COMPANIES OF TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, the resolutions before us and the debate which has ensued bring a very important question of constitutional law before the Senate. It is applicable to the discipline of the Army of the United States. The question is not a novel one; neither to my mind is it a difficult one. It travels over no new road. It traverses in its antecedents the history of the English-speaking people. It entered at the beginning of our country into American military law. It is a question which has been settled long and long ago in every way that this country can settle any question.

From the foundation of the Government to this session of Congress no question has ever been raised here as to the power of the President of the United States to drop from the muster roll of the Army any private soldier. I say that this is the case; but, of course, I speak only according to my own limited knowledge and according to my information and belief. I believe as to this question we might well apply the familiar rule of construction, that "concerning things which do not appear, and those which do not exist, there is the same rationale." If the power of the President in such a case as the one now before the Senate had ever been successfully questioned, surely the wary minds which have searched the records of this country for a hundred years might have discovered and would surely have produced the precedent. Not only has this question been settled by the practice of the Presidents of the United States, the Secretaries of War, and the department commanders, but by repeated opinions rendered before their action by the Attorneys-General of the United States, and by the decisions of the Supreme Court after their action, all to the effect that the power exercised in this case was clearly vested in them.

THE PRESIDENT CLEAR IN HIS GREAT OFFICE.

I may be prolix, Mr. President, in laying my views before the Senate. As lunch hour has arrived, I am glad to believe that I will make myself less an infliction upon the patience of the body; but I am seeking sincerely to arrive at the truth, the justice, the law, and the Constitution of the matter. They are pearls of great price. The people of this country ought not to be misled by anybody's misapprehension. Public sentiment in this country should always stand by the Chief Magistrate of the land and the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy when he is clear in his great office. I conceive that he has been clear in his great office, and that not only has he adhered closely to the precedents of those who have occupied it before him, but has remained clearly within the lines of the Constitution and the Articles of War.

ONE SENTENCE EXCEPTED TO.

I may add that there is one sentence in the general order which was issued by his command to which I must dissent. It is the one which declares that the troops or soldiers whom he caused to be dropped from the rolls of the Army should be "forever debarred" from admission to the civil service. I think in that respect the arrow from his bow went too far. But that is not at this time a matter of practical discussion, although it may be very properly one of animadversion and criticism. And if there be error in that regard, not only is legal remedy in the courts readily applicable, but the error will correct itself whenever any practical test is made.

I am not, Mr. President, a political adherent of the party to which the President belongs. I have often been constrained by my own conviction to differ from sentiments avowed in his messages and from doctrines which he has sought to enforce. I agree fully with the vigorous and eloquent speech which was made on yesterday by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. GEARIN], in which he undertook to show the departure of the President of the United States from the settled principles which control the relations of the States and the Federal Government with respect to the public schools of San Francisco, Cal., and the introduction therein of Japanese students. But this is not the time, Mr. President, to advert to differences which will necessarily occur in this country and are not altogether to be lamented. They are part of the process by which we arrive at truth, and there is a becoming time and place for their settlement.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN ARTICLES OF WAR.

With the beginning of our Government there was first introduced, of course, what are known as "Articles of War." The first Continental Congress, in 1774, enacted Articles of War, and the Continental Congress of 1776 enlarged and modified the articles which had been previously adopted. In doing so they fell into the language in some degree, and also in some degree into the adoption of the principles, which had ruled in the British army before the formation of the separate Republic. I agree fully with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] when he said on yesterday that proof that a certain thing was admissible in the British army or had been ruled by the King or a commander in the British army was not in itself proof that it was an American doctrine which we ourselves should enforce. By no means. But besides the common law and the common language which identify the two peoples there is a long identity in the stream of history which has flowed down from one country to the other. In our Constitution, as well as in our statutes, are terms which have historic meaning and application which they convey to all who speak our language and who know the traditions and the legends of our race.

THE BRITISH AND AMERICAN ARTICLES OF WAR AT THE TIME OF THE REVOLUTION.

In the British army at the time of the Revolution there was the following article of war:

After a noncommissioned officer or soldier shall have been duly enlisted and sworn, he shall not be dismissed our service without a discharge in writing; and no discharge granted to him shall be allowed of as sufficient which is not signed by a field officer of the regiment into which he was enlisted, or commanding officer where no field officer of the regiment is in Great Britain.

When the American articles of 1776 came to be enacted by the Continental Congress they pursued somewhat the same language and adopted this provision:

After a noncommissioned officer or soldier shall have been duly enlisted and sworn, he shall not be dismissed the service without a discharge in writing; and no discharge granted to him shall be allowed of as sufficient which is not signed by a field officer of the regiment into which he was enlisted, or commanding officer where no field officer of the regiment is in the same State.

This shows nearly an identity of thought between the new people and the old one from which they had derived their origin.

Although adopted by the Continental Congress the articles of 1776 were, by the act of September 29, 1789, continued in force by a requirement that the then existing military establishment should "be governed by the Rules and Articles of War which have been established by the United States in Congress assembled, or by such Rules and Articles of War as may hereafter by law be established."

CHANGE OF AMERICAN ARTICLES OF WAR IN 1806—ONE ARTICLE CONCERNED BOTH OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS.

For thirty years this was about the state of the American Articles of War, but in 1806 there came about a specific change, and that changed condition is, with such modification as I shall presently show, now the law of this land. In 1806 the articles were amended so that they read as follows:

After a noncommissioned officer or soldier shall have been duly enlisted and sworn, he shall not be dismissed the service without a discharge in writing; and no discharge granted to him shall be sufficient which is not signed by a field officer of the regiment to which he belongs, or commanding officer where no field officer of the regiment is present; and no discharge shall be given to a noncommissioned officer or soldier before his term of service has expired but by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or the sentence of a general court-martial.

So far as this article of war applies to what is known as the rank and file of the Army, to the noncommissioned officer, and the man, it has been the law of this land for exactly one hundred years, with a little plus to balance, and the only variation in it is that which applies to a commissioned officer, for it remains identically the same as to the private and the subaltern. The paragraph which I am reading continues in the Articles of War of 1806 so as to include officers:

Nor shall a commissioned officer be discharged the service but by order of the President of the United States or by sentence of a general court-martial.

So it will be seen that in 1806 four authorities could discharge an enlisted man, namely: 1, the President; 2, the Secretary of War; 3, a department commander, and 4, a court-martial. But two could discharge an officer, namely: 1, the President; 2, a court-martial.

EXISTING ARTICLES OF WAR.

Now, Mr. President, let us take up our existing Articles of War. They are statutes of the Congress of the United States defining the power of the President, the Secretary of War, the department commander, and the function of a court-martial. They are two in number, so far as concerns this subject, and are no longer embraced in a single article, as in 1806. The first of them is article 4, which concerns the enlisted man. It provides as follows:

No enlisted man, duly sworn, shall be discharged from the service without a discharge in writing, signed by a field officer of the regiment to which he belongs, or by the commanding officer when no field officer is present; and no discharge shall be given to any enlisted man before his term of service has expired except by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or by sentence of a general court-martial.

I have myself italicized the words "before his term of service has expired," because "thereby hangs a tale."

I ask the Senate to observe particularly this expression of seven words "before his term of service has expired," because it is applicable to a case in which the noncommissioned officer or other enlisted man is simply severed from the service before the due and proper cessation of his term.

Now, when we turn to the ninety-ninth article we find where it has differentiated from the original article of 1806. It provides:

No officer shall be discharged or dismissed from the service, except by order of the President or by sentence of a general court-martial—

And the words which I now read are added—and in time of peace no officer shall be dismissed, except in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial or in mitigation thereof.

Observe: "In time of peace" no officer can be dismissed "except in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial or in mitigation thereof."

THE CONTENTION OF THE SENATOR FROM OHIO [MR. FORAKER].

Yesterday, Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] gave it as his opinion that the one hundred and forty-sixth paragraph of the Army Regulations, which provides for the discharge in due course and at the end of the term of service of an enlisted man, required that it be given with such formalities that they could not be disregarded by the President of the United States, and he also contended that the President was not above the law, but was obliged to be governed by those rules which are given in paragraph 146. Before I turn specifically to that paragraph and to its context, from which I think the mind will readily gather that the Senator's view is a misapprehended construction of its terms, I desire to point out a decisive and controlling fact that antedates it. That fact is this: That in Article XCIX of the Articles of War the President is prohibited from discharging a commissioned officer in time of peace, "except in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial or in mitigation thereof." Mind you, that is the officer. When those two articles were made up, out of the one article of 1806, that its applications with respect to the court-martial was confined to the officer only, and when we come to read Article IV it simply says:

No discharge shall be given to any enlisted man before his term of service has expired—

Mark you, there, the words "before his term of service has expired"— except by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or by sentence of a general court-martial.

It imports not that the President can not dismiss or discharge him—the enlisted man—in time of peace, but it affirmatively gives "the President, the Secretary of War, the commander of a department, or a court-martial" each the same coordinate, conclusive, and equal power. This we have from the fourth article of war, which is an act of Congress, before we take the Army Regulations in hand.

ARTICLES OF WAR AND ARMY REGULATIONS.

The Articles of War, Mr. President, are generally embodied as a part of the Army Regulations, because they are the statutes of Congress, made in pursuance of the Constitution, for the government and regulation of the Army. But while Army Regulations include Articles of War, Articles of War do not include Army Regulations. While a whale is a fish, all fishes are not whales. The Army Regulations rest upon a different basis—not upon the express enactment of the Congress of the United States, not upon the express power conferred by Congress upon the President of the United States, though in one case or another they may be, but either upon the sanction of Congress given in collateral ways or upon the constitutional power of the President of the United States as Commander in Chief of the Armies and Navies of the United States to make orders, regulations, and rules.

NOT THE SUPPORTER OF AUTOCRACY.

I am neither the lover, the friend, nor the advocate of autocratic power. I believe in the government of the people, for the people, and by the people. But I know full well that no people in all the tide of time have ever been able either to make aggressive or defensive war without waging it through the discipline and organization of armies and without putting their power in the hands of those who head them and whom they themselves select as their agents.

OLD-TIME ARTICLES OF WAR.

The military commanders of Europe—aye, of history—issued as a part of their regulations to the army what they termed "articles of war." We have the ordinance of Richard I, of 1190, to regulate disputes between soldiers and sailors on the voyage to the Holy Land, and the articles of war of Richard II, of 1385. Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, published his articles of war in 1621 and commanded that they be read publicly every month before every regiment. James II decreed articles of war in 1688. Parliament enacted the first British mutiny act of 1689. In 1765, at the beginning of the Revolutionary war, the British articles of war came in force, which were that year established.

THE EXISTING ARMY REGULATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The regulations of the Army which now obtain were published for the last time in 1904. They were issued as Document 230, from the office of the Chief of Staff. They were promulgated September 15, 1904, from the War Department by the following order:

The President of the United States directs that the following regulations for the Army be published for the government of all concerned and that they be strictly observed. Nothing contrary to the tenor of these regulations will be enjoined in any part of the forces of the United States by any commander whomsoever.

WM. H. TAFT, Secretary of War.

What recognition or sanction from the Congress of the United States have those regulations thus issued by the Commander in Chief of the Army through his Secretary? I turn to page 179 of the Military Laws of the United States, published June 1, 1904, by Gen. George B. Davis, Judge-Advocate-General, in which is embodied section 2 of the act of June 23, 1879. It appears in the Military Laws as section 489 and reads:

That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to cause all the regulations of the Army now in force to be codified and published to the Army, and to defray the expenses thereof out of the contingent fund of the Army.

RECOGNITION OF THE PRESIDENT'S POWER TO MAKE ARMY REGULATIONS.

Mr. President, let us examine a little further as to how far the jurists and the courts of this country have recognized the power of the President to publish and to make Army regulations. In the case of Kurtz v. Moffatt, 115 United States, pages 487 and 503, it is held:

The Army Regulations derive their force from the power of the President as Commander in Chief, and are binding upon all within the sphere of his legal and constitutional authority.

In a note to page 178 of General Davis's book on military law it is said, upon authority of the Supreme Court:

The power of the Executive to establish rules and regulations for the government of the Army is undoubted. The power to establish necessarily implies the power to modify or to repeal or to create anew. The Secretary of War is the regular constitutional organ of the President for the administration of the military establishment of the nation, and rules and orders publicly promulgated through him must be received as the acts of the Executive, and as such are binding upon all within the sphere of his legal and constitutional authority. Such regulations can not be questioned or defied because they may be thought unwise or mistaken.

REGULATIONS MADE BY THE PRESIDENT MUST BE CONSTITUTIONAL.

Of course, any regulation made by the President must be within the purview of the Constitution and laws of the United States. This is axiomatic—manifest—a truism. He, like every Member of the House and the Senate—he, like every military officer and every civilian officer—lives, moves, and has his being and authority within the powers conferred either expressly or by necessary or proper implication by the Constitution of the United States.

No one has ever questioned in a hundred years of its existence the power of the Congress of the United States to make the fourth and the ninety-ninth articles of war. They have behind them the practice of this whole people. In civil wars and in foreign wars, from 1812 to the crack of the last gun in the Philippine Islands, they have had the universal acquiescence and affirmation. It would be a curiosity to find anywhere in the history of this Government any disputation whatsoever of the power of the President to act under the fourth article of war and sever the relation of a private soldier to the Army of the United States at any time, according to his discretion and judgment.

ENLISTMENT AS A CONTRACT—A HARD KNOT AT ONE END AND A BOWKNOT AT THE OTHER END.

Mr. President, something has been said about enlistment as a contract, and that it confers certain contractual rights upon the soldier and imposes certain contractual obligations upon the Government that enlisted him. This is true, but it is only true in a qualified sense. The contract of enlistment, when you come to analyze it and read its history and read the decisions of both military men and civil jurists upon it, is a contract which has a hard knot tied at one end of it to bind the soldier and a bowknot at the other end. At this other end the President, the Secretary of War under him, the commander of a department, or a court-martial, may at any moment dissolve it by untying the bowknot, as their judgment or discretion may prescribe.

HARDSHIP, FAVOR, AND HUMANITY EACH AND ALL MAY BE INVOLVED IN THIS DISSOLUBLE QUALITY OF THE CONTRACT.

It may in some cases operate to the hardship of the soldier. A soldier's life is not one of primroses. He does not join an army to seek pleasure or expecting to be laid in the eiderdown. Often he must "scorn delights and live laborious days." He goes in an army to encounter hardships. It is a service of honor. It is a service of credit. It is a service that brings to the soldier that highest meed of commendation which one man can give to another. The soldier lives a life of sacrifice, of toil, of risk, and danger for a cause which commands his respect and devotion.

But while this bowknot, which may be untied at any moment, may be sometimes untied to the hardship of the soldier, it is very often untied to his advantage. He is permitted to purchase his discharge, and often this is very greatly desired. Day after day and year after year married men and widows' sons by the equitable and just sense of the President, a commander of a department, or the Secretary of War, are permitted to leave the Army and are discharged by order. Very often men who have become feeble in mind but upon whom one would not wish to put the disadvantage of having been removed for lunacy or anything of the sort, are quietly let out of the Army by humane and just considerations which deal with them with grace and leniency.

Very often there is a charge against a man. The legal evidence may not be procurable which would convict him in a court. It may be impossible in the nature of things to get the testimony which would convict before a court-martial. But the President of the United States, the Secretary of War, or the officer commanding the department may reach the conclusion upon any moral evidence that is brought to their minds that it is better for the man or it is better for the service just to let him drop. And time and again, in innumerable cases, this has been done. The mere fact that a man is unsuitable in any way for the service—physically, morally, or intellectually—may be good ground to drop him out. And this has occurred in multitudinous cases in recent years as in times thitherto.

There is another case. There may be grave suspicion. A soldier may lose the confidence of his commander. That is a kind of thing which may not depend on mathematical or logical demonstration. But never since armies were organized, and certainly never since the army of an intelligent and high-minded people, like those of America, was organized was the President or commander of an army required to keep in the service a soldier in whom he had no confidence. Humanity to the soldier and humanity in public considerations are often subserved by this great power reposed in the chieftains of the people. It is equally true, Mr. President, upon the other hand, that this power to drop a man may operate as a hardship. There is no rule of law, good or bad, which does not have in some respect its influence and operation in both directions.

ANCIENT FORM OF ENLISTMENT BEFORE THE ARTICLES OF 1776.

Mr. President, before the Articles of War of 1776 the usual form of enlistment in the Army was to serve for such a time, "unless sooner discharged," and I have before me the form of enlistment adopted in the American Army on June 14, 1775, before the articles of 1776 were framed. Here is the form:

I have this day voluntarily enlisted myself as a soldier in the American Continental Army for one year, unless sooner discharged.

This form is given in Winthrop's Military Law, volume 1, page 774. It is useful as illustrating the historic sense of the relation of a soldier to an army—that he contracted for service for a certain time, but had it impressed upon his mind that he might be sooner discharged.

I have before me, Mr. President, the Army Regulations which were published in 1821. They are instructive as showing the form of certificate to be given to soldiers at the time of their discharge, and they reveal the fact that this so-called discharge "without honor," which was known in the old British army as a discharge "without character," is no novel thing in our present American law, although not embodied in the particular phrases which aforetime were in vogue. These regulations were published in July, 1821, when John C. Calhoun was Secretary of War. They had been compiled by Maj. Gen. Winfield Scott, Commander in Chief of the Army. Here on one of the pages of the appendix is the form for a certificate of discharge. In reciting the service of the soldier come the words "having served honestly and faithfully," but at the bottom of the discharge are the words: "'Honestly and faithfully' will be erased where the conduct of the soldier has not been such as to entitle him to an honorable discharge."

The following certificate of discharge is the form of the actual discharge which the soldier was to get in hand when he severed his connection from the service. In the text of it are the words "is hereby honorably discharged," but in a note at the bottom is this explicit statement:

When the officer commanding the company has not certified that the soldier served honestly and faithfully the word "honorably" will be stricken out.

So far as our Army Regulations run, although I can not claim to have made a perfectly expert and thorough examination, that is the first public appearance in the promulgations of the War Department in which is found a recognition of this practice.

DISCHARGES GIVEN BY THE COMPANY CAPTAINS.

It will be observed, Mr. President, that in this discharge, just as in the one referred to in the present one hundred and forty-sixth article of the Army Regulations, it was a discharge to be given by the captain of the company, and it related for the most part, though not necessarily employed in such cases alone, to the normal or ordinary discharge, as it is called, which came at the end of the service. In those days the captain of the company attested the character of the soldier under which he departed from the service.

THREE KINDS OF DISCHARGES—HONORABLE, DISHONORABLE, AND NEUTRAL.

Now, Mr. President, it would seem that not only in the British army, where existed the discharge known as "without character," but in our armies in antecedent days and in our Army to-day three kinds of discharge are recognized and are constantly practiced. One is the honorable discharge. When the officers of the service attest at the end of a soldier's career that that career has been honest and faithful, it is to him the crown of his career. It is not a neutral thing. It is an affirmation that he goes forth from the Army with the testimony of those who have served with him and who have known him attesting to the world by the credentials of their name the good service which he has rendered to his cause and country.

There is also known such a thing, Mr. President, as a dishonorable discharge. It applies now for the most part, if not altogether—and I believe altogether—to those discharges in which the soldier has been discredited by conduct ascertained by a court-martial, or at least one created by an infamous offense. If he has been guilty of some conduct which is known to be and which is affirmed as infamous, if he has been drummed out of camp as an improper person for any offense that meets such condign punishment, if he has been ascertained to be a deserter, if he is unworthy to be trusted or credited—he is given a dishonorable discharge.

THE NEUTRAL OR COLORLESS DISCHARGE WITHOUT HONOR.

Now, then, Mr. President, there is the third or middle kind of discharge, for the most part neutral in its effects upon the soldier, apart from the fact that it severs his relation with the Army. It is upon a charge without conviction and without punishment in any legal sense. The soldier who gets a discharge of this middle or neutral kind may have served with distinguished honor, but he leaves the service under such circumstances that those who have been appointed in authority over him are not prepared to give him the credential of honor. They are in doubt about it; they do not know. There has either been an affirmative diminution of his character or there has been such an obscuration of his character that they can not as truthful men bear witness unto it.

WHAT "WITHOUT HONOR" MEANS.

In these cases, Mr. President, in the Army of the United States, the soldier who is simply dropped from the rolls has the words "without honor" written in his discharge. They do not mean that he has served without honor, but they do mean without the credential and certificate of honor.

There is no man in the public service of the United States who has not been called upon at some time to accredit this man or that man to some appointed power. Neither is there anyone who has not at some time withheld the signature of his name or the attestation of his recommendation, not that he knew anything against the party desiring it, not that he had heard anything against the party desiring it, but simply because he was without knowledge, and it had not been made to appear to him that such testimony could be truly given.

In the English army it is called a discharge without character, and in the slang term of the soldiers it is known as the "bobtail" discharge—a discharge in which the character has not been attested.

Mr. President, after the Articles of War of 1776 our forms of enlistment dropped out for the most part "unless sooner discharged." It became evident that they were neither necessary nor desirable; Congress, in 1806, provided for the dropping of soldiers from the Army at any time. In the old British army a colonel could do it, or a field officer, under the customs that had grown up. In our first article of war of 1776 it was not confined to the President of the United States or to the officers now designated, but for the whole track of a hundred years, without contest and without dispute, every President of the United States, every Secretary of War, and every departmental commander has had the conceded authority to drop from the rolls a private soldier according to his own just judgment and for any reason that might appeal to his wisdom and discretion.

EVERY SOLDIER APPRISED OF THE ARTICLES OF WAR.

So, Mr. President, it is understood both by the soldiers and by the enlightened public in this country that the contract of enlistment is a contract loose at one end and severable at any moment. When a soldier enters the Army of the United States it is required as a part of the ceremonial of enlistment that the Articles of War shall be read to him, either at the moment or within six days afterwards, and also the Regulations of the Army. It is true that if this be not done the enlistment will not be vitiated, but that is the order which we must presume is in general obeyed. Every soldier who enters the Army of the United States is thus apprised by his Government and notice is served upon him, so that he may be cognizant of the nature of the contract he is entering into, and that the President, the Secretary of War, the commander of a department, or a court-martial may dissolve it at any moment.

Colonel Winthrop, in his book on Military Law, has written as follows:

We have thus seen what enlistment really is—a contract, but a contract made with the State, under the specific authority of the Constitution, and thus governed by those principles or considerations of expediency and economy expressed in the term "public policy." We have already found that this peculiar contract, to which the Government is a party, is not necessarily affected by the rules of the common law especially applicable to the private engagements of minors. It is a further feature that while the necessities of military discipline require that the soldier should be strictly obliged by the compact, the State, on the other hand, is not bound by the conditions, though imposed by itself. Thus it may put an end to the term of enlistment at any time before it has regularly expired and discharge the soldier against his consent. So, pending the engagement, it may reduce the pay, or curtail any allowance which formed a part of the original consideration. The contract of enlistment is thus a transaction in which private right is subordinated to the public interest. In law it is entered into with the understanding that it may be modified in any of its terms, or wholly rescinded, at the discretion of the State. But this discretion can be exercised only by the legislative body or under an authority which that body conferred

INDISPUTABLE AUTHORITY OF THE PRESIDENT UNDER THE FOURTH ARTICLE OF WAR.

I have read the whole of this paragraph, Mr. President, and if any part of it might be brought in question it is the last sentence; but I wish to observe respecting that that the power of the President as Commander in Chief of the Army, as created in the Constitution of the United States, is one thing standing by itself alone. It is another thing when to it are superadded the Articles of War, which are specific and express authorizations to him. When there is one clear basis which no man has ever questioned, which no man can be found to question, upon which a proposition rests, it seems to me useless to discuss the other. The Articles of War give as much power to the President of the United States to dismiss, or drop, or discharge a private soldier before the expiration of his term as they give to a general court-martial. They repose the same authority in a department commander and the same in the Secretary of War.

If in this case, Mr. President, the soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry had been court-martialed and dismissed the Army, what would Congress have to do with it? They have been dismissed by a coequal agency of the law authorized in the same terms that the court-martial was authorized. What is the use or pertinence in this case of discussing whether the President, simply as Commander in Chief, could do it? There is full power conferred that stands foursquare to all the winds that blow in the fourth article of war, which is an act of Congress.

LEE, AS LIEUTENANT-COLONEL AND DEPARTMENT COMMANDER, COULD DISCHARGE A SOLDIER.

I may observe, Mr. President, though I intend to go but little into any of the numerous incidents of the expression of this power which have been related, that when Robert E. Lee was a lieutenant-colonel in the Army of the United States in Texas he dismissed soldiers of the United States from the service or disposed of them in the way summarily which has been brought to the attention of the Senate. He was not a President. He was not a Secretary of War. He was not a general officer. He was not even the colonel of a regiment; but he was a department commander, and so far from questioning his authority, it has been cited here as a precedent by debaters on both sides. One thing is very clear about him which is known of all men and to history, that he was an exceedingly intelligent and well-read man, and that he always sought to adhere strictly within the lines of military power and was never suspected of acting either hastily or from any selfish ambitions or any improper motive.

Now, Mr. President, I wish to turn my attention for a few moments to those Army regulations which, according to my humble conception of this case——

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. DANIEL. Certainly, sir.

Mr. CULBERSON. I simply desire to invite the attention of the Senator from Virginia to what I understand to be the fact, different from the way he understands it, that Lieutenant-Colonel Lee at the time commanded a department, to wit, the Department of Texas.

Mr. DANIEL. That is what I said.

Mr. CULBERSON. I understood the Senator differently.

Mr. DANIEL. I said that although he was not a colonel of a regiment or a general, he exercised authority as department commander.

Mr. CULBERSON. I beg pardon of the Senator.

Mr. DANIEL. All right; no intrusion. It makes no difference as to the rank of the department commander. These authorizations in the fourth article of war apply to four agencies alike—that is, first, to the President; second, the Secretary of War; third, the department commander of whatever rank, and, fourth, to a general court-martial, which have equal and coordinate dignity, according to the act of Congress.

PARAGRAPHS 141 TO 148 OF ARTICLE 21 OF THE ARMY REGULATIONS AND THE REGULATIONS FOR COMPANY COMMANDERS.

Now, Mr. President, I now call attention to article 21 and to paragraphs 141 to 148, inclusive, of Army Regulations. These are not acts of Congress unless in a measure here and there. They are the Army Regulations, published, as I have heretofore stated, by the War Department and attested by Secretary W. H. Taft. It is manifest to the reader of pages 26, 27, and 28 that these regulations concern the normal discharges, commonly called "ordinary discharges," which take place in due course of administration at the expiration of a soldier's term.

It will be noted in paragraph 146 that it is only when "the company commander"—"company commander," mark you—not the President, not the Secretary of War, not a department commander, not a court-martial, but expressly:

> When the company commander deems the service not honest and faithful he shall, if practicable, so notify the soldier at least thirty days prior to discharge, and shall at the same time notify the commanding officer, who will in every such case convene a board of officers, three, if practicable, to determine whether the soldier's service has been honest and faithful. The soldier will in every case be given a hearing before the board.

This is as plain as a pikestaff. It is the direction of the President to company commanders. It is wholly inapplicable when the process required has been rendered impracticable, indeed, impossible, by the paramount authority and decisive action of the President, the Secretary of War, the department commander, or a court-martial.

These regulations for company commanders were made by the President of the United States himself. We can not impute to him an intention to eliminate the paramount Articles of War, or to supervene his own authority under them. That would be a very unnatural inference. It would impute to him a self belittlement and abrogation. It would be a very unnatural and farfetched inference to imagine that the President sought to curtail his own power. It is not generally in the heart of man to curtail the power which has been given to him by others. Whatever other criticism has been made upon the present President of the United States from the other side of the Chamber, none have ever intimated that he was at present engaged in seeking to curtail his own power. In fact, some have delicately intimated that he was seeking to extend it beyond the lines which they would prescribe as legitimate and proper.

All these details, Mr. President, show that the discharges referred to in paragraph 146 are to be given by the company commander just as in the certificate and attestation of discharge which I read from the regulations of 1821. Before we get through with the series of provisions in the text of the regulations, let us note that they make manifest upon their face that this paragraph 146 did not intend to deal with, was not dealing with, and had nothing to do with those discharges which are comprehended in the fourth article of war, which concerns discharge before the expiration of service.

BLANK DISCHARGES FURNISHED UNDER THE REGULATIONS TO COMPANY COMMANDERS.

This is further made manifest in the declaration of the blank forms for discharge and final statements which are to be furnished by The Military Secretary of the Army, by paragraph 148, and in the prescriptions of the rule which apply to different orders of discharges. It is said in that paragraph 148, right upon the heels of paragraph 146:

> 148. Blank forms for discharge and final statements will be furnished by The Military Secretary of the Army and will be retained in the personal custody of company commanders. Those for discharge will be of three classes: For honorable discharge, for dishonorable discharge, and for discharge without honor. They will be used as follows:
> 1. The blank for honorable discharge when the soldier's service has been honest and faithful, in which case he would be entitled to character at least "good." Where the soldier's conduct has been such as to warrant his reenlistment, his service has been honest and faithful, and he is entitled to character at least "good."
> 2. The blank for discharge without honor when a soldier is discharged:
> (a) Without trial, on account of fraudulent enlistment.
> (b) Without trial, on account of having become disqualified for service, physically or in character, through his own misconduct.
> (c) On account of imprisonment under sentence of a civil court.
> (d) Where the service has not been honest and faithful; that is, where the service does not warrant his reenlistment.
>
> Now, last—
>
> (e) When discharge without honor is specially ordered by the Secretary of War for any other reason.

THE CASE MARKED "E" IN PARAGRAPH 148, ARTICLE 21, OF ARMY REGULATIONS.

That is a case in which the regulations from which the distinguished Senator from Ohio, who has read paragraph 146 with emphasis, is by necessary terminology excluded. The captain of the company in this case, which is separated from the class of cases which he has considered, has nothing to do whatsoever and can have nothing to do with marking character one way or another, because in this case the Secretary of War has himself ordered that the dismissal shall take place "without honor," and thereby himself marked character in a neutral and colorless way—that is to say, "without honor," and also "without dishonor."

So, Mr. President, in the very text of the book from which the distinguished Senator has read is found the obvious and the manifest refutation of his conclusion.

THE TRUE CONSTRUCTION GIVEN BY THE JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL, GEO. B. DAVIS.

Let me say, Mr. President, that this view of the matter which I am endeavoring to present is the view of the matter which has obtained in the War Department of the United States and the view that obtained when those regulations thus made it manifest to be its view in 1804 first appeared. I have before me the opinion of the present Judge-Advocate-General of the Army upon this subject. If it were not plain from that text, it would become plain on reading the consideration that he has given to the matter. He calls attention to this section 146 and to section 148, and says:

> Paragraph 146 of the Army Regulations contains certain provisions which, if carefully read, will be found to be in entire harmony with the requirements of paragraph 148, above cited. Paragraph 146 applies exclusively to the case of a discharge at expiration of a soldier's term of enlistment and to the form of discharge which shall be used in that case, and provides that—the power of the President or Secretary of War to terminate an enlistment contract is conferred by the fourth article of war. As it is personally exercised by them, no regulations in furtherance of the article are necessary. If a company commander has a case in which he believes that the public interest requires that the contract should be terminated, he forwards it to the War Department, through military channels, and the Secretary of War, in passing upon it, exercises the discretion which is vested in him by the article by denying the application or directing that the discharge be issued. The only requirement of regulations on this subject is embodied in paragraph 140, which provides that in such a case the actual cause of the discharge shall be stated in the order directing its issue.

General Davis, the Judge-Advocate-General, further says in a memorandum before me—

There are several grades of "character" which may be given on discharge, all depending on the conduct of the soldier during his term of enlistment. These are "excellent," "very good," "good," "fair," "bad," etc. To entitle him to reenlist the soldier must have at least a "good" character. If his service has been so unfaithful as to require his discharge prior to the termination of his enlistment contract, his character would be less than "good," and for that reason he would not be permitted to reenlist.

It therefore follows that no character is given when the discharge of a soldier without honor is ordered by the Secretary of War, and there is no occasion to give operation to paragraph 146, Army Regulations, in such a case.

When the President or Secretary of War orders the discharge of a soldier without honor, in the operation of the fourth article of war, the company commander is guided by the requirements of paragraph 148, Army Regulations, in issuing the discharge. Such was the case in executing the orders of the President for the discharge of the enlisted men of the Twenty-fifth Infantry at Fort Sill.

The requirements of paragraph 146, Army Regulations, appeared for the first time as paragraph 148 of the Army Regulations of 1895.

It will be found in this case, Mr. President, as in many other questions which we have been considering, that we have moved in the groove of the old English understanding of army enlistments. The loose nature of that contract, in so far at least as the Government is concerned, is well explained in the second volume of Clode's Military Forces of the Crown, page 40, where it is said:

Though an engagement is made for a term certain, the Crown is under no obligation to retain the soldier, either in pay or in arms, for that period, but may discharge him at any time. The safety of the realm may depend in some measure on the immediate discharge or dismissal of any man or regiment in arms, and, equally, that the cause of such dismissal should not at the time be disclosed by the responsible ministers of the Crown

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEYS-GENERAL LEGARE AND CLIFFORD.

I will refer now to two opinions of the Attorneys-General of the United States, which were rendered sixty years ago. I refer to them, in the first place, to show the ancient and acknowledged basis of the military service of this country. I am glad, also, to refer to them to negate any suggestion from any source that those who affirm the rectitude and the constitutional propriety of the President's order in this case thereby indicate any tendency in their minds to favor autocratic or tyrannical government.

The first opinion in the fourth volume of the Reports of the Attorneys-General of the United States was rendered by Hugh S. Legare, of South Carolina. He was not only one of the ablest lawyers who ever gave his learning and genius to the service of this country, but he was also one of the most erudite and accomplished scholars of his time and one of the most brilliant essayists America has produced. It is true, Mr. President, that he came from South Carolina, but that never prevented him, as it has never prevented anybody who came from that State or from any other south of the Potomac, from declaring his honest judgment as to the meaning of our Constitution nor in upholding the power of the President of the United States and of the Army of the United States on all occasions where patriotism invoked adhesion or where clear understanding produced conviction. Mr. Legare, in that case, was called to give his opinion as to the power of the President of the United States to cause the name of a military officer to be stricken from the rolls without a trial by a court-martial, notwithstanding a decision in his favor by a court of inquiry ordered for the investigation of his conduct. He declared that it was "an absolute and tremendous power incidental to the Executive of the Government, who is only responsible to the country for a breach of a solemn trust." With lucid order he presents the views which actuate Senators upon this side of the Chamber now in supporting the President of the United States in the exercise of a plain and constitutional provision and a clear statute in the Articles of War.

LEGARE.

Attorney-General Legare said as to the power of the President to remove an officer:

It is obvious that, if necessity is a sufficient ground for such a concession in regard to officers in the civil service, the argument applies a multo fortiori to the military and naval departments. That the power is a tremendous one, and that, if tyrannically exercised, none can be imagined more intolerable and more revolting to a free people, are propositions which all will admit. That brave and honorable men, such as alone are worthy of a military commission, should be subjected to a capricious despotism which may not only deprive them of their profession, but even sully their good name, must be felt to be a case of very peculiar hardship.

As to the necessity of the power, he said:

Yet these considerations have not prevented nations jealous of their rights, and earnest in upholding and enforcing their laws against all prerogative, from acknowledging the necessity of such a power in the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy.

This is the first opinion in this book.

CLIFFORD.

I read one which was delivered on November 24, 1846, by Nathan Clifford, of Maine, Attorney-General of the Administration of President Tyler at that time. As the first case related to an officer in the construction of the then exising satutory law, the one which I will now cite relates to a case of enlistment. The syllabus at its head is as follows:

By the laws regulating contracts for service in the Regular Army, all enlistments are required to be for the term of five years; and no discretion has been conferred to contract for such service, either conditionally or for a shorter term.

Wherefore, enlistments can not be lawfully made upon the condition that the soldiers are to be discharged at the end of the war with Mexico.

But while thus holding that the President could not extend or change the terms of the contract of enlistment, he sets forth that the Department of Justice of this country has ever held that the President might sever that term at any time.

By the Constitution—

He says—

the power to raise armies is vested exclusively in Congress; and the Executive Department, in carrying the will of Congress into effect, must conform its action to the authority conferred on it. The acts above mentioned, in my opinion, give no discretion to make the contract of enlistment for a shorter term than five years, or to annex a condition that the troops are to be discharged at the end of the war with Mexico.

And now comes the sentence that comprehends this case:

The Executive Department has discretionary authority to discharge before the term of service has expired, but has no power to vary the contract of enlistment.

That opinion, Mr. President, was made upon the very language in the fourth article of war, which we are now construing, and the book has been a sealed one and the question has not been mootable in legal circles, according to my understanding of it, since those days.

DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

When we turn to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, approving the very opinions I have cited, they are of the same tenor. I will content myself without quoting them, but ask leave to insert reference to them, as I do not wish to continue my remarks too long. I will, however, read a little from 3 Howard, 646, in which Justice Wayne gave the opinion:

The President sanctioned these regulations—

Says he, in speaking of the articles of war which cover this case—and by doing so delegated his authority, as he had a right to do, to the Secretary of War, because it is done by him by the authority of law. The regulations of 1825, then, were as conclusive upon the accounting officer of the Treasury, whilst they continued in force, as those of 1836 afterwards were, and as those of 1841 now are.

In the case of Blake v. The United States (103 U. S., p. 227) the Supreme Court in 1880 reviewed the power of the President to remove an officer of the Army or Navy. It appeared that Charles Blake, a post chaplain, had resigned and that after his resignation President Hayes, by Executive order of September 28, 1878, and General Sherman, by order of October 2, 1878, had rescinded the resignation and restored Captain Blake to the list of post chaplains. In the meantime, however, Gilmore had been appointed chaplain in his place. It was held that the orders of restoration were invalid and that the President had exercised the power of removal by appointing the successor.

Judge Harlan, giving the decision, quoted the opinion of Attorney-General Legare which I have cited. He approved, also, the opinion of Attorney-General Clifford to the effect that there "is no foundation in the Constitution or any distinction in this regard between civil and military officers." He likewise approved the opinion of Attorney-General Cushing in Lansing's case declaring the President's right to remove a military storekeeper. "It is no answer to the doctrine," said Attorney-General Cushing, "to say that officers of the Army are subject to be deprived of their positions by court-martial, but a civil officer by impeachment. The difference between the two cases is in the form and mode of trial, not in the principle which involves in both cases the whole constitutional power of the President."

THE ACT OF JULY 17, 1862.

Judge Harlan in the course of his opinion (103 U. S., 234) showed the established practice in the Executive Department and the recognized power of the President up to the passage of the act of July 17, 1862. On that day was passed an act to define the pay and emoluments of certain officers of the Army, and for other purposes, the seventeenth section of which provides that the President of the United States be, and hereby is, authorized and requested to dismiss and discharge from the military service of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Volunteer Corps, any officer for any cause which, in his judgment, rendered such officer unsuitable or whose dismissal would promote the public service (103 U. S., 234). Judge Harlan shows that the law, in so far as legislative enactments are concerned in reference to dismissal of Army or naval officers, so stood until the passage of the Army appropriation act of July 17, 1866 (ch. 17, 14 Stat., 1892). That act repeals an act to define the pay and emoluments of certain officers of the Army approved July 17, 1862, and a resolution entitled "A resolution to authorize the President to assign a command of troops in the same field of the Department to the officers of the same grade without regard to seniority," approved April 4, 1862, and it was then provided "that no officer in the military or naval service shall in time of peace be dismissed from the service, except upon and in pursuance of a sentence of court-martial to that effect or in commutation thereof." It is this act in the appropriation bill of July 17, 1866, which now appears in the ninety-ninth article of war.

NOT A RACIAL QUESTION.

This, Mr. President, is no racial question. God forbid that the people of the United States shall raise racial questions where it is possible for them to avoid it. I have no particle of prejudice against the colored people. If I felt that they had been unjustly dealt with in this case, there is not a man upon this floor, as I solemnly believe, who would stand more ready to defend them. But, Mr. President, it is not the color of the soldier's skin that gives him any right of law or privilege. We should teach the colored men of the United States, even as we teach the white ones, that obedience to law, whatever that law be, is the first duty of a soldier and that the man who does not obey it shall feel its power.

It is very true, Mr. President, that in administration of law it can not be avoided that sometimes an innocent man shall be hurt. When General Lee dismissed a battalion from the Confederate service on account of ill action in battle he showed the delicate sensibility and high feeling which must actuate a man when he knows that his order must give pain and sorrow where it is not deserved, by saying that though some brave officers and men must suffer they should bear it like brave men. Innocence is a sacred thing. I would that no innocent man of the Twenty-fifth Infantry might suffer.

But all along the line of our history white battalions and white regiments have been disgraced, some more than the Twenty-fifth Infantry—some by generals of the Federal Army and some by generals of the Confederate army. No man ever thought that the disgrace came or the punitive or objectionable order came because they were of a particular State or because they were of particular color or section, and, while they grieved that those near related to them, either historically or otherwise, were afflicted, and some of them innocent, they submitted to the law, because they knew that the law was necessary for the administration of military justice.

INCREDIBLE THAT ALL THE OFFICIALS HAVE BEEN DECEIVED.

While, Mr. President, it may be possible, aye, it may be probable, that some of the men of the Twenty-fifth Infantry were innocent in this case, it is impossible that the whole people of Brownsville have been deceived. It is impossible that all the persons in the civil service of the Government in Brownsville have been deceived. In the nature of things it is incredible that every officer of the military and civil service of the United States who was on the ground or who had been there and taken cognizance of this matter has been deceived. If so, some hallucinating circumstance going on in the United States is leading to general lunacy and insanity.

There is another very peculiar thing about this matter, Mr. President, that while some have suggested—and one, I believe, has said that he even thought—that the soldiers were not guilty in this matter, with military officers in command of the department and of the city, with 170 soldiers in the city, with customs officers and postal officers, with officers of the Government sent there to inspect and look over all the res gestæ of the matter and all the surrounding circumstances, nobody at any time has suggested anybody else that did it except the soldiers.

It is true that there comes from far away, from a writer who can write briefs, a vague suggestion that the people of Brownsville, or some people of Brownsville, "shot up" their own town; tried to murder their own women and children; went out on the streets and killed the horse of the chief of police, and shot right and left in all directions in order to bring reproach on colored soldiers! In all the southern outrages I have ever heard of, whether they were spun by fable makers or not, it is the first time that the human mind has been distorted into the suggestion that a southern town was "shooting up" itself. In all towns, especially boundary or frontier towns, there are some miscreants who might do anything, but they could not do it without having some one soon getting on the trail of it. Whoever heard of any people from abroad or in a town shooting it up, shooting two or three hundred guns, murdering people in the streets, without it being somehow traced and finally the truth arrived at?

THE CONCLUSION OF THE PRESIDENT.

In the midst of these conjectures, we have the conclusions of many minds, of those that have perused the testimony and of those who went there and took the testimony. Let us see what these conclusions are, and, briefly, upon what they are based. In the first place comes the conclusion of the President of the United States. There is nothing in the history, there is nothing in the political career, there has never been anything in the conduct of the President of the United States to cause any man to infer that he would make haste, unguardedly, to take sides against any portion of the negro population of this country. Neither is there anything in his political affiliations or history to lead to the conclusion that he would be at all willing to defend a town or a community anywhere which had proved itself so lawless as it is alleged—unjustly—that Brownsville was. Read the President's message. It is clear and cogent. It is simply a conclusion that was forced upon his mind by the intelligent advice of his counselors and by scores of witnesses whose testimony in one shape or another was laid before him.

THE CONCLUSION OF SECRETARY TAFT.

The next man, Mr. President, who has summed up this case—and I wish to put his summary into the RECORD—is William H. Taft, the Secretary of War. He was not born in South Carolina, neither did he come from the Vallandigham district of Ohio. His antecedents are Republican. He has led a great career in the Republican party. His people belonged, as I understand, to the antislavery wing of that party. He was Solicitor-General of the United States and a practitioner at the bar. He became judge, and for some years administered justice in an honorable and a creditable manner, according to all accounts. He has held high positions in the East and in the West. He is not a man who "tears a passion to tatters." Whatever else he may be, he is a learned man; he is a gentleman; he is a scholar and a jurist. He has summed up this case under his oath of office, and has made report of it in his last annual report, which has been laid upon our desks. I wish, Mr. President, to insert extracts from his report in my remarks. It is like the summing up of a judge after he has heard the witnesses. I will point to one or two observations which he makes which are worthy of your notice.

The evidence makes it quite clear—that the firing had not ceased when the men began to form in line, and therefore that all the guns with which the firing was done could not have been in the racks when the sergeants in charge of quarters went to unlock the racks, although they testified that they were there.

He says—

A second observation he makes in summing up of the testimony:

It is also certain that during the formation of the companies, or immediately after, the men who had done the shooting must have returned to their places so as to respond to the roll call or that some one answered for them.

One or two enlisted men testified that the first shooting was done outside the fort, that it was accompanied by cries indicating hostility to the soldiers, and that the bullets were directed toward the barracks.

Then he points out this fact, which leads directly to the door of truth:

Not the slightest trace of any bullet holes could be found in the barracks, and the great weight of testimony indicates that these witnesses were mistaken.

Then Secretary Taft adds, respecting the order of the President, a review of the case, as follows:

The order has attracted much attention and has been severely criticised as unjust because it condemns many innocent men to undeserved punishment. It is not improper therefore in this report to review the case and state the reasons which not only justified it, but made it necessary.

First. Out of a battalion of 170 enlisted men in the Army of the United States, from 9 to 20 men formed a preconcerted plan to revenge themselves upon the people of a town in which they were stationed for the insults they felt that the townspeople had heaped upon them. In accordance with the plan, they left their barracks under cover of the darkness—about midnight—and proceeded to discharge their weapons into the houses of the town for the purpose of killing those against whom they felt a grievance. They came very near killing some one or more of the three women and seven children who were sitting or sleeping in two of the lighted rooms into which they fired. They, in fact, did kill one man, wound another, and seriously injure the chief of police. They accompanied their firing with expressions indicating the malice which prompted their action. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the squad of men who moved together from the fort to the town and did this shooting were guilty of murder, and murder in the first degree, and that if they were discovered they could be properly subjected to capital punishment. The purpose of one was the purpose of all.

Second. Within ten minutes or more after this crime was committed, when the whole garrison was aroused by the noise of the fusillade and by the call to arms which followed it, the guilty men returned to their places, and must have been among the last men to take their places, for the reason that the firing continued after the formations had begun. The absence of the rifles from the racks could not have escaped the attention of the sergeants who had the keys of the racks, if indeed they had the keys; and yet all the sergeants swear that the rifles were in the racks, untouched. Before the next morning, all the guns were clean. It is impossible that many of the battalion who did not take part as active members of the conspiracy to murder were not made aware by one circumstance or another of the identity of the persons who committed this heinous offense.

Third. Instead of giving to their officers, or to the military inspectors who were directed to make the examination, the benefit of anything which they knew tending to lead to a conviction of the guilty persons, there was a conspiracy of silence on the part of the many who must have known something of importance in this regard. Thus the murderers were taken back into the battalion and protected entirely from punishment.

Under these circumstances the question arises, Is the Government helpless? Must it continue in its service a battalion many of the members of which show their willingness to condone a crime of a capital character committed by from ten to twenty of its members, and put on a front of silence and ignorance which enables the criminals to escape just punishment? These enlisted men took the oath of allegiance to the Government, and were to be used under the law to maintain its supremacy. Can the Government properly therefore keep in its employ for the purpose of maintaining law and order any longer a body of men, from 5 to 10 per cent of whom can plan and commit murder, and rely upon the silence of a number of their companions to escape detection?

It may be that in the battalion are a number of men wholly innocent, who know neither who the guilty men are, nor any circumstances which will aid in their detection, though this can not be true of many. Because there may be innocent men in the battalion, must the Government continue to use it to guard communities of men, women, and children when it contains so dangerous an element impossible of detection? Certainly not. When a man enlists in the Army he knows that, for the very purpose of protecting itself, the Government reserves to itself the absolute right of discharge, not as a punishment, but for the public safety or interest. In such a case as this the inconvenience and hardship to those innocent of participation or knowledge, arising from arbitrarily terminating the contract of enlistment in accordance with the right which the Government by statute reserves, must be borne by them in the public interest. It goes without saying that if the guilty could be ascertained they should and would be punished; but the guilty can not be ascertained and the very impossibility of determining who are the guilty makes the whole battalion useless to the Government as an instrument for maintaining law and order. The only means of ridding the military service of a band of would-be murderers of women and children, and actual murderers of one man, is the discharge of the entire battalion.

Might not any community into which the War Department should send this battalion, in which it is known that there are from nine to twenty murderers, justly complain that the battalion is not a proper instrument for maintaining the supremacy of the law? Could we properly send such a battalion to the Philippines or Cuba to maintain peace or furnish an example of orderly conduct? If a similar outbreak were there to occur, could we relieve ourselves from responsibility for it on the theory that we could not detect the particular ten or twenty who were guilty of the first murder?

Suppose a dozen men of the battalion stationed at Fort Brown in time of a war with Mexico carried plans and ammunition to the enemy on the other side of the Rio Grande River, and then returned under circumstances which made it clear that a large number of men in the battalion must have known who they were, but that every man in the battalion denied all knowledge of it, and thus all means of detecting the guilty were lacking. Would a competent general for one moment hesitate, in the interest of the public, to disband the entire battalion and discharge it from the service in order to avoid a repetition of the danger?

Can a real and logical distinction be made between the crime of treason, under the circumstances supposed, and the crime of murder in this case? Both are capital offenses, one perhaps more heinous than the other, and more dangerous to the Government itself, but in both cases it seems to me clear that the Government must protect itself and the community to which it is responsible from a recurrence of such offenses, not by punishing guilty and innocent alike, but by separating both the guilty and innocent from the service, so as to deprive the guilty of a second opportunity for such a crime, even though this may result in inconvenience and perhaps hardship to the innocent.

It is a mistake to suppose that this order is in itself a punishment either of the innocent or of the guilty. A discharge would be an utterly inadequate punishment for those who are guilty whether of committing the murder, or of withholding or suppressing evidence which would disclose the perpetrators of such a crime. The use of the word penalty in the proceedings is a mere misnomer and is unfortunate. The dismissal from the service of the members of this battalion under the circumstances is not a punishment, however great the hardship. There is a dismissal technically known as a dishonorable discharge, which is only imposed by sentence by a court. This is a punishment. But the members of this battalion were not dishonorably discharged. They could not have been so discharged except after a trial. They were discharged for the good of the service, as the technical phrase is, "without honor." It is not a fortunate phrase, because so easily confused with a dishonorable discharge. It is called "without honor" to distinguish the discharge from a discharge with honor, or an honorable discharge, which indicates the termination, in due course, of a satisfactory service. An enlistment brought prematurely to an end for the good of the service can not be an honorable discharge. Hence the distinction must be made. The discharge "without honor" is merely the ending of a contract and separation from the service under a right reserved in the statute for the protection of the Government, which may work a hardship to the private discharged, but which, in the public interest, must sometimes be arbitrarily exercised.

But it is said that the order forbids reentry by the discharged men into the Army or Navy or civil service, and this is a penalty. When an employee is discharged for the good of the service, it naturally follows that he can not be taken back, and the President in formally stating this result is not imposing a penalty in the proper sense of the term. He is only laying down a rule of ineligibility for the service with respect to which it is his Executive duty to prescribe the rules of admission. Should hereafter facts be disclosed, or a new state of facts arise from which it can be inferred that the public service will suffer no detriment from reentry of any one of these men into the service, his ineligibility can be removed by a mere Executive order.

Much sympathy has been evoked for those who have been so long in the public service as some of the noncommissioned officers and others of this battalion of the Twenty-fifth Infantry. It is to be said with respect to these noncommissioned officers, that upon them especially falls the duty of maintaining the discipline of the companies and the battalion, and that by reason of their long service and from their official authority they have more influence over the men and more opportunity to learn the circumstances leading to a detection of the guilty in this case than any others connected with the regiment. Indeed, it was their peculiar duty to find out and disclose the facts, but they have failed to do so. It may be that they were not derelict in this. If not, then they have had the misfortune to be associated with men whose conduct and immunity from detection require the Government in the public service to exercise its reserved contract right of discharge against the entire body of which they were members.

The suggestion made in some quarters that this battalion has been treated in this way simply because the men are colored hardly merits notice. The fact of their color and the racial feeling aroused between them and the citizens of Brownsville may have been the cause and furnished the motive, but certainly not a justification, for the plot to murder men, women, and children; but to this extent only in explanation of the circumstances is the fact of their color at all relevant.

In a body of men sworn to uphold the law, enlisted as the instruments of maintaining the supremacy of the law, no obligation of comradeship, which would prevent one from telling the truth and detailing the circumstances that would lead to the conviction of his associates of murder, can be recognized by those in authority and charged with the responsibility of maintaining the discipline of the Army.

As to future exculpation, should it occur, he concludes:

It is possible that evidence may be adduced in future which will tend to exculpate entirely some of the men now discharged, both from participation in the crime and assistance in the conspiracy of silence to prevent the detection of the offenders; and whenever such facts are shown in respect to anyone affected by the order, they will be brought to your attention, and, I understand, will render such persons eligible to reenlistment.

THE CONCLUSION OF JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL DAVIS.

Gen. George B. Davis, Judge-Advocate-General of the Army, was an enlisted soldier of the First Massachusetts Cavalry in the civil war, and rose to his present rank from honorable and dutiful service, and is the author of a standard book on our military laws. Distinguished as both soldier and scholar, he has gone over this case from the standpoint of one who has long made military law a study, and has had much experience in the consideration of cases.

This is his conclusion:

In the case under discussion it is an essential incident of a judicial investigation that those who are aware of the wrongful acts committed should testify, under oath, as to facts within their knowledge. To defeat such an inquiry, a considerable number of enlisted men have entered into a criminal combination, in the execution of which they decline to disclose facts which are known to them touching the very serious offenses against public order which were committed at Brownsville, Tex., in August last. In that view of the case, the question presented is, Are men who enter into such a combination rendering honest and faithful service within the meaning of their enlistment contracts? In other words, Can men admittedly so disregardful of public authority be trusted and relied upon when upon an occasion of public emergency they are called upon to support it?

THE CONCLUSION OF INSPECTOR-GENERAL GARLINGTON.

General Garlington, thirty years ago, was appointed to West Point from the State of Georgia. He was born in the State of South Carolina. His ancestors were from Virginia. His family is one that has been identified with all the wars of this country, from the war of freedom of '76 to the recent wars from which we have just emerged. Whatever of distinction or of honor has come to him in the Army of the United States has come through the channel of merit and from gallantry displayed upon the field of battle. He wears upon his breast, when he may, a medal of honor conferred upon him for gallantry in war with the Indians. He wears upon his person a scar of battle with the Indians. He has risen by gallantry, efficiency, and by gradations of rank, by modest devotion to duty. There is nothing in his career or character or service or what he has done in this case to give just ground for any animadversion or criticism whatsoever. What he did he did as an officer in the usual way—as an officer. He declared his conviction as an honest man must and should, and he stands upon what he said, in the character, unsullied, of soldier and gentleman, unimpugnable and unimpugned.

What Inspector-General Garlington did let his superior, Secretary Taft, say (record, p. 304):

The facts as stated appear from the careful investigation and report of Major Blocksom, of the Inspector-General's corps of the Army, supplemented by affidavits and oral examinations of many witnesses, conducted by a citizen's committee at the invitation of Major Penrose, and by the report of Major Penrose. Major Blocksom began his investigation three days after the occurrence.

Since the occurrence every effort has been made by the commissioned officers and, by competent military inspectors sent for the purpose, through cross-examination of each member of the company who was present in the fort that night, to find some clue by which the enlisted men who committed this crime could be detected, and not the slightest evidence tending to establish the identity of a single man has been forthcoming. All the enlisted men of the battalion were advised that if evidence was not forthcoming leading to the identification of those who planned and committed these murders and attempted murders it would become necessary to discharge all the men present at Fort Brown that night without honor, and to bar them from reenlistment in the Army or service in the Navy or in the civil service.

Inspector-General Garlington then examined every man who came within the operation of the proposed order and was entirely unable to elicit a single circumstance leading to the identification of the murderers. He became convinced that there was a conspiracy of silence in the battalion to protect the criminals, and while he conceded that there might be a number of men in the battalion innocent both of the crime and of suppression of evidence, he deemed it necessary in the interest and for the good of the service to recommend the issuing of the order which by authority he had told the men would be made and enforced unless evidence pointing to the criminals was forthcoming. This Department concurred in General Garlington's recommendation, and the President then directed the discharge of certain-named members of the battalion, which included all the enlisted men of the battalion who were present at Fort Brown on the night in question, without honor, and forever debarred them from reenlisting in the Army or Navy of the United States, as well as from employment in any civil capacity under the Government. The order of discharge has been duly executed. A full copy of the proceedings and evidence is hereto appended.

General Garlington's conclusion was as follows:

CONCLUSION.

I recommend that orders be issued as soon as practicable discharging, without honor, every man in Companies B, C, and D of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, serving at Fort Brown, Tex., on the night of August 13, 1906, and forever debarring them from reenlisting in the Army or Navy of the United States, as well as from employment in any civil capacity under the Government. In making this recommendation I recognize the fact that a number of men who have no direct knowledge as to the identity of the men of the Twenty-fifth Infantry who actually fired the shots on the night of the 13th of August, 1906, will incur this extreme penalty.

It has been established, by careful investigation, beyond reasonable doubt that the firing into the houses of the citizens of Brownsville, while the inhabitants thereof were pursuing their peaceful vocation or sleeping, and by which one citizen was killed and the chief of police so seriously wounded that he lost an arm, was done by enlisted men of the Twenty-fifth Infantry belonging to the battalion stationed at Fort Brown. After due opportunity and notice, the enlisted men of the Twenty-fifth Infantry have failed to tell all that it is reasonable to believe they know concerning the shooting. If they had done so, if they had been willing to relate all the circumstances—instances preliminary to the trouble—it is extremely probable that a clew sufficiently definite to lead to results would have been disclosed. They appear to stand together in a determination to resist the detection of the guilty; therefore they should stand together when the penalty falls.

A forceful lesson should be given to the Army at large, and especially to the noncommissioned officers, that their duty does not cease upon the drill ground, with the calling of the company rolls, making check inspections, and other duty of formal character, but that their responsibilities of office accompany them everywhere and at all times; that it is their duty to become thoroughly acquainted with the individual members of their respective units; to know their characteristics; to be able at all times to gauge their temper, in order to discover the beginning of discontent or of mutinous intentions, and to anticipate any organized act of disorder; that they must notify their officers at once of any such conditions. Moreover, the people of the United States, wherever they live, must feel assured that the men wearing the uniform of the Army are their protectors, and not midnight assassins or riotous disturbers of the peace of the community in which they may be stationed.

No absolutely accurate verification of the rifles and men of the battalion was made on the night of the 13th of August in time to account for all the rifles or all the men at the beginning of the firing or immediately upon its conclusion. This failure is explained as follows: The commanding officer and his associates, when the alarm was sounded and they heard the firing, assumed that it came from the city of Brownsville; and that the guns were in the hands of civilians; in other words, that the garrison was being fired into from the outside by civilians. It does not appear to have occurred to any of them that certain enlisted men of the Twenty-fifth Infantry had possession of their arms, and were committing the crime of firing into the houses and upon the citizens of Brownsville, until the mayor of the city came into the garrison and informed the commanding officer, Major Penrose, that one man had been killed and another wounded by his soldiers.

CONCLUSION OF MAJ. A. P. BLOCKSOM.

Maj. A. P. Blocksom, of Ohio, inspector-general of the Department of Texas, investigated the matter on the ground and regards it as "a preconcerted raid." (Record, p. 63.)

He says:

From the evidence obtainable I believe the first shots were fired between B Company barracks and the wall separating post from town. A number were fired into the air for the purpose of creating an alarm. The soldiers, 9 to 15, possibly more, then jumped the wall and started through town. There is no reliable evidence to support the claim that the first shots came from town, and no bullet marks were found on barracks. From their direction, etc., I am sure three shots through Mr. Yturria's house came from a point near the center of B Company's upper back porch. A Mexican boy sleeping on the floor of the Yturria porch said they were among the first fired.

Mr. Randall lives over the telegraph office opposite post gate. A bullet went through his sitting room; it came from a point near the wall opposite southwestern end of C Company barracks. Some of the first shots fired also came from the vicinity of D Company barracks. The line of barracks of D, B, and C companies runs northeast to southwest. The wall between post and town is parallel to and about 75 feet northwest of line of barracks. An alley through town, perpendicular to wall, beginning at a point nearly opposite space between B and D Company barracks, was the line of operations (about three blocks in length).

The raiders first struck Cowan's house (at end of first block). There were two women and five children in it. It is a miracle some of them were not shot. The raiders could not help knowing they had not yet gone to bed. About ten shots were fired, nearly all going through house at a height of 4½ feet or less above floor. One shot put out the lamp sitting on a table. Mrs. Cowan has been on the verge of hysterics ever since. It is said the Cowan children had made fun of "the nigger soldiers;" but I could not pin down the reports. There must be some truth in them.

As to the lieutenant of police, he says:

The lieutenant of police, Dominguez, heard the firing and rode toward it, accompanied by two policemen. Near corner of Miller Hotel (end of second block) the two policemen turned back, but Dominguez kept on, and the raiders started firing upon him. He said there were about fifteen colored soldiers in the party. He was mounted on a white horse and went half a block after reaching corner of hotel, when his horse fell dead, shot through the body several times. The raiders were probably at the corner and continued firing on the fleeing man until horse fell. Dominguez was shot in right arm (afterwards amputated below the elbow). He did not even draw his revolver from holster. A number of shots were also fired at the other two policemen. Dominguez, many years on the police force, is universally respected. The raiders fired seven or eight times into the Miller Hotel, including several shots at a guest sitting by a window. After shooting Dominguez they divided. One party proceeded along the alley.

Frank Natus, bartender in Tillman's saloon (about two-thirds the way down third block), heard them coming and started to close the back door, but was shot and probably instantly killed about 20 feet from door. A Mexican in the saloon, Preciado by name, was slightly wounded in the hand by a bullet which passed through his coat. Natus had never had any trouble with the soldiers, as far as known. Five or six shots were fired through that back door. This party tried to get into the back door of another saloon, but it was closed.

The other party went half a block to the right, then turned to the left and fired five or six shots into Mr. Starck's house (second from corner on street parallel to alley), evidently mistaking it for Tate's (which is third). Bullet marks in Starck's house are higher than in Cowan's. Mrs. Starck said two shots went through mosquito bar over bed in which she and two children were sleeping. These were the last attacks, and raiders then probably ran back. Bullet marks were found on several other houses in vicinity of those already mentioned.

None of the individual raiders was recognized. Streets are poorly lighted, and it was a dark night. Those who saw them were busy trying to keep out of sight themselves. The soldiers were comparative strangers in town, having arrived only two weeks before. That the raiders were soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry can not be doubted. The evidence of many witnesses of all classes is conclusive. Shattered bullets, shells, and clips found are merely corroborative.

Major Blockson made a supplemental report, in which he said:

With regard to the charge of prejudice, I am willing to let my reports, letters, and telegrams answer the accusation.

I investigated the Brownsville affair because ordered to do so in my capacity as assistant inspector-general of the Southwestern Division, not because I desired such an unpleasant duty.

I did not rely upon the evidence taken before the citizens' committee at Brownsville. It was natural for that committee to be prejudiced. It was, however, composed of the best people in town, and I was informed that the majority originally were northern men.

I relied primarily upon my own investigation of the witnesses to the shooting and its attendant circumstances.

I interrogated about fifty witnesses—men, women, and children—who either personally saw the soldiers do the shooting, or heard their voices, or were witnesses to some other important fact relating to the crime.

I had long conversations with other persons—women and children, lawyers, judges, merchants, policemen, old officers—both Union and Confederate—Federal, State, and county officials, saloon men, and laborers, etc.

I did not hear a single person express a doubt on the subject; all either knew or were convinced from universal report that the raid was made by soldiers of the battalion of Fort Brown.

Noting the bulk of the evidence as to particular circumstances, he says:

On page 5 [188] of the report of the Constitution League, etc., with regard to empty shells and clips, I have already stated I regarded them as corroborative merely. On the same page it is said: "The garments described correspond with the khaki trousers or blue shirts almost universally worn in the vicinity." I have already referred to this subject in answer to Mr. Gilchrist Stewart's letter. The rangers (only one or two in town on the night of the 13th of August) do look something more like soldiers than do the Mexican police, but neither could be mistaken for them. There were a few other persons in town who wore perhaps a cast-off soldier's garment or hat.

Is it contended that either rangers or police, or both, committed the crime?

On page 8 [190] same report: "Every man at the roll calls of the three companies were present or accounted for within five or (at the maximum) eight minutes of the first alarm; and this alarm was coincident with the first firing."

This is the most important statement of fact in the whole report. It is untrue, as shown from sworn testimony of officers, as well as men, in my reply to Mr. Stewart's letter.

And he adds:

"But, as I have previously said, I never believed the first roll calls were accurate. Officers and first sergeants thought the post was attacked by town people, and it is absurd to suppose they thought of roll calls first and defense afterwards."

The opposite view of this matter presupposes too much, Mr. President. Then he has something to say in regard to the affair of Mrs. Evans.

Page 16 [193] with regard to Mrs. Evans. I investigated this affair at the house to which Mr. and Mrs. Evans had moved after the assault—more than a mile from the garrison. Mrs. Evans was absolutely positive as to the fact of her assailant being a tall, colored soldier. I interviewed her husband also and he told me of her fright, etc., when he saw her, almost immediately after the occurrence.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans are unimpeachably respectable.

With regard to evidence that firing "seems to have come from the road in front of Company B's headquarters." The positive evidence which I found from long and careful investigation of three witnesses, Mr. Randall, Mr. Martinez, and Mr. McDonald (the first two living in the telegraph office, very near which the firing began), together with that of a boy (Teofilo) who slept on the porch of the Yturria House, and that of Mrs. Cowan, her servant and children, offsets the evidence from men in garrison, who were farther away. Much of the latter evidence is negative and indefinite (see sworn evidence, also, in Colonel Lovering's report).

I talked often with Judge Welch, quoted on page 24 [198]. He was convinced the crime was committed by colored soldiers of the garrison (as can be proved by several officials with whom he was associated). But he was a most fair and just man and recognized the fact that there was no evidence against individual criminals. I explained why in my report. It is unfortunate he was assassinated the day before the November election.

He finally observes:

With regard to the call to arms * * * it did not occur until several minutes after first shots were fired, and then by the order of the sergeant of the guard.

Now, here is his conclusion of this matter, from going to the scene of action, from talking to everybody, looking the whole ground over:

I believe he sounded it to create confusion, to get out and place arms in the hands of all men so that the raiders would not be discovered on their return. Not a shot struck anything or anybody in the post; how different was it in town.

CONCLUSION OF MAJOR PENROSE.

Maj. C. W. Penrose, of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, was in command of the three companies. He says in his report from Fort Brown, Tex., August 15. (Record, p. 31):

Were it not for the damaging evidence of the empty shells and used clips I should be of the firm belief that none of my men was in any way connected with the crime, but with this fact so painfully before me I am not only convinced it was perpetrated by men of this command, but that it was carefully planned beforehand. I have the affidavits from three noncommissioned officers who were in charge of quarters on the day and night, and they swear positively the rifles were verified and the racks locked after drill (practice march of Companies B and D, drill of Company C), and the old guard returned to the quarters; that they never left the quarters, and that the keys to the locks of the racks were never out of their possession, and that the racks were not opened until call to arms sounded, and were then opened by them.

From testimony gathered by the Citizens' Committee and given to me by Doctor Combe, I believe from seven to ten men were implicated in this matter. Some one of them must have had a key to the gun rack, and after checkroll call was taken—for all were reported present at 11 p. m. roll call—they slipped out of quarters, did the shooting, returned while the companies were forming, and at some time during the early hours of the morning cleaned their rifles. This is made possible from the fact that the shooting all occurred within two short blocks of the barracks.

GEN. A. B. NETTLETON'S CONCLUSIONS.

Gen. A. B. Nettleton won his spurs in the Army of the Potomac in the civil war. He has been an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and has been identified with the Republican party through his lifetime. He has been in no relation either to the people of the South or to the soldiers in this case that might possibly divert his mind from a calm and considerate judgment as to its nature. There annexed to the President's message is a letter written by that gentleman, on November 27, to the President. He has often spent his time in Brownsville and, as I understand, is now there. In terms of indignation he describes the situation, and here is what he says:

As a citizen and resident of Illinois, as an antislavery advocate when that phrase had a meaning, and as a life-long Republican who served in the Union Army throughout the civil war, I shall at least not be suspected of prejudice against men of color as such. I feel sure that only carefully disseminated misinformation as to the facts can account for the present gross misapprehension on the part of some persons and journals at the North.

Business interests bring me frequently to Brownsville, where I have found a particularly placid and well-ordered community. Arriving here immediately after the midnight attack upon this city by a part of the colored garrison of Fort Brown, I have improved my abundant opportunity for gathering, personally and privately, on the spot and at first hand, and for carefully sifting all material facts bearing upon the deplorable event. Without rehearsing details, I wish to assure you that an absolutely unprejudiced investigation, continued after all local excitement had subsided, confirms in every particular the conclusions reached by the two Army officers sent here by your Department, upon which the President has acted, as well as the clear and temperate statement sent out immediately after the tragedy by Chairman William Kelly, of the Brownsville citizens' committee. Captain Kelly is a veteran officer of the Union Army, president of the First National Bank here, and a citizen of the highest character, who could have no motive for magnifying the gravity of the occurrence. His associates on this committee and in its investigations included leading State, Federal, county, and municipal officials, all of whom were present in Brownsville on the night of the outrage and throughout the subsequent events. The committee's membership also embraced the most prominent private citizens of all vocations, including many of northern birth and antecedents. The committee's report is doubtless on your table or in your files. It constitutes the authorized, dignified, and sufficient utterance of this community, and it probably embodies the most conclusive and damning indictment ever found against soldiers of any race wearing the uniform and wielding the weapons of a civilized government.

Next to the window where I am now writing is a cottage home where a children's party had just broken up before the house was riddled with at least twenty-three United States bullets, fired by United States troops, from United States Springfield rifles, at close range, necessarily with the purpose of killing or maiming the inmates, including the parents and children, who were still up in the well-lighted house and whose escape from death, under the circumstances, was astonishing. On another street I daily look upon the fresh bullet scars where a volley from similar Government rifles was fired into the side and windows of the Miller Hotel, occupied at the time by sleeping or frightened guests from abroad, who could not possibly have given any offense to the assailants. Any day the Brownsville lieutenant of police, Dominguez, again on duty from hospital, may be seen carrying an empty sleeve because he got in the way of Federal soldiers from the adjacent garrison when they were shooting up the town. And not far away is the fresh grave of an unoffending citizen of this place, a boy in years, who was wantonly shot down while unarmed and attempting to escape the astonishing rain of bullets.

The well-attested evidence, controverted by none, is that the colored troops were treated here in Brownsville with the same consideration with which colored soldiers of similar bearing are treated in garrison towns of Northern States; that, on the other hand, the street conduct of some of them was often aggressively and causelessly insolent toward both white men and women; that one attempted assault upon a white woman was made by a negro soldier in uniform; that there was no known provocation for the murderous raid by the negro soldiers, unless it can be called a provocation that the drinkers among them were provided with separate bars in certain saloons, and that on two occasions individual insolence was resented by individual citizens, both of whom happen to have been Republican Federal officials; that there was no "riot" and no "street row," as many newspapers persist in calling the raid, but there was simply a cold-blooded conspiracy of the most cowardly possible sort to terrorize the entire community and kill or injure men, women, and children in their homes and beds or on the streets, and this at an hour of the night when concerted or effective resistance or defense was out of the question, and when detection by identification of the uniformed criminals outside of the garrison was well-nigh impossible. No defense being practicable, none was made. So far as I can learn, not a shot was fired by citizens at the attacking soldiers or at the fort. The soldiers were the aggressors from start to finish. They met with no resistance during their assault and had things their own way.

To one who knows the facts as I learn them here, and who therefore appreciates the enormity of the prearranged cooperative crime, the present attempt to make martyrs of any portion of the discharged men would be appalling if it were not grotesque. If the persons who actually did the firing could have been identified and tried, they would doubtless have suffered what they deserve—the penalty of a shameful death. Every soldier who possesses incriminating knowledge of the facts has, by refusing to testify, made himself legally as well as morally an accessory after the fact to the crime of murder. It equally follows, as it seems to me, that every member of the battalion who, however innocent personally both of actual participation and of actual guilty knowledge, has chosen to stand as a silent or outspoken champion of his suspected comrades, is himself morally implicated, and unfit to wear the uniform of an American soldier. He has shown himself an unsafe person to be employed as a defender of the public welfare and of the nation's honor. Inasmuch as, so far as known, not one member of the disgraced battalion has thus far seen fit to act the part of an honorable citizen and soldier by at least manifesting a willingness to aid the Government to fix the primary responsibility where it belongs, the entire membership of the three companies rightfully share a common ignominy. Besides, all the circumstances of the case leave very little doubt in my mind that a very large proportion of the command are in possession of knowledge which, if revealed, would lead to the prompt detection of the men who did the actual firing.

Without presuming to pass judgment upon any part of the conduct of the white commissioned officers who were in charge of the Brownsville garrison, which conduct is doubtless receiving the attention of your Department, I have been greatly surprised by several facts relating to the discipline maintained at the post. For example, at the outset it seemed amazing to me that neither the commanding officer, the officer of the day, nor the officer of the guard should have known anything of the bloody event. My amazement was increased when I learned that the officer of the day had, earlier in the evening, gone to his private quarters and not only removed his sword, but had undressed, gone to bed, and was sound asleep throughout the entire occurrence.

I believe no course other than the moderate and lawful one which he has pursued was or is open to the President unless all semblance of decent discipline in our Army is to be ended, and unless every American community, North and South alike, is to be given cause to dread the proximity of a negro garrison as it would that of an encampment of paid, armed, and uniformed assassins. "It is not a sectional matter. I find here little, if any, animosity toward colored troops as such. White soldiers guilty of like conduct would be dreaded and detested quite as much as black ones, and in Boston as well as in Brownsville."

These are wise words.

I sympathize with the colored people in their upward struggle in America against fearful odds. I believe the most damaging service that can be rendered them as a race in this their period of test and transition is that of championing or excusing the criminal element in their ranks, as some members of both races seem to be doing at the present time. Incidentally, this sanguinary Brownsville episode seems to mark a sudden and inexplicable reversion to unprovoked primeval savagery by considerable numbers of trained, veteran negro soldiers, which suggests serious thoughts upon the whole racial problem.

But that is anotner matter, and the present duty for every citizen, North and South, white and black alike, as it appears to me, is to acquaint himself with the facts in this particular case, as officially ascertained, and then voice his emphatic approval of President Roosevelt's necessary and admirable course in the premises. I can imagine no conduct on the part of members of a military garrison which would surpass in atrocity the Brownsville crime of August 13, and but for the fact that ironclad conspiracy of silence on the part of the entire force of enlisted men has thus far rendered detection and real punishment impossible the present sweeping dismissal would not be required.

It goes without saying that such discharge from service is not punishment. As punishment it would be farcical in its leniency. It is at utmost a severance of relations between employer and employed—a determination of the Government's responsibility for the conduct of men who have shown that they can not be trusted. It is to the last degree deplorable that adequate penalty can not be inflicted at this time, but in the absence of such penalty the good name of every colored soldier remaining in the Army, and of the colored race in America, demands that they unite with all good citizens in placing these criminals and their sympathizing comrades in the pillory of public execration.

When a man of character and service like that of General Nettleton—near the scene of action, knowing the people and mingling with them—goes out of his way to come forward and bear his testimony to the people of this United States as to the nature of a case, it is testimony, even if not admissible in courts, that can not fail to convey moral conviction to any enlightened mind.

CONCLUSION OF WILLIAM KELLY, ESQ., AN EX-FEDERAL OFFICER.

William Kelly, president of the First National Bank of Brownsville, was chairman of the citizens' committee. He is Republican in politics and was an officer of the Union Army during the civil war. His son married the daughter of Governor Odell, of New York.

He says in a communication which appears in the papers accompanying the President's Message, page 240:

At a few minutes before 12 o'clock a shot was fired from the post, apparently a signal, for immediately thereafter a volley was fired, and a body of soldiers, from sixteen to twenty-five in number, jumped the garrison wall—a brick fence about 3 feet high—formed under a non-commissioned officer, whose commands were heard, rushed into town, and commenced firing indiscriminately into the houses of the citizens. Into the house where but a few moments before between forty and fifty innocent children were enjoying themselves, over twenty shots were fired, riddling furniture and smashing mirrors and tearing hangings.

Mrs. Cowen and her children took refuge underneath a bed, through the covering of which one bullet passed. The shots were fired point blank to kill—most of them at the height of a man above the floors. A little farther up the street the house of Mr. Fred Starck had eight shots in it; one passed through the bed of his sleeping children and within 2 feet of where they lay.

* * * * * * *

The citizens' committee, appointed at a mass meeting the morning after the outrages, made these demands in behalf of our outraged people: First. Remove all the negroes; next, follow the guilty ones, and spare no efforts to have them identified and punished as their crimes deserve.

Fort Brown has been garrisoned by negro troops before, and no trouble has arisen between them and the citizens of Brownsville. Generals Shafter, Merriam, Doubleday, Corbin, Clous, Gilmore, Wade, Hatch, and many others of high rank have commanded negro troops here. There is probably less race prejudice in this community than in any part of the South; but when it becomes a question between the peace, comfort, and safety of our mothers, wives, daughters, and sisters, and the presence of armed negroes among us the armed negro must go.

The citizens' committee was selected from our best citizens; its chairman is a post commander in the Grand Army of the Republic and a companion of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States; one of its members is a vice-commander of the Grand Army of the Republic; another is quartermaster of the local Grand Army post; the remainder of the membership is composed of three doctors, four lawyers, three bankers, three merchants, two landowners, and three large owners of city property.

The mayor of the city is a well-known ex-army officer, and to his quiet firmness is due the fact that grave results did not follow the outrage.

The personnel of the committee will give assurance that they will "nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice."

WILLIAM KELLY,
Chairman Citizens' Committee.

CONSUL GRIFFITH'S CONCLUSION.

From across the river in Matamoros came another voice, Consul Griffith is an officer of the United States at the town of Matamoros. He was near the ground when this transaction happened. One significant fact. The house of Mr. Cowen had twenty-two bullet marks upon it. There was shooting in the street near the garrison. When the shooting was over, neither the garrison wall nor the garrison anywhere bore the mark of a bullet; but one house had twenty-two bullet marks upon it. If that does not show which way the rifles were pointed, the doubting Thomas who would disbelieve it would not believe though one should rise from the dead.

I myself—

Says he—

counted twenty-two bullet holes, and how the lady and her five children, who crawled under the bed, escaped death is almost a miracle. Not a shot had been fired by any citizen into the garrison, nor was any riot going on, as has been repeatedly reported.

He gives his view of the whole situation, and as he is an officer of the present Administration in a foreign part, and there is no proof that he was born in any part of this country which comes under animadversion, I will not inquire further into his residence or his antecedents.

THE SAME MILITARY LAW IS FOR WHITE AND BLACK ALIKE.

If, Mr. President, this had been a white company, whether from Connecticut or from Virginia, whether from Massachusetts or Maine, whether from Dakota or Indiana, we would have had no public meetings on the subject, no sermons would have been preached, no churches would have been aroused and diverted from their religious devotions. It has happened to some of the soldiers of nearly every State in the Union in the many wars which we have fought and in the many situations and difficulties which they have had to encounter to come under animadversion or censure or blame and sometimes of disgrace and shame. It does not belong to any community in this country to raise angels alone, and while we may all feel sensitive, and justly so when those near to us are touched, while we may all be willing to help and defend, and properly should, we must bide our portion when it comes to us, turn ourselves against wrong, whoever commits it, and try to possess our souls in fortitude and patience, submissive and subservient to law.

Now, I do not wonder that our colored people have been sensitive. Some of them have been taught here or there that this was unjust to them. No such idea ever entered the mind of the President of the United States, nor of Secretary Taft, nor Judge-Advocate-General Davis, nor of Major Blocksom or Major Penrose, nor of General Garlington, nor of Major Kelly, nor of the consul at Matamoros, nor of General Nettleton, nor has entered mine. I would feel ashamed to occupy a seat upon the floor of the Senate if I would not defend an Indian, a Chinaman, a Japanese, or a colored man if proof were brought to my mind that he had been tyrannically or unjustly treated. If there are innocent men in this company who did not know of this matter, I hope their innocence will be proved. But this is just one of those cases in which, although grand juries sought to get at testimony, inspectors of the Army tried to get at testimony, department commanders tried to get at testimony, citizens' committees tried to get at testimony, but one single fact appears demonstrated as a fact, and that is that some of these soldiers, their identity in person unknown, had shot up the town of Brownsville. This was proved as was there attested by Secretary Taft in his summary of the testimony, and I will not read over to you the individual witnesses. The soldiers were seen to climb over the wall, which is near the houses of Martinez and Cowan, and after they shot up the street in front of that wall, twenty-two bullet marks were found upon one house. On another square or so up the street the horse of the chief of police was killed and he maimed, and a little beyond another person killed. All the res gestæ of the transaction has convinced every man who has ever gone upon the premises and examined them.

THE PRESIDENT DELIBERATE AND PATIENT.

The President of the United States was slow to reach his conclusion. He did not go off halfcocked. From the 13th of August to the 4th day of October he plodded along as best he could investigating the case by officers upon the ground, by officers sent there, and by hearing adminicles of testimony borne upon the four winds by different personages who communicated with him. After he had heard it all he could reach but one conclusion.

Now, Mr. President, in that conclusion it may be, ex necessitate rei, not from the design of any man—even the will might be unwilling thereto—that some innocent soldier will suffer. We are told in the Good Book that the sun shines and the rains fall on the just and on the unjust. When calamities come the innocent are apt to suffer with the guilty. But this is also true, and especially about a soldier and a corps: You can not make a good soldier unless you make him feel that the honor of his corps is his honor. He must be ready at any and all times to speak up for the company and the regiment to which he belongs and be made to realize at all times that when he puts his uniform on and bears the insignia of his soldiership in that company and regiment he is its representative and spokesman.

SCORES OF WITNESSES.

Now, Mr. President, when the President of the United States says—and it is attributed to him, though I have not found the words except in an order given under his direction—that scores of witnesses bore out his conclusion in this case, I can not appreciate that that remark can be belittled, for if he did say so, he acted within the margin of the testimony laid before him and not beyond it. Major Blocksom says he examined about fifty witnesses, as I have shown, and the result of the testimony of these and other witnesses was laid before the President. When a military officer of the United States, in the discharge of his duty under his oath of office, reports a condition and the basis of that condition, and the whole matter is laid before the President of the United States, and upon his responsibility as an intelligent and law-abiding man, even though he may not have heard with his own ear and seen with his own eyes the witnesses who gave the observations which were reported to him, he, in his Executive character, does not sit like a court upon a bench to hear only technical testimony governed by rigid rules in litigated cases. Any kind of testimony that brings moral conviction may be the basis of his action, as it may be the basis of the action of a Senator here in giving his assent to a law.

THE FACTS OF THE CASE.

It will appear, however, in this case that the President of the United States did not rely alone upon those moral evidences which were brought to his attention, but upon official reports made to him by proper military officers.

So, Mr. President, if it comes to pass that it is definitely ascertained by judicious men, by men of all sections—by men from New York, Ohio, Illinois, New Hampshire, Michigan, Georgia, Massachusetts, and elsewhere—by men of all classes, by men of all points of observation that a certain number of a company or regiment have committed a great fault, it becomes the first duty of every one of those soldiers to go upon the trail, find out, expose the man who committed the fault, and see that the blemish upon their organization is removed. If they do not do it, what have they done? Proved themselves unworthy of the uniform they wear. If they can not do it, what have they done? Simply placed themselves in the misfortune of incompetency and disability. What must the Army do? What must the country do? What must the Commander in Chief do? He can not change military law because a man here or there may suffer. He has to teach all the soldiers in the Army what the duty of a soldier is, and what the honor of a soldier is, and what the law of the land is. Moreover, as he should only keep in service soldiers in whom confidence can be placed, he must discharge the company when knowing that the guilty ones amongst them can not be identified.

The President of the United States has done that in the most mild and moderate form that it was in his power to do. Some say he should have had a court-martial. The people of Brownsville—and to their credit be it said—Judge Welsh of their criminal court had a grand jury to investigate this matter. It was believed that thirteen men participated in this fiendish transaction. When you come to say, Was A B one of them? nobody could identify A B, or C D, or E F, or G H, or I J, or K L, to the end of the alphabet. But while no man could spot the individual, many men could spot the soldiery, for they saw the soldiery when they jumped over the wall. They saw their forms in the night as they fired their rifles. They found twenty-two bullet holes at the end of the mouth of those rifles. They found the dead horse, the crippled man, and the corpse of a citizen, and the cartridge shells, and they know of the terrorism and the murder and the bloodshed that ran riot in that town.

We are up against this unfortunate condition in the complex affairs of human life. The men who were innocent must take their portion and bide their time. I have, somehow, faith that there is an angel that watches over the innocent that somewhere at some time will entertain him unawares. I do not fear that, if there be innocent men, somewhere at some time the evidence will come forth that will acquit them.

But, Mr. President, as all this matter was confined within the circle of the companies, as yet it has been impossible to identify individually the criminals, though the group that holds them has been identified. So, then, Mr. President, let the investigation proceed. Get all the evidence you can. Go down to Brownsville again to get it, but do not let us impugn the President, who has executed the military law, which exacts discipline. Do not let us challenge the Articles of War, which the Congress enacted and which Congress after Congress has recognized and which have been in existence for a hundred years. Do not let the people of this country—North, South, East, or West—feel that they are, in any city or any vicinage, at the mercy of any mob.

MOB LAW IS NO MAN'S LAW.

Mob law is no man's law. It should be no country's law.

When the mob attacked the trains of the United States and the post-office arrangements of the United States in the city of Chicago, in Cleveland's Administration, the Democracy of the Senate did not believe that they were standing for autocratic government when they approved the President of the United States in sending armed men there to protect it; nor did the people condemn either the Senate or the House, which unanimously indorsed him. I had the honor to offer the approving resolution in the Senate which was unanimously indorsed; and I beg to state, Mr. President, that the people of my section, the people who are represented here from all over the South, stand for law and for order and for the Constitution and for the recognized officials of this Government to be supported and sustained wherever they act within the purview of their power.

Do not tell me, sir, that this is friendship for autocracy. It is simply friendship for government. It is simply respect for law, and when men who proclaim these doctrines are pointed to as having a tendency to join those who are for centralization and consolidation and for piling up autocratic powers, I repudiate the suggestion. Let me point them to the voice of Hugh S. Legare, of South Carolina, of sixty years ago, one of the advisers of the then President. Let me refer again to the voice of the venerable jurist from Maine, Nathan Clifford, and say that in those voices you have the law and the prophets of the Democratic creed of this land; the American creed which in this matter the President stands for.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL.

During the delivery of Mr. DANIEL's speech,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Virginia will suspend while the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 5133) to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I had intended to offer an amendment to the pending bill, the unfinished business, and to make a few observations concerning it, which would not occupy more than a few minutes. But as the Senator from Virginia has the floor, I will defer that until after the Senator from Virginia concludes, if the Senator from Wisconsin will ask to have the unfinished business temporarily laid aside.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask that the unfinished business may be laid aside until the Senator from Virginia concludes.

Mr. WARREN. I ask leave to present two amendments to the bill which the Senator now asks may be laid aside, in order that they may be printed. I have in mind what the Senator from New Hampshire also has in mind, to make some observations when the time comes. I shall be glad if the amendments may be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be printed and lie on the table. The Senator from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be laid aside until the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Virginia. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Virginia will proceed.

Mr. DANIEL. I thank both the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Wisconsin for their courtesy.

After the conclusion of Mr. DANIEL's speech,

DISMISSAL OF THREE COMPANIES OF TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, let the unfinished business be laid before the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The unfinished business will be laid before the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. I only wanted to inquire whether any other Senator desires to speak to the resolution this afternoon. If not, I will ask that it may go over until to-morrow, as it did yesterday until to-day—that is, to be taken up after the routine morning business.

Mr. CULBERSON. Before that order is adopted I simply desire to suggest that I understand the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] desires to have the unfinished business now taken up.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is my purpose, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. CULBERSON. I have no objection, of course, to that, and I would be very glad to accommodate the Senator, but if he did not want to go on now there might be observations to be made on the pending resolution.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will venture to suggest that it is not an accommodation. The bill is the regular order.

Mr. CULBERSON. The Senator probably misunderstood me. I did not mean in the best sense of the term that it was an accommodation, but that it would be my pleasure to hear the Senator.

Mr. GALLINGER. And it is my pleasure, I will say to the Senator, to make any arrangement that will facilitate the consideration of the matter which has just been under discussion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio asks that the resolution respecting the Brownsville matter may go over until to-morrow, to be brought up after the conclusion of the routine morning business. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the bill under consideration——

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I was not listening, and I do not understand about the unanimous-consent agreement. Let it be stated again.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The unanimous-consent agreement was that the resolution regarding the Brownsville matter shall go over until to-morrow morning, to be laid before the Senate at the conclusion of the routine morning business.

Mr. McCUMBER. I object to that, simply because three or four times we have made arrangements——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from North Dakota suspend until the Senate is in order?

Mr. McCUMBER. With the understanding that the resolution simply goes over and that I may proceed in accordance with the notice which has been given, I withdraw the objection.

Mr. FORAKER. I will say to the Senator from North Dakota that when the resolution comes up I will yield to him to address the Senate under his notice.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 5133) to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, an examination of the bill under consideration reveals the fact that it was introduced by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and amended by the committee by striking out the entire text of the bill and substituting other language; and that during its consideration twenty-five amendments were offered to the bill, which are now pending, eight of those amendments having been offered by the Senator from Wisconsin himself.

I state this fact, Mr. President, for the reason that on yesterday the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] came to my desk and inquired if I desired to further debate the bill. I said to him that I had an amendment which I proposed to offer, to which I would address myself very briefly. An afternoon paper of to-day, in speaking of this bill, has a headline which reads, "Plot Bill's Death," and then it goes on to state—

> The friends of the bill are not certain just what will be the tactics of the opposition. It is expected, however, efforts will be made to amend the bill and, perhaps, to weaken it by this indirect method of attack. Senator GALLINGER of New Hampshire has already advised Senator LA FOLLETTE that he has one or more amendments to propose.

Mr. President, I have been here a good many years, and I never before heard it intimated that it was not entirely proper for any Senator to offer an amendment to any bill that was under consideration, nor have I ever before heard it suggested that such action could properly be construed into an effort to defeat a bill. As I have just suggested, the Senator from Wisconsin has himself offered eight amendments to the bill, which amendments are now pending.

Now, Mr. President, the amendment that I propose to offer to the bill is as follows, and I will ask the Secretary to read it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the proposed amendment.

The SECRETARY. Add as a new section the following:

> SEC. 5. That nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit or in any way interfere with the employment, with their consent, of men whose hours of labor are affected herein, upon runs, single or turn, which, in the reasonable judgment of the officers of the respective railroads and of the men so employed, can be completed, in the ordinary course of the business of the carrier, within sixteen hours.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, before saying a word in advocacy of this amendment I desire to put in the RECORD the action of several divisions of the organization known as the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which have been sent to me protesting against the passage of the pending bill. I will not take the time to read them, but ask that they may be inserted in the RECORD.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The letters will be inserted without reading, if there be no objection.

The matter referred to is as follows:

BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS,
PORT JERVIS DIVISION, No. 54,
Port Jervis, N. Y., September 13, 1906.

Mr. JOHN WONDERLY.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: At a regular meeting of Division No. 54, September 11, 1906, the letter you sent to Brother Kelley, in regard to certain measures which was to be presented to the legislature in regard to passing laws for the safety of employees and the traveling public, was read and, after talking the matter over, the vote was taken, and Division No. 54 voted as being opposed to such becoming a law, as our men considered it would be against the best interests of our men, and I was instructed to notify you of the above action.

C. CASKY, First Assistant Engineer.

BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS,
GALION DIVISION, No. 16,
Galion, Ohio, September 19, 1906.

Mr. JOHN WONDERLY, Huntington, Ind.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: At a regular meeting, held in Galion, September 18, 1906, it was resolved that division is bitterly opposed to the bill limiting the hours of service of employees on railroads, which is now pending in Congress.

Yours, fraternally,
JOHN J. DAZE,
F. A. E., Galion, Ohio.

BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS,
LAKE SUBDIVISION, No. 302,
Chicago, Ill., October 2, 1906.

Resolution passed by Division 302:

"That we are not in favor of Interstate Commerce Commission regulating the hours of labor for engineers, as it would in many cases be a hardship on engineers to get within a few miles of home sometimes and have to stop for rest."

[SEAL.]
GEO. BODLEY,
First Assistant Engineer, Division 302.

DUNMORE, PA., September 24, 1906.

Mr. JOHN WONDERLY,
Chairman General Committee of Adjustment, Erie System.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: Believing that the proposed new law limiting the time that an engineer may remain on duty to a certain number of hours would work great hardship on us and seriously interfere with the business of the railroads: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Division 403, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, are opposed to the passage of any law limiting the hours that an engineer may remain on duty.

Fraternally, yours,

[SEAL.]
A. E. FINCH,
Chief Engineer.
C. E. COLLINS,
First Assistant Engineer.

HUNTINGTON, IND., September 30, 1906.

At regular meeting of this division, held September 30, a motion was made and carried that this division does not approve of the enactment of a law as outlined in circular presented to this division.

Respectfully,

[SEAL.]
WM. MCCLURE,
First Assistant Engineer.

BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS,
HUDSON DIVISION, No. 135,
Jersey City, N. J., September 20, 1906.

Mr. JOHN WONDERLY.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: Your letter in reference to correction of proposed schedule and the proposed bill at Washington was read at our last regular meeting. The members present were not in favor of such a bill becoming a law, but owing to the small number present action was deferred until next meeting, when it is likely that a resolution protesting against the passage of such a bill will be adopted. I received the ballots O. K. and have distributed them among the members, and about two-thirds of them have been returned. With best wishes to you,

I am, yours, fraternally,
JNO. L. VAN ORDEN.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator tell me, before he goes on, at what point he proposes his amendment?

Mr. GALLINGER. As a new section.

I will also ask consent to insert in the RECORD copies of two letters and a series of resolutions. The first letter is from W. C. Gurney, general chairman Order Railway Conductors, Delaware and Hudson system, and the resolutions were adopted by the same organization and signed by their chief officers. These are copies of letters that were sent to Hon. W. P. HEPBURN, of the House of Representatives, chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and which, I think, have not been put in print before.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire? The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

18 MUNSELL STREET, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.,
December 22, 1906.

Hon. W. P. HEPBURN,
Chairman Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SIR: Referring to my letter of even date inclosing resolution adopted by the conductors of the Delaware and Hudson system running out of Whitehall, beg to say that I have been over the entire system and have talked with practically every conductor employed on the system and find that they are unanimously opposed to any legislation bearing on the hours of service of employees in train service, as they very much prefer to continue to arrange the hours of service directly with the management of the railroad.

I inclose herewith a copy of our agreement with the management of this company, and would especially call your attention to rules No. 30 and No. 42, which were proposed by the conductors and trainmen and agreed to by the management. In going over our system to ascertain the sentiment of the conductors in regard to the proposed bill I have come in contact with a large number of employees in the train service of other railroads in this territory and found that the men had not been consulted in regard to the proposed bill and knew nothing of it, and when their attention was called to it were very much opposed to it. They did not favor any legislation on the subject, as they preferred to settle that matter direct with the management through their schedules. Any legislation which will make it necessary for the employees in the train service to spend their rest time away from home instead of at home and with their families is a serious one, and should be very earnestly considered before it is passed. It affects the railroad men in the Middle and Eastern States, and they should be given an opportunity to be heard in the matter. The bill has been handled in such a manner that they have had no knowledge of it and no opportunity to pass on it, and I pray that you may have action on the bill postponed until all the men affected may have an opportunity to enter their protest against it.

Yours, truly,
W. C. GURNEY,
General Chairman Order Railway Conductors,
Delaware and Hudson System.

18 MUNSELL STREET, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.,
December, 1906.

Hon. W. P. HEPBURN,
Chairman Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor acknowledging receipt of the resolution expressing the desire of the members of the Order of Railway Conductors in relation to the sixteen-hour bill now pending before the House of Representatives.

I note you say Mr. Fuller was before the committee and urged the passage of this bill. For your information I would say that Mr. Fuller has not consulted us in regard to the matter. He has not even advised us that such a bill was pending before Congress, and we but very recently learned that such a bill was being considered. I am informed that other orders of railway employees in this sectioin have been ignored in a similar manner.

The proposed bill would work the greatest hardship to employees in the train service in this section of the country, and I think Mr. Fuller should have given us an opportunity to express our views in regard to it.

Most respectfully, yours, W. C. GURNEY,
General Chairman Order Railway Conductors,
Delaware and Hudson System.

Whereas there are now pending in the Congress of the United States measures intended to take away from the men employed in the train service of interstate railways the right to dispose of their services under conditions and upon terms satisfactory to themselves; and

Whereas the nature of the railway business imposes conditions little understood by the general public, among them the fluctuations in train movement from week to week, month to month, and season to season, which create corresponding variations in the quantity of train service required and consequently in the demand for the labor of trainmen; and

Whereas the efficient handling of the public business intrusted to interstate railway carriers requires the arrangement of the runs of train crews so that in many cases the distances covered can not always be traversed, when conditions are at all adverse, within sixteen hours, and this is especially true of what are known as "turn" runs, which, however, are universally preferred by train crews because they permit the layovers to be spent at their homes, with increased comfort and reduced expense; and

Whereas the restriction of the hours of labor, by imposing a statutory maximum of sixteen hours, with exceptions only in case of casualties occurring after the runs begin, would require the railways to keep upon their pay rolls a greatly increased number of men to handle the traffic at the period of its greatest volume, but many of whom would be idle much of the time during most of the year, and would thus greatly reduce the average annual earnings of all classes of trainmen; and

Whereas the railway trainmen of the United States are of full age, possessed of sound minds, equipped with an intelligent comprehension of their own interests and of the business in which they are engaged, and are therefore fully able to look after themselves in their dealings with their employers: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Division 45 of the Order of Railway Conductors, condemn any legislative proposal for the restriction of the number of hours during which railway trainmen shall be permitted to dispose of their labor, and that we especially protest against the passage of the bill known as S. 5133, introduced by Senator LA FOLLETTE, or any similar measure; and

Be it further resolved, That W. C. Gurney be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit these resolutions to the Senators and Members of Congress from the State of New York, to the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the United States Senate, and to the Speaker and the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives.

[SEAL.] F. W. MILLER,
Chief Conductor Division 45, O. R. C.
R. O. HUMPHREY,
Secretary and Treasurer Division 45, O. R. C.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have no disposition to defeat this bill if it can be put in proper shape. I have a disposition to perfect it as far as it is in my power to accomplish that result. I take it for granted that the bill is to pass in some form or other, and I prefer that it shall pass in proper form rather than in an improper form.

The amendment I have offered simply contemplates that it shall apply on certain short runs, and I will cite three or four of them as an illustration. For instance, between Boston, Mass., and Concord, N. H., the latter city being my home, ordinarily the men can make a run to Concord and return to Boston within the sixteen hours, but under some circumstances a slight delay may occur, and it is impossible for them to reach Boston in exactly sixteen hours. If this bill is enacted without a provision such as I have proposed, the men would have to lay off at Concord, 75 miles from their homes, a new crew would have to be recruited to send with the train to Boston, or else the train itself would have to remain in Concord for eight or ten hours for these men to have the rest that is contemplated by the provisions of the bill. What is true of that run is likewise true of the run from Boston to East Deerfield, Mass., and from East Deerfield to Rotterdam or Mechanicsville, N. Y., and there are many other similar instances that might be cited. Any one of the round trips that I have called attention to can ordinarily be made in sixteen hours, but if a slight delay occurs, the men, under the provisions of the bill as it now stands, will haye to lay off at the first terminal instead of working a brief time longer and then returning to their homes and taking a day off there with their families.

A protest has come to me from some of these men saying that this would be a great hardship to them; that they prefer to work a short time over the sixteen hours and to return to their homes and then to have the day off at their homes, enjoying the companionship of their families.

As I said a moment ago, if they are denied this privilege, a new crew will have to be looked up to make the return trip, necessitating great delay, or else the train wil' b'ave to remain there until these men have had their rest.

Mr. President, I know that in some instances the men desire to make these runs as round trips, even though at times a little more than sixteen hours may be required. That is a matter of personal knowledge on my part. I know also that some railroads in their agreements with their men provide that they shall not be required to work more than sixteen hours consecutively, and that they shall be given ten hours' uninterrupted rest before being called upon to resume their work; but in contingencies the men gladly give and are expected to give a little more additional time before taking their rest.

All that my amendment contemplates is to permit the railroad companies, with the full consent of their employees, to allow trifling additional time on a run where ordinarily sixteen hours is a sufficient time in which to make the run. That is all there is to the amendment, and it seems to me that it is a wise and judicious provision.

I have offered several other amendments to the bill which are in print and which Senators can examine for themselves. I shall hope that those amendments may be agreed to. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MCLAURIN], and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] have also offered amendments which, as a rule, are wise provisions and, if agreed to, will greatly improve the bill.

I have no disposition to delay the consideration of this bill. I have had no disposition to unduly delay it at any time, but I have felt that it is a very far-reaching measure and ought to receive the most careful consideration of the Senate. If it is to pass this body, it surely ought to be amended in many particulars; and if not so amended, it ought not to pass. It seems to me that we are in duty bound to take notfce of the fact that we do not want a rule so exacting, so inelastic that it will work to the disadvantage of the very men whom we are attempting to legislate for. If we can come to an agreement to put into the bill an amendment such as I have to-day suggested, that will at least relieve the men in certain cases of what they deem to be a hardship, and it seems to me that we ought all to be agreed that that is a wise thing to do.

This is all, Mr. President, that I care to say to-day on the subject.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, along the same lines that the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] has addressed the Senate, I wish to say a few words. It is sometimes a good plan to hear from the people and to add their judgment and thought to our own judgment upon any given question.

This bill has been much discussed in the newspapers. Railroad people generally know that such a bill is before the Senate and the day set aside upon which to have a vote.

Up to this time I have not heard from a single person—railroad owner or railroad employee—one word favorable to the bill. I have been receiving hundreds of letters about it. I have between 100 and 200 letters and telegrams here now on my desk from employees of western railroads, every one of them protesting against the bill in its form as before us.

Of course it is difficult for anyone to understand now what may be the outcome of the numerous amendments offered both by the mover of the bill and by others on the floor. The two amendments which I offered earlier in the day are to provide for the same contingency as the one just offered by the Senator from New Hampshire, with a further provision that some trips may be made as round trips where there is a short interval for rest or sleep between the outgoing and return part of the trip.

The Senator from New Hampshire has quoted the run from Boston to Concord, N. H.

Now, we will take, for an example, my home in Cheyenne, Wyo.: There is one run, which is 110 miles, to Sidney, Nebr. Another run is 106 miles, from Cheyenne to Denver. Another is 56 miles, from Cheyenne to Laramie, over the mountain. While the runs have been changed a little from time to time in the last thirty-five years, yet nearly all of the time it has been considered and is now considered, by both those who are in charge of the road and the trainmen themselves, the best policy to make runs out and back with a short interval of rest in the middle of the run and a long layover at home. The reason for an arrangement of this kind is obvious. The men living in Denver, Cheyenne, Laramie, and Sidney all have equal privileges. All have long lay overs at home with but very short lay overs at the other end. Thus the best service is secured and the employees made most prosperous and happy.

The man owns his home—the railroad men in that country nearly all own their homes—and is at home most of his resting hours with his wife and children, instead of at some boarding house away from all that he holds nearest and dearest. If the trainmen can run out seven to nine hours, have a rest of three to six hours, come back home in seven or eight hours, and then have from twenty-four to thirty-six hours at home, they are kept in better condition, physically and mentally; they are in better condition as railroad men to be exact and correct in the performance of their duties; their expenses are kept within some reasonable limit; the temptation to spend time in saloons and places outside their homes is lessened; the road is better served; the public is better served, and the men themselves are far better cared for than if it were provided that every rest shall be at least for ten hours, whether at home or away, for if you enforce a longer lay over away from home the inevitable result is to shorten his stay at his home. For instance, a man lives in Denver; he runs to Cheyenne and arrives at 11.30 at night, if on time; he goes out in the morning, say, at 6 o'clock; that is but six and one-half hours. In those six and a half hours, from 11.30 until 6 o'clock, he gets more rest than many a Senator of this body gets here in Washington between the time he goes to bed and the time he must get up in the morning and attend to the duties that surround him, and in which he is enlisted for the benefit of his constituents.

Now, the man arriving at Denver, his home, has all of one night and half of one day and all of another. Unless the bill is in some way amended to take care of men like that—men who have been railroading for ten, fifteen, twenty, and even thirty years, and have families and homes at similar places—unless these men can be considered, unless such runs can be considered and permitted, we had better not legislate at all.

I do not wish to take the time of the Senate, but I ask permission to insert in the RECORD certain letters. I have one here written by the chairman of the general protective board of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers. He makes a very good statement of the case, and I ask that it may be spread upon the record, so that we may have it before us prior to the time we vote upon this measure.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The letter will be printed in the RECORD without reading.

The letter is as follows:

GENERAL PROTECTIVE BOARD,
BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE FIREMEN AND ENGINEERS,
UNION PACIFIC SYSTEM,
Cheyenne, Wyo., December 31, 1906.

Hon. FRANCIS E. WARREN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: Referring to my telegram, dated at Omaha, December 29, reading as follows:

"The General Protective Board of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Union Pacific Railroad, desires that you consider this a formal protest against the passage of so-called 'sixteen-hour law,' the purpose of which is to limit the hours of service of railway employees. Letter of explanation follows."

I desire to give you briefly some of our reasons for protesting against the passage of this bill. If it becomes a law, it will unquestionably decrease the earnings of all railway employees engaged in train service, as the companies will shorten their passenger and freight districts, in order to enable them to get trains and crews over the road within the sixteen-hour limit, and as a matter of protection will increase the tonnage of trains in order to offset the expenditures incident to shortening of districts and the operation thereof. A greater number of men will have to be employed so the railroad companies will be in a position to comply with the law, as it necessarily will cause men to lay over at terminals greatly in excess of the ten hours' lay-over clause provided in the bill, and for this reason therefore it will require more men, and they can not possibly make fair average mileage and earn fair monthly wages, as they are paid on a mileage basis.

Trainmen's living expenses away from home will be increased about 33⅓ per cent over the present system on account of their being required to be away from home terminals so much longer. The railroad companies will pool engines and cabooses, which has been tried heretofore and resulted very unsatisfactorily. Trainmen away from home terminals live in and prepare a great many of their meals in their cabooses. Pooling the engines and cabooses will prevent this being done.

A large percentage of railroad employees in train service own their own homes, representing the savings of a lifetime. In this western country a great many of the terminals are what might be termed "railroad towns," and are supported almost exclusively by employees of railroad companies. If terminals are changed, such towns would be abandoned and the loss to employees would be enormous, practically meaning the financial ruin of many of them. It would also deprive the children of employees of educational advantages which they now enjoy, as it would be years before similar facilities would be available at the new terminals.

It is now impossible to man western railroads with experienced men. The passage of this bill would require the company to largely increase their force, which could only be done by employing new and inexperienced men, thereby creating greater risk and hazard of accident than the overworking of men could possibly cause. It would also make the positions of railroad employees in train service less inviting, and a great many of our old men would seek other avocations, thus increasing the number of new men in the service. The experienced railroad men alone realize that a great number of accidents to-day are caused by the "student" or inexperienced man, and they only can appreciate the care and vigilance which must be exercised in watching the movements and actions of new men in connection with the operation and safety of life and property intrusted to their care. If the public realized as does the experienced railroad man, the element of danger that exists in introducing new men into the service, it would be very reluctant in giving support to this measure.

The compulsory ten hours' rest clause in the bill will compel men to tie up at times for rest at points where there are no accommodations, and at the end of ten hours they will be in worse physical condition than if they had continued to the end of their run.

Passenger and freight runs on the western railroads are adjusted so that under normal conditions the men make their runs within the usual hours constituting a day's labor. Excessive number of hours on duty is the exception, not the rule.

The apparent object of this bill is to materially reduce the number of accidents, the number of hours on duty, and the tonnage of trains, in order to get them over the road at a higher average rate of speed. So far as the accident feature is concerned, there has never been an accident on the Union Pacific Railroad to our knowledge caused by employees being on duty an excessive number of hours. Regarding the reduction of the average number of hours on duty and a reduction in the tonnage of trains, it will have the opposite effect, for, as stated above, the company in order to protect itself and offset its increased expenses made necessary by shortening the districts will increase the tonnage, and instead of having over 80 per cent of its trains averaging less than twelve hours over the district, as is the case on the Union Pacific to-day, and has been for some months, the greater percentage of the trains will average closer to the sixteen-hour limit on account of the increased tonnage.

Yours, truly, C. V. MCLAUGHLIN.

Mr. WARREN. I have here three very short letters of the general character of several hundred which I have received, and I ask that these three may be read at the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

LARAMIE, WYO., December 28, 1906.

Hon. FRANCIS E. WARREN,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: After consulting several friends in regard to the matter, I write you with reference to the La Follette sixteen-hour bill, which I understand soon comes to a vote in Congress. I hope you will do what you can to defeat the measure, for it will certainly result in great loss to railroad employees. It would mean new terminals for our runs, the moving of our homes, possibly a decrease in salary, and we trust you will represent us by voting against it.

Yours, very truly, J. J. STOREY, Conductor.

CHEYENNE, WYO., January 2, 1907.

Hon. F. E. WARREN,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have been in the service of the railroad company a good many years, and I can remember of no time when we were not able to make satisfactory arrangements with the railroad officials as to the number of hours we should remain on duty at one time. If the bill is passed by Congress fixing the maximum limit of continuous service at sixteen hours, and attaching a heavy penalty for a violation of the same, it would work a great hardship on all train men and cause great difficulty to the officials of the roads in making out their schedules, etc.

I would ask that this question receive serious consideration before an arbitrary measure of this kind is passed.

Yours, respectfully, R. W. RICH, Conductor.

RAWLINS, WYO., December 29, 1906.

Hon. F. E. WARREN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In the matter of the La Follette bill, I understand that the question has been raised that a man on duty sixteen hours is no longer safe to handle a train intelligently and with safety for his and other trains. The question naturally arises as to whether a man would not handle a train in better shape, say in the seventeenth hour, if he knew that his run would end shortly, than he would in the first hour after his legal rest had expired, and after he had been forced to take such rest and lodging as the circumstances would permit. I believe that the average railroader would prefer the seventeenth hour, thereby ending their run, being to less expense and physically more comfortable.

Sincerely, yours, W. T. HUBORTT, Engineer.

Mr. WARREN. I believe I will venture to ask the reading of one more letter. It is a letter from perhaps the oldest conductor, in point of service, on the Union Pacific, certainly one of the oldest, a man who is at present city trustee and president of the council of the largest city in the State of Wyoming—its capital, Cheyenne.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

CHEYENNE, January 1, 1907.

Hon. FRANCIS E. WARREN.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I take this opportunity in expressing my condemnation of Senate bill 5133, to be introduced by Senator LA FOLLETTE, of Wisconsin. This bill, in my opinion, as well as those of my colaborers whose sentiment I voice with mine, is a blow to every railroad man's constitutional right, that right which every American holds dear. You know, my dear Senator, that for years the rail men, like your humble servant, has made Cheyenne his home. Everything he has saved he has also invested in his home. He has raised his family at his district terminal. He has taken a pride in educating his children in the public schools here, and now if this bill, which is to be introduced at an early date, passes, it will change all of our lay-over points to Green River, a town that has no schools of any consequence, also no places of amusements, no sewer, no water, and no sanitary conditions. You know, my dear sir, that as a railroad man that they know best what they want. Now, for instance, if at any time during all my years as conductor I asked the company for rest at either end they have always granted that rest when asked for, and, as you are well aware, no man running on any railroad would, if not fit, take any chances with his own life and the lives of his passengers; also including destruction of so much of the company's property, which he has intrusted in his care. "A railroad man is becoming, it seems to me, a serf" through too much legislation. Now, my dear sir, from my own knowledge of accidents occurring, in almost every case it has never been caused by want of rest, but from want of experienced men. If you can at any time legislate to compel railroads from hiring the student element, which they now do, caused by the scarcity of men, it would do more to prevent accidents than anything else that I know of. With the Union Pacific the making of schedule is quite a hardship, caused by circumstances over which they have no control. They must make their schedule to conform to arrival of train of connecting railroads and can not equalize the lay over at terminals, as would be if not connecting with other lines. Every train out of Cheyenne to Green River give their men all the rest they require. I have the shortest lay over at Green River of any crew running out of here. I get six hours' rest there and forty-two at home, which is all we require. And in conclusion, my dear sir, will say that when it came to the knowledge of railroad men that such a bill was to be introduced it caused universal indignation, calling meetings of all classes of the operating departments, protesting against the passage of such a measure, and now, dear sir, it is the earnest wish of all of your railroad friends that you and Senator CLARK and Congressman MONDELL do all in your power to defeat this bill, and by so doing you will receive the just approbation of all concerned.

Very respectfully, yours,

ADAM J. SCHILLING.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I am going to ask, without reading the letters on my desk, that the names of the writers may be included in the RECORD, though not the letters themselves, as all tend to one point. All are against the proposed measure.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming that the names of the writers of these letters may be printed in the RECORD? In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

The names referred to are as follows:

F. M. Armstrong, engineer, O. O. Fozgrand, B. F. Draper, H. Huddleston, W. O. Burns, John Doyle, conductor, William A. Mills, conductor, J. A. Wascher, J. F. Stevens, E. W. Williams, passenger conductor, T. E. J. Fagan, E. C. Paine, conductor, W. H. McCussick, conductor, G. C. Bowen, F. M. Taylor, freight conductor, W. C. Wolcott, B. Shirkey, J. E. Heath, conductor, E. Catlin, brakeman, Frank Simpson, Hugh J. Morgan, S. C. Morgan, C. B. Peterson, M. H. Hogeman, Guss Wallis, E. W. Bateman, brakeman, W. F. Freel, C. M. Graham, locomotive engineer, Allie Campbell, W. H. Lereck, F. K. Bostick, A. E. Buirge, E. E. Bowman, William Naughton, B. W. Thompson, Henry J. Morgan, W. H. Luckett, C. W. Brown, James Owens, Seth Sharpless, jr., Thomas B. Morris, conductor, E. Corthell, Angus Matheson, W. M. Keigley, C. J. Davis, W. L. Clark, Charles Ruggs, Barrington King, brakeman, F. E. Pattee, conductor, A. P. Higgins, conductor, William D. Whitley, H. J. Murphy, I. E. Carpenter, brakeman, Charles Stone, J. M. Jamison, A. V. Beardmore, William Powell, E. Gregory, Ole Olson, R. L. Blachley (two letters), H. H. Palmer, brakeman, J. E. Stewart, brakeman, D. T. Garrity, brakeman, H. B. Harris, conductor, C. G. Wolcott, D. S. Wolcott, passenger conductor, J. C. Rutter, brakeman, F. F. Davis, brakeman, R. White, brakeman, C. A. Welch, P. L. Van Cleave, conductor, W. P. Abbott, conductor, L. H. Wright, conductor, George Morgan, conductor, Lawson Fox, conductor, William Berry, conductor, W. H. Whitney, conductor, George B. Lear, conductor, E. T. Garrity, conductor, William Matheson, conductor, H. H. Mosteller, conductor, J. H. Rankin, conductor, Bert Shroy, fireman, A. M. Moore, fireman, H. G. Ryan, engineer, H. C. Hood, engineer, Henry Gross, fireman, J. C. Graham, engineer, Paul Banks, locomotive fireman, C. Christensen, engineer, C. A. Killen, brakeman, William Harlon, Fred Williamson, R. W. Rankin, Ralph O'Shea, brakeman, A. Shroeder, brakeman, W. A. Boseley, brakeman, G. W. Phillips, conductor, H. I. Raub, conductor, W. H. Hannum, conductor, R. Woodward, conductor, C. H. Isherwood, conductor, R. E. Henke, C. W. Brandt, fireman, J. J. Pavert, brakeman, Raymond Shearburn, brakeman, B. C. Dodds, fireman, John McGarry, fireman, R. Hagerty, engineer, Earl Brown, fireman, F. L. Owen, brakeman, E. J. Sullivan, William Storey, A. M. Seibert, J. T. Garrett, C. B. Cady, Robert G. Shingle, passenger conductor, J. N. Marks, conductor, F. S. Bevans, John Kelly, O. T. Sheldon, J. R. Sherlock, R. H. Johnstone, fireman, W. C. Winston, locomotive fireman, T. J. McKenna, brakeman, H. W. Williams, conductor, Michael Burke, brakeman, John Daugherty, engineer, W. F. Belk, brakeman, D. T. Nichols, Henry Miller, engineer, Thomas Joyce, conductor, W. H. Parker, conductor, H. W. Allen, W. L. Kimsey, brakeman, E. Kennedy, conductor, Bert Tipton, engineer, F. E. Kitselman, conductor, George S. Hobbs, Henry Lane, engineer, E. M. Conner, Adam J. Schilling, John M. Watson, Charles U. Blood, D. G. Clay, A. J. Sanford, G. W. Argue, F. W. Munn, R. R. Moore, and E. J. Kerrigan.

Mr. WARREN. I also have a letter from a railroad superintendent, one who commenced as a brakeman and is now general superintendent of the Union Pacific. He hits the nail on the head and with sledge-hammer blows. I sincerely commend his remarks to the attention of each and every Senator.

He says:

Hon. F. E. WARREN,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: * * *

A bill has been introduced in the United States Senate and will come up for vote January 10, 1907, making it a misdemeanor for any railroad official to permit "any employee in or connected with the movement of any train to remain on duty more than sixteen consecutive hours, except when, by casualty occurring after such employee has started on his trip, he is prevented from reaching his terminal; or to permit any such employee to go on duty without having had at least ten hours for rest."

Every violation of this law subjects both the company and the individual official who permits any employee to work more than sixteen hours, or to resume work without taking for himself ten hours of rest, to a fine of $1,000.

It is made the duty of all United States attorneys to bring suits for these penalties, and the agents, attorneys, and detectives of the Interstate Commerce Commission are required to investigate for violations of the law.

This bill is the most pernicious measure yet proposed affecting railroad employees. It strikes at the very homes of hundreds of thousands of American citizens who have been guaranteed, under the Constitution, liberty and equality. * * *

Terminals can not possibly remain where they are now located should this bill compel the railroads to operate them differently than at present. Once a law, protests of the employees against such changes will avail nothing in the face of such drastic and enormous penalties. A letter written on this subject protesting against the proposed law will enlighten many who have not heretofore given the matter thought.

The bill is objectionable to the public, to the railroads, and the employees. It will affect the public through the business world. The currents of traffic often become clogged, and it requires extra effort to clear the stream. Should the railroad men depart from their strenuous methods and take up the easy-going, slow ways of older countries, the entire business community would, from necessity, slow up as well. It may be to-day they are required to move a stock rush which involves immense loss to the owners if not gotten to the market before a certain time—the closing down of winter, perhaps. Again, a certain fruit crop is to be harvested within a given time; the gleaners are working from sunup to sunset; the railroad men are expected and are willing to do their share. A coal famine may be threatened; industries are about to shut down; the lights of a city to go out; the railroad men are equal and willing to meet the emergency; and so on might be mentioned thousands of cases where extra effort is occasionally required for the public good. These calls for extraordinary effort are not the rule, but the exception. Those in every walk of life are called upon occasionally to render such effort to the public welfare. It is done at no abnormal risk. To have such opportunities brings out that which has given the United States its commercial supremacy.

The three great human avocations are production, manufacture, and transportation. Can we produce from the soil agricultural products more economically or scientifically than the peoples of older countries? There are few others with whom we compete that can not do better. Do we manufacture better articles than our fellow mechanics and artisans of our fatherlands? It is conceded that we do not. Do we transport more quickly and economically than those countries where labor is cheaper and more plentiful? It is universally admitted that we do. Then herein lies our commercial supremacy. Is it wise to throttle or extinguish the effort that gives to the business man the advantage? Such laws, if placed on the statute books, will as inevitably do so as the sun rises and sets. Our country is not yet ready to sacrifice the only advantage it has heretofore enjoyed to follow the will-o'-the-wisp—that to change our present method of operating railroads in this one particular will give us exemption from accidents. Few there are of experience who can be thus deceived. It must and will come in a different direction, but without this great injury to business methods. Business men are always impatient of delays and slow time, although they get the benefits thereby of economic operation in rates far below their competitors in foreign lands.

The proposition to restrict effort to surmount occasional congestions will fall directly on the business world and nowhere else, except upon the employees of the railroads, whom it is intended to convert into easy-going, leisurely, methodical plodders, penniless, much like those in similar vocations in other countries.

It will not, as alleged by its promoters, lessen the risk of accident. Railroad men will concede—and it can not be disputed—that an engineer or conductor is more apt to go to sleep after twelve hours' sleep, followed by twelve to eighteen hours of idleness just before going on duty, than if held on duty sixteen hours. It would be more sensible to legislate to compel him to lay down and sleep ten hours immediately prior to going on duty under these circumstances.

There are times in seafaring life that crews must work the ship extraordinary shifts; history does not record serious results, nor would a law be proposed to prevent. On the contrary, such human effort has been lauded in song and story. Ships have been brought through storms and emergencies, the lives of its passengers and the property of its owners saved, by such brave, commendable, extraordinary human endeavor to render at times heroic service.

If a general were compelled by law to always confine his army to certain hours of duty, strategy would vanish and the victory go, by change, to the slothful or the mediocre. Such interference would paralyze human endeavor and extinguish the stimulus of emulation.

Is it not true of the statesman that he works with superhuman effort to rise above the common level? If he shall make a place in history, he can not govern his work by set hours; there is not sufficient time as it now is.

The business man who rises above the ordinary does so by extraordinary effort, be it physical or mental. Many fall by the wayside, unequal to the task; suicide, insanity, or other dire results frequently befall the weaker or unfortunate. Shall we have a law restricting them to certain hours of effort?

The mechanic who desires to rise above the common level well knows that his ear must be oblivious to the shop whistle.

In an emergency the successful ranchman must risk his life and those of his employees to rescue his property from storm or danger. Shall we have a law prohibiting this? And so on, in every important walk of life those who do things at some personal inconvenience and risk are the heroes of the business and social life. When such effort is deprecated or prohibited the survival of the fittest ceases to become the law of nature, and a government advocating such policies is surely on the decline. As all nations have declined and will decline to the end of history in all probability, can it be that we have reached the apex, and the croakers against present methods are about to prevail and send us down the decline thus early in our history? I think not; but it behooves all interested in the continued prosperity of this country to refuse to listen to the mistaken ideas of misguided reformers. They can do great harm unintentionally, but there is thereafter no recourse. Change the habits of this nation along certain lines and they will remain changed for all time to come. The great majority are willing to slow up and take things easy; the incentive to strong personal effort on the part of the masses is not deep-rooted.

The work of railroad train employees is not physically trying or "brain-straining," as many who are not conversant therewith contend. On all excessive runs there are opportunities for relaxation from responsibility, and absolutely no excuse for neglect of duty.

The proposed law will not lessen the risk of accident for other reasons. Those now on record, caused by employees who have been on duty over sixteen hours, are infinitesimal as compared with the great number of accidents from other causes and the enormous number of train movements—only four in the entire United States each year that might be directly charged to overwork. The records of the Union Pacific disclose not one that can be attributed to this cause.

The law will certainly increase the liability of accident, as it is absolutely sure to bring into the service a larger proportion of new and inexperienced men, from whence the greatest source of accidents now come, as is well known to practical railroad men and can be demonstrated by statistics of the railroads, which will also show that at least 50 per cent of the old and tried, thoroughly experienced men have clear records, and from them no risk of accident is to be expected. Another 25 per cent are on the records for carelessness and minor infractions of the rules. The discipline is almost wholly confined to the remaining 25 per cent, which consists of the floating element, which is to a great extent more or less irresponsible and inexperienced. It is generally conceded that it costs a railroad about $3,000 to "make" an engineer out of one of its firemen, and perhaps nearly as much to "make" a conductor. The "student"—the new man in service—is a source of anxiety and trouble to all who have anything to do with his education. The mistakes he may unwittingly make are apt to bring injury not only to himself, but upon the balance of the crew. How anxiously the engineer lying on a siding watches the green head brakeman as he wanders toward a switch over which a limited train is due to pass. By a simple twist of the wrist the novice can hurl a hundred souls into eternity. The master mechanic knows full well that the newly promoted engineer will do something that will reflect on his judgment in promoting him. How anxiously he watches each trip, asking the trainmaster or assistant superintendent how it was accomplished. Even the new experienced men employed from other roads are the bane of a freight district; they do not know the grades, get in the way of more important trains, misuse the air, and must be watched by all of the older men to prevent serious accidents from occurring through their negligence, ignorance, and, frequently, inefficiency and indifference. They are the easy-going ne'er-do-wells, the floating population of the railroad forces, from which the ranks will be greatly increased when this bill becomes a law—and worse, the older men will soon cease to do the extra work required to keep them out of trouble; it will become too great a burden of responsibility.

Under the provisions of this bill the positions in train and engine service will be made much less attractive to good, reliable men and drive from the service the more desirable material, which is now valuable in its own capabilities, as well as through its influence on the weaker element, through the abrogation of the existing schedules which guarantee to the train and engine men a reasonable monthly salary. Under the proposed law it will be necessary to greatly increase the number of engine and train crews to insure the stipulated lay-overs at each end of the respective freight runs. This, in time, will compel the pooling of both engines and cabooses, as railroads can not be expected to hold their equipment at each end of the road idle over one-half of the time it is available. The engines and cabooses will be manned with different men each trip. What conductor does not want his own crew, and how seriously he contemplates taking out a strange man even for one trip? Enginemen are familiar with the trouble caused by green firemen or even one who does not know the eccentricities of the enginemen—just how he works the engine, where he shuts off, and a thousand other necessary moves that must be made in unison or without consulting each other and which constitute good railroading. Baseball clubs, football teams, and boating crews, and all those things which require the best human effort and the practical elimination of the possibility of mistakes are trained continually and always together. To take one man from such teams weakens and frequently defeats them. It may be said that it will be unnecessary to break up the established methods and that crews will remain intact. Do not be deceived; the inevitable will be, first in first out, for engineer, conductor, brakeman, and fireman. They will assemble to take out trains, strangers to each other's methods. Chaotic conditions will follow, which are always in turn followed by accident. Exemption from accident is brought about by a corps of well-trained, intelligent, loyal, sober, industrious, and thrifty set of men. That such an organization may be thrown out of its equilibrium through occasional rushes of business and the taking into the service of inexperienced men is well known in railroad circles and consequently feared by the rank and file as well as by the officials in charge.

Conductors, enginemen, brakemen, as well as train dispatchers and district engine foremen are aware that, owing to the irregularities of freight service it is, at present, almost impossible to use the men so as to keep all of them in the service a sufficient number of times during the month to enable all to earn the minimum salary. Crews, from necessity, at times remain at one end of their runs as much as twenty-four to forty-eight hours, waiting for trains. To make up such losses, the crews at other times will run without the long lay overs, doubling back from the terminal at which they do not reside, and in this way balance up only a reasonable monthly pay check. Passenger enginemen and train crews on nearly every railroad in the United States "double back" on their runs, and have always done so. They desire to spend a reasonable part of their life with their families at home, to assist in the education and government of their children, to better curtail their expenses in order that a "rainy day" may be provided against. If they are required to spend three-fourths of their time away from home instead of one-third, they will not be apt to thank their representatives, nor will it secure one iota of additional safety to compel them to take this additional burden. On the contrary it will have a very pronounced effect in the opposite direction. It has been for many years the aim and purpose of all the railroads in this country to inculcate in their employees the highest possible standard of moral rectitude and compliance with good rules of health. They have been encouraged along these lines to become home builders, appreciating that the home insures more efficient and stable forces. We have always found that when train and engine men were compelled to take long lay overs away from home the temptations to which they were exposed under such circumstances always lead to bad results and is the cause of a great deal of trouble to the men as well as the railroads. When a crew has been on the road six or eight hours, in running over their division one way and has had time to obtain a short rest it is always their desire to return home as soon as possible. This ambition has been referred to by the advocates of this measure as in some way reprehensible, even criminal, or at least they would make it so by this law. As a matter of fact it is highly commendable and indicates a true American citizen—the individual who is the strength of the nation. Any tendency to deprecate the home adds to the army of tramps and hobos of whom we now have and are making entirely too many. Then why destroy more homes—rather encourage those who appreciate the true source of strength of this nation—even though it may be unconsciously? They should, in turn, be appreciated by the nation, which is fully aware of their worth. The proposed law will militate against the continuation of the present practice. This we consider as one of the most important reasons why such a law should not pass.

On nearly all railroads, by reason of the encouragement to home building, the men congregate and have their homes at the division terminals and at the most desirable end of their run. These towns, no matter how small, are usually provided with school, church, and social advantages; while the town at the other end of the run is apt to be of less importance in this respect and to have a tendency to cater to the baser elements in the employees. Such towns usually have numerous saloons, gambling houses, and dens of vice, into which every effort is made to lure the men. They would probably not think of visiting such places in their home town, but might be influenced to do so at the other end, where they are apt to think such practices can be indulged in surreptitiously. The rest is easy. Even if they are strong enough to resist the temptations of idleness away from home influences, the added expense of living under these conditions, paying room rent and board, discourages frugality and precludes the possibility of their ever accumulating a competence, let alone sufficient to rear and educate their children as they are entitled to do for yet a time in America, "the land of the free and the home of the brave." The avocation is hard enough and, with the expense incidental, none too remunerative.

It is simply preposterous, although the argument has been strongly used to influence the men in favor of the bill, that its adoption will cut the trains or lessen the tonnage. Railroads can not use passenger engines on their freight trains and run over the road on fast time to avoid the penalties of the law. If the men will stop for a moment and consider what it means to cut off even 100 net tons from each freight train run in the United States, they will dismiss any such idea. This 100 tons pays all the dividend; it is the profit that induces investments in railroad securities, and without it money would seek other channels; the railroads would, to some extent, become impoverished; needing money they would dispense with the many conveniences, in many cases luxuries, that are offered to the men at present. So long as possible, the managers would avoid such contingencies and endeavor to keep up the profits. To accomplish this the terminals would be cut to more nearly 100 miles; the men could have ample lay over at each end and no more at one end than the other. Taking the engines and cabooses in turn, as they arrived, the tonnage could be greatly increased; the wages of the individual would go down. * * * The men are, therefore, more interested in letting present conditions remain as they are. Whatever they lose in wages, time away from home, or inconvenience, is irretrievably lost, as an appeal to the Government will avail nothing; it moves too slowly.

These matters can and are being adjusted between the railroads and the men and much better and more intelligently than can be done by outsiders.

Yours, truly, W. L. PARK.

I also submit a letter signed by train dispatchers of the Oregon Short Line Railroad, as follows:

OREGON SHORT LINE RAILROAD COMPANY,
OFFICE OF CHIEF DISPATCHER,
Kemmerer, Wyo., December 28, 1906.

Hon. F. E. WARREN, Hon. C. D. CLARK,
Hon. F. T. DUBOIS, Hon. W. D. HEYBURN,
Senators,
Hon. F. W. MONDELL, Hon. B. L. FRENCH,
Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: We desire to respectfully but firmly protest against the enactment of what is known as the proposed "sixteen-hour law," which has for its purpose "To limit the hours of service of railroad employees," particularly that part which reads: "Every violation of this law subjects both the company and the individual official who permits any employee to work more than sixteen hours, or to resume work without taking for himself ten hours of rest, to a fine of $1,000."

There are occasionally conditions and circumstances under which it would be impossible for a train dispatcher to prevent an operator or a crew from being on duty over sixteen hours, nor could an explanation be made, for the reason that the circumstances leading up to such an event might be caused in what would be an inexplicable way to the ordinary juror not having, perhaps, anything to do with the identical train in question. If the train dispatchers of the United States are subjected to such an enormous and drastic fine, it would be impossible for them to pay it; the other alternative would be the Federal prison.

We are not yet ready to wear a convict's stripes, and consider a proposition to make thousands of loyal, intelligent, and true American citizens subject to such a penalty is a step beyond anything that has ever been attempted in the history of this country, or any other country for that matter.

Those who propose such a measure do not represent the rank and file of railroad men, and we desire to emphatically repudiate any such claim they might have made. It is possible they have surreptitiously, or in some manner, obtained an indorsement from some of the railroad employees, holding out to them inducements which are not in accordance with the conditions or possibilities of railroading. We hear the train and engine men on every hand denouncing this measure. We trust that you will give it your earnest opposition.

Respectfully, yours,

J. P. FOLGER,
Chief Dispatcher.
C. J. HUSTED,
C. N. COREY,
E. G. MERRITT,
Dispatchers.

Also a letter from a superintendent of the Burlington Route, writing from Sheridan, Wyo.:

CHICAGO, BURLINGTON AND QUINCY RAILWAY COMPANY,
Sheridan, Wyo., January 4, 1907.

Hon. F. E. WARREN,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I take the liberty of writing you at this time to ask you to consider the impractical points of the La Follette sixteen-hour bill, which is to be presented before Congress and the Senate in January.

As a practical railroad man of twenty years' experience, I am impressed with the impracticability of this bill, if it were made a law, without grave damage to the general public, as well as employees.

The entire lack of exceptions in certain cases, such as of stock trains, time freight, emigrant, etc., is one of the grave objections to it.

From the standpoint of the men, in a set of resolutions which will be forwarded to you from this division, and which expression is unanimous on the part of our train and engine men, the bill would work a great hardship on them.

From the standpoint of an operating officer of this railroad, I am prepared to say that it would be an impossibility to comply with this bill as it was presented, without any exceptions or modifications, and operate a railroad in any respect to the satisfaction of the public.

As far as this division of this railroad is concerned the most strenuous effort is being made in every way possible to prevent any excessively long trips on the part of the men. I have a report of every train on this division before me for yesterday, showing that out of twenty-seven trains the longest trip on the division was one of seventeen hours and five minutes, and they run down as low as five and one-half and six hours. A great improvement has been made in this respect in the last six months. Local runs have been cut in two, so as to prevent excessively long trips. Tonnage has been reduced and every possible means used to prevent our having any excessively long trips of any kind, either on freight or passengers.

I will close by asking that in justice to the operating officers and to the train and engine men that this bill be not allowed to pass nor receive your approval in its present form.

Yours truly,

F. E. KENNEDY.

I have letters similar to the one from Superintendent Kennedy from L. B. Lyman, train master, and from Supt. E. P. Bracken, of Sheridan, Wyo.

I submit also a letter written by J. W. Maxwell, assistant general manager, to James Hagerman, general counsel of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway Company, as follows:

MISSOURI, KANSAS AND TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE OF ASSISTANT GENERAL MANAGER,
St. Louis, Mo., December 13, 1906.

JAMES HAGERMAN, Esq.,
General Counsel, St. Louis.

DEAR SIR: I have read the testimony which was submitted to the Committee on Interstate Commerce in the last Congress, in which it is shown that the proposed law is sought almost exclusively by the four leading labor organizations representing railway employees in train and engine service. Mr. Fuller, representing those organizations, testifies that the purpose of the bill is to protect the lives and limbs of the traveling public, as well as the employees of the railway company; also that it will promote the movement of freight, which, it is claimed, is being delayed through keeping the trainmen on duty long hours in order to move a larger amount of tonnage per train.

In reply to questions, Mr. Fuller testifies that men are kept on duty long hours because of divisions being longer than they formerly were, which, he states, was brought about by a desire on the part of the railways to save the time necessary to change crews, which, if true, is an argument against the passage of this bill, for the reason that if it becomes a law, it will result in a rearrangement of divisions, creating at least 33 per cent more divisions and terminals than are at present necessary. For example, our St. Louis division (St. Louis to Franklin Junction), 182 miles in length, will have to be made into two divisions. The men on this division usually make the trip eastbound in from twelve to fifteen hours, but are often seventeen and eighteen hours on the westbound trip. Therefore it can not be operated within the proposed law. It is safe to say there is not a man in train service on that division who is in favor of shortening the division, as they do not consider the hours burdensome, and they are enabled to make far better wages than they could if the division were cut in two.

Mr. Fuller's testimony shows that this law is not desired by the railroad men individually, but is asked for by the organizations representing the men. The reason for this is plain. Train and engine men are paid by the mile, and where one man now earns from 150 to 200 miles per day it will require two men under the proposed law, thereby doubling the number of men and increasing the number of members in the organizations proportionately.

Notwithstanding Mr. Fuller's desire to protect the lives and limbs of the traveling public, he states that it is not the intention of the bill to delay a passenger train on which a crew, through accident or other cause, has been on duty sixteen hours until another crew can be secured to take their places, or until they have had the required ten hours' rest. Thus it will be seen the only protection offered the traveling public is to be taken away. In like manner, the facilities for the prompt movement of freight are to be curtailed by the establishment of a greater number of division terminals, each of which requires from thirty-five minutes to one and one-half hours to get a train through.

The proposed law would increase the cost of operating railroads through largely increasing the number of terminal yards, roundhouses, etc., to be maintained and operated, as well as the expense of getting men to outlying points to relieve men who had been on duty the maximum time because of an accident or some other unforeseen circumstance.

The employees will not in any way be benefited by the law, for the reason that nearly all roads now have a rule permitting train and engine men to take eight hours' rest after sixteen hours' service. On the contrary, the men will be deprived of a considerable portion of their earning capacity through being unable to earn only 100 miles per day, when they now earn from 100 to 200. They will also be placed under greater expense, because of being required to spend a much greater part of their time away from their homes. If the present bill becomes a law, it will frequently happen that a train or engine crew, composed of five or six men, will get within 20 or 30 miles of home when the sixteen hours are up, and they will be compelled to give up their train at the first side track and get ten hours' rest before they can be permitted to proceed, notwithstanding every member of the crew would feel and know that he was perfectly able to take the train into its terminal. They would thus be put to the additional expense of securing lodging and meals at an unusual place, and after their ten hours' rest had been secured they might have to wait from four to six hours for a train to take them into the terminal, where they could again resume service, thereby causing them to miss their turnout, resulting in a further loss of wages.

There are many things to be said against the passage of this bill, and since there is apparently no one to be benefited by it, beyond increasing the membership of certain labor organizations, it should be defeated.

If the real purpose sought in this bill is to prevent railway companies from forcing their train and engine men to work when they are in an unsafe condition, I suggest the following substitute:

"Any train or engine man who has been on duty sixteen hours shall have the right to call for ten hours' rest, and when such employee calls for rest it shall be unlawful for any railway company to require him to remain on duty or again resume service until he shall have had ten hours' rest."

This would simply make what is now the rule the law, and would afford all the protection needed, since no member of a crew would be deprived of rest whenever, in his judgment, he needed it. It would at the same time overcome the hardship and inconvenience resulting from a literal interpretation of the proposed law, which, it is claimed, seeks only the protection this would afford.

Truly yours,

J. W. MAXWELL.

And, finally, I submit the following letter of introduction handed to me to-day by Mr. S. C. Mecomber, which is signed by the chairman of the general committee, Order of Railway Conductors, Union Pacific Railroad Company, Mr. W. A. Jameson:

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD, ORDER RAILWAY CONDUCTORS,
GENERAL COMMITTEE OF ADJUSTMENT,
Laramie, Wyo., January 1, 1907.

Hon. FRANCIS E. WARREN,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: This will introduce to you Mr. S. C. Mecomber, a member of our organization, the Order of Railway Conductors, who is chairman of the State legislative committee of the organization for the State of Nebraska. He is in Washington to appear and register a protest before the committee who have in charge the La Follette sixteen-hour bill for railroad men. We are the men in front of the gun in this instance. We deem it detrimental to our interests. We have contracts with the different railroads throughout the western country that gives us the right to demand and get eight or more hours' rest after sixteen hours' service. As to the claim that many accidents occur from overwork of trainmen, it is farfetched and not a fact. In thirty years' experience in train service I know of but one case where an accident occurred on account of excessive hours on duty. An arbitrary law, with a severe penalty, such as the contemplated bill, is to tie up for rest at any point on the road, where there are no accommodations to get anything to eat and no place to sleep. It would be a pretty hard proposition to make the men believe that it is just to make them lie down in an old caboose, on a hard cushion, and toss around for eight or ten hours when by working an hour or so longer they could be at home and have the comforts that men in other walks of life are permitted to enjoy. Men tied up under those conditions are in worse shape for service than they were when tied up.

This is but one of the hardships that will be forced upon the men by an arbitrary sixteen-hour law. It will also reduce our monthly wage, which at best is not over remunerative.

We desire to spend a reasonable part of our life at home with our families, to assist in the education and training of our children.

We do not think the trainmen in service throughout the United States will thank their representatives for passing such a law after it becomes operative and they realize the hardships that it entails.

Mr. Mecomber can explain more fully to you and recite instances of actual experience, and no doubt you will readily see why we, as trainmen, desire to see this bill defeated.

We think the practical men who are employed by the operating departments of the different railroads, in conference with their employees, are better fitted to arrange this matter among themselves.

I would deem it a personal favor if you will give him what assistance you can while he is in Washington, as he is unacquainted there. We have no particular standing before Congress, and can only work through our friends, and as you have always been our friend your constituents in train service will appreciate your efforts in our behalf. I am,

Yours, very truly,

W. A. JAMESON,
Chairman General Committee, Order Railway Conductors, Union Pacific Railroad.

All these letters, while directed to the defeat of the measure, are, in my mind, so directed because of the lack of flexibility of the bill. That the general proposition of affording plenty of rest at proper intervals to trainmen, and the general proposition of restricting the continuous hours of service within a proper limit, are both right, can not be questioned. In my judgment these men who are protesting would readily support a bill, as I would and as other Senators would, if the bill should be so framed that such a law could be enacted as would provide for all these contingencies; provide for out and return runs with short stop-overs at one end and long stop-overs at the other, and leave it so trainmen and superintendents might have some "elbow room" in the running of trains. Unless we can thus provide, let us pass no bill.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, when this bill was under discussion during the last session and went over until this session I determined to ascertain, as nearly as I could, first, the necessity for such a law in the section of the country which I represent in particular, and also the feelings and desires of both employers and employees on the railways serving that section of the country. I found very little interest in the bill one way or the other, possibly for the reason that I found no runs requiring sixteen hours, and I knew of and found no runs that would require less than ten hours' rest. So the only question, so far as it affects the section of the country from which I come, is the question that crystallizes around this word "casualty."

Let me give a little illustration that will make that clear. We will take the run from St. Paul across the State of Minnesota to, say, the nearest point in my State. We will say that a train is scheduled to leave St. Paul at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and to arrive at Fargo at 8 o'clock in the evening. That gives but a ten-hour run. It is scheduled to leave the next morning from Fargo, we will say, at 8 o'clock and to arrive at St. Paul that evening at 6 o'clock. So there is but a ten-hour run in either instance, and more than twelve hours' rest in either instance. The train leaving St. Paul is very often under contract to carry the mail from some connecting point from Chicago and the East, and the train necessarily must lie at the depot, sometimes an hour and sometimes two or three hours if there is a delay upon some of the eastern trains in getting mail from Chicago to St. Paul, so that they may conform to their contract. There may be an hour or two hours' delay, therefore, before the train starts out.

Again, the train is supposed to take other mail, we will say from Winnipeg, in Manitoba, to some point of connection about the central part of the State of Minnesota. This train may be delayed an hour or two on account of waiting for the delay of the Winnipeg train. So the two delays working together may prevent this train getting into Fargo until, we will say, 10 o'clock at night. It will then have to leave a little earlier the next morning; or suppose it be 12 o'clock at night, it would leave at 8 o'clock the next morning. That would give but eight hours' rest. Under this bill it would be criminal for the same crew which is scheduled to go back on this train to take the train back to St. Paul, although it had had eight hours' rest, unless they could show that these delays were some kind of a casualty. That is a term, of course, that would have to be construed, probably as often as any case would come up under the law. They might be delayed because the train was overloaded, which would not be a casualty; they might be delayed on account of insufficient coal or because the train was not properly handled, which would also not come under the designation of a casualty. In order to meet any of those incidents that are arising almost daily, it would be necessary to keep this crew another twenty-four or twenty-six hours doing nothing and to keep an idle crew at that point for the purpose of supplying the deficiency. It seems to me that that part of the bill is unjust. It seems to me that the hours might be limited to even six hours, especially as the average rest is from twelve to fourteen hours. I understand that the average run is less than nine hours. Taking both of the transcontinental roads that go through our section, less than nine hours a day is an average run for each conductor. That would give plenty of rest.

If it should so happen that without this broader term of the happening of a "casualty" a train would be delayed, certainly we ought not to make it a criminal offense if the crew were required to remain over a little more than sixteen hours from the time that they had had rest or that they could go out again upon a less number of hours' rest than the ten hours which the bill now provides. I hope, Mr. President, that we shall so amend the bill that it will have sufficient elasticity to meet occasions of this kind.

Then, again, we have the other case of what is practically a round trip in the same day. One train may run as far as from St. Paul to Brainerd and then back the same day. They wait at Brainerd, we will say, however, to make connection with another train from the West, which, instead of going to St. Paul, may go on to Duluth. If that train is delayed, although they may have had hours at the depot waiting for the connecting train, it will necessitate their waiting until the passengers can be transferred; and it would be no casualty, on the part, at least, of the trainmen, who are compelled to wait until the arrival of the connecting train.

Again, it is often necessary to make connections at St. Paul and Minneapolis with the Chicago and other eastern trains. It seems to me to be almost ridiculous where there is a contract to carry the mail and to receive the mail each morning, even though they may have to wait a few minutes or a few hours to do so, to make the trainmen or the company operating the connecting line responsible for any malfeasance or any casualty upon the connecting train.

It seems to me also, Mr. President, that that may properly be made a subject of amendment. When it is, I can see no serious objection to the bill, although, as I say, in our section of the country I do not think it will have any effect one way or the other, as I know of no sixteen-hour run and I know of no instance in which the rest is not more than ten hours.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] has stated that the average run of conductors is about nine hours in his section of the country. Can the Senator tell us what is the average run of the engineers and firemen?

Mr. McCUMBER. I understand the average run of a train crew is nine hours. That is what I intended to say was my information. I have not myself examined carefully to see whether or not it is true.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I have no recollection of being in the Senate when this bill was up for discussion, and my attention had not been called to its particular phraseology until it was called up as the unfinished business by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. I should infer that the principal thing to be attained by the bill is not so much the comfort or health or the convenience of the employee—of course that necessarily enters into it—but the principal end to be attained is the safety of the traveling public. Hardly a serious accident occurs but that the length of time that the conductor or the engineer or some employee engaged in running the train is introduced as a factor accounting for the accident. We have read a great deal of the wearied engineer and the worn-out conductor, and that those officials, being in a state of physical collapse or weariness, were unable to give that quality of care and attention to the running of the train that the safety of the traveling public required.

So far as I have had any expression from the employees affected by the bill, I should regard it as an unpopular one, engineers and conductors and trainmen, as a general proposition, being quite willing to protect themselves by such contracts as they are able to make with the employing company. I would not seek the enactment of a measure of this kind, having in mind the welfare of the employees alone, unless there was apparent some earnest desire expressed by such employees to have the burdens of their employment lessened.

But quite independently of the burdens that may be placed upon the employee is the safety and the welfare of the traveling public. If it is true that the wearied engineer and the wearied conductor and the wearied brakeman are not capable of giving such care as may be classed as the highest degree of care to the traveling public to protect the lives and the limbs and the bodies of the traveling public, then a law should be enacted for the sake of the traveling public that will prevent trains carrying passengers from being handled by those who are not able to give the degree of care the safety of the passengers requires. If that were the object of the bill, if the bill would attain that object, then I should be heartily in favor of it.

But I will turn to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], who has the bill in charge, and ask him, from the language of the bill, whether he believes the end sought, either for the welfare of the employee or the safety of the traveling public, is secured by this bill? As I read the bill, Mr. President, those who are engaged in the running of trains, although they may have been in service for fifteen consecutive hours, if they go out of service for an hour may, without violating the terms of this bill, take charge of trains and run for sixteen more consecutive hours. For example, in the second paragraph of the amendment—and, indeed, the bill as before the Senate is an amendment by way of substitution, an entirely new measure being substituted for the measure that was originally introduced—occurs the following language:

> That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train in which such commerce is hauled, or to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train by which such commerce is affected, to remain on duty more than sixteen consecutive hours, except when by casualty occurring after such employee has started on his trip he is prevented from reaching his terminal; or to require or permit any such employee to go on duty without having had at least ten hours for rest.

The meaning of that language is perfectly plain. The railway company engaged in interstate commerce shall not permit or require any person engaged in handling a train to remain on duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours, and, having been on duty for that length of time, he shall not be permitted to resume his duty until he has had ten hours for rest. But, as I suggested when I first rose, suppose the employee has been engaged in fifteen, fourteen, thirteen, or twelve hours' consecutive service. Though he rests but an hour, though there is an interval of but an hour or two hours', more or less, time between the ending of his consecutive service and the recommencement of service, he may resume the service and there will be no violation of this proposed act. Therefore, I take it, that the bill should be amended by the Senator who has given special attention to it so that the evil sought to be reached will be reached.

I can readily understand how railway companies and their employees might enter into contracts by which the main purposes of this bill would be avoided without any criminal liability of any kind or character—such contracts as would permit the overworking of employees and the engagement of employees in the carrying of the traveling public when, by reason of long-continued service, they would be altogether unfit for the responsibility that the passenger traffic imposes upon those in charge of trains.

So far as the objection made by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] is concerned, I doubt if it is amply provided against in the bill. I can hardly imagine any cause for a delay in a trip one way, or a round trip, that would not be covered by the term "casualty." So that if a train starts out upon a round trip that would under the schedule be completed in twelve or thirteen or fourteen hours, if, for almost any cause, it was delayed beyond sixteen hours there would be no necessity for the employees abandoning the train and a new crew being put in their places, for it is only in the event of a casualty interfering to prevent the completion of the run within the sixteen hours that the crew may not continue on their train until the run is finished.

When you turn to the meaning of the word "casualty," you find one of the meanings is:

That which occurs by chance; chance—

Any chance seems to be a casualty.

Third, under the subdivision "Law"—

Inevitable accident—

Of course, an accident is a casualty—

An event not to be foreseen or guarded against.

And, then, under the Scottish law, a "rent depending on the happening of contingent events" was called a casualty. But that is now obsolete. The synonyms are "accident" and "hazard."

So that if there was a contract between a railway company and the Government for the carrying of mail that was to be delivered to the receiving company on an incoming train and the train should be behind the schedule, I have not any question but that would be a casualty; it would be a hazard; it would be something that the transporting company that was to receive the mail could not have foreseen. If the locomotive should run out of coal, or if water should not be accessible, or if a rail should be misplaced, or a freight train or any other kind of a train run off the track, I am inclined to think that that mishap would come under the term "casualty."

So that the framer of the amendment evidently attempted to provide against the contingencies that are suggested by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. Perhaps a broader term might be used, but a fair construction, it seems to me, would prevent the companies being compelled to change train crews, under the term that is used in the bill, whatever might be the cause of delay.

But, Mr. President, I am principally concerned about the main section of the bill. It seems to me that it does not guard against the main object to be attained by the bill—the protection of the lives and the limbs of the traveling public, for, as I suggested, when the welfare of the employees is alone to be considered we may safely await an expression of their desire that will be pretty clear and well understood, the modern railway employees, the men who run the trains, the engineers, the conductors, and the brakemen, being pretty well able, through their organizations, to protect their own comfort and their own welfare by the contracts they make with the companies.

I have accomplished my purpose in calling the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] to the objections that I find, not in the object to be attained by the bill, but in the language that is used for the purpose of attaining the object. I feel that it is wholly inadequate, and that it ought to be amended.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado if the proposed amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MCLAURIN], at the bottom of page 5, does not accomplish the purpose that he desires to see accomplished? The amendment reads as follows:

Any such employee who shall have been on duty ten successive hours shall not be required or permitted to go on duty without having had at least eight hours' rest.

Mr. PATTERSON. Is that at the bottom of page 5?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. In the print that I have it is at the bottom of page 5.

Mr. PATTERSON. I have not got the same print as the Senator from Connecticut, so I can not answer him.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I desire, first, to present a protest from certain railroad employees and train dispatchers, and ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Idaho? The Chair hears none. The protest will be printed in the RECORD.

The protest referred to is as follows:

OREGON SHORT LINE RAILROAD COMPANY,
OFFICE OF CHIEF DISPATCHER,
Pocatello, Idaho, December 22, 1906.

Hon. FRED T. DUBOIS, Hon. W. B. HEYBURN,
Senators.
Hon. BURTON L. FRENCH,
Representative, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: We desire to respectfully but firmly protest against the enactment of what is known as the proposed "sixteen-hour law," which has for its purpose "to limit the hours of service of railroad employees," particularly that part which reads: "Every violation of this law subjects both the company and the individual official who permits any employee to work more than sixteen hours, or to resume work without taking for himself ten hours of rest, to a fine of $1,000."

There are occasionally conditions and circumstances under which it would be impossible for a train dispatcher to prevent an operator or a crew from being on duty over sixteen hours, nor could an explanation be made for the reason that the circumstances leading up to such an event might be caused in what would be an inexplicable way to the ordinary juror, not having perhaps anything to do with the identical train in question. If the train dispatchers of the United States are subjected to such an enormous and drastic fine, it would be impossible for them to pay it. The other alternative would be the Federal prison.

We are not yet ready to wear a convict's stripes, and consider a proposition to make thousands of loyal, intelligent, and true American citizens subject to such a penalty is a step beyond anything that has ever been attempted in the history of this country, or any other country for that matter.

Those who propose such a measure do not represent the rank and file of railroad men, and we desire to emphatically repudiate any such claim they might have made. It is possible they have surreptitiously or in some such manner obtained an indorsement from some of the railroad employees, holding out to them inducements which are not in accordance with the conditions or possibilities of railroading. We hear the train and engine men on every hand denouncing this measure. We trust that you will give it your earnest opposition.

Respectfully, yours,

C. A. Shultz, dispatcher; J. E. Agee, dispatcher; F. Rogers, dispatcher; J. W. Phillips, dispatcher; J. D. Royle, dispatcher; J. H. Castle, dispatcher; A. Igo, chief dispatcher; J. H. Shores, dispatcher; H. B. Magill, dispatcher; D. E. Davis, dispatcher; F. M. Clarke, chief dispatcher.

Mr. HEYBURN. I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the desk to the amendment printed on page 7, lines 9 and 10.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, lines 9 and 10 of the amendment, it is proposed to strike out "in any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. HEYBURN. I will state the purpose of my amendment. It seems to me the amendment proposes something that Congress may not do—that is to say, impose a duty upon a State court or tribunal—and the words are not necessary for the purpose of providing a complete remedy, inasmuch as with those words stricken out it will read:

The Commission may also order depositions taken before any tribunal qualified by law to take the same.

The amendment reads:

The Commission may also order depositions taken before any officer in any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia.

I desire to offer another amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Idaho will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In lines 19 and 20, page 7, it is proposed to amend the amendment by striking out the words "either a State or United States court" and substituting the words "a court of competent jurisdiction."

Mr. HEYBURN. The objection is the same in character. Congress can not confer jurisdiction on a State court in an instance of this kind. The State court, if it is held to be a court of competent jurisdiction, may deal with it, but Congress can not compel it to deal with it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment will lie on the table.

Mr. HEYBURN. I desire to make a suggestion with reference to the provision of the bill found on page 5, practically the same as that found on page 4, to which the Senator from North Dakota has addressed his remarks. A lay over at the point of a wreck, miles distant from any settlement, would not afford the crew of the train an opportunity to rest. It could not possibly result in any benefit to them in the way of reequipping them for further service, and there should be such elasticity in this measure as would permit those men to pursue their duties, being reenforced to the extent of the ability of the railroad company. But to say that a crew of railroad men shall remain in idleness at the point of a disaster which may not have occurred within the scope of the exception of this bill—and I can imagine many of them that would not be within that exception of "casualty"—to say they must lie there in idleness and practically afford no assistance to relieve against the damage or delay would certainly be of no benefit to the railroad or the men and would tend nothing to accomplish the purpose sought to be accomplished by this bill.

The word "casualty," as it has been presented by the Senator from Colorado, would seem to be broad enough to cover almost any kind of delay, but the text of the bill limits it to casualty occurring after such employee has started on his trip.

The cause of delay may have existed for a considerable time before the train started out on its trip. There is an amendment proposed to cure that, which says, "or by unknown casualty occurring before he started on his trip." There may be a casualty that is known to exist, and the trainmen may start out for the purpose of relieving against the damage, expecting to be able to accomplish their work and return within the time limited by the proposed act, and instead of being able to do so, they may be detained there hours or days, as the case may be. So, as I say, in that provision the bill is not elastic enough. Otherwise you would find yourself with a dead crew on hand, where they had started out with full knowledge that there had been a landslide or a train ditched, or any one of the many casualties which might occur, with the expectation of being able to overcome it within a few hours, and, as I have suggested, be held there for many hours, and the sixteen hours might expire.

Does there attach to these workmen on the train the liability under which they may be fined a thousand dollars because they have underestimated the time in which a wreck may be removed, a bridge rebuilt, or any other obstacle removed? I suggest that that provision is not elastic enough to protect these men against being answerable under a law by fine and imprisonment.

I have not been present on any former occasion when this bill was under consideration. I find many amendments here. If we could anticipate just what amendments would be adopted before the bill is finally submitted to the Senate for a vote, we might better understand what might remain, if anything, to be supplied. But as I interpret the unanimous-consent agreement which runs with this bill, the measure will not be open for debate at that time; the amendments will come up in their order, under the rule of the Senate, and be voted upon; and unless the bill is printed after the disposition of these amendments, it will be difficult matter indeed to determine just what ought to be in the bill and what should not be in it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. What is the further pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Unless some other Senator desires to offer some observations upon the pending bill at this time, I will ask that it be laid aside temporarily.

Mr. BACON. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin a question. I desire to know of the Senator whether he understands from the provisions of the pending bill that it is to apply to employees only on trains engaged in interstate commerce or whether he thinks it applies or is intended to apply to trains on all railroads engaged in interstate commerce. The Senator will see the distinction.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I did not draw this bill or the substitute reported from the committee, and I am not able, for the moment, to turn to the language which defines——

Mr. BACON. While the Senator is looking for the particular part of the bill which he thinks gives expression to the requirement, which will be one way or the other, I wish to call attention to the importance of that distinction. If the bill is limited to employees employed upon trains which are actually, at the time of the running, engaged in interstate commerce, it is a bill of comparatively narrow limitations. But if it is intended and if its provisions will permit it to be construed to mean that it applies to the employees of all railroads engaged in interstate commerce, regardless of whether the particular train upon which these employees may at that time be employed may or may not be engaged in interstate commerce, it is a bill of extremely wide scope; and I use the term "extremely wide scope" probably without expressing the degree of that scope, although the word "extremely" is a very large one. I might say, Mr. President, that it embraces every railroad in the United States and every train in the United States, for this reason:

A railroad may be engaged in interstate commerce, although limited in its extent entirely within the borders of a State. A railroad which accepts a consignment and issues a through bill of lading, not only over its own road, but over a connecting road to a point in another State, is engaged in interstate commerce; and a railroad which accepts from a connecting road, coming from another State, a consignment over its own line of goods originating in the other State and brought on a through bill of lading over each of those two railroads is engaged in interstate commerce. There is possibly not a single road in the United States, however short it may be, unless it be one entirely isolated and not connected with any other railroad—and I presume there is scarcely such a road in the country——

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. BACON. Pardon me until I finish the sentence. There is scarcely a railroad in the United States, if one, upon which such consignments are not made or received. In other words, there is scarcely a single railroad in the United States, if one, which does not accept consignments which are to go beyond its own limits, its own termini, and extend over other railroads into other States. And, on the other hand, there is scarcely a road which does not receive consignments coming from other States and destined to points on its own line. Therefore, if the terms of this bill are sufficiently broad and comprehensive to make it apply to employees on all railroads engaged in interstate commerce, the terms of the bill may as well be expressed by saying "all railroads in the United States," without stating that they shall be engaged in interstate commerce. That is the practical effect.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE rose.

Mr. BACON. I promised to yield to the Senator from Colorado.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BACON. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. I think the construction which has been placed upon the language "common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce" has been in the broad sense which has been suggested by the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BACON. Is that the language here?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, etc.

In the application of the safety-appliance law I think the decisions of the courts have been that railroads, though local in their organization and local so far as their termini are concerned, if they are engaged in the transportation of interstate commerce, are amenable to the provisions of the safety-appliance act. I know it is but a very short time ago that there was a suit in the United States court in Denver, in which the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company was fined for not having equipped its locomotives with the appliances that the law provides for. And yet the Denver and Rio Grande, so far as its termini are concerned, is strictly a local road, although it is a part of what may be termed the Gould transcontinental system.

Mr. MALLORY. Will the Senator from Georgia permit me to interrupt him for a moment?

Mr. BACON. Certainly.

Mr. MALLORY. The act providing for safety appliances prescribes that the vehicles employed by the road shall be engaged in interstate commerce.

Mr. BACON. Yes.

Mr. MALLORY. And a court in Kentucky recently—the United States circuit court—I think, makes that distinction very clear. It seems that the first part of the pending bill is designed to meet the opinion of Judge Evans in that case.

Mr. PATTERSON. To continue about the construction of language of this character, although I am not familiar with the precise language used in the safety-appliance act, there was a suit against another road at the same time, a little road whose line was confined within one county. That road, through its management, had taken particular pains to receive no consignments of goods that were shipped from without the State. In that particular case the United States circuit court held that the road was not amenable to the provisions of the safety-appliance law because it was not engaged in interstate commerce.

But as I recall the decision, it was that where roads were engaged in receiving goods and cars to be transported under contract from without the State on the cars of the company or over the line of the company, it came within the provisions of the safety-appliance law, and therefore, for noncompliance with the law as to certain of the locomotives of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, the company was declared to have violated the law and was required to pay a fine.

Mr. BACON. I am very much obliged to the learned Senator from Colorado for the suggestions which he has made, and also to the Senator from Florida, equally learned, for the information he gives us as to the precise language of the former act of Congress relative to appliances.

This is certainly a most serious matter, and we are very near to the time when we will be called upon to vote on this bill without further opportunity for its examination or discussion relative thereto. It would be very difficult to conceive of a bill more far-reaching in its effect than this will be if the construction can be put upon it to which it now appears it is legitimately open. I think we ought to give it very careful consideration. It ought to be examined with the most minute particularity.

I desire to say that personally, Mr. President, I am in favor of such regulations as will protect the public against dangers which arise from the employment of the officers and other employees of the company for a length of time which renders them incompetent to properly handle trains and protect the public; and also that I am in favor of such regulations as will protect the employees from undue burdens in the way of employment beyond the physical and mental powers of the men to sustain the continued strain and exertion. But, Mr. President, it is not always safe to be guided by a desire to accomplish an end, and I am afraid we are too frequently controlled by that desire. The end may be laudable, but the means may be improper and unsafe, and the evils which are mixed up with some remedies may sometimes be greater than the evils which it is sought to cure.

Now, just for a moment, let me call attention to the extent of this bill, if the language is open to the construction which I suggest; and I think it is a most important fact to be noted that on the eve of determining this most tremendous question Senators have not considered this particular phase of it. So far as I have been able to learn from the advocates of the bill, the question of the constitutionality of it, as well as the propriety of it, has largely been answered affirmatively upon the prior legislation with reference to safety appliances on trains, and yet a very slight inspection will show the very vast difference between the two. As stated by the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY], in the safety appliances act it is limited to a control of cars engaged in interstate commerce. There is no effort in the safety appliance act to prescribe that all railroads engaged in interstate commerce shall thus equip all of their trains, because that would manifestly be beyond the power of Congress, but it is within the power of Congress to say that all engines and cars actually engaged in interstate commerce, regardless of what railroads they may belong to, shall be thus and so equipped.

Now, it might be said that upon the same reasoning a bill seeking to protect employees against undue length of continuous service would be constitutional if it limited it to employees on trains engaged in interstate commerce. But that is not what this bill does. This bill does not say it shall be unlawful for employees engaged in interstate commerce to be employed more than a certain length of time, but it says—I will read that portion of the bill—

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier by railroad in any Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train to remain on duty, etc.

I see upon inspection (I had not examined the bill, and I was asking the author of the bill for information upon the subject) that it is limited to railroads within the Territories of the United States and the District of Columbia. Of course that is within the power of Congress.

Mr. KNOX. Look at the top of page 5.

Mr. BACON. The top of page 5? Possibly the Senator from Pennsylvania means page 4.

Mr. KNOX. Page 5.

Mr. BACON. It is page 4 in the copy I have.

That it shall be unlawful—

It may be that this is the provision which relates more particularly to roads in the States and not to those in the Territories of the United States or the District of Columbia. I have not had an opportunity to read it.

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train in which such commerce is hauled or to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train by which such commerce is affected to remain on duty more than sixteen consecutive hours, except when, by casualty occurring after such employee has started on his trip, he is prevented from reaching his terminal; or to require or permit any such employee to go on duty without having had at least ten hours for rest.

I am not sure but that that language is sufficiently guarded. I would be very glad, however, to have the judgment of Senators who have given the matter more careful attention than I have. I am not sure whether that language would limit the requirement to employees upon trains actually engaged in interstate commerce, because it goes further and makes it apply to "any train by which such commerce is affected," which is language of a very general character.

I rose, Mr. President, more for the purpose of seeking information than for the purpose of submitting any remarks upon the character of the bill. I am inclined to think that the provision of the bill found on the fourth page of the copy I have in my hand is not open to the objections which the language found on page 3 of this bill would have suggested as being objectionable.

Mr. KNOX. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. BACON. Certainly.

Mr. KNOX. Does not that depend somewhat upon the construction to be placed upon the word "affected?"

Mr. BACON. Yes. That is the language which I suggest is possibly too broad.

Mr. SPOONER. What does it mean?

Mr. BACON. I do not know. That is the reason why I think it is too broad. I think we ought to know what language means when it is put into a bill. I will read that language again:

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train in which such commerce is hauled—

I doubt very much if that is a proper provision, because it would relate to a railroad entirely within a State over which there had been such a consignment as that which I have suggested, because, although the road may be entirely within a State, if it has accepted a consignment from another State on a through bill of lading, it is hauling a train carrying commerce subject to interstate-commerce law, and yet it would not itself be a railroad passing from one State to another and not within the design or spirit of the law.

As is suggested to me by the Senator from Colorado, the practical effect of it is to put it within the power of Congress by this legislation to require that every employee engaged in handling cars upon a railroad shall be subject to the provisions of this proposed law. This is not a bill upon which I have prepared myself to make any suggestions which I have thought would be of any special value, and it is not a bill which I am prepared to discuss in such a manner as one should discuss it who is in charge of a bill, or who has particularly undertaken to controvert or oppose any of its features. But upon a casual reading of the bill these are objections which strike me, and it seems to me the time has come when other matters should be laid aside and when this matter should be perfected as we are to vote upon it. There are other matters which are pressing—I know that—but none of them is in the position of this bill. There is none of them where we are face to face with the proposition that we have to vote on it at a certain time. That being the case, it seems to me this bill should now be given the precedence.

I want to ask the Senator from Wisconsin and others who are particularly interested in the bill whether it is their purpose, or whether they understand it to be the purpose of the bill, that practically the length of time when an employee shall be permitted to work continuously upon a railroad shall hereafter be under the control and regulation of the Federal Government, to the exclusion of the right of the States as to those roads limited entirely within their borders? That is the effect I think of this bill, even of the section which I have just read. Upon a casual reading of it I was inclined to think at first there was no material objection to it, but on a more careful reading of it I think practically the same objections exist as those which I thought at first existed, reading, as I did, the clauses with reference to the Territories and the District of Columbia.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. BACON. I do.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It seems to me manifest that the language in line 7, page 5, is intended to be just as broad as that—that is, wherever the operation of trains within States affect directly the interstate commerce it is intended by the language of that section to bring the operation of those lines and the employment of the men on those lines within the control of the provisions of the act.

Mr. BACON. Even though the railroad may be entirely within a State?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Otherwise a train carrying interstate commerce, moving upon a line of road on which the same company operates a train engaged solely in State commerce, might be put at jeopardy by having the crew operating the train engaged in State commerce employed for fifty hours consecutively. The jeopardy to the interstate commerce and passengers traveling upon trains engaged in interstate commerce would be quite as great from collision with a crew that has been employed an excessive number of hours, even though it is operating a train engaged purely in State commerce. As I said before, I did not draft the bill, but I think it is manifest that it is the purpose of the language in line 7—"any train by which such commerce is affected"—to reach such cases as I have illustrated.

Mr. BACON. In other words, without elaboration, it means to affect every railroad in the United States, long or short, within a State or crossing from one State to another.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Where the operation of the trains upon the line would jeopardize the lives of people who were being conveyed by a train engaged in interstate traffic.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I presume none of us differ as to the desirability that there shall be protection as to the trains, whether they are trains upon railroads which are limited entirely to one State or trains upon railroads which pass from one State to another. But that does not necessarily carry with it the conclusion that the Federal Government should be given charge of the business of furnishing this desired protection. It is the desire of us all, without difference, that there shall be no murder committed, and that all who commit murder shall be punished. That does not in any manner make it proper that the Federal Government, because the end is desirable, shall overstep its legitimate power for the purpose of accomplishing it.

Mr. KNOX. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. BACON. I do.

Mr. KNOX. Recalling what the Senator from Georgia said about not having risen for the purpose of imparting information on this subject, but knowing that he always can, and having discussed these words and studied the question as to what trains this proposed act would apply to, I should like to call his attention, for his criticism or his answer, to the language on page 5, line 5, that the act is only intended to apply and by its terms only does apply to "the movement of any train in which such commerce is hauled." I should like to have the Senator, or some one else, tell me how you can haul commerce. Commerce is a system; it is a relation; it is not the goods which are the subject of commerce.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It should read "articles of commerce."

Mr. KNOX. It seems to me that the bill in that respect is vitally defective. In other words, it does not describe any class of trains which exist or can exist.

Mr. BACON. That is very true.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BACON. I do.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I was about to suggest to insert before the word "commerce" the words "articles of," which would meet the objection of the Senator from Pennsylvania, would it not?

Mr. KNOX. There is no question about its being susceptible of amendment. I am only calling attention to the necessity for amendment. I think the words suggested by the Senator from Indiana would be adequate.

Mr. BACON. I think the suggestion of the Senator from Pennsylvania and also the amendment suggested by the Senator from Indiana are both of them worthy of consideration, and certainly indicate the necessity that we should continue to examine this bill minutely.

But, Mr. President, outside of the particular defect which has just been suggested, we are brought face to face with this proposition, as construed by the Senator from Wisconsin in charge of the bill, and I think as correctly construed by him. This is practically a bill which undertakes by an act of Congress to regulate the hours of labor of every employee upon any train of every railroad in the United States, regardless of whether it is a railroad which crosses from one State to another or whether it is a railroad limited altogether within the borders of one State. Like the personal liability bill, which was passed at the last session of Congress, it is a tremendous stride, an almost immeasurable stride, in the direction of turning over to the Federal Government the management of all the internal affairs and business affairs and relations of people in the various States, not only with the people of other States but within their own borders.

I am not prepared to say that if the language of the bill were so changed that it would be limited to employees upon trains actually engaged in interstate commerce, so far as that may be construed in the passage of trains from one State to another, that I would not give it my support, because, believing in the general proposition that there should be a limitation of hours, of course the States themselves can not reach a case beyond their own borders, and a railroad which is located partly in one State and partly in another or which carries cars from one State into another State may be beyond the reach of a State to correct an evil of this kind, and it may be necessary that there should be Federal regulation. But there is no necessity for it—that is, I mean necessity so far as that it can not be otherwise accomplished—in the case of a railroad limited entirely within the borders of a State.

But however that may be, Mr. President, it is important that we should know what we are voting upon when we come to vote upon so wide-reaching a proposition as that which is contained in this bill. As I said, I am not now prepared to discuss it, but I thought it was a suggestion worthy being brought to the attention of the Senate. I am very glad to have the construction of the Senator from Wisconsin, because I am at least put in a position where I am better prepared to judge whether or not the bill is entitled to my support according to my view.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, I understand the last print of the bill has been exhausted. I have been endeavoring to get a copy of it and have not succeeded. I ask unanimous consent that a reprint of the last print of the bill be ordered printed by to-morrow for the use of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest to the Senator from Florida that in addition to the amendments which are printed in the bill now under consideration the amendments offered to-day be likewise included in the reprint.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to a reprint of the bill with the amendments?

Mr. MALLORY. It is just possible that there would be some confusion arising out of the incorporation of all the amendments that have been offered. The amendments will be printed anyhow, and I think if we could have the bill reprinted it would give us a very good idea of what are its main features.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will not insist upon my suggestion if the Senator prefers to have the bill reprinted precisely as it is.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to a reprint of the bill? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. CARTER. Most assuredly.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I desire to offer, for the purpose of having it printed for the attention of the Senate, an amendment to the bill in the nature of a substitute for the bill and amendments. I will add that I am not sure that I will press this amendment, but I desire to have it printed and brought to the attention of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. KEAN. I ask the Senator from Iowa if he will not also ask to have it printed in the RECORD.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the proposed substitute will be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. DOLLIVER'S proposed amendment is as follows:

That on and after August 1, 1907, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier by railroad in any Territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, or any of its officers or agents, or any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train to remain in service more than sixteen consecutive hours, or to require or permit any such employee who has been in service sixteen consecutive hours to perform further service without having had at least ten hours for rest: Provided, That prior to August 1, 1907, the Interstate Commerce Commission may, after full hearing and for good cause, specify extraordinary circumstances or special cases under which any such common carrier by railroad and its officers and agents shall be exempted from the provisions of this section.

SEC. 2. That any such common carrier, or any of its officers or agents, violating any of the provisions of this act is hereby declared to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to a penalty of $1,000 for each and every such violation, to be recovered in a suit or suits to be brought by the United States district attorney in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction in the locality where such violation shall have been committed; and it shall be the duty of such district attorney to bring such suits upon duly verified information being lodged with him of such violation having occurred; and it shall also be the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to fully investigate all cases of the violation of this act, and to lodge with the proper district attorneys information of any such violations as may come to its knowledge.

That to enable the Commission to execute and enforce the provisions of this act it shall have the power to employ such inspectors or other persons as may be necessary. To enforce the provisions of this act the Commission and its agents or employees thereunto duly authorized by order of said Commission shall have the power to administer oaths, interrogate witnesses, take testimony, and require the production of books and papers. The Commission may also order depositions taken before any officer in any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia qualified by law to take the same.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator from Montana will yield to me for a moment, a very illuminating editorial from the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, under date of December 29, 1906, on the subject that is under discussion, is in my hand, and I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD without being read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GALLINGER. I hope Senators will read it.

The matter referred to is as follows:

The Commercial and Financial Chronicle, December 28, 1906.

HOURS OF LABOR OF RAILWAY TRAINMEN.

On January 10 next the United States Senate, under a unanimous-consent agreement made at the first session of the present Congress, will proceed to vote upon a bill to fix by statute the maximum hours of labor of railway trainmen and the minimum duration of their intervals of rest, first voting upon all the pending amendments. The bill in question (S. 5133) was introduced by Senator LA FOLLETTE and prohibits all tours of duty exceeding sixteen hours, except in cases of accidents occurring after their trains have left the initial point, and to require a rest interval of at least ten hours between each period of service. The penalty for violation of the statute which is proposed is a fine of $1,000, to be paid by the employer; there is no penalty running against the employee, even should the violation be the result of his fraudulent concealment of material facts concerning the length of time he has actually been on duty.

The proposed enactment seeks to deal with conditions with which railway managers have struggled for generations, and which are never more difficult than when the pressure of traffic demanding movement taxes, as it is now taxing, every resource at the command of the carriers. There are, notoriously, certain industries in which the regulation of the hours of labor according to the standards which seem to the majority to be ideal is impossible. As long as men go down to the sea in ships they must submit to the arduous toil, often prolonged through periods of excessive and exhaustive duration. The farmer, in the harvest season at least, can not, without suffering losses to which he is unwilling to submit, limit his labor to a number of hours which would suit his city brother in the building trades.

In a measurable degree the railway industry is controlled by similar conditions. Traffic appears for movement, especially in the regions where production is specialized along a few lines, and particularly where those lines are agricultural, in irregular volume. Yet when it seeks movement it must be moved promptly, or loss and suffering are pretty certain to ensue. This fact is well illustrated by the present clamor for the movement of coal in the Northwest and by the complaint which has hitherto been heard when the railways were temporarily unable to handle without delay the tonnage offered for transportation. The problem of the railway manager is to provide men, motive power, rolling stock, tracks, and terminals enough for the maximum volume of traffic at any time seeking shipment. How shall he meet this problem if he may not be permitted, at any time, to utilize every locomotive, car, track, yard, and terminal facility to its utmost capacity in the performance of the services for which all of these facilities exist? And in order to do so, may it not become necessary at times, and under the stress of emergencies growing out of extraordinary pressure for the movement of commodities, to lengthen for a short time the hours of labor of the men who make up the human and most essential factor in the prompt, safe, and rapid movement of traffic? No one wishes to impose excessive hours of duty upon railway trainmen. Certainly no railway manager wants to require the continuance of exhausting labor beyond the point of perfect safety to the persons and property employed in the service of the public, as well as those carried. But within the reasonable limits thus fixed it ought to be lawful for the carriers to contract freely with their employees and to receive such service as the latter are willing to render.

The way the men themselves look at the matter was well stated before the Industrial Commission by the present Commissioner of Immigration, Mr. F. P. Sargent, who was then Grand Master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. Mr. Sargent said:

"You can not put railroad men in the transportation department upon the same basis upon which men work at trades, in factories, and shops. The handling of transportation is an entirely different matter. * * * Those are conditions that can not be controlled by any specified law or regulation. We believe that there is manifest on the part of the railways a disposition to be as fair and equitable in the establishment of hours of labor for train-service employees as is practicable with the business to handle. * * * It might be obviated to a certain extent by increasing the number of employees and increasing the machinery; but when the dull time comes there would be that army of idle men. The men in the train service do not want an overproduction; they do not want the railroads loaded down with a great army of men in order that they may have it easy the whole year round. They are willing to take it rougher and work a little harder in the busy season, and then when the dull season comes there is plenty of time to rest up and earn fair wages. The railroad employees have an understanding with the employers that there shall be no more men employed than is necessary to move the traffic with dispatch, and during the busy times they take advantage of it and earn big wages, and when the dull season comes, of course they earn an average wage."

Mr. E. E. Clark, now an Interstate Commerce Commissioner, but then the chief of the Order of Railway Conductors; Mr. P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and Mr. W. V. Powell, chief of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, united with Mr. Sargent in opposing, in most comprehensive terms, any statutory restriction of freedom of contract in this particular between the trainmen and the railways. As the only possible support for the constitutionality of the proposed restriction rests upon the claim that it is in the interest of public safety, it is worth while to note that Commissioner Clark suggested that such a law would increase the danger of accidents by requiring the promotion of too many inexperienced men to places of unaccustomed responsibility.

What the present attitude of the more experienced railway employees toward this proposal is may be gathered from the fact that several numerous bodies of conductors have recently protested against the passage of the La Follette bill or any similar measure, saying that as "the railway trainmen of the United States are of full age, possessed of sound minds, equipped with an intelligent comprehension of their own interests and of the business in which they are engaged," they are "therefore fully able to look after themselves in their relations with their employers." In other words, these employees reject the idea of legislative restriction as an impairment of their liberties.

But, whatever is to be said of the proposed statute, from the point of view of the trainmen or the railways or of fundamental principles, it is certain that the present is no time for the enactment of such a law. The whole industrial organization of the country is conditioned upon the adequate performance of the functions for which railways exist, and everywhere the cry is for more cars, more terminals, more service. All railway facilities are strained to their utmost capacity, and yet the movement of traffic is too slow to satisfy the impatient demands of the country's prosperity. In seeking to satisfy these demands the railways are in the market for more men, more cars, more locomotives, and more rails. Yet, without discouraging delays, they can secure none of these. Qualified men are scarcer than ever before, they demand and get higher wages than ever, and yet the supply is inadequate. Cars, rails, and locomotives ordered now won't be promised for delivery earlier than 1908, and every new order advances the delivery date.

Yet the proposed restriction would place the railways where the only way to avoid freight blockades and traffic congestion of altogether unprecedented extent would be to secure multitudes of new men, vastly increased terminal facilities, augmented sidings and yard tracks, tens of thousands more of cars, and thousands more of locomotives. A year's delay would inevitably be required to meet even considerable fractions of these demands. Is Congress going to lay the heavy hand of the law upon the business of the country without permitting the reasonable delay necessary for adjustment to the new requirements? That is a modest query. It is the least that those intrusted with the supervision of the railway business can ask of the National Legislature.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHILD LABOR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, I wish to change the notice I gave for remarks on January 14 to January 21, on account of the necessary absence of the chairman of the committee, who will be here at the later date.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, January 9, 1907, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 8, 1907.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS.

George A. Alba, of Florida, to be collector of customs for the district of St. Augustine, in the State of Florida, in place of Thomas B. George, whose term of service has expired by limitation.

Antoine J. Murat, of Florida, to be collector of customs for the district of Apalachicola, in the State of Florida, in place of Jesse F. Warren, resigned.

APPOINTMENT IN THE ARMY.

General officer.

Col. Edward S. Godfrey, Ninth Cavalry, to be brigadier-general, vice Bell, to be appointed major-general.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. Commander George W. McElroy, an additional number in grade, to be a commander in the Navy from the 7th day of January, 1906, with Lieut. Commander Roy C. Smith, promoted.

Frank H. Stibbens, a citizen of California, to be an assistant surgeon in the Navy from the 4th day of January, 1907, to fill a vacancy existing in that grade on that date.

Midshipman Roy F. Smith, United States Navy, to be an assistant civil engineer in the Navy from the 3d day of January, 1907, to fill a vacancy existing in that grade on that date.

Gunner Wilhelm H. F. Schluter to be a chief gunner in the Navy from the 1st day of August, 1906, upon the completion of six years' service, in accordance with the provisions of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1899, as amended by the act of April 27, 1904.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Nelson C. Fuller to be postmaster at Centerville, in the county of Bibb and State of Alabama. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Charles Hays, jr., to be postmaster at Eutaw, in the county of Greene and State of Alabama, in place of Charles Hays, jr. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

ARIZONA.

Milton Bohall to be postmaster at Nogales, in the county of Santa Cruz and Territory of Arizona, in place of Milton Bohall. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

ARKANSAS.

Eva V. Harrington to be postmaster at Earl, in the county of Crittenden and State of Arkansas. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

CALIFORNIA.

John L. Brown to be postmaster at Turlock, in the county of Stanislaus and State of California. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Fred E. Cornell to be postmaster at Sunnyvale, in the county of Santa Clara and State of California. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Grace E. Fuller to be postmaster at Anderson, in the county of Shasta and State of California. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

John M. Johnson to be postmaster at Wheatland, in the county of Yuba and State of California. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Isaac Purcell to be postmaster at Morgan Hill, in the county of Santa Clara and State of California. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Morton E. Simmons to be postmaster at Chino, in the county of San Bernardino and State of California. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

CONNECTICUT.

Asa E. S. Bush to be postmaster at Niantic, in the county of New London and State of Connecticut, in place of Asa E. S. Bush. Incumbent's commission expired December 15, 1906.

John McGinley to be postmaster at New London, in the county of New London and State of Connecticut, in place of John McGinley. Incumbent's commission expired December 15, 1906.

Wilbur W. Smith to be postmaster at Seymour, in the county of New Haven and State of Connecticut, in place of Wilbur W. Smith. Incumbent's commission expires February 28, 1907.

GEORGIA.

Halbert F. Brimberry to be postmaster at Albany, in the county of Dougherty and State of Georgia, in place of Halbert F. Brimberry. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1906.

John B. Crawford to be postmaster at Cairo, in the county of Grady and State of Georgia, in place of John B. Crawford. Incumbent's commission expires January 31, 1907.

Alamo B. Harp to be postmaster at Jackson, in the county of Butts and State of Georgia, in place of Alamo B. Harp. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

Christopher E. Head to be postmaster at Tallapoosa, in the county of Haralson and State of Georgia, in place of Christopher E. Head. Incumbent's commission expired June 12, 1906.

Frank P. Mitchell to be postmaster at Americus, in the county of Sumter and State of Georgia, in place of Frank P. Mitchell. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1906.

IDAHO.

William D. Hardwick to be postmaster at Nezperce, in the county of Nez Perce and State of Idaho, in place of William D. Hardwick. Incumbent's commission expires February 28, 1907.

ILLINOIS.

Robert C. Boehm to be postmaster at White Hall, in the county of Greene and State of Illinois, in place of Robert C. Boehm. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1906.

Fred R. Brill to be postmaster at Hampshire, in the county of Kane and State of Illinois, in place of Fred R. Brill. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

Anson J. Buck to be postmaster at Carpentersville, in the county of Kane and State of Illinois. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Rufus East to be postmaster at Coulterville, in the county of Randolph and State of Illinois. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Carrie Hovda to be postmaster at Leland, in the county of La Salle and State of Illinois. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Milton H. Spence to be postmaster at Elmwood, in the county of Peoria and State of Illinois, in place of Milton H. Spence. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

Fred M. Stoddard to be postmaster at Ramsey, in the county of Fayette and State of Illinois. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Adam Trapp to be postmaster at Hawthorne, in the county of Cook and State of Illinois. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Arch L. Wade to be postmaster at Farina, in the county of Fayette and State of Illinois. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Frank L. Wilkins to be postmaster at St. Anne, in the county of Kankakee and State of Illinois. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

INDIANA.

Z. C. McGary to be postmaster at Owensville, in the county of Gibson and State of Indiana, in place of F. W. Hall. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

Robert W. Morris to be postmaster at New Albany, in the county of Floyd and State of Indiana, in place of Robert W. Morris. Incumbent's commission expires February 9, 1907.

Edward Patton to be postmaster at Veedersburg, in the county of Fountain and State of Indiana, in place of John W. Cronk, resigned.

Stanley S. Tull to be postmaster at Monon, in the county of White and State of Indiana, in place of Stanley S. Tull. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1907.

IOWA.

William R. Boyd to be postmaster at Cedar Rapids, in the county of Linn and State of Iowa, in place of William R. Boyd. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Merritt S. Brown to be postmaster at North English, in the county of Iowa and State of Iowa, in place of Merritt S. Brown. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

George A. Danforth to be postmaster at Hamburg, in the county of Fremont and State of Iowa, in place of George A. Danforth. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1906.

Francis H. Farley to be postmaster at Sloan, in the county of Woodbury and State of Iowa, in place of Francis H. Farley. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Joseph W. Foster to be postmaster at Humboldt, in the county of Humboldt and State of Iowa, in place of Joseph W. Foster. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Alfred C. Harris to be postmaster at Eldora, in the county of Hardin and State of Iowa, in place of Alfred C. Harris. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Lewis B. Jenness to be postmaster at Danbury, in the county of Woodbury and State of Iowa. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Emily L. Kerr to be postmaster at Victor, in the county of Iowa and State of Iowa. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Edwin W. McCracken to be postmaster at Scranton, in the county of Greene and State of Iowa, in place of Edwin W. McCracken. Incumbent's commission expires February 19, 1907.

Robert S. McNutt to be postmaster at Muscatine, in the county of Muscatine and State of Iowa, in place of William D. Burk. Incumbent's commission expires February 4, 1907.

James F. Mentzer to be postmaster at Knoxville, in the county of Marion and State of Iowa, in place of James F. Mentzer. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1906.

William H. Needham to be postmaster at Sigourney, in the county of Keokuk and State of Iowa, in place of William H. Needham. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Charles S. Terwilliger to be postmaster at Garner, in the county of Hancock and State of Iowa, in place of Charles S. Terwilliger. Incumbent's commission expires January 14, 1907.

KANSAS.

George B. Crooker to be postmaster at Anthony, in the county of Harper and State of Kansas, in place of George B. Crooker. Incumbent's commission expired June 28, 1906.

Thomas W. Dare to be postmaster at Gardner, in the county of Johnson and State of Kansas. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

David K. Fretz to be postmaster at Canton, in the county of McPherson and State of Kansas. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

John M. McCammon to be postmaster at Esbon, in the county of Jewell and State of Kansas. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Henry Nickles to be postmaster at Hope, in the county of Dickinson and State of Kansas. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Jonah E. Nickols to be postmaster at Atwood, in the county of Rawlins and State of Kansas, in place of Jonah E. Nickols. Incumbent's commission expired December 15, 1906.

Joseph H. Woollen to be postmaster at Mankato, in the county of Jewell and State of Kansas, in place of Joseph H. Woollen. Incumbent's commission expires January 14, 1907.

LOUISIANA.

Frank E. Posey to be postmaster at Baton Rouge, in the parish of East Baton Rouge and State of Louisiana, in place of Frank E. Posey. Incumbent's commission expired December 15, 1906.

MAINE.

Charles F. Hammond to be postmaster at Van Buren, in the county of Aroostook and State of Maine. Office became Presidential July 1, 1906.

MARYLAND.

Thomas R. Greene to be postmaster at Denton, in the county of Caroline and State of Maryland, in place of Thomas R. Greene. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

Adolphus H. Harrington to be postmaster at Frederick, in the county of Frederick and State of Maryland, in place of Garrett S. De Grange. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1906.

John McFarland to be postmaster at Lonaconing, in the county of Allegany and State of Maryland, in place of John McFarland. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

Morris L. Smith to be postmaster at Woodsboro, in the county of Frederick and State of Maryland. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Robert R. Walker to be postmaster at Easton, in the county of Talbot and State of Maryland, in place of Joseph H. White. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Charles D. Brown to be postmaster at Gloucester, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts, in place of Charles D. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired January 6, 1907.

Charles E. Cook to be postmaster at Uxbridge, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts, in place of Charles E. Cook. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1906.

Charles W. Lincoln to be postmaster at Holbrook, in the county of Norfolk and State of Massachusetts. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Fred H. Torrey to be postmaster at Groton, in the county of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts, in place of Fred H. Torrey. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1906.

MICHIGAN.

Frank D. Ball to be postmaster at Crystal Falls, in the county of Iron and State of Michigan, in place of Frank D. Ball. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

Lawson E. Becker to be postmaster at Fenton, in the county of Genesee and State of Michigan, in place of Lawson E. Becker. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1906.

James W. Dey to be postmaster at Springport, in the county of Jackson and State of Michigan. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

John Harwood to be postmaster at White Cloud, in the county of Newaygo and State of Michigan. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

E. Jefferson Hall to be postmaster at Marion, in the county of Osceola and State of Michigan. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

George W. Minchin to be postmaster at Evart, in the county of Osceola and State of Michigan, in place of George W. Minchin. Incumbent's commission expired March 19, 1906.

Philip P. Schnorbach to be postmaster at Muskegon, in the county of Muskegon and State of Michigan, in place of Horace L. Delano, deceased.

MINNESOTA.

John Chermak to be postmaster at Chatfield, in the county of Fillmore and State of Minnesota, in place of John Chermak. Incumbent's commission expires January 13, 1907.

Chester A. Coborn to be postmaster at Sauk Rapids, in the county of Benton and State of Minnesota. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Anders Glimme to be postmaster at Kenyon, in the county of Goodhue and State of Minnesota, in place of Anders Glimme. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

Samuel C. Johnson to be postmaster at Rush City, in the county of Chisago and State of Minnesota, in place of Samuel C. Johnson. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1906.

Ernest P. Le Masurier to be postmaster at Hallock, in the county of Kittson and State of Minnesota, in place of Ernest P. Le Masurier. Incumbent's commission expires January 13, 1907.

John Lohn to be postmaster at Fosston, in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, in place of John Lohn. Incumbent's commission expires January 13, 1907.

Emma F. Marshall to be postmaster at Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, in place of Emma F. Marshall. Incumbent's commission expires January 13, 1907.

Severin Mattson to be postmaster at Braham, in the county of Isanti and State of Minnesota. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Charles A. Pearson to be postmaster at Roseau, in the county of Roseau and State of Minnesota. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

William Peterson to be postmaster at Atwater, in the county of Kandiyohi and State of Minnesota, in place of William Peterson. Incumbent's commission expires January 13, 1907.

Frederick T. Schlegel to be postmaster at Arlington, in the county of Sibley and State of Minnesota. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Benjamin A. Shaver to be postmaster at Kasson, in the county of Dodge and State of Minnesota, in place of Benjamin A. Shaver. Incumbent's commission expires January 13, 1907.

Olaves A. Wilson to be postmaster at McIntosh, in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, in place of Olaves A. Wilson. Incumbent's commission expired December 15, 1906.

MISSISSIPPI.

Thaddeus C. Barrier to be postmaster at Philadelphia, in the county of Neshoba and State of Mississippi. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

John B. Collier to be postmaster at Leland, in the county of Washington and State of Mississippi, in place of John B. Collier. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

Mellicent R. McInnis to be postmaster at Moss Point, in the county of Jackson and State of Mississippi, in place of Mellicent R. McInnis. Incumbent's commission expires January 19, 1907.

MISSOURI.

R. N. Hillard to be postmaster at Hayti, in the county of Pemiscot and State of Missouri. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

NEBRASKA.

James H. Logan to be postmaster at Ponca, in the county of Dixon and State of Nebraska, in place of James H. Logan. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

NEW YORK.

George Anderson to be postmaster at Castleton, in the county of Renssalaer and State of New York, in place of George Anderson. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Andrew D. Annable to be postmaster at Otego, in the county of Otsego and State of New York. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Clarence M. Bates to be postmaster at Cherry Valley in the county of Otsego and State of New York, in place of Clarence M. Bates. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1906.

Paul R. Clark to be postmaster at Auburn, in the county of Cayuga and State of New York, in place of Paul R. Clark. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

David Doremus to be postmaster at Piermont, in the county of Rockland and State of New York. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Mary L. McRoberts to be postmaster at Tompkinsville, in the county of Richmond and State of New York, in place of Mary L. McRoberts. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

Amelia L. Tyler to be postmaster at Hurleyville, in the county of Sullivan and State of New York. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

J. Wesley Van Tassell to be postmaster at Hopewell Junction, in the county of Dutchess and State of New York. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Sarah H. Young to be postmaster at Cornwall Landing, in the county of Orange and State of New York. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

NEW MEXICO.

Tennessee C. Hill to be postmaster at Dawson, in the county of Colfax and Territory of New Mexico. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

NORTH CAROLINA.

William J. Flowers to be postmaster at Mount Olive, in the county of Wayne and State of North Carolina, in place of William J. Flowers. Incumbent's commission expires January 19, 1907.

OHIO.

Charles C. Chappelear to be postmaster at Circleville, in the county of Pickaway and State of Ohio, in place of Charles C. Chappelear. Incumbent's commission expires January 19, 1907.

Edward P. Flynn to be postmaster at South Charleston, in the county of Clark and State of Ohio, in place of Edward P. Flynn. Incumbent's commission expires January 26, 1907.

Rolla A. Perry to be postmaster at Plain City, in the county of Madison and State of Ohio, in place of Rolla A. Perry. Incumbent's commission expires January 19, 1907.

Delmar M. Starkey to be postmaster at Freeport, in the county of Harrison and State of Ohio. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

OKLAHOMA.

John D. Warford to be postmaster at Erick, in the county of Greer and Territory of Oklahoma. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

OREGON.

Thomas L. Ambler to be postmaster at Mount Angel, in the county of Marion and State of Oregon, in place of Thomas L. Ambler. Incumbent's commission expires January 14, 1907.

Henry Proctor to be postmaster at Elgin, in the county of Union and State of Oregon, in place of Henry Proctor. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Finley E. Roberts to be postmaster at Springfield, in the county of Lane and State of Oregon. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

PENNSYLVANIA.

John N. Brosius to be postmaster at Middleburg, in the county of Snyder and State of Pennsylvania. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Alfred W. Christy to be postmaster at Slippery Rock, in the county of Butler and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Alfred W. Christy. Incumbent's commission expires January 26, 1907.

John C. F. Miller to be postmaster at Rockwood, in the county of Somerset and State of Pennsylvania, in place of John C. F. Miller. Incumbent's commission expires January 26, 1907.

Jesse Oren to be postmaster at New Cumberland, in the county of Cumberland and State of Pennsylvania. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Calvin B. Philips to be postmaster at Frackville, in the county of Schuylkill and State of Pennsylvania. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

RHODE ISLAND.

George E. Gardner to be postmaster at Wickford, in the county of Washington and State of Rhode Island, in place of George E. Gardner. Incumbent's commission expires January 26, 1907.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

James P. Bodie to be postmaster at Leesville, in the county of Lexington and State of South Carolina. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Levi S. Bowers to be postmaster at Prosperity, in the county of Newberry and State of South Carolina. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Benjamin H. Massey to be postmaster at Fort Mill, in the county of York and State of South Carolina. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

TENNESSEE.

William F. Millican to be postmaster at Rockwood, in the county of Roane and State of Tennessee, in place of William F. Millican. Incumbent's commission expires February 12, 1907.

Abraham L. Williams to be postmaster at Oliver Springs, in the county of Roane and State of Tennessee. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

TEXAS.

George W. Brown to be postmaster at Devine, in the county of Medina and State of Texas. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Robert H. Walton to be postmaster at Walnut Springs, in the county of Bosque and State of Texas. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

George S. Ziegler to be postmaster at Eagle Lake, in the county of Colorado and State of Texas, in place of George S. Ziegler. Incumbent's commission expires January 20, 1907.

UTAH.

John A. Smith to be postmaster at Heber, in the county of Wasatch and State of Utah. Office became Presidential July 1, 1906.

VIRGINIA.

Charles A. McKinney to be postmaster at Cape Charles, in the county of Northampton and State of Virginia, in place of Charles A. McKinney. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

Annie E. Martin to be postmaster at Waverly, in the county of Sussex and State of Virginia. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Robert L. Poage to be postmaster at Wytheville, in the county of Wythe and State of Virginia, in place of Robert L. Poage. Incumbent's commission expires January 22, 1907.

WASHINGTON.

Thomas Bollman to be postmaster at Cashmere, in the county of Chelan and State of Washington. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Theo Hall to be postmaster at Medical Lake, in the county of Spokane and State of Washington. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Roderick R. Harding to be postmaster at Port Angeles, in the county of Clallam and State of Washington, in place of Roderick R. Harding. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Isaac M. Adams to be postmaster at Ravenswood, in the county of Jackson and State of West Virginia, in place of Isaac M. Adams. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1906.

Charles Edwards to be postmaster at Montgomery, in the county of Fayette and State of West Virginia, in place of Charles Edwards. Incumbent's commission expired January 5, 1907.

James N. Knox to be postmaster at Shinnston, in the county of Harrison and State of West Virginia. Office became Presidential October 1, 1906.

Benjamin R. Twyman to be postmaster at Cairo, in the county of Ritchie and State of West Virginia, in place of Benjamin R. Twyman. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1906.

WISCONSIN.

Morris F. Barteau to be postmaster at Appleton, in the county of Outagamie and State of Wisconsin, in place of Morris F. Barteau. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

John W. Bell to be postmaster at Chetek, in the county of Barron and State of Wisconsin, in place of John W. Bell. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Charles P. Brechler to be postmaster at Fennimore, in the county of Grant and State of Wisconsin, in place of Charles P. Brechler. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

Harry C. Hall to be postmaster at Iron River, in the county of Bayfield and State of Wisconsin, in place of Harry C. Hall. Incumbent's commission expires January 23, 1907.

Nicholas A. Lee to be postmaster at Colfax, in the county of Dunn and State of Wisconsin. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

Egbert Marks to be postmaster at Menomonie, in the county of Dunn and State of Wisconsin, in place of Egbert Marks. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

George A. Packard to be postmaster at Bayfield, in the county of Bayfield and State of Wisconsin, in place of George A. Packard. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 8, 1907.

PROMOTION IN PUBLIC HEALTH AND MARINE-HOSPITAL SERVICE.

Asst. Surg. John S. Boggess to be a passed assistant surgeon in the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States, to rank as such from December 5, 1906.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

First Lieut. Preston Henry Uberroth to be a captain in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from December 25, 1906.

Second Lieut. Henry Ulke, jr., to be a first lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from December 25, 1906.

Third Lieut. Ralph Waldo Dempwolf to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from October 1, 1906.

Third Lieut. Roger Chew Weightman to be a second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from November 4, 1906.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

John Embry, of Oklahoma, who was appointed during the last recess of the Senate, in the place of Horace Speed, removed, to be United States attorney for the Territory of Oklahoma.

MARSHAL.

William H. Mackey, jr., of Kansas, to be United States marshal for the district of Kansas.

POSTMASTERS.

INDIANA.

James P. Clark to be postmaster at Morocco, in the county of Newton and State of Indiana.

Laron E. Street to be postmaster at Brookston, in the county of White and State of Indiana.

IOWA.

Robert S. McNutt to be postmaster at Muscatine, in the county of Muscatine and State of Iowa.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, January 8, 1907.

The House met at 12 o'clock m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

COMMITTEE ASSIGNMENT.

The SPEAKER. The Chair asks unanimous consent for the appointment of the Delegate named on the Committee on Territories.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WASKEY, Delegate from Alaska, a member of the Committee on Territories.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON LATE SENATOR GORMAN.

Mr. TALBOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the order which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the session of Saturday, February 2, 1907, at 2 o'clock p. m., shall be set apart for memorial addresses on the life, character, and public services of Hon. ARTHUR P. GORMAN, late a United States Senator from the State of Maryland.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

LEAVE TO SIT DURING SESSIONS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to ask unanimous consent that that committee may be permitted to sit during the sessions of the House during this week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 23551) making appropriation for the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

Mr. HULL. Pending that, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate may run for six hours, one half of the time to be controlled by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY] and the other half by myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that general debate may be closed at the end of six hours, to be equally divided between the majority and the minority, and to be controlled by the gentleman from Iowa, three hours, and by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY], three hours. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. CURRIER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 23551, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 23551) making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908.

Mr. HULL. I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to dispense with the first reading of the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman from Iowa whether it is his intention in any event to ask for the reading of the bill for amendment to-day?

Mr. HULL. Oh, no; we can not conclude the general debate to-day.

Mr. MANN. You could conclude it very easily if the time was exhausted.

Mr. HULL. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that, of course, whenever debate is exhausted and the House is in session I shall ask that we proceed under the five-minute rule.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman propose, then, to-day, if debate is exhausted, to proceed under the five-minute rule?

Mr. HULL. Unless the House indicates a desire to adjourn.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman says that he will, I shall ask for the first reading of the bill. We have not been able to see the bill before to-day.

Mr. PAYNE. If debate should be concluded, we could read one paragraph, and then the gentleman could move to adjourn.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman from Illinois desires to hear the bill read, I have no objection.

Mr. MANN. Neither the gentleman from Illinois nor any other gentleman in the House (except those in charge of the bill) has had any chance to see the bill until now. We have an opportunity to hear it now.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois object?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill at length.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, it was not originally my purpose to take any considerable time for debate on this bill, as I always prefer to discuss different items as they come up for consideration by the committee under the five-minute rule; but I do want to call attention briefly to a few items in the bill.

First, the total appropriation this year amounts to $73,339,039. The total appropriation for last year amounted to $70,626,003. In other words, there is an increase of a little over two and a half million dollars in spite of the utmost effort of the committee to keep the amount within the sum appropriated for the current fiscal year.

I suppose it is impossible for the Government to continue its arm of defense without, in the near future, showing a much larger increase than this. The Committee on Appropriations from year to year report in the fortifications bill large sums of money for the erection of coast fortifications and the emplacement of large coast-defense guns. There has already been expended, as I now remember, about $73,000,000 for this purpose, and it is proposed to continue the expenditures until in the neighborhood of $125,000,000 shall have been expended.

The Army as it stands to-day, in its artillery branch, is not sufficient to give one shift to the guns already emplaced. The pay of the artillery is not sufficient to enable the Government to secure enlistments in that branch of the service. In the cavalry and infantry and Field Artillery there is not the same difficulty that exists with the Coast Artillery. In the Coast Artillery the work is largely mechanical, and the man who enlists puts on his overalls, takes his oil can, and becomes a skilled mechanic. In the schools for the enlisted men of the Coast Artillery a man receives instruction in electricity and general mechanism, and the result is that when his one term of enlistment expires he can retire to private life and receive a large advance of wages on account of the education the Government has given him.

We have a bill now before the Military Committee, which I hope will be reported here in the near future, that will give to the noncommissioned officers, the electricians, and the skilled men of the artillery an advance in pay that will be sufficient to secure reenlistments, and a bill that will give an increased number of men, so that these expensive guns can be cared for in time of peace with a small force, but the organization to be such that it can be expanded to a larger force in time of war.

This Congress either should increase the artillery arm of the service and increase the pay of the skilled men of the Coast Artillery, or it should refuse from now on to appropriate one dollar for coast defense. It is utterly futile to erect expensive fortifications and let them decay without any use whatever, becoming utterly worthless when war shall come, because of the lack of care in time of peace.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman tell us what the pay is now in the artillery, and also whether there is any proposition to increase it in this bill?

Mr. HULL. Not in this bill. The pay of the artillery, infantry, and cavalry are practically the same. I will say to the gentleman that in the Navy——

Mr. MANN. Is not the gentleman mistaken in saying that the pay of the artillery is the same as the pay of the infantry?

Mr. HULL. Substantially the same. They get increased pay for expert gunners in the artillery and they get increased pay for expert riflemen in the infantry.

Mr. MANN. I thought we had increased the pay of the artillery at one time.

Mr. HULL. Increased the number.

Mr. MANN. What is the pay now?

Mr. HULL. I should have to have the Army Register to give it in detail. I will look it up and give it to the gentleman. I think it runs about $34 a month for sergeants and less for other noncommissioned.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman was discussing that subject.

Mr. HULL. The pay is exactly the same for the three arms of the service. The gentleman probably knows that one reason the Navy can retain their skilled electricians is because their pay is fixed by the President, and it corresponds better with what is given in private life, although no one proposes to increase the pay to what they can make by serving large corporations.

Mr. ROBERTS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Iowa yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. HULL. I will.

Mr. ROBERTS. Did I understand the gentleman to say a moment ago that there are not enough men in the Coast Artillery to man the guns now in place?

Mr. HULL. I so stated.

Mr. ROBERTS. How many guns have you in place now?

Mr. HULL. The committee having charge of coast fortifications can tell better than I can.

Mr. ROBERTS. How many men are in the Coast Artillery?

Mr. HULL. The whole number authorized under the act of 1901 is a little over 18,000 men in Coast and Field Artillery. I think we have in the Coast Artillery and the Field Artillery actually about 14,000 men, although the Chief of Artillery this morning stated in committee that they were not quite 3,000 short.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to ask the gentleman a further question. Can not the Field Artillery man the Coast Artillery guns?

Mr. HULL. No; not unless you disband the Field Artillery. One is a mobile branch and the other stationary.

Mr. ROBERTS. Can the gentleman tell us how many men are necessary to man the guns of the Coast Artillery when all the guns are in place?

Mr. HULL. With a full equipment, at least forty-eight thousand.

Mr. ROBERTS. Is it not a fact that it will require fifty-odd thousand men to man all the guns?

Mr. HULL. I can not answer that question.

Mr. MANN. The Secretary of War says in his report that when the defenses are completed it will require 1,754 officers, 41,833 enlisted men, and that there are now available 514 officers and 14,153 enlisted men.

Mr. HULL. That includes both branches of the artillery.

Mr. MANN. No.

Mr. HULL. If they had it recruited to the full amount, there would be 18,000 men. The men now in Field Artillery are not available for Coast Artillery.

Mr. MANN. Those are the numbers now available.

Mr. HULL. But they are short of the number authorized by existing law.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to ask the gentleman a further question. With a full complement of men in the Coast Artillery, as stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], what will be the annual charge for the pay and maintenance of these men, based upon the present rate of pay?

Mr. HULL. That would be a computation the gentleman could sit down and figure out with his pencil. It would cost substantially just as much more as we would increase the Army in proportion to what we now have. We have now 62,000 enlisted men, as I understand from the hearings we have recently had.

Mr. ROBERTS. What is the cost per man?

Mr. HULL. The appropriations for enlisted force, based on the present rate of payment—and that is not for the whole 62,000, for a part is for Hospital Corps—but for the enlisted men of the line of the Army now it costs $9,000,000 each year.

Mr. ROBERTS. And if we double that it will be nine millions more annually?

Mr. HULL. Yes; and with all the clothing and other allowances it would be a great deal more.

Mr. ROBERTS. Is it not a fact that with all the coast fortifications that we have, they are inadequate to defend the ports?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I am not going into an expert opinion on the floor of the House upon such a question as that. The Government has entered upon a line of policy and is from year to year carrying it out. The men charged with this work are experts, and I assume are doing the work well. My opinion as to the value of the work is not valuable. I am inclined to doubt the great value of the opinion of the gentleman on this question, much as I respect his ability.

The Government has decided, under the lead of distinguished officers, to go into the fortification of all our seacoast places. The Government is carrying out that policy. Congress has adopted it. We are making appropriations from year to year to complete it; and whether we have done wisely or not is something that I ought not to be asked, and would not undertake to answer. I am not expert enough to answer. The gentleman lives on the coast and should know more about this than I. I live in the interior. As one of the Representatives of the interior of the country, having pride enough in my Government and its people, I have been willing to vote appropriations to make every foot of our seacoast absolutely safe from invasion, not because it could interfere with me or my people, but because it interferes with my country to have any foreign invader set foot upon our shores. If the experts have made a mistake——

Mr. ROBERTS. That is what I am getting at.

Mr. HULL. I can not answer it. But until we have better information, as long as the Committee on Appropriations submits each year under the rules additional sums to carry on this work, as one Member of the House I am in favor of it.

Mr. ROBERTS. Is it not a fact that the Department is recommending the replacing of some of the big 12-inch guns with guns of larger caliber because the 12-inch guns have not range enough to defend the places they are supposed to defend?

Mr. HULL. That would come before the Committee on Fortifications. The gentleman undoubtedly can get all that information when the bill continuing the fortifications of the country shall be before us. It does not come before the Military Committee at all.

Mr. ROBERTS. The reason I ask this is because the gentleman a moment ago, I understood, made the statement that if we did not go ahead with this fortification scheme, we had better stop where we are.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman did not understand me correctly.

Mr. ROBERTS. And I think we had better stop where we are and see what we have got in the way of coast defense and see if it is worth while spending the enormous sum he mentions.

Mr. HULL. Oh, how much time does the gentleman want? I will yield to him in a few minutes.

Mr. ROBERTS. I merely asked the gentleman a question.

Mr. HULL. Oh, no; the gentleman is making a speech, and a very good one. What I said was that unless we provided enough men to at least care for the guns in time of peace, it was foolish policy for the Government to continue to emplace guns and erect fortifications, abandoning them to the destruction of the weather, to the destruction of time, without proper care.

Mr. ROBERTS. The gentleman opens up a new line right there. I understand him to say that we ought to have enough men to take care of the guns in time of peace. Is it not a fact that these guns are very intricate machines, and that it takes a long time for men to learn how to manage them, to fire them; and to have the guns of any use whatever in time of war should not we have at least one shift for all the guns in place at one time, so that when war comes we would have men trained in the handling of the guns?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the Chief of Artillery in his hearings this session states that with the concentration and organization now being worked out for the artillery that that is not necessary—to have a full shift for each gun—but to have within a radius of the concentration camps enough men to work the different guns at different times, and to have men so trained that in the event of necessity, if we have a large increase of the Army on account of war, to have enough trained men to put at the principal places with each gun and recruits to do the gun work that could be done with unskilled labor.

Mr. ROBERTS. That is on the theory that we know just where the enemy are going to attack us, is it not? They do not usually send word in advance where they are going to make their attack, do they?

Mr. HULL. The gentleman knows that we will never get in this country enough artillerymen to have all of them trained men, but it is exceedingly important for the Government to have such legislation as will keep a nucleus of trained men in this branch of the service.

Mr. ROBERTS. Now, I would like to ask the gentleman——

Mr. HULL. I will not yield any longer to the gentleman. I am tired of this. I decline to yield any further on this. It is not in good faith at all. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WILEY].

Mr. WILEY of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to say that I understand the gentleman's impression is that an artilleryman has to be trained by months of service. During the civil war I happened to be for a portion of my service in the artillery. It took three months to turn out an artilleryman of any value, and this applied to the old muzzle-loading gun, because the civil war was fought with muzzle-loading guns. In this day of the breech-loading gun used at the present time, it takes much more time and a great deal more care to properly train an artilleryman. In fact, a man to be an artilleryman properly trained to use a breech-loading gun must nearly be a machinist and something of an electrician. He has to have such knowledge of electricity as will enable him to understand its application to a breechloader. Those factors all come in.

Mr. ROBERTS. Now, Mr. Chairman, perhaps the gentleman from New Jersey will answer the question I want to ask the gentleman from Iowa. Is it not a fact that these big modern 12, 14, and 16 inch guns are very intricate machines and deteriorate rapidly unless the best care is taken of them?

Mr. WILEY of New Jersey. That is true.

Mr. ROBERTS. And if these guns are left idle until wanted, they will not be in a condition for use. Is not that true?

Mr. WILEY of New Jersey. They will be in condition for use if the Government provides a sufficient number of men to care for them when idle.

Mr. ROBERTS. Is there a sufficient number now?

Mr. WILEY of New Jersey. There is not.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to ask the gentleman if he knows the fact, or, rather, if it is not the fact that the War Department have been obliged to withdraw men from the various forts where these big guns are emplaced and consolidate them in one or two forts in order to have enough men to train up in the handling of the guns?

Mr. WILEY of New Jersey. Well, I do not think the gentleman is quite correct in saying one or two ports. I believe the gentleman's statement is correct that they have had to withdraw them.

Mr. ROBERTS. Is it not a fact there are five forts in this new scheme of fortification around the port of Boston; that the men have been withdrawn and consolidated in one or two forts and they have not men enough to man the guns there?

Mr. WILEY of New Jersey. I do not know as to that, but I want to say to the gentleman that a party of engineers, of which I was one, went down to Sandy Hook to see the fortification, and went in charge of General Murray, a personal friend of mine, whom I have known since he was first lieutenant, and he took some trouble to explain all this business to me which I am now explaining to the House, and he was strenuous on the point that the artillery force should be increased, and I sincerely hope that that phase of this bill will prevail, because if we do not do it we certainly will not have the men in case of an emergency.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, there is nothing in this bill increasing the enlisted force of the artillery. I am only explaining what might come, but I want a word further on this artillery business, and that is that only recently the Congress transferred from the Engineer Corps to the artillery the torpedo defense of the country, and that requires more men than would have been required for the artillery alone if it had been simply for the care of the guns, and it is certainly as important that the Government should have skilled men in the artillery service as it is in the torpedo service. The gentleman from Massachusetts seems to carry out the idea that coast defenses are not of any particular benefit to the country. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that where cities are properly fortified with modern guns and modern defenses no battle ship can pass them.

Mr. WATSON. Is it not a fact that our friend from Massachusetts is more interested in the submarine proposition than in the coast-defense proposition?

Mr. HULL. I am unable to answer.

Mr. WATSON. And is he not attacking the inadequacy of the coast fortifications in order thereby indirectly to show the necessity for the submarine defense?

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HULL. I am unable to answer the question. I yielded to the gentleman a little while ago, and I would like to have the privilege of three minutes' consecutive talk. It is hard to go back and pick up a line when one's statement is so much broken up.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Iowa yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. HULL. I will not yield until I get through with what I am saying.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa declines to yield.

Mr. HULL. The question of fortifications, as I say, where a city is properly fortified, where it has modern guns emplaced, where it commands the entrance to the harbor, no vessel of war can pass them. They can destroy any fleet. The only way they can be taken is by landing an armed force and coming up from the rear. You had an illustration of that in the Japanese-Russian war. You had a splendid illustration of that at Port Arthur, where all the fleet of Japan could have made no impression on that place, never could have taken the fortress, never disturbed the land occupation except by coming from the rear by slow approaches and capturing the fortifications by a land force. And the torpedo played a wonderful part in that war, Mr. Chairman, by destroying vessels that would break through the outer lines before they could get near enough for their guns to do any damage on shore. So far as the submarine boat is concerned, that is an experiment yet. Let us hope that it will be another important arm of defense, but so far in no war has it demonstrated its usefulness. The mines have done so and the guns have done so, and the Coast Artillery now lay the mines.

The committee has submitted, under the "Pay of the line of the Army," the same proposition, practically, submitted at the last session of Congress in this proviso:

Provided, That when the office of Lieutenant-General shall become vacant it shall not thereafter be filled, but said office shall cease and determine: Provided further, That nothing in this provision shall affect the retired list.

The last proviso is additional to what was submitted before. The question was raised that unless the last proviso was inserted, when the office became vacant on the active list it would cease and determine altogether. We believed that at the last session of Congress a large majority of the Members of the House were in favor of abolishing the office of Lieutenant-General. It went out on a point of order, because there were still two distinguished officers who had served during the civil war and were slated for this office. This now takes care of every officer who served in the civil war who could ever hope or expect to be Lieutenant-General. The present officer, General MacArthur, holds it until, I think, 1909. It does not disturb his tenure, but when he shall be placed on the retired list it does provide that it shall not thereafter be filled, and I hope no point of order will be raised against it this time. It is subject to it, of course.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR].

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I think the expression of opinion in the House on the question that was made last year, which involved putting an end to the office of Lieutenant-General even earlier than the provision of this bill, indicates that the House was very strongly in favor of suspending any further promotions to that rank. I thought that was a fair expression.

Mr. HULL. I think that was a fair expression of the House. We have inserted a provision of law in the bill as follows:

Provided further, That section 169 of the Revised Statutes of 1878 be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 169. That each head of a Department or independent bureau or officer of the Army in command of any army headquarters or post or the office of the Chief of Staff is authorized to employ in his department or bureau, or in any branch or division thereof or at such army headquarters or post or in the office of the Chief of Staff, wheresoever located, such number of clerks of the several classes recognized by law, and such messengers, assistant messengers, copyists, watchmen, laborers, and other employees at such rates of compensation, respectively, as may be appropriated for by Congress from year to year."

The law as it has stood since the passage of the original section provided for departments. Under that provision there has every year been appropriations for clerks at divisions and departments and in the office of Chief of Staff. Originally, some thirty-five years ago, it was carried by an army-service detachment. I think when the Committee on Appropriations had both appropriation bills they decided it was too expensive, because it paid them practically the pay of clerks and gave them the privilege of retirement, and it was changed to a civil clerk list and has been carried as such ever since. Last year, on a point of order, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House decided it would not be in order to appropriate for these clerks at all. There was no question raised as to the absolute necessity of the clerks. There could not be any, because they had been carried for all these years on one bill or the other, so that the necessity for them had been recognized by every Congress, and it was impossible to carry on the business of the Government without them. To obviate that a bill was introduced changing the law to the form we have reported it in. It went to the Committee on the Judiciary, and the Committee on the Judiciary reported it back with the recommendation that it pass. The committee has incorporated it in this bill. In order to obviate all trouble, reporting, as we do, for the full pay of the clerks, we also incorporate this change of the law, so that hereafter there can be no question as to the right to pay these clerks employed by the Government. We put in another proviso here that changes the law in regard to rations. We provide that where an emergency ration is issued it will not, as the law now stands, be in lieu of the regular rations, but shall be in addition, and that is made necessary by this fact—that an emergency ration is not issued to be used the day it is issued.

It is to give them to troops away from the source of supply. If the law stands as it is, a soldier the day an emergency ration is issued will go without anything to eat. Therefore having the reservation in this, we provide they may issue the regular ration the same day they issue the emergency ration.

There is another provision here, for the sale of stores of the Army, that we were not willing to give as full authority as the Department asked. They claimed that on account of the Army in Cuba and the Philippines it frequently became necessary to sell stores which were not condemned. Under the law to-day stores can be condemned and sold, but this allows the sale of stores still good; but it would cost more to retain them and bring them back to this country and distribute them than to sell them and get what they could out of them. As originally submitted it applied to the whole country, but the committee has limited it to Cuba and the Philippine Islands alone. So that we think it can do no harm and, possibly, do great good.

There is one other amendment, or change of law, to which I desire to call the special attention of the House. That is in regard to the increased allowance for commutation of quarters. Under the law now every officer of the Army is allowed quarters where the Government has them, two rooms for a second lieutenant, two rooms for a first lieutenant; three rooms for a captain; four rooms for a major; four rooms for a lieutenant-colonel, and five rooms for a colonel, and six rooms for a brigadier-general; seven rooms for a major-general, and $100 per month for a lieutenant-general. If an officer is stationed where there are no quarters owned by the Government he is allowed $12 a month in lieu of quarters for each room. In this provision here we have, beginning with a first lieutenant, given an increase of number of rooms allowed to each officer. It gives the first lieutenant one increase, making his three; a captain four, a major five, a lieutenant-colonel six, a colonel seven, and so on, eight and nine rooms; and in lieu of these rooms, if he is stationed in Washington, Chicago, or San Francisco, or any of the cities where the Government has no quarters, he gets $12 a room.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say that there is not a Member of the House who does not know that there is not any officer stationed in cities like New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Omaha, St. Louis, Washington who is not compelled to pay more for a house for himself and family to live in than this increase we have given. It is virtually an increase of $12 a month to an officer on detached service where rooms can not be furnished by the Government.

Mr. MANN. This is a virtual increase in the salary of certain officers?

Mr. HULL. No; hardly that, but the effect is the same.

Mr. MANN. That is what it amounts to.

Mr. HULL. Oh, no; it is not an increase in the salary, for this reason: Practically nine-tenths of the officers are furnished with quarters.

Mr. MANN. I said an increase in the salaries of certain officers.

Mr. HULL. It only applies to a few officers. An officer who is on detached service. An officer who is ordered to Washington has no right to question whether he will come or not. It is not an increase of salary, because he is compelled to come here, and he is compelled to rent some quarters for himself and family. The Government now says that a first lieutenant shall be given two rooms. As a general proposition, when a man has got to be first lieutenant he has been long enough in the Army to be married and have a family. It now gives the captain three, and the major four, and so on. Now, the first lieutenant can have three rooms, in lieu of which he can have $36.

Mr. MANN. Why do you make a distinction between the first and second lieutenants?

Mr. HULL. Because a second lieutenant has just graduated and very rarely is a married man at all, and he is given two rooms. When a man gets to be a first lieutenant he has likely been in the Army long enough to want to get married.

Mr. MANN. You make this proposed increase because of the increased cost there has been in rent?

Mr. HULL. There has been a large increase in rent.

Mr. MANN. And you recognize the increased cost of rent, but do not recognize the increased cost of anything else?

Mr. HULL. Of course there has been an increase in all living expenses, but we have not dealt here with any increase in salaries in the Army.

Mr. MANN. It seems to me that, as a rule, there has been less increase in rent than in anything else.

Mr. HULL. There has been a material increase in rents in Washington since I have been here. I do not know how it is elsewhere.

Mr. MANN. There has been no increase in rents since I have been here.

Mr. HULL. I think the gentleman is mistaken, because I rented a house here since the gentleman has been here and gave it up because of an advance in rent and rented another one.

Mr. MANN. That is possible. The gentleman probably desired to live in better quarters; but being content to live always in a modest house, I have paid the same rent for years.

Mr. HULL. I have always lived in a modest house. I want to say to the gentleman that I think the testimony everywhere is that there is an increase in the cost of providing rooms, and I want to say to the gentleman that, in my judgment, there never was as much commutation of quarters as should have been given in lieu of the quarters that are furnished by the Government.

Mr. MANN. Does not the gentleman, after all, think there is some question about the whole theory of furnishing commutation of quarters?

Mr. HULL. Oh, certainly not. It is a part of the contract. When an officer goes into the service he gets quarters. That has always been a part of his pay.

Mr. MANN. I understand that.

Mr. HULL. You take the theory——

Mr. MANN. I am talking about the theory. Why was it not made a part of the pay direct? We give the pay and then we give extra allowances and then we give commutation of quarters, and then we furnish wood at so much a cord——

Mr. HULL. One minute.

Mr. MANN. Then we do this thing and that thing.

Mr. HULL. It would not be fair to give every man of the Army this increase, because nine-tenths of them get it in quarters at posts in larger measure than this proposes to give it to them away from the posts; and you would then take them away from their commands and make them live in the city at an increased expense, and give them the same pay as you do at the posts where quarters are furnished them. The gentleman knows that would not be fair.

Mr. MANN. I notice they are mighty anxious, generally, to get from the posts into the cities.

Mr. HULL. Some are. A great many are not.

Mr. MANN. A great many who are not are not sent there. Those who want to get into the cities are sent there.

Mr. HULL. I know a great many officers who consider it a hardship to be compelled to serve in the cities, and who would prefer to be with their commands; but their preference is not considered. Of course, this provision is subject to a point of order, but I wanted to explain it now, thinking that it would so appeal to the fairness of every Member of the House that no man would raise a point of order against it. We have made some changes in the bill in regard to appropriations for barracks and quarters.

Mr. KAHN. I thought the gentleman was talking about quarters.

Mr. HULL. It is commutation of quarters that we have been talking about. Now, under the head of "Barracks and quarters" we are met with the embarrassment of two committees legislating for the same thing. The Appropriations Committee have always carried appropriations for what are called "Military posts." The Military Committee have carried appropriations for "Barracks and quarters," and yet the two are identical, there being no difference in them at all; but it gives a certain amount of indefiniteness as to the amount of money that Congress is going to appropriate.

We have this year a very large estimate for the artillery for coast-defense posts, asking of us $1,372,000 for the erection of buildings for the Coast Artillery, and asking in another place for $635,000 for military posts. Altogether there was over $2,000,000 for military posts, and for this one item of the artillery $635,000. The Chief of Artillery in his statement before the committee said that the entire amount that he wanted this year to complete all that he hoped for this year would be $1,400,000; and yet here in these two appropriations they ask us for the artillery alone over $2,000,000, not counting the Field Artillery at that. There seems to have been a large increase in the amount of appropriations proposed. The way the bills have always been passed they would estimate for a million and a half dollars for artillery, and a million and a half for all other posts, and if the amount was cut down, they could expend all that was given in any place, for there was nothing in the law to designate what proportion should be expended for any particular purpose. This year we have divided it; we believe that there is a large increase in the expenditure in this line that should be checked; whether right or wrong the House can determine.

We have spent since the Spanish war more than $50,000,000 in erecting buildings to house the Army. We started out, when Mr. Outhwaite was chairman of the committee, with the theory of abandoning the small posts on the frontier and establishing regimental posts as far as practicable, distributing them in the different States for two purposes—one to popularize the Army by bringing it in contact with the people and another to give to the children the benefit of better schools and maintenance of the Army at a less cost, as they claimed, for administration. The posts on the frontier required not only a long haul by rail for supplies, but frequently a long haul by wagon, so that it was expensive to maintain them. Congress started out on that plan, and we have established a large number of regimental posts. It is proposed now that they go in and establish brigade posts. The testimony before us was that we now have quarters enough to care for the Army, including all those that are in Cuba, but not including all those in the Philippine Islands. If it were necessary, or if it were probable that in a short time we would cease to keep our soldiers in the Philippine Islands, it might be necessary to continue larger appropriations for barracks and quarters, but no man believes that in the near future the United States Army will be moved out of the Philippine Islands. So that we have, outside of the Coast Artillery, completed the absolutely necessary housing for the care of the Army.

Last year the appropriations were a little over $3,000,000 for barracks and quarters, and our information at that time was that that would substantially complete this line of large appropriations and that hereafter it would be mostly for repairs. That was a large reduction on what we had been appropriating from year to year. This year they want about six millions and a half from the Army bill and more than two millions from another committee. We have taken off three millions and separated it, so that we give two millions for barracks and quarters in the country generally, and we give $1,300,000 under another head, specifying that it is for Coast Artillery. We make separate provision, and we have added a proviso there that I think, by striking out the word "hereafter," is not subject to a point of order, because it is a limitation only. It is as follows:

Provided, That hereafter no part of the appropriations for barracks and quarters shall be expended at brigade posts unless by authority of Congress, and no part of this appropriation shall be expended at posts proposed to be abandoned.

We have been hearing for years a proposition to abandon a great many posts. If posts are going to be abandoned there is no sense in spending money on them; and we want the proper authorities to formulate some plan by which Congress can retain control of where the money goes, and that these posts that should be abandoned will be abandoned; and when it becomes necessary to establish a new line of policy, abandoning the regimental posts and going into brigade posts by which the Army can all be maintained at four or five places. If that is the better policy, the Committee on Military Affairs believe that Congress should have full information and full knowledge, so that it can maintain control. Otherwise, Mr. Chairman, there is no certainty what line of policy will be followed by the Administration more than four years at a time. Since I have been chairman of this committee we have had two or three changes of policy in this matter, and what guaranty have we after we go ahead and erect brigade posts, with the abandonment at least of two-thirds of the money expended for the last ten years, that the next Administration may not be of such a character that they would want to do something to show that they, too, were working for the good of the country and change the policy of the present Administration. But if Congress is to have jurisdiction, as it should have over every dollar of money that is expended for the public service, wherever a change is submitted, let it come here, and if it meets with the approval of the majority of Congress it will be adopted, and it can not be changed except by a majority of Congress. So I hope that this restriction will be held. I want to say frankly that the Secretary of War is opposed to it, and that he said to-day that he did not believe this restriction would accomplish what we desired, but I told him if it did not accomplish what we desired, it then would do no harm to anybody.

Mr. MANN. Where is the restriction?

Mr. HULL. It is on page 31 of the bill. There has been a change in many lines of policy brought about by changes of Administration—naturally so.

Mr. KEIFER rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. KEIFER. I understood the gentleman to say that there was no appropriation specifically made in this bill for any quarters or barracks in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. HULL. Oh, yes; there is.

Mr. KEIFER. Specifically?

Mr. HULL. Oh, yes; in another provision. That is separate and always has been separate, but I said that heretofore the appropriation for the barracks and quarters did not differentiate the amount that was to be expended in the Coast Artillery and the interior posts of the country. But there is specific appropriations for the Philippine Islands, and I will say to the gentleman that while I think we have been going pretty rapidly on that, yet I was not willing to cut down one dollar that the Department said was necessary in order to properly care for our troops in the Philippine Islands, and we gave them all they asked for.

There is another proposition in this bill that I do not cordially indorse and yet the committee is for it, and that is for maneuvers every year. In my judgment, once in two years is often enough to have these general maneuvers. It costs directly about $2,000,000 a year, and may largely exceed that, counting all the expenses. I do not believe it benefits the militia as much as if the Government would appropriate and send a regiment of infantry, a squadron of cavalry, and two batteries of artillery to the State encampments, with a brigadier-general in command, to teach all that can be taught in time of peace of the methods of war. In that way all the militia would have the benefit from these maneuvers. In this way one regiment from each State has the benefit of the maneuvers. I think no nation has its regular army all in maneuvers every year. I think in Germany it is once in three years. Their army is so large that it takes three years to make the rounds. In France it is once in three years for the same reason. But we are proposing to have these maneuvers every year, when all of our regular troops can have the privilege of participating, but not all the militia. Congress in adopting this policy did so with a view of having the National Guard benefited, and only about one regiment from the State getting any benefit from it. I believe that in these maneuvers the best thing that can happen the Army, both the regular and the volunteer, is to march them to the different places, and when they are there keep them under tents and not in houses. I am not one of those that believe that a sham battle teaches much of war anyhow. The place is all agreed upon by the opposing generals, where they are to come together, and which is to try to get there first. Every man knows that he is not in a particle of danger, and so he goes into it with perfectly calm nerves, knowing that he may have to burn powder but will not hear the whizz of the bullets. In actual war one general may try to bring on an action at a certain place and the other general may be interested in having it at some other place, and they are liable to meet between the two places, neither of them getting exactly what he wants.

So I do not believe that prearranged maneuvers—sham battles—are worth much except for the exercise they give and for the training in rapid firing they may afford. I believe that when they do have them the Army should always live in tents and act the part of soldiers in time of war. I do not know that I care to take up the time of the House further. There are other provisions that will probably call up some discussion. I propose to take them up when we reach the bill under the five-minute rule, and I hope that we will have the attention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] when we are considering the bill under the five-minute rule, and that he will be glad to aid the committee in getting these reforms I have suggested incorporated in the bill.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. ROBERTS. I understand the gentleman has concluded his remarks, so it will not interfere with the continuity of his argument if I ask him a question or two. If he feels like shedding a little light on the fortifications matter and will answer a question or two I will ask them; if he does not care to go into that any more I will not disturb him.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the only part of the fortifications matter I have anything to do with whatever is to provide the line of the Army, the enlisted force of the artillery. If it is determined we do not want fortifications we do not need an increase of the artillery. If it is determined to carry out the fortifications and care even for those you have, you do need enlisted men, and that is all I have to do with it. To go into the other question which the gentleman is trying to exploit, which comes from another committee, I do not propose to be drawn into a fruitless discussion.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SLAYDEN] such time as he may desire.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, although I have had the privilege of serving in this House for ten years, I have not quite grown accustomed to the habit of speaking to one bill while another was being considered. But I have just had an illustrious example of how it may be done, and it has put me somewhat at my ease in that respect. For nearly half an hour we have had an active discussion of a bill for an increase of the Artillery Corps, a bill that is not before the House, and which, so far as I am informed, has not even been considered yet by the committee to which it was referred. With this example to guide me, I shall now, Mr. Chairman, beg the indulgence of the House while I talk upon a matter that I wish to state frankly is not here in the form of a bill.

Mr. Chairman, at the beginning of the present session I submitted a bill to amend the military laws so that after July 1, 1907, there would be no negro regiments in the Army of the United States.

For a long time I have looked upon it as a desirable military reform. Recent events of a startling and deplorable nature have convinced me that it is urgent. It can not be delayed, I apprehend, without risking a collision between white citizens and negro troops. There is reason to fear that occasional assassination and riot may be succeeded by disasters that will measure up to the standard of battle. Firmly believing that, as I did, I regarded it as a duty to try to prevent such a condition by amending the law. A series of violent outbreaks on the part of negro soldiers, culminating in a murderous assault on the unoffending citizens of Brownsville, decided me to offer the bill without further delay. The bill was not offered for buncombe. I proposed it because I am absolutely convinced that it is a measure of reform which must ultimately commend itself to the judgment of the American Congress. I very much regret to say, however, that there does not appear to be any immediate prospect of success. Like many good legislative suggestions, it will probably have to die the death many times before the mind and conscience of a majority can be awakened. The lack of active sympathy for my measure among such of my Republican colleagues as I have spoken to about it makes me realize that I am not apt to have an opportunity to discuss the bill as pending before the House, and so, Mr. Chairman, I shall avail myself of this occasion to speak of it.

In the history of the negro troops of the United States one finds many chapters that tell of violent breaches of discipline, of riotous and mutinous conduct, of murder and race hostility. All these are to be found in the cold, formal, official reports filed in the Department of War. These reports are not written with any consideration of the great politico-social question on which they have an important bearing, but it takes no very alert student to find the race question running all through them. As a rule, official reports are lacking in vitality, but these, when they touch even remotely the great, hopeless, and insoluble question—and if any question about the affairs of men is hopeless and insoluble this is—that confronts a large section of the country, throb and vibrate with human interest.

In declaring their unfitness to be American soldiers I have in view only the circumstances of their service. I do not impeach their physical courage. That is a virtue that belongs to nearly all men, and if there is any difference between savage and civilized man in this respect it possibly lies with the savage, who is undeterred from rash ventures by thought of the consequences.

But courage is only one of the qualities required in a good soldier. There should be between him and the people whose uniform he wears perfect sympathy and a common aspiration. This sympathy, this aspiration, does not exist between the blacks and whites, and in the very nature of things can never exist. It is prevented by basic and unalterable differences.

This may be denied by some gentlemen who have only theoretical knowledge of the negro or who have at odd moments studied in a casual and superficial manner the occasional specimens that have been brought to their attention; but it is true as gospel, as all men know who have studied the question at close range. Sympathy of the sort that welds people into a homogeneous political and social mass never has existed and never will exist between negroes and Caucasians. It is not only contrary to nature, but so contradictory of human experience that it is folly to expect and crime to build upon it. The incompatibility of races of a pronounced physical dissimilarity has been recognized and pointed out by many writers and travelers. Froude, in his fascinating book, The English in the West Indies, speaks of it. That distinguished gentleman, whose clear mind and high character all Americans admire and who will soon become the British Ambassador to this Government, Mr. James Bryce, speaks of the negroes in this country as "really a different nation dwelling beside or among, but not intermingled with, the white nation." As a philosopher and a statesman, and from a plane far above partisanship, he discusses the relations between the colored and the white races, or, as he terms them, the "advanced and the backward races of mankind."

Speaking at the University at Oxford, in 1902, about the natural hostility between the races of men who are physically dissimilar, he said:

> Nothing really arrests intermarriage except physical repulsion, and physical repulsion exists only where there is a marked difference in physical aspect, and especially in color.

In the same lecture Mr. Bryce directed the attention of his audience to the fact that the feeling of repulsion existed between all dissimilar races and was more or less intense as the difference in color was more or less pronounced. There undoubtedly exists a marked race antipathy between the white and the Asiatic races, though less intense than that between the Caucasian and the negroid types.

Charles Francis Adams, of Massachusetts, than whom, I take it, the negroes never had a better friend, who has made a careful study of the race question, who has even gone to Africa for first-hand information, says "the race prejudice seems insurmountable."

It is not my duty, nor is this the time or place, to explain, justify, or condemn the feeling. I merely assert as a fact that mutual race antipathy does exist, that its existence has been recognized by students of the question who have considered it on a plane far above partisan politics, and that it is folly to ignore it in our legislation. If we persist in the folly, we will surely end in disaster.

This deep-seated and ineradicable race hostility, which grows daily more acute, is not peculiar to the United States. Although dormant when apart, it is unfailingly developed everywhere by contact and competition. It has written tragic chapters into the history of Asia, Africa, and Europe. The Moors were as unwelcome to the people of the Spanish Peninsula as the Chinese and Japanese are to our fellow-citizens on the Pacific coast, and it will not do to dismiss the Pacific coast race question by saying that the objection to Asiatic immigration in California is only from the hoodlum element. It runs through all classes of society.

It was my privilege to visit the city of San Francisco in company with a distinguished citizen of that city, then and now a Member of this House. With him I visited the Chinese quarter in that great and unfortunate city. Under his intelligent direction I was shown how the Chinese question impinged upon every phase of the life of the citizens of the city of San Francisco. He indicated to me in an unmistakable way the physical dangers from contact, the danger from disease, the opportunities for and tendency to crime, the increase of all sorts of social and sanitary conditions which are to be avoided if possible, all due to the Asiatic congestion. Furthermore, he showed me by examples the disastrous competition of the Asiatics with the citizens of San Francisco and California, his constituents. He convinced me that if this Congress did its duty to the people of the American Union who reside upon the Pacific coast it would forever make it impossible that those competitors in great numbers should be permitted to come in from Asiatic countries. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I think I risk nothing in saying that what I assert about this race question will be confirmed by every citizen of California.

The race prejudice which exists on the Pacific coast is only another form of the race question which is presented to us in the South and is not confined to the hoodlum element of the city of San Francisco, as many theoretical students of the question residing in the eastern part of the United States have held. It sometimes happens that the man who is slowest to think is quickest to act, and I have no doubt, Mr. Chairman, that the violence which occasionally occurs in handling that question in the city of San Francisco has been as much in the thoughts of the higher as in the lower classes of society.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. SLAYDEN. With pleasure.

Mr. KAHN. In that very connection I desire to call the gentleman's attention to the report that was spoken of in the newspapers, which was presented in the British Parliament some months ago, with reference to the condition of the coolies in the South African gold fields. The people of California have always maintained that the oriental has vices which contaminate the white race, and the report which was presented in the British Parliament showed that the coolies in South Africa were so vicious in morals and indulged in vices so abhorrent to our civilization that the report was proclaimed to be absolutely unprintable. That shows conclusively that the people of California, who are thrown in direct contact with these Asiatics, are not in error in their estimate of the morality of the oriental. [Applause.]

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I will say to my friend from California [Mr. KAHN] that my information is as he has stated, that that report was not printed because it would not do to print; but I will also say to him that while I sympathize with him, and while I mean as a Member of Congress, so long as I may have the honor of being a Member of this body, to help him solve that question properly, I am not altogether sorry that he has an acute phase of it presented for his consideration and that of his fellow-citizens out there on the Pacific. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Being greatly distressed at home by what Mr. Adams, of Massachusetts, calls "the insoluble question," my sympathy goes out to the white people of California who have a similar but lesser trouble.

Admitting the existence of hostility between dissimilar races who, because of circumstances that this generation can not influence, occupy the same territory and live under the same political institutions, is it not unwise to arm the backward and less responsible people and station them in the neighborhood of the others? I think so, and upon that belief my bill was predicated.

Let us now see what facts bearing on this question the records of the Department of War will disclose.

FORT MEADE INCIDENT.

The Twenty-fifth Infantry, three companies of which were recently dismissed the service by Executive order, has a particularly vicious record. There seems to be in the minds of some Members of this House a good deal of confusion on that point. No companies, as companies, were discharged. Men were discharged out of three companies, and it so happens that most of the men out of three companies were discharged. The units established by law, the company and the regiment, were not disturbed.

To resume:

While stationed at Fort Meade, Dak., in the summer, 1885, Corporal Hallon of that regiment murdered a citizen. The people of the community lynched the murderer. It is worth noting that even as far north as Dakota an outraged public does not always, as it certainly should, await the slow formalities of the law to punish the crime of assassination. About three weeks after the lynching of the murderer fifteen or twenty negro soldiers raided and "shot up" the town of Sturgis, which is only a mile and a half from the post, at about 1 o'clock in the morning. They fired into dwellings and business houses and killed one man. According to the testimony taken by the coroner, the raiding, shooting, and killing was done in a thorough military manner. The murderers marched as an organized body and responded with fatal accuracy to the commands "ready, load, fire, etc."

There are two points in the official account of the Sturgis raid which are particularly well worth consideration. A gentleman who was present immediately wrote an interesting account of it to the President. I will quote one paragraph of his letter:

I happened to be at the fort last Saturday night when this last wholesale shooting took place. I was standing in front of General Sturgis's quarters talking with him. We were about going into the house when Lieutenant Sickles approached with a sergeant, and told the general that he had seen some fifteen or twenty colored soldiers going toward Sturgis with their guns. General Sturgis immediately ordered Lieutenant Sickles to take a detachment of his men and go at once and bring them back. A few minutes afterwards another lieutenant came to the house and said he heard firing from the direction of Sturgis, but he thought it was at the "Half-Way House."

Perhaps I should have stated, Mr. Chairman, that Fort Meade, where the troops were stationed, is a mile and a half from Sturgis.

The general then ordered him to take another detachment and arrest the soldiers.

It is well worth while keeping in mind the fact that all this was prior to the commitment of any crime beyond the slight breach of discipline in going out of barracks without orders. It was in anticipation of what really happened that the general acted. The letter, written on the spot at once, goes on to say:

In about a half hour afterwards a horseman came riding up in great haste and informed the general that the soldiers had fired into Abe Hill's house and killed an inoffensive cowboy who was standing there, and that they had also fired volleys into one or two other houses. General Sturgis then ordered that Captain Ord should make a check roll call, examine the arms, and bring in such as had the appearance of being recently fired. This was done. But the fellows had scampered back by short cuts over the hills and had gotten into their bunks before the roll call, which disclosed the absence of only three, who, I think, were satisfactorily accounted for.

Again I ask that it be observed, Mr. Chairman, that the general commanding and other officers were advised of this raid before any harm was done; that immediate and active steps were taken to prevent mischief; yet, and notwithstanding, fifteen or twenty soldiers did travel 1½ miles to the town of Sturgis, raid it in military form, fire their guns in a military way, kill a citizen, and travel the same distance back to the post and escape identification. And yet there are eminent gentlemen who say that it was impossible for men out of the three companies at Brownsville to go two squares and back without detection when the officers were not forewarned. The other point that particularly merits attention is the fact that no negro who had knowledge of the identity of the raiders and murderers would tell what he knew. Moreover, I may say to gentlemen on the other side of the aisle, the conspiracy of silence is a habit in the Twenty-fifth Infantry and a well-known characteristic of the race.

AT WINNEMUCCA.

Winnemucca, Nev., is the next scene of a criminal outbreak by this regiment. In June, 1899, while on the way to the Philippines, a train load of the men of the Twenty-fifth was halted at Winnemucca for supper. As soon as the station was reached the officers went to the hotel for supper, and the men, who were under no restraint whatever, according to the judge-advocate, Major Groesbeck, scattered through the town. They invaded a saloon in large numbers and soon became boisterous and took possession of the bar. They seized and took away the liquors and shot and wounded the barkeeper. All efforts to identify the perpetrators of the outrage were futile. No negro would tell, and so the guilty, aided again by the conspiracy of silence, escaped detection and punishment.

THE SAN CARLOS AFFAIR.

In October, 1899, at the San Carlos Indian Agency, Ariz., twelve or fifteen men of the company of the Twenty-fifth Infantry then stationed there made a murderous attack upon four peaceful Indians, beating them to insensibility with clubs. In this instance four of the would-be murderers turned states evidence, and I presume the others were punished. General Merriam, who commanded the department at the time, advised the removal of the negro soldiers and expressed the opinion that "white men would likely make less trouble."

I regret, Mr. Chairman, that General Merriam failed to say why white men would be apt to make less trouble, but that he did say so and that he must have had an excellent military reason for it is beyond all doubt. I commend his suggestion to the Members of this House and ask them to consider why the recommendation made by the commanding officer at the time that the guard was sent to replace those who had been mutinous, boisterous, and murderous should be for white men.

AT EL PASO.

Apparently when the War Department has been in doubt as to where negro troops are to be stationed they are sent to Texas, and so, after the murderous assault on the Indians made it necessary to remove them from the San Carlos Agency, Company C, of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, was sent to El Paso. I dare say there was no other place they could be sent without meeting with a protest, for no place, North or South, seems to want them. As bearing on this point, I ask attention to a letter written to Senator CULBERSON on the 4th day of June, two months and nine days before the trouble at Brownsville, in which Secretary Taft said:

The fact is that a certain amount of race prejudice between white and black seems to have become almost universal throughout the country, and no matter where colored troops are sent there are always some who make objections to their coming.

Mr. Chairman, I would that I had the privilege of taking this House into my confidence and telling them some stories about the stationing of these colored troops which I have received from such sources and from gentlemen whose identity I can not reveal. Suffice it to say, however, that the most vehement protest against the stationing of these colored troops in the vicinity of the communities represented by the spokesmen in protest have been received from the North, and very far North at that—a large part of it.

However, they were sent to El Paso in 1899 and took station at Fort Bliss. They arrived at El Paso about the middle of November, 1899, and in just three months their deviltry began. A number of men out of Company A "took rifles from the arms racks and went to the city jail of El Paso, where two soldiers were held for trial by the city authorities on charge of drunk and disorderly, fired into the city jail, killing one policeman on duty there." I quote this from the language of Captain Loughborough, who reported the affair to the Adjutant-General of the Department of Texas. The well-attested facts in this case are these: On the night of February 16 Corporal Dyson, of Company A, Twenty-fifth Infantry, was arrested for being drunk and disorderly and confined in the city lockup. Sergt. John Kipper and two privates went to the jail and endeavored to secure Dyson's release by offering to give a bond for his appearance, but was informed that the only officer who had authority to release Dyson had gone home and would not return until morning.

Kipper and the others then went away, but returned to the jail at 5 o'clock in the morning with guns and axes and undertook to release their comrade by force. In the resulting mêlée Policeman Newton Stewart was killed, as was one of the soldiers. Eight Army rifles, it developed, had been taken from the gun racks, and six of them were ultimately recovered. The guilty men were arrested, with the exception of one who deserted and ran away from the country. One noncommissioned officer, Corporal Powell, confessed. It is a pleasure to say that to Captain Loughborough, a zealous and capable officer, is very largely due the credit of securing the evidence which convicted the murderers. Sergeant Kipper, one of the noncommissioned officers in whom some people place so much confidence, was tried and convicted, and, on appeal, the conviction was affirmed. The report of Gen. Cyrus A. Roberts, then lieutenant-colonel of the Thirteenth Infantry, and acting adjutant-general, Department of Texas, who examined into the circumstances, is an interesting review of the situation and of the incidents leading up to the crime. While he does not say in the same direct, blunt way that Major Blocksom did when he reported on the Brownsville affair that "the causes of the disturbance are racial," it means the same thing.

To some extent I am trying to follow these reports on the misdeeds of the Twenty-fifth Infantry in chronological order, and the next on the list is the occurrence at Fort Niobrara, Nebr. I shall not weary the House with a repetition of the details.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. If my colleague will permit me, I desire to state that at the time of the incident at El Paso it was a part of the district I then represented, and I am well acquainted with the circumstances that occurred there. This man who was killed was an ex-soldier of the Spanish war. His name was Stewart. He was the only support of his father and mother, who were very old and poor and were dependent upon him. He was at the time of the incident a jail guard. When these parties were arrested and put in jail, this young man was on guard and was killed. I tried to get them a house built, and endeavored to secure a pension for these old people, but failed, as the bill was turned down by the committee, and I am unable to state their condition at the present time; but it certainly was horrible.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I think that the committee, under the circumstances, might have departed from its rule and granted a pension to these unfortunate people, who had been deprived of their support by soldiers of the country.

Suffice it to say that it has been described by C. H. Cornell, chairman of the Republican Congressional committee of the Sixth Nebraska district, as a "wanton and cold-blooded murder," committed by soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry with Krag-Jörgensen guns. In commenting a few days ago on the outbreak at Brownsville, Mr. Cornell says of the Niobrara incident:

> Although the murdered one was of their own color and without character, the act was no less a crime than the like one which followed it in Brownsville, and only emphasizes the necessity of some form of salutary punishment. While the soldiers might justify silence in the latter case on account of fear lest a fair trial could not be had in Texas, no such excuse could prevail here, since the murdered one was not a citizen of this community, but a woman of their own race in whom no one would have any special interest, and the trial could have been purely on its merits without prejudice against the prisoners. Yet those who possessed the necessary information were as silent in the former as in the latter instance.

I want to assure Mr. Cornell that there was no more need for the conspiracy of silence at Brownsville, Tex., than at Valentine, Nebr. He should not forget that Sergeant Kipper, who murdered an officer of the city of El Paso, had a fair trial and was convicted on the testimony of his fellow-criminals.

For a few minutes, Mr. Chairman, I will leave the history of the Twenty-fifth Infantry—that regiment which so richly deserves the title of "Bloody Twenty-fifth"—and ask your attention to the conduct of other colored organizations in the Army.

AT SUGGS, WYO.

In June, 1892, Suggs, Wyo., was the scene of disorders, and some of the men of the Ninth Cavalry (colored) were the evildoers. Maj. C. S. Ilsley, of the Ninth Cavalry, said that the trouble was due to quarrels about lewd women, but he says there was a bitter feeling between the citizens of Suggs and the troopers on account of the color of the soldiers.

Twenty of the troopers, armed with carbines and revolvers, raided the town and fired "volley after volley," according to Major Guilfoyle, into the houses of the citizens. Major Guilfoyle says, in his report to the camp adjutant, that "the feeling against the troops has been and is very bitter, being perhaps intensified by race prejudice." The soldiers acted in military concert in this as in other cases.

AT HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

The members of the Tenth Cavalry (colored), at Huntsville, Ala., in October, 1898, made an attack on the provost guard in an effort to release one of their comrades who was under arrest for the use of vile and abusive language. Maj. E. D. Thomas said of it:

> This unprovoked assault and mutinous interference with the provost guard caused the shedding of innocent blood, bad feeling between organizations, and endangered the lives of peaceable citizens, terrorized the community in the vicinity of the railroad depot, and scandalized and disgraced the military service, which calls for the severest condemnation.

He also said:

> It is impossible for me to give the names of the ringleaders. This could not be ascertained by any known means. The people connected with the colored organization throughout this investigation have studiously avoided stating or giving names of principal instigators of the riot, in my opinion trying to shield the organization from censure and endeavoring to shift the responsibility and blame for this disgraceful affray on other and innocent parties.

Here it will be observed, Mr. Chairman, as elsewhere, there was a conspiracy of silence on the part of the black troops.

THE AFFAIR AT FORT CONCHO.

In 1881 men from the Sixteenth Infantry and Tenth Cavalry, stationed at Fort Concho, in Texas, numbering about 150, raided and "shot up" the town of San Angelo, a mile or two distant. General Grierson, who commanded at the post, said that he had reason to believe that three noncommissioned officers and two privates were the leading spirits.

This again helps to destroy faith in the suggestion that the noncommissioned officers of these negro regiments can be relied on to keep their men in order and restrain them from the perpetration of crime. Residents of the city of San Angelo have lately written me that hundreds of shots were fired into buildings occupied by citizens of both sexes and all ages. Fortunately only one person was wounded. These negro soldiers arrested the sheriff of the county and demanded that a prisoner held by him on the charge of murder be turned over to them, manifestly with the idea of lynching him.

They defied and held in contempt the civil authorities.

AT SAN ANTONIO.

On the 9th of April, 1867, as the records of the War Department will show, Company E, of the Ninth United States Cavalry, colored, while stationed at San Antonio, Tex., was guilty of mutiny. The first sergeant at the head of his company attacked and killed Lieutenant Griffin and seriously wounded Lieutenants Heyl and Smith.

KEY WEST INCIDENT.

However, the Twenty-fifth Infantry has been conspicuous, even among the negro troops, for its persistent career of crime and mutiny. In 1898, while on the way to Cuba, the regiment was delayed a few days in Key West. What they did there to maintain their record of insurrection and contempt for law is told in the following language by the sheriff of Monroe County. Please observe that the statement is sworn to. I have a letter from an attorney of Key West, who was then police judge, which confirms the statement of the sheriff and which also says that a drunken soldier, whom he was arresting, fired his pistol at the officer.

STATE OF FLORIDA, Monroe County:

Before the undersigned authority personally appeared Frank W. Knight, who, being duly sworn, says: That I was sheriff of Monroe County, Fla., in May, 1898, and that the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry (colored) was at that time in the city of Key West awaiting orders for Cuba. That on the 20th day of April, anno Domini 1898, at about 10 p. m. of the same day, one Henry A. Williams (colored) and one of the men belonging to the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry was brought to jail by the city police, charged with an assault with intent to kill; that at about 1 a. m. next morning at least thirty or forty of the soldiers belonging to said Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, armed with their guns, came to the jail and surrounded the jail, and came to the door of said jail and demanded the said Williams, saying that if he was not delivered to them they would break the jail down. I being overpowered and no arms to defend myself and the rest of the prisoners in jail and fearing trouble might come to all in jail, thought it best to deliver said prisoner to them, intending to report the matter to the commanding officer at the barracks the next morning. Deponent further says that another reason why he delivered the prisoner over to them was because he had other prisoners in jail charged with murder, and he feared that if he did not turn over this man they would carry their threats into execution, and he would then lose those who he had confined for murder. That the conduct of these men was boisterous, and they were crying out all the time that if I did not turn this man over they would riddle me with bullets and that there would not be a brick left in the building.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the 27th day of December, A. D. 1906.

F. W. KNIGHT,
Sheriff Monroe County, Fla.

L. W. BETHEL,
Notary Public, State of Florida at Large.

BROWNSVILLE.

And now, Mr. Chairman, I shall say a few words about the latest outbreak of negro soldiers—that of Brownsville on the night of the 13th of August, 1906.

The main facts in this case are too well known to require restatement. I merely want to comment on some of the pleas put forward for the defense. The theory advanced by some eminent gentlemen about the murder of Frank Natus and the wounding of Policeman Dominguez is so preposterous that citizens of Brownsville, when advised that it would be made, refused to believe it. The Secretary of War well says:

> The suggestion that a body of men sharing the hostility of the people of the town should dress themselves in the cast-off clothing of the colored soldiers; should visit the army target range some 15 or 20 miles from the post for the purpose of obtaining used cartridge shells and clips, and then go through the town firing from 100 to 150 shots into houses where women and children were likely to be killed; should actually kill one man and attack the police of the town and nearly kill its lieutenant, and should then sprinkle the cartridge shells and clips on the streets of the town, all merely for the purpose of making a case of murder and riot against the colored troops and of thus securing their removal in the interest of the townspeople whose lives had been thus taken or endangered, is so grotesque in its improbability and absurdity as hardly to call for discussion or comment.

In reply to those gentlemen who say that the soldiers could not have left their barracks, made the raid through the streets of Brownsville, fired into the Miller Hotel and other buildings, killed Frank Natus and wounded Dominguez, and then have returned to the post in the time claimed and without detection, I direct their attention to what men of the same regiment did at Sturgis, in Dakota. In that case they went 1½ miles from Fort Meade to the town of Sturgis, "shot up" the town, and killed one man, and got back to their post without being identified. Thus, it will be observed, they must have traveled approximately 3 miles.

At Brownsville the post is separated from the town by only a stone wall, and the entire raid did not cover over 750 yards. At Fort Meade the commanding officer and his subordinates were advised of the raid as soon as it was undertaken, and General Sturgis, in the language of an eyewitness, "immediately ordered Lieutenant Sickles to take a detachment of his men and go at once and bring them—the raiders—back."

At Brownsville the commanding officer, Major Penrose, knew nothing of the raid until it was over, and refused to believe that his men were in it until convinced by evidence of their guilt.

General Sturgis, commanding at Fort Meade, at once ordered Captain Ord to make a check roll call, examine the arms and bring in all that had the appearance of being recently fired. Major Penrose, I believe, did order a roll call, but the arms were not inspected until the next morning, and when inspected were, of course, found to be bright and clean. To pull a small piece of cloth through a gun barrel is the work of a second, and so far as evidence in this case goes the inspection might as well have been delayed a week.

THE MOTIVE.

I fancy very few crimes are committed without the criminal having some reason for his acts—either revenge or gain. In this case it is not difficult to find the causes—at least some of the minor causes. In his telegram of the 20th to the Military Secretary, Major Blocksom mentions what he thinks are the causes. The first he names is racial hostility. Then he mentions the fact that the soldiers were made to drink at separate bars, and personal encounters between soldiers and citizens as other reasons. He might have stopped with the first reason given, for it embraces the second and is the explanation of the others. The soldiers had been advised that the people of Brownsville did not want them there, and they arrived in an ugly mood. I have letters stating that on the way down they asked the conductor of the Brownsville train if there were white women in the town whose favor they might expect. They were insolent in their bearing with citizens and particularly rude toward women.

Fortunately for the citizens of Brownsville, whose politics might be thought by some gentlemen to have caused the trouble, in the only two occasions on which soldiers were personally assaulted the rows were with Federal officeholders who are Republicans.

Fred Tate, inspector of customs, in his report to the collector, says that a negro soldier pushed and elbowed his way through a crowd of ladies, one of whom was Mrs. Tate, and jostled and rubbed against them in a rude manner. This act of deliberate rudeness provoked the anger of Mr. Tate, who did what most men under the circumstances would have done, and what was perfectly proper for him to do, in knocking the soldier down.

Mounted Inspector Baker, another Republican Federal office holder, tried to prevent a quarrel between two drunken soldiers and a ferryman and to stop a torrent of foul abuse pouring out of the mouths of the soldiers, and in doing so, to use his own language, "pushed one of them forward." The soldier was too drunk to keep his balance on the sidewalk and stepped off into a mudhole. Baker adds, "As the negro walked off he said, 'We will see about this to-morrow.'"

Two soldiers did hunt Baker the next day and, as he believes, for the purpose of making a row, but finding him prepared and evidently willing, they became discreet and left without doing any harm.

On the 12th of August, just twenty-four hours before the assault on the town, Mrs. Evans, a highly respectable woman and wife of a worthy citizen, was seized by the hair and thrown violently to the ground by a soldier in uniform.

These incidents accentuated the feeling of hostility between the soldiers and citizens—a hostility which always and most significantly runs along race lines. They show a state of mind which leads up to and explains the actual assault on the town, and, in my opinion, they clearly show the unwisdom of putting negro soldiers in a station near communities of white people.

It seems too absurd, Mr. Chairman, that at this late day we should be asking who did the shooting. I fail to see how there is room for honest doubt. If the soldiers had been white and the circumstances the same, if the same mass of clear, strong evidence against them had been submitted, and if the President had dismissed them from the service in the same manner, there not only would have been no doubt as to who were the murderers, but the action of the President would have been almost unanimously approved. But, then, the whites are not a valuable political asset handled in bulk, which explains many things.

Does any sane man believe the stupid suggestion that the white citizens of Brownsville, because of their hostility toward black soldiers, fired into their own houses and killed one of their own people, at the same time endangering the lives of their women and children? Such a theory is an insult to the intelligence of the country and seeks to put the people of Brownsville below the beasts of the field. Even the dumb brutes love their young and will protect them. Shots were deliberately fired into a house which only a few minutes before had been the scene of a children's party and which still had a number of occupants. By the merest chance no one was killed, for the shots took effect only 4½ feet above the floor. Surely sectional and political prejudice has gone the limit in this cruel suggestion.

If it is seriously urged, Mr. Chairman, that the people of Brownsville did this shooting, I most solemnly protest against the reflection on their marksmanship. I do not believe that you could find any community in the United States, even that least accustomed to the use of arms, who could not hit the barracks buildings at Fort Brown, at which the people of this Texas town are said to have fired. I know there is no such community in the State of Texas. Had the people of Brownsville been armed with these rifles and doing the shooting on that awful August night the list of casualties would have been longer and the dead and wounded would not all have come from one side. [Applause.]

A few days ago I read in the Washington Herald a statement made by a retired officer of the British army who, although he spoke guardedly, as becomes a visitor to the country, did not conceal his surprise at the fact that black soldiers are kept in our Army for service in times of peace. He said that Great Britain, even under the stress of war and in the face of repeated disasters, did not employ them against the Boers in South Africa. He assigned as a reason for the British policy the admitted prejudice, mutually entertained, of the races. I mention this, Mr. Chairman, to show that the people of the United States are not peculiar in this respect. I say the people of the United States, instead of the people of the South, because of comparatively recent events which show that this prejudice does not stop at Mason and Dixon's line. Lynchings are a disgrace, I admit, and they should be made impossible by the enactment of such intelligent laws and by such prompt and rigid enforcement of them that no man's thoughts would ever turn in that direction for the punishment of crime. But they are not peculiar to the South. They are only more frequent there because of multiplied instances of crime of a frightful sort. Even Springfield, Ohio, if the press and that entertaining essayist, Ray Stannard Baker, tell the truth, has on occasions resorted to lynching. And strangely enough the mob spirit was largely directed by race prejudice. The lynching of a negro criminal at Springfield in March, 1904, was followed by a very carnival of crime directed at the black inhabitants of that city. Not only was there evidence of prejudice against the particular criminals, but it seemed to have been directed against the whole negro race. They were hunted out of their homes and their property destroyed by fire. Mr. Baker describes the situation in this way:

> The public was apathetic. No one seemed to care; only a nigger had been hanged.

Danville, Ill., was also the scene of a manifestation of race prejudice, which the writer says is growing with the growth of the negro population. It would not be difficult to multiply these illustrations of the fact that the race prejudice which exists in the South, and which we admit, is also to be found in the North, but usually denied. The newspapers give us overwhelming evidence of it every day.

As I have already said, I fear that we have not yet reached the stage where we will legislate on this matter intelligently and for conditions as we find them. But we will reach it by and by.

After a few incidents like those at Fort Meade, San Carlos, El Paso, and Brownsville Congress will be really aroused to a discharge of its duty in this matter. Repeat the Brownsville affair with a change of locus—let it occur in Michigan, New York, or Illinois—and a new light will be seen. Until then we will be as patient as possible, having faith that finally the sympathy of the whole country will be given to that section which has been so tried in the school of disaster, a section which stands face to face with the perplexities and dangers of the most difficult question any people on earth were ever called on to meet and solve. When all the States comprehend this question, which now they barely apprehend, they will help us of the South to make it certain that the homes of white men in a white man's country will be protected by white men only. [Loud applause.]

Mr. HAY. I yield one hour to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ZENOR].

Mr. ZENOR. Mr. Chairman, on the 28th day of April, 1904, by virtue of an act of Congress there was appointed a commission, composed of five Members of the House of Representatives and five members of the Senate, since known as the Merchant Marine Commission, whose duty it was made to inquire into and make investigation of the conditions affecting the American merchant marine, the cause of its decay, and the best means to promote its growth and restoration, and to make report to the Congress of the result of such inquiry, together with such suggestions and recommendations by bill or otherwise as might in its judgment seem best calculated to accomplish the objects contemplated. Pursuant to this authority, the members of the Commission met, organized, and entered upon the discharge of their duties. It proceeded at once to hold meetings, grant hearings, and take testimony at various points throughout the country. It held its first meeting and public session at New York in the early spring of that year, closing at Washington in December, 1904. At each of these meetings public hearings were had and every interest is supposed to have had opportunity to fully present its views.

The testimony taken by this Commission is very extensive and covers many pages of printed matter embraced in the published reports of its proceedings. As a result of its work and labor we have now pending before the Congress and the country Senate bill 529, reported from the Senate Committee on Commerce by Senator GALLINGER. It passed the Senate February 14, 1906, and is now pending before the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries of this House. This bill, though comparatively short, containing only ten sections, embodies provisions which, in my judgment, proposes to establish a scheme that is vicious, undemocratic, and plutocratic. It proposes a policy at variance with fundamental principles and the theory and teachings of the founders of our Government. From the earliest colonial times down to the very inception of our Government it was the policy of Great Britain, not only with her American colonies, but her other dependencies, to keep them in subjection and under tribute; and the most effective means by which she accomplished this was her system of trade and navigation laws. One of the maxims of England was, "Give us control of the trade and transportation of the seas" and we will rule the world.

The idea of commerce as a means of national wealth and independence was most thoroughly understood and developed as part of the policy of that country. It was the one subject to which she had given exhaustive study, and her statesmen were ever preoccupied with the question how best to promote and secure it. Naturally, the colonists, at that time confined to a comparatively small area of our country along the Atlantic seaboard, and mainly to the pursuit of agriculture as their principal means of securing a living, turned their early attention to the sea and to the more lucrative occupation of trade and commerce. They early began to embark in ventures upon the high seas, not only as a means of transporting their own surplus products to the markets of the mother country, but to such other foreign ports and markets as would afford them the best returns.

England, with that sagacity, foresight, and jealous concern with which she has ever regarded rival interests and competition, immediately resorted to measures of repression. She enacted laws forbidding her colonies to manufacture, to carry cargoes to other than British markets, and in such small craft or sloops as to be unprofitable. She thus exploited and preyed upon the American colonies and rendered them helpless and dependent. She not only did this to maintain and perpetuate her own predominance upon the ocean, but she employed Tory merchants, agents, and factors and stationed them in the colonies to control and direct their cargoes of freight shipped to British markets on board of British vessels.

This harsh and grinding process was carried to such an extent by Great Britain with her American colonies that finally the export freight rates on such articles as tobacco, lumber, and other bulky merchandise equaled from one-third to one-half of the value of the goods and the import rates to from 15 to 30 and 40 per cent of their cost. It was clear that this state of things could not always continue, and demonstrated that if the colonies should ever become independent, free, and prosperous as a people they would be compelled to sever their relations with the mother country. With the revolution came the independence of the people of the colonies and the establishment of an independent government. Under the form of government existing at the time of the adoption of the Constitution each State possessed the sovereign power to exercise many functions of government that they subsequently surrendered up when the Constitution was adopted, and among these powers were included the right to regulate commerce with foreign nations and between the several States. Up to this time each State for itself adopted such measures of protection to its trade and commerce as its wisdom and judgment suggested was best suited to its needs and situation. Experience under this system soon revealed its imperfection and weakness, and clearly demonstrated the incapacity of the several States to cope with the powers of other governments to make and enforce their laws. It further resulted in creating a different system of regulation in the several States and in many instances of irreconcilable conflicts.

To meet this situation the Confederate Congress asked the several States to surrender over to the General Government the power to enact and enforce regulations of commerce, in the interests and for the protection of the shipping of all the States against impositions and arbitrary exactions of foreign nations. This authority was declined by the States, and each of them continued to act for themselves, and enacted discriminating duties, both of tonnage and of tariff in their efforts to protect their shipping. As stated, in the course of a short time there was a multiplicity of "navigation laws," all designed to protect against foreign shipping, but acting as well against the vessels of the several States, thus showing the necessity of concentrating the power of regulating commerce not only with "foreign nations," but as well among the several States in some department of the Federal Government. This attempt of the several States by the enactment of separate navigation laws to protect their own vessels and commerce, an interest common to all the States, was not only wholly inadequate to the purpose, but furnished the most conclusive illustration of the need of a national law upon the subject. Hence the protection of our commerce and shipping became a problem of vital concern in the movement to form a more "perfect union," which followed the founding of the Federal Government.

Up to this time, it will be observed, in tracing the history of legislation upon the subject of the regulation of shipping and commerce, either by England with her colonies or by the States for themselves, it embraced a series of enactments defining the terms, conditions, and circumstances under which the vessels of a foreign country might enter and clear port. These laws consisted of provisions imposing prohibitions and discriminating tariff and tonnage duties. This was the system of regulation in vogue prior to and at the time the Constitution was formulated and adopted and at the time it was proposed to incorporate into that instrument the only provision that is claimed to confer upon Congress the power to regulate commerce, namely, clause 3 of section 8 of Article I of the Constitution. To understand more clearly what was meant by the framers of the Constitution by the insertion of this clause it is both edifying and instructive to revert to the discussion of the eminent statesman who participated in the debates of the Constitutional Convention, and especially of this particular clause and section as it was first proposed and finally adopted. In the plan of the Constitution reported to the convention by the committee appointed therefor August 6, 1787, section 2 of Article VII—the second of "enumerated powers" to be granted to Congress—provided for the "regulation of commerce with foreign nations and between the States." This meant the taking over of the method of the States as to foreign nations, no other course appearing practicable. South Carolina and Georgia desiring for a time the continuance of African migration, their delegates urged that without this stipulation their States would not adopt the Constitution. The Convention was unprepared to adopt the idea, and the matter was referred to a special committee of eleven. General Pinckney contending for the passage of "navigation laws," by a two-thirds vote of each House this, too, was referred to the same committee, Livingston, of New York, chairman. He reported in favor of African migration until A. D. 1800.

In the convention the figure was made 1808. When the report was again taken up Mr. Pinckney moved to postpone it in favor of his proposition—a two-thirds vote on navigation bills. A debate ensued. Mr. Pinckney did not carry his State. Only four States voted to postpone; whereupon the report, which favored a majority vote, was agreed to nem. con.—none dissenting. Extracts from the debate show that General Pinckney said: "He conceived it was the true interest of the Southern States to have no regulation of commerce, and that the power of regulating commerce was a pure concession on their part," but, withal, he thought it proper that "no fetters should be imposed on the power of making regulations." Mr. Clymer, of Pennsylvania, declared: "The Northern and Middle States will be ruined if not enabled to defend themselves against foreign regulations." Mr. Sherman, of Connecticut, observed that "to require more than a majority to decide a question was always embarrassing, as had been experienced in certain cases in Congress." Mr. Gouverneur Morris, of New York, thought the object of the motion "highly injurious." "Preference to American ships will multiply them till they can carry the southern produce cheaper than it is now carried. A marine was essential to security, particularly of the Southern States, and can only be had by a navigation act encouraging American bottoms and seamen." Mr. Williamson, of North Carolina, favored making two-thirds instead of a majority requisite, "as more satisfactory to the southern people."

Mr. Spaight, of Virginia, contended that the "Southern States could at any time save themselves from oppression by building ships for their own use." Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, for good reasons, "would vote against the two-thirds proposition." Colonel Mason, of Virginia, thought, as the Southern States were in the minority of interest, "it would be fair to guard against hasty regulations." Mr. Wilson, of Pennsylvania, remarked: "If every peculiar interest was to be secured, unanimity ought to be required. The majority would be no more governed by interest than the minority." Mr. Madison, of Virginia, entered into a more elaborate exposition of the subject. He contended that:

The disadvantage of the Southern States from a navigation act lay chiefly in a temporary rise of the freight, attended, however, with an increase of southern as well as northern shipping, with the emigration of northern seamen and merchants to the Southern States, and with a removal of the existing injurious retaliations among the States on each other. The power of foreign nations to obstruct our retaliatory measures on them, by a corrupt influence, would also be less if a majority should be made competent, than if two-thirds of each House should be required. * * *

An abuse of the power would be qualified with all these good effects. But he thought an abuse was rendered improbable by the provision of two branches; by the independence of the Senate; by the negative of the President; by the interest of Connecticut and New Jersey, which were agricultural, not commercial, States; by the interior interest, which was also agricultural in the most commercial States; by the accession of Western States, which would be altogether agricultural. He added that the Southern States would derive an essential advantage in the general security afforded by the increase of our maritime strength. He stated the vulnerable situation of them all and of Virginia in particular. The increase of the coasting trade and seamen would be favorable to the Southern States by increasing the consumption of their produce. If the wealth of Eastern States should in a still greater proportion be augmented, that wealth would contribute the more to the public wants and be otherwise a national benefit.

Mr. Rutledge, of South Carolina, opposed the motion of his colleague. "It did not follow," said he, "from a grant of the power to regulate trade that it would be abused. At the worst a navigation act could bear hard a little while only on the Southern States. As we are laying the foundation for a great empire, we ought to take a permanent view of the subject and not look at the present moment only." He reminded the House of the necessity of securing the West India trade to this country. That was the great object, and a navigation act was necessary for obtaining it.

Mr. Chairman, these were in brief some of the views expressed by the statesmen and founders of the Constitution in the discussions preceding its final adoption. In view of these opinions held and expressed at the very time clause 3 of section 8 of the Constitution was incorporated therein, granting power to Congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, etc., by the mentors of our Government, there would seem to be no reasonable doubt of the meaning they meant to attach to this clause, and that they thereby intended to confer upon Congress the same powers theretofore exercised by the several States. Having arranged this grant, the several States were divested of all powers to thereafter lay or levy duties of tonnage or tariff for this same purpose. This power was surrendered and given up by the States, and taken over by the Federal Government, and the obligation and duty of shipping protection and the regulation of commerce was assumed by the national authority. The whole matter was arranged by the convention, and this action of the convention was afterwards ratified and approved by the States and the people, through the adoption of the Constitution. By this action of the States and people the States parted with this incidental prerogative of their power as separate States, and the United States, in virtue of the compact of union, assumed, promised, and undertook the performance of this duty.

Indeed, the Federal Constitution has been styled by some as a compact between the States by which it was ratified. But however this may be, there is no diversity of opinion that the confederation which the Union supplanted was a compact between the States of which it was composed. That each grant of power contained in the Constitution was pro tanto a compact, trust, and promise to be relied upon while that instrument remained unchanged in the manner pointed out and prescribed by its own provisions. If, then, we are right in our contention that the true intent and meaning of this clause of the Constitution, vesting Congress with the sole and exclusive power to regulate commerce, contemplates the exercise of such powers only and in such manner as were previously exercised by the several States, namely, by navigation laws, imposing discriminating tariff and tonnage duties, and prohibitions, the idea of subventions and gratuities could not have been and was not entertained as a constitutional scheme to carry out the object and purpose had in view by the framers of that instrument, and hence must necessarily be in violation of the Constitution. For years, indeed for more than thirty-nine years, after the policy of our Government was entered upon, by enacting wise and prudent legislation for ship protection by means of tariff and tonnage duties, all went well, and our merchant marine forged to the front and became a sea power and dominating factor in our carrying trade that astonished the whole world. James Madison, to whom history accords the honor of being the "father of the Constitution," being at the time an honored Member and distinguished leader of the House of Representatives, always clear as he was able, offered the first measure for ship encouragement and protection—a heavy discriminating tonnage duty, calculated to favor the upbuilding of an American marine.

The very first revenue act contained tariff discriminations in aid of tonnage duties, and thus a complete and perfect protective system was evolved in the course of time that illustrated in its beneficent results the wisdom of the work of the Constitutional Convention. This system, the system as understood by those whose statesmanship and foresight had done so much to create, to be the only one contemplated by the Constitution, had by the close of Washington's Administration raised the percentage of carriage in our own commerce from less than 25 per cent to over 90. Our rapid advance and marvelous strides in the development of our merchant marine and carrying trade under the operation of these successful navigation laws were a source of national pride and profound satisfaction to the whole country. All foreign and competing nations were vitally affected by this policy of ours in favor of American shipowners and American commerce, and foreign vessels and foreign tonnage rapidly disappeared from our ports. We continued to maintain our national supremacy and prestige upon the high seas while this policy was continued and as long as we adhered to this early and approved practice of the Government. Then, as now, in order to regain some portion of the lost trade she had sustained, Great Britain resorted to retaliatory measures and, with a view of forcing us to more liberal concessions, closed the ports of her colonial possessions to our ships and imposed other harsh and burdensome restrictions upon our commerce in her home ports. In return our Government closed all ports to vessels coming from ports or places not equally open to vessels of the United States. By this latter regulation Congress intended to compel or induce England to respect our commercial rights—that if they received our products they should allow our vessels to transport them.

But a little later on, and to meet conditions that had arisen in our commercial relations with some other countries, as well as Great Britain—and this was at the time, no doubt, done under the impression that it would operate in the interest of our trade and commerce—Congress was induced, through the urgent insistence of President John Quincy Adams, to enact the law of 1828. This law in a general way proposed a general policy of reciprocity to any country that would accept the principle of an open trade for vessels and cargoes from all parts of the world. It was a substantial offer to all nations to abolish ship protection, and was then and since regarded by many as a most unfortunate calamity to the American merchant marine. It is said that President Adams fondly cherished the idea that Great Britain would gladly accept the proposition, and he would go down in history as a masterly statesman. Great Britain did not at the time, however, accept the terms of this law. This was followed by the act of 1849, and still later by the act of 1886. Under these several acts some thirty other countries entered into reciprocal agreements with us, and from that unfortunate hour our commerce began to dwindle and decay. This change in policy and its consequential effects is shown by the following figures, viz:

1827, import carriage, 94.3; export carriage, 87.5; 1849, import carriage, 81.4; export carriage, 68.9.

Subsequent laws have been enacted which have still further embarrassed our merchant marine, such, for instance, as those forbidding registration to any vessel not American built. Our restrictive legislation unfavorable to the building up of our merchant fleets and the abolishment of our system of discriminating duties in our navigation laws for their protection have substantially destroyed the merchant marine and closed the ports of the world to our flag. And now, after these years of decay and national humiliation, the party in power propose to abandon constitutional principles, solemn compacts, old and successful precedents and adopt as the only remedy for our shipping malady the un-American and undemocratic proposition of subsidy and graft set out in this Senate bill. The title of the bill, as is not infrequently the case with proposed measures of legislation that can not afford to sail under their true colors, is falsely labeled "An act to promote the national defense, to create a naval reserve, to establish American ocean mail lines to foreign markets, and to promote commerce." Its authors and promoters are entitled to credit at least for their ingenuity in masking this scheme under an attractive and captivating title, but I imagine, sir, the misnomer is a disguise altogether too transparent and obvious to either mislead or deceive. The policy here proposed can not be justified or excused upon the ground, as has sometimes been stated and urged, that our maritime reciprocity conventions, heretofore entered into with various countries, prevent us from returning to the former system of discriminating tariff and tonnage duties, for our treaties contain provisions for terminating these, upon a year's notice by either party, even if any nation with whom we have such treaty stipulations—and we have none with Great Britain—was insisting upon us continuing such "reciprocity" system for its benefit.

But the truth is—and it is a well-known fact—that for years these reciprocal stipulations in our treaties, for the most part at least, have long since been abandoned or violated and set aside by the action of foreign powers, and the United States is the only party that has or does make any pretense to observe and respect them. No, sir; the only reason for wanting this bill passed, for wanting this vicious, selfish, paternal policy entered upon, is private greed, not the public good; selfish considerations, not the general welfare; reward to individual and corporate favorites, not to promote and develop our ships of commerce, cheapen freights, or otherwise benefit the great masses.

Mr. HINSHAW. Will the gentleman yield for an interruption?

Mr. ZENOR. Yes.

Mr. HINSHAW. Has the gentleman examined the treaties between this and other countries to know whether the proposition of discriminating tonnage duties would in any manner conflict with existing treaties?

Mr. ZENOR. I have examined them to some extent. I have not examined them exhaustively.

Mr. HINSHAW. What is the gentleman's opinion on that proposition?

Mr. ZENOR. There are some of the existing treaties which unquestionably forbid a return to discriminating duties, but the proposition is not that the treaties as they now stand would permit us to return to this policy of the Government, but that in each of the treaties we reserve the right to terminate it by giving notice of a certain length of time.

Mr. HINSHAW. Your proposition, then, would be to terminate the existing treaties so far as they would infringe the right to assess discriminating duties?

Mr. ZENOR. Precisely; and I contend further, Mr. Chairman, that under many of these treaties to-day, to which the gentleman has called my attention, because of the neglect and absolute violation of certain of their provisions in the legislation of some of those countries, the treaties are really set aside and abrogated.

The policy inaugurated by the suspension of our "navigation laws" was at best merely experimental. It was not intended by Congress to sacrifice our marine, reduce our carriage, or in any manner to impair our efficiency upon the seas, though grave apprehensions were felt by many at the time that this might follow the result of the experiment. It was even contended at the time by some that "free trade" would secure a larger share of the carrying trade, but if the policy should prove otherwise our treaty conventions could be terminated and we could retrace our steps and return to our former policy of protection under navigation laws and regulations, by giving the proper notice, after a satisfactory trial. Some of the European nations, thinking, perhaps, they had crippled their shipping interests by these commercial treaties and engagements entered into with the United States, sought to countervail the mistake by instituting bounty and subsidy systems in contravention of the spirit, if not the letter of these conventions, and it is now proposed by the proposed bill to imitate their vicious example and make the taxpayers of the United States put up the cash to rehabilitate the merchant marine and to support and maintain it out of the Government Treasury. Mr. Chairman, in addition to the fact that no warrant for such a course can be found in the Constitution, precedents, or traditions of our country and that we ought and should not seek to justify such a departure in our policy by the example of foreign countries, there is still the more important question of the propriety of selecting out and preferring as an especial object of the bounty of the Government "the shipping trade" to the exclusion of thousands of other equally worthy employments of our people, not one of which have any right whatever to share in such policy or call upon the Treasury for aid and assistance.

Such a bald proposition of class distinction and odious discrimination can not fail, it seems to me, sir, to carry with it its own rebuke and condemnation. The protection, and the only protection to our shipping industry, provided for in the Constitution is to be found in the clause authorizing Congress to regulate commerce, and nowhere else. It is not even pretended to exist under the power to lay duties for revenue. The two things are entirely different and involve the exercise of distinct powers. The people of the United States have the right to demand of the Congress, under the compact entered into, protection to our shipping. But this demand can be complied with only by the performance of its accepted duty, the honoring of its special agreement, the observance of the covenant to enact and enforce suitable and legitimate "navigation laws." This, and this only, is logical and proven by experience to be effectual. In the majority report of the Senate on this bill the report sets out quite a number of resolutions of various boards of trade, chambers of commerce, commercial clubs, and associations of different kinds, quoted as indorsing the passage of this or some substantially similar bill for the upbuilding of the American merchant marine. It will, however, be found upon examining these several resolutions that they are not unanimous in their support of this or any similar measure. They are not all for ship subsidy. For instance, resolutions of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, held in 1903, cited by the committee, representing twenty-one States and Territories west of the Mississippi, in expressing its sense of the national humiliation at the decadence of our over-sea American merchant marine and its hopes that Congress would enact such laws as would tend to build it up and restore it to its former prestige on the seas, contain no expression of indorsement of this bill. Of the same tenor and to the same effect are the resolutions of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, of May 11, 1905; the Board of Trade of the State of Maine, of September 22, 1905; the National Founders' Association, of November 15, 1905; the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, at Portland, Oreg., on August 19, 1905, and others of the number cited, in none of which was there any indorsement of this bill or any other proposing to grant subsidies.

It is true, sir, that in most of these resolutions there is an indorsement of the Senate bill, but as is apparent from all these it was done as the only alternative to secure relief, in view of the conclusions reported by the majority of the Merchant Marine Commission. That Commission, having reported in favor of the plan proposed in this bill, it was accepted as a sort of ultimatum by the friends and advocates of our shipping interests and over-sea transportation. Confronted with this, the only remedy offered by the party in power, it is not at all amazing that some portion of these associated interests, recognizing the pressing importance and urgent need of an improvement in our merchant marine, should yield to a policy, though obnoxious and offensive to their own sense of justice, rather than be denied all hope of relief. Be this as it may, these declarations reflect but a very small per cent of the general sentiment of the country, and as a rule come from sources that will not feel the oppression of the system to the same extent as would be suffered by the great masses, while at the same time they hope to share its greater benefits.

The majority report very truthfully states that there is a national demand for more ships. This means, of course, in its broader sense that our commercial and industrial interests and growing trade throughout the country recognize the necessity of more American ships and cargo carriers to regain our proportion of the carrying trade in the commerce of the world, as well as to keep pace with the rapid expansion of our domestic and foreign commerce. This necessity is conclusively demonstrated by the universally admitted fact that we carry less than 10 per cent of our own export and import trade, while the balance, of over 90 per cent, is carried by foreign ships. All are agreed that this is a most deplorable and humiliating situation—a situation that is no less sincerely deplored by those who shall find themselves compelled to oppose the passage of this bill than by those of its most ardent advocates. The various objects sought to be accomplished, as specified in its title, meet the cordial and earnest approval, I doubt not, of every Member of this House, and would receive their unqualified support if proposed to be accomplished in some legitimate and acceptable way, at least to the extent that such objects may be attainable by legislation. It is not a question of difference as to the desirability of accomplishing the objects expressed in the title to this bill, but a difference as to the methods to be employed in their attainment. This is the vital point of divergence in the views of those who favor and oppose this measure; and this difference is the difference between the effort now being made through the passage of this bill to donate to certain favored interests moneys levied and collected by the Government for public purposes under its power of taxation, and the Democratic and constitutional method of reviving and restoring in their full force and vigor our navigation laws—our once successful system of ship protection by discriminating tonnage duties and tariff differentials in favor of our merchant marine—under the inspiration of which our merchant ships and cargo bearers triumphed over all obstacles and for years held the primacy in the world's competition in our trans-Atlantic over-sea transportation and trade.

This latter system is the only one that comes within the undoubted power of Congress under the commerce clause of the Constitution, and the only one which Congress has ever attempted to establish and enforce. It is the authority under which Congress has extended to our lake and coastwise trade such effectual and complete protection and made it so marvelously prosperous and profitable. It is beyond all cavil the only method to control and regulate the indirect trade in the commerce of the seas, said to be the most profitable of all ocean traffic. Under this system Congress can prescribe the conditions and terms upon which foreign vessels shall enter and clear our ports; can prescribe the rates of tonnage duties to be paid by all foreign vessels and ships for the privilege and use of our ports and harbors, and may discriminate in the imposition of these rates between different countries as the exigencies of the situation or case may require. In the exercise of this power there is no limit to the discretion of Congress, and it may be employed and used to any extent deemed essential to afford adequate protection to foster, promote, and build up our shipping interests. In aid of the tonnage duties and the protection resulting therefrom, if found essential to accomplish the object, differential tariff duties may be granted in favor of all articles of import brought to our ports in American ships. This policy of discriminating tonnage and tariff duties was the policy pursued which resulted in bringing up our merchant marine to such a high state of efficiency in the past, and there exists no reason now why a return to this tried and tested policy would not again bring similar results. And the beauty about this method of relief, is, that it imposes no additional taxes upon the people and demands no largess from the Public Treasury.

But the signal failure of at least two previous efforts to pass ship-subsidy bills presented to Congress, though supported by the able and powerful advocacy of many of the most influential men in the Republican party, is a confession of the unpopularity of the whole scheme and has compelled the advocates of this species of governmental aid to adopt some method of legislation that would appear to offer some return and consideration to the Government for its generosity. With this idea prominently in view, the framers of this bill have performed a feat for which their names deserve to be canonized by those who believe in the religion of ship or other subsidies, and for which their friends and coworkers may justly thank them. Realizing that any measure that proposes to donate public money to private parties to enable them to conduct their private business is unwarranted by any grant of power that Congress possesses and involves a flagrant abuse of legislative functions, an inexcusable wrong to the taxpayers of the country, and if successful will establish a most vicious precedent for future class legislation, they have with apparently studied effort and commendable zeal sought to realize the advantage of disabusing the public mind of any impression that this bill is to aid any such scheme by eliminating from its title and throughout its text all mention of the word "subsidy," a term so well known and understood when used in connection with legislation of this kind, and the substitution therefor of the less familiar, if not more euphonious word "subvention." Mr. Chairman, it may be a question of speculation whether this change of phraseology employed by the architects of this reformed draft of bill owes its inspiration to the patriotic desire and sense of obligation to conform to the Presidential fad of "simplified spelling" or was really occasioned by their still greater sense of obligation and duty to respond to the distress call of the poor, famishing ship syndicates for public charity.

However this may be, it is nevertheless true that they have performed a most meritorious service in behalf of the special interests of shipowners and shipbuilders if they shall have succeeded in deluding the public mind into the belief that the gift of $5 a ton—provided in the second section of the bill for their benefit—is to make any adequate return to the Government or to the people and taxpayers of the country. I am aware, sir, that it is proposed by the provisions of the third section to impose certain obligations and duties upon the owner or owners of vessels for the performance of which they are required to enter into contracts in writing, with sureties, with the Secretary of Commerce and Labor before they will be entitled to the benefits of the provisions of the law. This, it is claimed, fully justifies the expenditure proposed to be made by way of this "subvention," and will furnish an equivalent to the Government.

Section 2 provides for the character of vessels engaged in our foreign trade or deep-sea fisheries that shall be entitled to receive the benefits of this act and prescribes the terms and conditions upon which such payments shall be made. It provides that after a certain date mentioned there shall be paid, out of the Public Treasury upon estimates to be made and submitted therefor, to the owner or owners of any steam vessel of over 1,000 gross tons, and of any sail vessel of over 200 tons, and any fishing vessel of over 20 gross tons hereafter built and registered in the United States or now duly registered by a citizen or citizens of the United States, including as such citizens any corporation created under the laws of the United States or any of the States thereof, engaged exclusively as a common carrier for the service of the public, subventions, namely, the sum of $5 per gross registered ton for each vessel engaged in the trade for a period of twelve months; the sum of $4 per ton for each vessel engaged in the trade for the period of nine months or over, but less than twelve months; the sum of $2.50 per ton for any vessel which, during any twelve months, has been engaged in trade for a period of six months or over, but less than nine months.

It will be observed in reading this section that it confines the benefit of its provisions exclusively to vessels engaged in our foreign trade and the deep-sea fisheries. It has no reference to our lake and coastwise trade nor to vessels engaged in trade between the United States and the Philippines, except a small per cent of the rates prescribed for our foreign trade, until the year 1909, when this shall terminate. As suggested, section 3 requires of each vessel before becoming entitled to share the benefits of the act to enter into agreements to perform certain conditions—six in all. These conditions are of such a nature and character as to make them of small, if any, consideration in determining the merits of the measure. The first requirement for national defense or for any public purpose, at any time, upon payment to the owner or owners of the fair cash value or fair rate of hire, a power the Government already possesses and in suitable emergencies has always exercised. Second. That the vessel shall carry, free of charge, the mails of the United States when the Postmaster-General shall require, a thing not likely to happen with a slow freight or cargo carrier when we now have many high-speed mail lines doing this service. Third. That until July 1, 1912, upon each departure of such vessel from the United States at least one-sixth, and after July 1, 1912, one-fourth, of the crew shall be citizens of the United States, or men who have declared their intention to become such; and of the navigating force on deck, excluding licensed officers, at least one-half shall be able-bodied seamen, who are thereby defined to be men who have had two years or more experience on deck at sea or on the Great Lakes.

Fourth. That vessels in the foreign trade shall be of a certain class and maintained at that, as shown by certain standards of certain associations. * * *

Fifth. That all ordinary repair or overhauling of vessels shall be made in the United States, except in cases where dry docks are necessary and no American dry dock of sufficient capacity shall be within a distance of 500 miles of the location of the ship when the repairs shall be needed.

Sixth. That a certain proportion of the crews of the vessel shall have been enrolled in the naval service after certain dates, namely, after July 1, 1908, one-eighth; after July 1, 1912, one-sixth; after July 1, 1917, one-fourth: Provided, * * *.

Section 4 has reference merely to the manner and length of time contracts shall be made, as set out in section 3. * * *

Section 5 provides for the authority of the Postmaster-General to make and enter into contracts, for not less than five and not more than ten years in duration, with citizens of the United States for carrying the mails on steamships hereafter built and registered in the United States or now registered, * * * between ports of the United States and ports on the routes and for the amounts prescribed in section 6 of this act. * * *

Section 6 provides that the Postmaster-General shall establish mail service, first, from a port of the Atlantic coast of the United States to Brazil, on steamships of the United States of not less than 14 knots speed, for a monthly service, at a maximum compensation not exceeding $150,000 a year, or a fortnightly service at a maximum compensation not exceeding $300,000 a year.

Second. From a port on the Atlantic coast of the United States to Uruguay and Argentina, on steamships of the United States of not less than 14 knots speed, for a monthly service at a maximum compensation not exceeding $187,500 a year, or for a fortnightly service at a maximum compensation not exceeding $375,000 a year, and so on in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh subdivisions of this section, each providing for the establishment of steamship mail service from United States ports on the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf coasts to various foreign countries with certain prescribed speed requirements and at a compensation not exceeding a certain maximum. This section proposes the establishment of ten new mail routes to South America, Central America, Cuba, Africa, and Asia, and other southern countries, and authorizes the Postmaster-General to make contracts with shipowners at a maximum expenditure of $2,912,000 annually as extra pay and compensation to the steamship owner or owners with which such contracts shall have been made for the mail service to be rendered by them under the terms of their contracts. This service is to be additional to that required of the vessels sharing in the subventions, under sections two and three of the bill, and the compensation to be paid in addition to that provided for the vessels mentioned and described in said sections. So that the total cost of the proposed scheme of this bill will be the bounties paid out on the gross tonnage of ships and vessels engaged, or to hereafter engage in our foreign trade and deep-sea fisheries, without reference to the amount of freight or cargo they carry, together with the sum estimated to be paid to the new steamship mail lines, plus the sums authorized to be paid to members of the naval reserve, authorized by the first section of the bill.

It is difficult to say just how many of our registered vessels are to-day engaged in our foreign trade, but, excluding steamers drawing subventions for carrying ocean mail, which are barred from the benefits of sections 2 and 3, the number of such vessels of all classes and dimensions that were employed in foreign commerce for more than six months during the calendar year ending December 31, 1904, was 152, as stated in the minority report on this bill, and of these they state fully one-half were sail vessels of comparatively small tonnage. Of the 56 steamships, of which there were 23 on the Atlantic and 33 on the Pacific, there is said to be scarcely one of the type which is sought to be developed by this bill. The eighth section of this bill is designed to exploit an additional source of profit and revenue for the shipping interests, under the guise and pretense of encouraging training and instruction of young boys and young men in seamanship or engineering in our foreign trade, and proposes to pay to any vessel of the United States that may have carried on any foreign voyage a boy or boys, a citizen or citizens of the United States under the age of 21 years, suitably trained during such voyage in seamanship or engineering, in the proportion of one for such vessel, and in addition one for each 1,000 tons of her net registered tonnage, an allowance equal to 80 per cent of the tonnage duties paid in respect of the entry in the United States of that vessel from that voyage, provided, etc., * * * that this shall cease after July 1, 1908, except as to any such boy who may be enrolled as seaman, third class, in the naval reserve or is an apprentice indentured in accordance with law.

Sir, this is but another of those skillful devices with which this whole bill is interwoven, to cloak under cover of some plausible pretense of public benefit an extortion from the public Treasury of additional pelf to the poverty-stricken beneficiaries of this bill. If any possible advantage can accrue to the Government in return for this valuable favor, it is so infinitesimal that it has escaped the detection of its critics and has not been pointed out by its friends. The ninth and tenth sections of the bill are merely formal provisions that do not in any substantial manner affect the merits of the questions, and hence are not important. It is estimated by the Commission that the total expenditures for the first year under the operation of this bill will be $1,283,250; second year, $3,517,000; third year, $5,282,000; fourth year, $5,882,000. The belief is further expressed by the Commission that at the end of five years the increased draft upon the Treasury will be confined to the increase of tonnage of the hard-working cargo ships, and that this increase will probably amount to 150,000 tons annually, and will on the average result in an annual increase of expenditure of about $500,000. This estimate, however, is purely speculative, and must, in the very nature of the case, be so in the absence of data to verify such calculations. But assuming that this is an approximately correct calculation, it would make the expenditure for the sixth year $6,382,000, and each year thereafter add the sum of $500,000 during the continuance of the law. This addition annually of 150,000 tons would only increase our merchant marine by from forty to fifty steamers or sail vessels according to the report, and assuming further, which assumption is not borne out by any facts or estimates contained in the report of either the committee or Commission, that under the practical operation of the bill it would add as many as forty to fifty vessels, aggregating a tonnage of as much as 150,000 for each year of its existence, this would only increase the tonnage of our merchant marine 1,500,000 in the period of the ten years to which the law is limited, and would prove wholly inefficient and inadequate to realize the hopes of its advocates. If our present merchant marine of 900,000 tons is only capable of carrying about 8 per cent of our present foreign trade, this addition of new tonnage of 1,500,000 would increase our carrying capacity to only about 21 per cent of our present volume of trade, and this is not very reassuring to the advocates of this bill, who profess to have confidence in its efficiency to again restore our supremacy in the carrying trade of our foreign commerce.

But it is further claimed that the mail subventions to the ten new regular lines would add from 200,000 to 300,000 tons of high-class steam tonnage to the Naval Reserve. Even admitting this to be true, it does not materially aid our friends who are pressing this bill, as I understand, in the interests of our cargo and freight carriers and to benefit our people in the advantages they are supposed to derive in the saving of freight rates and charges and the economies of increased shipping facilities for their over-sea commerce, and not from any pressing needs in our foreign mail facilities; and this additional tonnage of fast-mail steamers is less important and does not afford the same benefit to our commerce as do the steam and sail vessels, especially adapted to cargo and freight transportation. It may be, and doubtless would be, true, that these mail steamers would carry more or less cargo and would prove valuable adjuncts to our merchant marine, as well as aid to the Navy and Naval Reserve. But, conceding all that can be claimed for them and allowing that they would constitute an efficient part of our merchant marine, this additional tonnage of, say, 300,000 to the merchant tonnage would bring it up to 2,700,000 tons. This amount of tonnage would still be less by 14,269,000 tons than Great Britain possessed in 1904, and less than Germany now has by 693,000 tons, and would, according to the ratio of efficiency of our present merchant ships, have the capacity to carry only about 24 per cent of our foreign commerce. According to the estimate made, it requires about 112,516 tons of our American merchant marine to carry 1 per cent of our foreign over-sea trade, and the 2,700,000 tons, the highest point attainable under the provisions of this bill, according to the most extravagant estimate of its friends, would therefore have a carrying capacity of about $712,800,000 in value of our over-sea trade. If, therefore, the total product of tonnage created by this bill, added to our present 900,000 tons, will have a carrying capacity of only $712,800,000 in value of our trade—just 24 per cent of the total—then it is perfectly apparent that the statement made in the majority report—that this bill will enable the United States to carry under its own flag from 30 to 40 per cent—is not only a gross exaggeration of its potentiality, but wholly misleading and deceptive.

If, sir, this estimate is anything near a correct computation of the benefits to be received under the provisions of the bill as regards our increased carrying capacity of exports and imports, the vital feature of the measure, it falls far short of realizing the claims of its proponents and advocates. They claim, and with apparently much confidence assert, that with this bill enacted into law it would enable the United States to carry under its own flag, not 10 per cent as now, of its own imports and exports, but 30 or 40 per cent, earning for our own country, instead of $20,000,000, from $60,000,000 to $80,000,000 a year in freight and passenger receipts. And it is this phase of the argument that most strongly appeals to popular favor. If, then, it is capable of demonstration that this assurance can not be realized, and that these predictions in behalf of the measure are not well founded; if it is once made manifest that, however candid the arguments advanced, they stand unsupported and lack the confirmation of facts, reason, or precedents to sustain them, as we think we have shown they do, then I take it that the position of the friends of this bill is greatly weakened if not entirely destroyed. I know, sir, that it is suggested in the report of the majority of the committee that of the 900,000 tons of registered shipping, of vessels classed as engaged in our over-sea voyages, there is not to exceed 500,000 tons, or a little over one-half of it regularly engaged in this service. That there is a large per cent of these old and unprofitable to operate, but if this be true, as it doubtless is, the same will in a large measure also be true with our proposed new additions thereto. As new vessels are built and placed in commission, old ones will become worn, disabled, and retired from active service. There will always be of any merchant marine that may be established a certain per cent of the vessels included in the estimated tonnage that is unseaworthy and useless to the trade. Hence for this, if for no other reason, it may be safely concluded that the earning capacity of our foreign shipping proposed to be created by this bill will fall short of expectations.

Then again, Mr. Chairman, when you come to analyze the situation and soberly reflect upon the theory of this bill, it fails utterly to satisfy the inquiring and thoughtful mind that it will be worth its cost to the Government. When we consider that Great Britain has a merchant marine of about 17,000,000 tons; Germany a merchant marine of about 3,500,000 tons; France over 1,500,000 tons, and Norway and Italy about the same, all engaged in active competition for their share of the world's trade upon the open seas; and when in addition to this we are told that England is now paying out large sums in aid of her marine service, and will continue to expend yearly about $6,000,000 in subventions for the encouragement of her imperial shipping and commerce; that France is annually expending about $8,000,000 for this same purpose; that Italy and Japan, with less than half our population and much greater disproportion in resources, are each expending from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 annually for a like purpose, we can begin to appreciate how futile the attempt made by this bill to meet and overcome such competition and reduce in any material degree the rate of freight charges now prevailing. But the claim is made in behalf of this bill, through its advocates, that we should adopt a like policy of government subsidy with those of our foreign competitors in order to equalize or neutralize the advantages thus given them. This is founded upon an assumption that has no foundation in fact. This theory is based upon the unwarranted assumption that these, our foreign rivals, have been granting subsidies to their merchant ships and vessels. This is, however, untrue, and in every instance to which reference has been made, investigation will prove that what purports to be a "subvention" or relief granted by these foreign governments to their shipping interests, are not in reality subsidies at all, in the sense that this bill proposes, but were in every case granted and paid to certain vessels of approved patterns as compensation for some special service rendered the government; as for instance, to facilitate the carrying of mail or some other governmental service required to be rendered under special contract or agreement, just as we are to-day paying and have been paying for several years under the postal-aid law of 1891 to the 20-knot speed American line of steamers from New York to Plymouth, Cherbourg, and Southampton, for carrying our mail under contract at the rate of $757,000 annually; and as we are paying some others of our fast-line steamers engaged in the United States mail and other service.

This kind of Government aid, if it may be so designated, has never been regarded in the nature of a gratuity, but compensation for valuable services performed. And while in some cases it may be that the amount of compensation paid is so disproportionate to the amount and value of the service rendered that it might well be suspected that the formality of a pretended contract for this purpose was a mere disguise to mask a real subsidy, yet the ostensible object in view was compensation for a supposed adequate return to the Government. So it is with the alleged subsidies and subventions claimed to have been paid by these foreign governments to their shipping industries. And in this bill it is likewise proposed to pay an annual sum of $2,665,000 of mail subventions to new lines to be established under its provisions. How much more it may finally amount too, if the policy here proposed is once adopted, no one can venture to predict. But this bill proposes to go further than this. It proposes to enter upon an entirely new and untried experiment—to inaugurate a scheme of governmental aid to the business of one class of our citizens to the exclusion of all others, but at their expense—of granting a subsidy, pure and simple, to our shipowners and shipbuilders. It proposes to make, or authorize to be made, an appropriation out of the Public Treasury of the sum of at least $1,050,000 for the first year, $1,250,000 for the second year, $1,750,000 for the third year, $2,250,000 for the fourth year, and so on with this annual geometrical increase until it reaches the sum of $5,250,000 for the tenth year, at which point the beneficent and all-merciful authors of this bill have kindly set the limit.

These are some of the harsh and cruel exactions of the shipowners and shipbuilders of the United States from the American taxpayers for which they offer no return. "Oh," they say, "it will furnish the United States Navy a naval reserve of 10,000 well-trained and experienced men to enter that service in the event of war or public danger;" that a certain per cent of the officers and crew of each of the vessels sharing in this governmental generosity shall be enrolled as volunteers in the Naval Reserve, until it shall reach the maximum of 10,000, who shall be subject to certain instructions, rules, and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy, and to do service in the Navy when called upon by the Government; that these men and officers shall be enrolled for a period of four years and shall be citizens by birth or naturalization, and shall be paid a retainer for each year they are so enrolled as a gratuity out of the public treasury at the end of each year at from $110 to $24 each, according to the rating of capacity to perform such service. The total annual expenditure for this purpose as provided in the bill is estimated by the majority report, for the first year at $150,000; for the second year, $300,000; for the third year, $400,000; for the fourth year, $500,000, when it shall have reached the maximum, and from this on it shall remain a perpetual charge on the Government at the rate of one-half million annually.

Now, will some gentleman kindly answer what is proposed as a return for this enormous expenditure of the people's taxes? Nothing, except that in the remote contingency of war we might have this little army of paid and pampered recruits from all sections of the world enlisted and organized as a band of retainers through questionable if not purely mercenary motives in many cases, and without ever expecting or hoping to be called upon to perform the service contemplated. How many would respond to the call when made, if ever? Who can tell? No penalty or punishment is prescribed for failure. What general or admiral trained to his duties and conscious of his responsibilities would care to risk the fate of his army or ships in the hands of such volunteers? Sir, I apprehend he would prefer the ranks of his fighting force to come from the great body of patriotic citizens, men who when they volunteer in the service of their country to do so from lofty, patriotic motives, and with an appreciation of and courage to meet the dangers and perils of war. I believe, sir, that this would be a far better and more reliable resource on which to rely in such a national emergency than the heterogeneous organization proposed by this bill.

Again, what will be thought, what must be thought, by the taxpayers and great body of our people of the proposition of organizing and maintaining at the public expense, at a cost of one-half million dollars annually, this army of 10,000 men constituting a part of the crews and officers of our steamers and ships and ocean vessels, who are already engaged in employments in the service of the rich and powerful corporations, at far better wages than a large per cent of our laboring people are receiving in other fields of toil upon the mere ground that we might some time in the future—when, no one knows; no one can tell; perhaps never—have occasion to use them in the service of the Navy in a war that is not likely soon to happen. If I know anything of the temper of the American people, and of their sentiment upon this subject, I believe, sir, if given a chance to express themselves, they would respond to this demand by an overwhelming protest.

Not only so, Mr. Chairman, but, sir, this protest is already being made, and, strange to say, by the very men in whose interest they would have the country believe they, in large measure, propose this legislation. It is maintained that one of the reasons why our shipbuilders and shipowners should be granted this bounty is that they are compelled to pay higher wages to American seamen and wage-workers in the construction of our ships and their operation than European countries, and that this subsidy is therefore necessary to maintain this high rate of wages and equalize the difference between these high American rates and the low European cost of labor. They further attempt to convey the impression that our American seamen are favoring this bill. Let them speak for themselves. I have here, sir, a copy of the resolutions adopted by the International Seamen's Union at a meeting held in Boston, Mass., December 3 to 12, 1906, sent to me through the mail by its secretary and treasurer, one William H. Frazier, on January 2, 1907, and I have no doubt that other Members of this House have received similar copies. These resolutions are so pertinent, strong, and expressive of the views held by this large class of men engaged in and dependent upon their employment in this branch of the sea service, and speak with such intelligence, force, and knowledge of the subject, that I think they deserve a permanent place in the records of this House and of the country, and I therefore propose to incorporate them as part of my remarks at this very point. They are as follows:

OFFICE OF SECRETARY-TREASURER,
INTERNATIONAL SEAMEN'S UNION OF AMERICA,
1½ LEWIS STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

Whereas the so-called "ship-subsidy bill" is still being vigorously pushed; and

Whereas we are informed that threats are applied to public men, and especially Members of Congress who refuse to indorse or assist in the passage of the same through the House of Representatives; and

Whereas some body calling itself the "Maritime Trades Council of New York and vicinity," probably "maritime" because there are no mariners in it, are either consciously or unconsciously misrepresenting the nature of the bill in communications sent to all local or national trades unions whose address they can obtain, including in the same blank forms or resolutions to be adopted, signed, sealed, and forwarded to Congressmen urging the passage of this measure: Therefore, be it

Resolved, By the eleventh annual convention of the International Seamen's Union of America, that we hereby warn all organizations of workingmen against these communications coming from this so-called "Maritime Trades Council" concerning such shipping bill; and we hereby declare the information sent out to be misleading to the reader in this, that it misrepresents both the shipping bill itself, the purpose for which it was drawn, and what it will accomplish if enacted; further

Resolved, That as seamen, representing seamen, and having given careful consideration to the bill, we protest against its enactment into law for the following reasons:

1. Section 1 provides for the establishment of a Naval Reserve into which seamen within a certain standard of health and age shall be admitted, and offers us a bonus, for which we never asked and against which we most emphatically protest. When this country needed men we always volunteered, and Congress has no right to assume that we will do otherwise in the future.

2. Subsection 6 of section 3 and section 7 provide: That the owners are not to receive the subsidy unless an increasingly large number of naval reserves be carried in their vessels. This makes industrial employment contingent upon enlistment in the Navy during the seaman's entire military age, and it is a more drastic form of conscription than is now practiced by any country.

3. Section 1 puts us absolutely under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy after this compulsory enlistment has been completed, to "receive such instructions and be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe." To refuse would mean punishment for desertion under naval regulations.

4. The bonus shall only be paid on condition that we have served in some private vessel to the satisfaction of the owner thereof for six months or more during the previous twelve months. The bonus shall be paid "on certificate by the Commissioner of Navigation that such member has served satisfactorily for at least six months—on some merchant vessel of the United States." Since none but the owner or master of the vessel can give such certificate, the receipt of the bonus will depend upon the good will of the owner of the vessel. The employer therefore could, and, as we know him, we know that he would reduce the present all too-low wages by so much as the Government would be paying. To dispute his right to determine the rate of wages would be to fail in getting that certificate of good conduct necessary to get the bonus.

5. This bill makes the seaman's bread dependent, first, upon service in the Navy in both peace and war, second, being capable of obtaining and retaining the good will of his individual employer.

6. He can not, like an honest man, refuse to accept money which he has not earned; he must either so behave himself as to fail to get a certificate of good conduct, he must leave the calling or he must accept, no matter if what self-respect he may possess is thereby wounded or destroyed.

7. He must at all times be ready to go to war upon call of the President against anybody, in any cause, for anybody; he may not, like a citizen may, refuse to serve until the President shall, by the need of the country, deem it proper to call upon all men in the country's defense.

8. We protest against being used as a key to open the Treasury and as a pack mule to carry away the plunder. We are too ill paid and poor to live like other men; but we have yet, in spite of our status under the law and the pity with which we are considered, sufficient self-respect to appreciate the true value of the gift which this bill contemplates forcing upon us.

Sir, in view of this comment upon the provisions of this bill by the men who constitute the crews and operating force of our merchant marine, and from whose ranks it is proposed to recruit and enroll the contingent naval reserve, it would seem that much of the glare and glitter of its patriotic features, its patriotic pretensions, have vanished like Ben Adhem's vision. No, sir, I will not permit myself to believe that any ingenuous advocate of this proposed measure will further imperil its fate or prospect of success, if any it has, by any such folly as this. Nor do I imagine that he will persist in the equally absurd effort to justify the exceptional claims of our shipowners and shipbuilders and other kindred predatory millionaires upon the Public Treasury or taxpayers of the country. Sir, it will not do to insist upon or attempt to justify any such a theory as this until its sponsors are ready and willing to admit its equal application to the wheat grower, corn grower, and cotton planter. They, too, many of them, have become embarrassed and cramped. They, too, many of them, have been left in the race of competition with other more favored and fortunate competitors; this most worthy and deserving class of our citizens would doubtless appreciate the advantages of having the difference between the productive capacities of their worn and exhausted farms and plantations, and the expense of fertilizing stimulus, and the fresh and vigorous soils of the better improved and newer fields with which they are compelled to compete equalized through some governmental agency—by a subsidy or bounty—but if one or more of these should be moved by the hard lines into which they have fallen to ask the Government for a subsidy or bounty, a howl of indignant protest would first be heard from these guardian saints and patriotic defenders of the national honor and its Public Treasury.

The only reasons assigned by the majority why they think the policy proposed by this bill is preferable to the old historic policy of discriminating duties which this Government maintained from its beginning down to 1849, and even as late as 1886, with certain intervening changes and modifications, is, first, the difference in our mercantile conditions between the first half of the nineteenth century and our present conditions. Since then it is contended that under the liberal provisions of the laws of 1815, 1828, 1849, and 1886, offering reciprocity to the various foreign countries who were willing to accept the terms proposed in those laws, there have been made and entered into some thirty commercial treaties with foreign powers, by the terms of which discriminating tariff and tonnage duties are prohibited. It is admitted that this is not an insuperable objection and that these treaties may all be abrogated by one year's notice, etc. As already stated, most of these treaties are now obsolete by reason of the violation of their terms by foreign governments and other failures to observe them. But where this is not the case it is not pretended that any particular difficulty would likely be experienced in terminating them by notice, as provided by their terms. Secondly, it is insisted that if we returned to this policy of discriminating duties that other governments would retaliate by assessing against our vessels and exports discriminating duties, especially our agricultural and manufactured products.

An all-sufficient answer to this argument is that the principal European countries, who are our strongest rivals in the commerce upon the ocean and which own most of the merchant ships engaged in over-sea trade in competition with us, can not afford to invite a commercial war of this kind for the reason, among many others, that they are dependent upon us for much of their food products and other necessary supplies, and if they might by retaliatory measures have the power to cripple our merchant fleets, they would be deterred from this course by self-interest. It must be remembered that while many changes have taken place since the early part of the nineteenth century in our commercial conditions and relations, these changes have not been against, but in our favor; then we were a comparatively weak nation so far as our foreign trade was concerned, with a small and insignificant Navy, undeveloped national resources, and our industrial system yet in its infancy. We were then a debtor nation with the balance of trade against us. If with all these disadvantages against us we were then able to maintain our system of trade regulations and successfully protect our shipping interest against the old, strong, and well-established Governments of Great Britain, Germany, France, and other less powerful governments of Europe, and controlled at that time with our merchant marine as much as 94 per cent of our entire over-sea trade, it would seem now, standing as we do the acknowledged greatest power among the nations of the earth in the strength of our national resources, in our credit, the volume of our domestic and foreign commerce, and in the development of our manufacturing and industrial system, we need have, it seems to me, sir, but little fear of the claim urged that other nations might or would be able, by any system of retaliation to which they might resort, defeat that policy so successfully pursued in the earlier days of the Republic. I, for one, sir, refuse to believe this.

I for one refuse to give up my faith in the plan and policy devised by the wisdom of the fathers, under which our merchant marine achieved such remarkable success, at the bidding of the cohorts of modern graft and greed. But, say the advocates of this special interest, this old policy can not now be made effectual, because under the provisions of the Dingley tariff law the large per cent of our imports are on the free list, and unless a change is made and these articles are placed on the dutiable list our discriminating tariff duties could not be made effective; that from 45 to 47 per cent of our entire imports come in free of duty—that is, in value, and in bulk probably as much as 60 or 70 per cent. In other words, unless the free list is abolished, discriminating duties can not be applied to the encouragement of more than 40 per cent, or a little less than one-half, of our American shipping engaged in foreign trade. It is said that when the policy of tariff discriminations was so successfully applied for the encouragement of our foreign shipping nearly all imports were dutiable, and such a thing as a free list was scarcely known. And then they suggest that if the free list is abolished and these free articles are made dutiable it would so enhance the cost of living and of certain crude materials for our manufacturing that the people would never submit to it. This character of argument is, to say the least, a little strange to come from these orthodox stand-patters and high priests of protection, but they can always be relied upon in emergencies, and this is one of them, and hence they employ an argument to support a ship-subsidy steal which they just as readily repudiate in the defense of a tariff robbery.

But what is consistency between friends, especially between friends of ship subsidy and high-tariff protection? This argument is invoked evidently but for one purpose and one purpose only, and that is to induce the belief, if possible, that if the policy for which the Democratic party stands—to encourage and again build up our American merchant marine by wholesome navigation laws and discriminating duties—it would require all articles now on the free list to be placed on the dutiable list, and thereby raise the price of living in order to make that policy effective. Democrats, however, are not so unfortunate as Republicans in this contest. They do not have to reverse their position on any question or ask for the imposition of any additional burdens on the people to secure the relief for which they contend. It is true, sir, that we have many articles of imports on the free list, and only wish there were more, if this brings to the people such a boon as our Republican friends now say it does. The shipowners and shipbuilders of this country have no right to expect, much less to demand, that they be given protection at the expense of the sacrifice of the whole earth.

It is said in the majority report that when the Merchant Marine Commission was first organized and started out upon its investigation of this subject that probably a majority of its members who had any positive views upon the subject were strongly in favor of another trial of the policy of discriminating duties, and believed that that course would be recommended to Congress. That from the very beginning of the inquiry powerful arguments for the discriminating-duty plan was advanced by the Maritime Association of the Port of New York and other prominent bodies interested in our foreign shipping, including many leading shipowners and shipbuilders, merchants, and manufacturers throughout the country. But when they came to investigate our trade conditions they found that the trade with South America and the Orient could not be gained for American ships unless the free list was abolished; that they discovered that about 82 per cent of our entire import trade from South and Central America was on the free list; that in our trade with China, Japan, India, and the Orient about 61 per cent of our imports were on the free list, and hence discriminating duties could not adequately encourage American shipping to engage more largely in the commerce of these countries unless we abolished the free list and made these imports dutiable.

In answer to this argument it may be replied that while it may be true, as suggested, that our free list now is much larger than it was when the policy of discriminating duties was so effectual, yet it is equally true that the volume of our trade with those countries has grown marvelously since then and the per cent of dutiable articles now will favorably compare with our total trade at that time, and this leaves us a fair margin in that trade against which this policy can be enforced. Besides it is conceded, or if not conceded it is a well-known fact that none of these countries are ship-owning and ship-operating countries, and that the great bulk of their commerce is being carried in foreign vessels and by foreign tonnage, principally owned and controlled by European countries, with whom the very large per cent of our foreign trade is had; and it is admitted that if like conditions existed between our country and the South and Central American countries and the Far East as prevail between this country and those of Europe, this objection would not be tenable, for it is stated in the Commission's report that not to exceed 28 per cent of our imports from Europe are on the free list, and not to exceed 17 per cent of those from Cuba.

"But," says the majority report, "having given careful and painstaking investigation to the subject, the majority of the Commission were induced to change their minds from discriminating duties to the scheme of 'subventions,' as provided in this Senate bill." And this, by the way, Mr. Chairman, was neither new nor novel, for it may be here recalled that the Republican party, to which, I am informed, the members joining in the majority report of the Commission belong, and with whose views and sentiments upon this subject they are in entire accord and sympathy, performed a like feat with great, if not equal, facility immediately after the campaign of 1896. Sir, the Republican party can no longer surprise the country or achieve new notoriety by this kind of acrobatic performance, and it would be a vain and thankless task for any of its adherents at this late day to attempt to redeem it from a fault, if such it be, that not only inheres in its warf and woof, but in which it glories, and for which it has become historic. At the St. Louis convention in 1896 the Republican party, the party now in control, and which has been in control since that time of every department of the Government, incorporated in its platform the following declaration upon this identical subject. It reads as follows:

> We favor restoring the American policy of discriminating duties for the upbuilding of our merchant marine and the protection of our shipping in the foreign carrying trade, so that American ships, the product of American labor employed in American shipyards, sailing under the Stars and Stripes, and manned, officered, and owned by Americans, may regain the carrying of our foreign commerce.

Now, Mr. Chairman, here is the record of the Republican party, and, I submit, a more emphatic, clear cut, and unequivocal declaration could not well be phrased in the English language, indorsing and pledging your party to what you here say is the "American policy," the policy that the Democratic party has always maintained and now maintains is the only proper, legitimate, and effective policy to rebuild and restore our merchant marine to its wonted prestige, power, and glory upon the seas.

But, Mr. Chairman, in addition to all this we have now reached the high-water mark of our history in our foreign and international trade. Our imports during the year just closed aggregated the stupendous sum of $1,226,562,446, and our exports the no less astonishing sum of $1,740,864,500, making the total aggregate of our foreign trade $2,970,426,946, an increase of $334,000,000 over that for the preceding year of 1905. Not only this, Mr. Chairman, but the annual report of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor for the year just passed—1906—shows that of this increase in our imports and exports it occurred chiefly in our trade with Europe, North America, and Asia. Here is what he says. I quote from his report at page 27:

> The increase in imports during the year occurred chiefly in trade with Europe, North America, and Asia, the increase in imports from Europe being ninety-three millions; from North America, eight millions; from Asia, eighteen millions, while imports from South America showed a decrease of ten millions, due mainly to a reduction in the quantity of coffee imported from Brazil. The exports to Europe increased one hundred and seventy-nine millions, due chiefly to an increase in the quantity of breadstuffs and provisions available for foreign markets—to North America forty-eight millions and to South America eighteen and one-fourth millions. The exports to Asia show a decrease of $23,000,000, occurring chiefly in trade with Japan and China. The exports to Japan during the year were thirteen millions less than those of 1905, and those to China ten millions less.

These figures, Mr. Chairman, confirm and more than vindicate the position taken by the opponents of this measure, namely, that the strongest argument advanced in its favor, to wit, that we can not safely return to the policy of protection by discriminating duties, is wholly unsupported by facts and is without justification in reason. But this is not all. To still further show the utter fallacy of the contention thus made, I call attention in this connection to the receipts of the Government for the fiscal year 1906 and the amount of revenue derived from our customs duties alone. The total amount of receipts from all sources is $594,454,121.67; total receipts from customs duties, $300,251,877.77, an increase of $38,453,020.86 from this same source over the previous year, with an estimated total revenue for the year 1907 of $607,243,037.41. An analysis of the items and sources of these receipts, as shown by the report of the Treasurer of the United States, shows that the burden of taxation falls about equally upon foreign imports and domestic products. When, therefore, we contrast this array of facts and figures shown from official sources with the statements made in support of the contention urged by the ship subsidy advocates it furnishes a complete refutation and demonstrates most conclusively the sophistry of their arguments and hopelessness of their cause.

Now, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, let us concede all that is claimed by the honorable and learned gentlemen who made and submitted the majority report in favor of this bill, and all that is contended by those who are supporting this measure upon the point of the difference in our commercial conditions and the situation between the earlier days of the Republic and to-day, and contrast those conditions with reference to our merchant marine. It is said that at the close of Washington's Administration our merchant vessels carried 92 per cent of our entire over-sea trade. At that time our total registered tonnage was only 123,893, but a small per cent more of tonnage than is now required to carry 1 per cent of our present immense volume of foreign trade. Now we have more than 900,000 tons of registered shipping engaged in our foreign trade, and it has a capacity to carry less than 8 per cent of our trade. A most striking and interesting contrast, indeed, Mr. Chairman. Again, if we shall realize the full measure of the productive capacity of this bill, if it should ever become a law, and I sincerely trust it may not, we will then have, potentially at least, a merchant marine with a carrying capacity of not to exceed $712,800,000 in value of our foreign over-sea commerce, less than one-fourth of the whole, and in order that we might be able to carry even half of our imports and exports we would have to have just double the amount of tonnage proposed by this bill, or an increase to at least 5,400,000 tons, and if we carried three-fourths we would have to have three times as much, or 8,100,000 tons, and if we carried all we would be required to have four times as much, or 10,800,000 tons.

Our foreign shipping at this time is carrying 92 per cent of our commerce—last year amounting to $2,970,426,954. A high authority of world-wide reputation as a statistician, M. G. Mulhall, estimates average sea freights at 8 per cent of the value of the goods. This makes our annual freight bill $237,638,156, of which sum we pay to foreign shipping the sum of $212,466,113. The proposed "subvention scheme" of this bill would not reduce this drain to any perceptible extent. When we carried this 92 per cent of our commerce, we could import far beyond our export mark with perfect safety. Now we can not. It requires over $500,000,000 annually to balance our commerce—in exports or cash. A change, say the friends of this scheme, has taken place since the first half of the nineteenth century in our commercial and trade conditions. Yes, indeed, sir; and if it were possible for the men who wrought and achieved in the beginning of the nineteenth century to view the dawn of the twentieth with all the marvelous changes and wonderful development in the means and methods of our production and transportation, our national industrial and manufacturing resources, their astonishment would defy expression. And not the least of the things that would challenge their surprise and excite their amazement would be the proposition of the Republican party to reverse and set aside a policy instituted by their wisdom and sanctioned by the experience and traditions of the Republic and to substitute therefor this modern Republican system of spoliation, graft, and greed.

Yes, sir; we are proud of our achievements in the past, but our national pride is still more exalted when we view and contrast our conditions as a nation in the early half of the nineteenth century with the phenomenal achievements of the intervening years of our history, with the sum total of our national wealth, strength, and power at the beginning of the twentieth century. Verily, indeed, we stand to-day upon the very verge of realizing the prophecy of Tennyson—

> For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
> Saw the vision of the world and all the wonders that would be;
> Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
> Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales.

But, sir, all this boasted wealth, strength, and power has not been the result of always wise, judicious, and patriotic laws. Indeed, quite the contrary has often been true, as, for instance, in the case of our merchant marine. If, therefore, we shall hope to meet the just expectations of the American people and realize their anticipations—always deeply concerned in all that involves the honor, integrity, and renown of their country, ready and willing at all times, with the sacrifice of life and treasure, if needs be, to protect, defend, and preserve its institutions—we must turn from the "dead sea fruit" of this bill, that would impose a burden of more than $25,000,000 annually upon the taxpayers of the nation and all this without hope of the fulfillment of its prophecy, to that historic policy of the early days of the Republic, so aply and eloquently described in the Republican platform of 1896 as the true "American policy"—the policy for which the Democratic party has ever stood and now stands—the policy which has justified its claims to the confidence of the country by its past record of achievements and accomplished results. [Loud applause.]

Mr. HAY. I yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES].

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, ninety-two years ago to-day Andrew Jackson and his raw troops defeated, at New Orleans, and drove the English army, finally, I hope, from the jurisdiction of the United States. It is a coincidence that we are to-day engaged in the consideration of a bill "making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908."

It is not my purpose now, Mr. Chairman, to speak of the patriotic deeds of Andrew Jackson, nor to elaborate the history of the great battle of New Orleans, but I have some pertinent and timely matter that I wish to read to the House. My main purpose to-day is to call the attention of this House to the fact that this is the ninety-second anniversary of that great event, and that the American Congress in 1815 passed a resolution of thanks to General Jackson and his troops and ordered a gold medal to be given him at the public expense.

I will ask the Clerk to read that resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolutions expressive of the thanks of Congress to Major-General Jackson and the troops under his command for their gallantry and good conduct in the defense of New Orleans.

Resolved, etc., That the thanks of Congress be, and they are hereby, given to Major-General Jackson, and, through him, to the officers and soldiers of the Regular Army, of the militia, and of the volunteers under his command, the greater proportion of which troops consisted of militia and volunteers suddenly collected together, for their uniform gallantry and good conduct conspicuously displayed against the enemy from the time of his landing before New Orleans until his final expulsion therefrom, and particularly for the valor, skill, and good conduct on the 8th of January last in repulsing, with great slaughter, a numerous British army, of chosen veteran troops, when attempting, by a bold and daring attack, to carry by storm the works hastily thrown up for the protection of New Orleans, and thereby obtaining a most signal victory over the enemy, with a disparity of loss on his part, unexampled in military annals.

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to cause to be struck a gold medal, with devices emblematical of this splendid achievement, and presented to Major-General Jackson as a testimony of the high sense entertained by Congress of his judicious and distinguished conduct on that memorable occasion.

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to cause the foregoing resolutions to be communicated to Major-General Jackson in such terms as he may deem best calculated to give effect to the objects thereof.

Approved February 27, 1815. (30th Cong., 3d sess., resolution 10.)

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, on January 21, 1815, General Jackson had "read at the head of each of the corps composing the line below New Orleans" an address, and amongst other things he spoke of this marvelous victory, which prompted the Congress to unanimously pass this resolution of thanks. General Jackson, in this address to his troops, in part said:

On the 8th of January the final effort was made. At the dawn of day the batteries opened and the columns advanced. Knowing that the volunteers from Tennessee and the militia from Kentucky were stationed on your left, it was there they directed their chief attack.

Reasoning always from false principles, they expected little opposition from men whose officers even were not in uniform, who were ignorant of the rules of dress, and who had never been caned into discipline. [Italics his.]

Fatal mistake! A fire incessantly kept up, directed with a calmness and unerring aim, strewed the field with the bravest officers and men of the column which slowly advanced according to the most approved rules of European tactics and was cut down by the untutored courage of American militia.

Unable to sustain this galling and unerring fire, some hundreds nearest the intrenchments called for quarter; the rest, retreating, were rallied at some distance, but only to make them a surer mark for the grape and canister shot of our artillery, which, without exaggeration, mowed down whole ranks at every discharge, and at length they precipitately retreated from the field.

Our right had only a short contest to sustain with a few rash men, who, fatally for themselves, forced their entrance into the unfinished redoubt on the river.

They were quickly dispossessed, and this glorious day terminated with a loss to the enemy of their commander in chief and one major-general killed, another major-general wounded, and the most experienced and bravest of their officers, and more than 3,000 men killed, wounded, and missing, while our ranks, my friends, were thinned only by the loss of 7 of our brave companions killed and 6 disabled by wounds—wonderful interposition of heaven! Unexampled event in the history of war!

Let us be grateful to the God of battles, who has directed the arrows of indignation against our invaders, while he covered with his protecting shield the brave defenders of their country.

After this unsuccessful and disastrous attempt, their spirits were broken, their force was destroyed, and their whole attention was employed in providing the means of escape. This they have effected; leaving their heavy artillery in our power, and many of their wounded to our clemency. The consequences of this short, but decisive, campaign are incalculably important. The pride of our arrogant enemy humbled, his forces broken, his leaders killed, his insolent hopes of our disunion frustrated, his expectation of rioting in our spoils and wasting our country changed into ignominious defeat, shameful flight, and a reluctant acknowledgment of the humanity and kindness of those whom he had doomed to all the horrors and humiliation of a conquered state.

I have before me, Mr. Chairman, the speeches delivered in the House in February, 1815, touching upon this resolution and upon this wonderful military feat of our forces. Mr. Troop, of Georgia, reported the resolution. He said:

That he congratulated the House on the return of peace; if the peace be honorable, he might be permitted to congratulate the House on the glorious termination of the war. He might be permitted to congratulate them on the glorious termination of the most glorious war ever waged by any people. To the glory of it General Jackson and his gallant army had contributed not a little. I can not, sir, perhaps language can not, do justice to the merits of General Jackson and the troops under his command, or to the sensibility of the House, I will therefore forbear to trouble the House with the usual prefatory remarks; it is a fit subject for the genius of Homer.

But there was a spectacle connected with this subject upon which the human mind would delight to dwell—upon which the human mind could not fail to dwell with peculiar pride and exultation. It was the yeomen of the country marching to the defense of the city of Orleans, leaving their wives and children and firesides at a moment's warning. On the one side, committing themselves to the bosom of the mother of rivers; on the other, taking the route of the trackless and savage wilderness for hundreds of miles. Meeting at the place of rendezvous; seeking, attacking, and beating the enemy in a pitched battle; repulsing three desperate assaults with great loss to him; killing, wounding, and capturing more than 4,000 of his force, and finally compelling him to fly precipitately the country he had boldly invaded. The farmers of the country triumphantly victorious over the conquerors of the conquerors of Europe. "I came, I saw, I conquered," says the American husbandman, fresh from his plow.

The proud veteran who triumphed in Spain and carried terror into the warlike population of France was humbled beneath the power of my arm. The God of Battles and of Righteousness took part with the defenders of their country, and the foe was scattered before us as chaff before the wind. It is, indeed, a fit subject for the genius of Homer, of Ossian, or Milton.

That militia should be beaten by militia is of natural and ordinary occurrence; that regular troops should be beaten by militia is not without example; the examples are as numerous, or more numerous, in our own country than in any other; but that regular troops, the best disciplined and most veteran of Europe, should be beaten by undisciplined militia, with the disproportion of loss of a hundred to one, is, to use the language of the commanding general, almost incredible. The disparity of the loss, the equality of force, the difference in the character of the force, all combine to render the battle of the 8th of January at once the most brilliant and extraordinary of modern times. Nothing can account for it but the rare merits of the commanding general and the rare patriotism and military ardor of the troops under his command.

Glorious, sir, as are these events to the American arms, honorable as they are to the American character, they are not more glorious and honorable than are the immediate consequences full of usefulness to the country. If the war had continued the men of the country would have been inspired with a noble ardor and a generous emulation in defense of the country; they would have struck terror into the invader, and given confidence to the invaded. Europe has seen that to be formidable on the ocean we need but will it. Europe will see that to be invincible on land it is only necessary that we judiciously employ the means which God and nature have bountifully placed at our disposal. The men of Europe, bred in camps, trained to war, with all the science and all the experience of modern war, are not a match for the men of America taken from the closet, the bar, the court-house, and the plow. If, sir, it be pardonable at any time to indulge the sentiments and feelings, it may be deemed pardonable on the present occasion.

Mr. Robertson, a Member of Congress from Louisiana—and I dare say an ancester of the present Member from Louisiana of the same name, the Hon. SAM ROBERTSON—said:

Mr. Speaker, representing alone on this floor an interesting part of our country, saved by heroism unmatched from horrors which can not be described, I shall be excused for expressing my admiration of General Jackson, his great achievements, and the splendid battles which we now commemorate.

He then spoke of the fidelity of the Louisiana French to Jackson in this crisis. Many of them that came under the command of General Jackson were French or of French descent, and it was expected that they would not faithfully fight. Yet they not only did that, but this same Congress passed a resolution of thanks specially to the people of Louisiana for the great assistance they gave General Jackson on this occasion.

Mr. Robertson then continues in describing Jackson's army and his rough breastworks:

Hasty levies of half-armed, undisciplined militia from the interior of our vast continent, from the banks of the Tennessee, the Cumberland, and the Ohio, traversing wide and trackless regions, precipitate themselves to the scene of conflict, resolute to defend their distant brethren from the dangers with which they are menaced. There the hardy sons of the West, with the yeomanry of the adjacent territory and the invaded State, with a handful of regulars and a few armed vessels, constituted that force from which the tremendous armament of our enemy was to experience the most signal overthrow the world has ever witnessed. But Jackson was their leader, and though inexpert in scientific warfare they were animated by something more valuable than discipline, more irresistible than all the energy which mere machinery can display; they were animated by patriotism, by that holy enthusiasm which surmounts all difficulties and points the way to triumph. Happy if a parallel to their conduct may be found. It must be looked for in the achievements of those who, like themselves, fought for the liberties of their country. History records, to the consolation of freemen, that the Poles, unarmed and ignorant of tactics, beat the veteran troops of Frederick and Catharine in many pitched battles, never less than three times their numbers, but their leader was Kosciusko. In the early stages of the Revolution the peasantry of France, under Custine and Du Mourier, repulsed from their soil the disciplined thousands of the Duke of Brunswick; but it was not the Poles nor the Frenchmen; it was love of country. It was the cause.

He speaks of the 8th of January in these words:

On the 8th of January, a day destined to form an era in history, this army of invincibles, led on by gallant chiefs, advanced to the charge with firm step, according to methods most approved—trenches hastily thrown up, defended by what they considered a mob, a vagabond militia, promised an enterprise destitute alike of hazard and of honor. They were met by an incessant and murderous discharge of musketry and artillery; the whole line was a continuous sheet of fire; intrepidity stood appalled, their generals slain, the ditch filled, the field strewed with the dying and the dead; a miserable remnant of their thousands fled back to their intrenchments. The battle closed, a battle whose character, from the nature of the troops engaged and the disparity of loss, is the most wonderful, whose effects are as important, as any that was ever fought. And now we are invited to the contemplation of a scene which reflects immortal honor on the inhabitants of New Orleans and, by contrast, eternal shame on the enemy.

The dead were interred, the agonies of the dying assuaged, the wounded relieved; that property which was to have been given up to plunder was willingly yielded to their wants, and the very individuals, the marked victims of their licentiousness, vied with each other in extending to them every proof of tenderness and humanity.

Mr. Speaker, I am reminded in reading that paragraph of one of the things that made the troops under Jackson fight so. The enemy said victory meant "booty and beauty" to them. It meant not only plunder, but invasion of all that is sacred to you—wife and daughters—and yet so humane were the soldiers of Jackson—the Tennesseans, the Kentuckians, and the Mississippians—who fought that battle and the people of New Orleans that they cared for the wounded and they buried the dead, and Jackson secured before the battle ended a suspension of the fight in one place to attend to this humane duty. Mr. Chairman, just a few steps more in this great debate about this resolution and then I am done.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended ten minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chairman would state to the gentleman that the time is controlled by the gentleman from Iowa and the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. HAY. I yield the gentleman ten minutes.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Ingersoll, from the great State of Pennsylvania, on this occasion said:

Mr. Speaker, I regret that these resolutions require any amendment. I am persuaded, however, that their final passage will be unanimous. The House will excuse me, I hope, if I indulge myself in a few observations on this occasion. I speak impromptu, sir, without premeditation—I have found it impossible to think—I have been able only to feel these last three days. The unexpected, the grateful termination of the glorious struggle we have just concluded is calculated to excite emotions such as can be understood by those only who can feel them.

For the first time during this long, arduous, and trying session we can all feel alike—we are all of one mind—all hearts leap to the embraces of each other. Such a spectacle as that now exhibited by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America was never presented to the world before.

While the Senate are ratifying a treaty of peace, the House of Representatives are voting heartfelt thanks to those noble patriots, those gallant citizen-soldiers who have crowned that peace with imperishable luster. The terms of the treaty are yet unknown to us. But the victory at New Orleans has rendered them glorious and honorable, be they what they may. They must be honorable under such a termination of the war.

Those commissioners who have afforded us such signal credentials of their firmness heretofore, can not possibly have swerved. The Government has not betrayed its trust. The nation now can not be discredited. It has done its duty and is above disgrace.

Within five and thirty years of our national existence we have achieved a second acknowledgment of our national sovereignty.

In the war of the Revolution we had allies in arms, reinforcements from abroad on our own soil, and the wishes of all Europe on our side.

But in this late conflict we stood single-handed. Not an auxiliary to support us, not a bosom in Europe that dared beat on our behalf, not one but what was constrained to stifle its hopes, if it entertained any in our favor. The treaty signed at Paris on the 30th of last May placed us in a situation of the utmost emergency.

Mr. Chairman, peace had been agreed to before the battle of New Orleans had been fought, but Jackson did not know it, nor did the English generals; otherwise this battle would not have been fought.

Mr. Chairman, I must be brief. I love to read after those old statesmen—the old patriots. It is well for us to quit reading a whole lot of modern trash and "go away back up the creek" and read the words of patriots who were unbought and unpurchasable, who would not sell their independence, their own thoughts, their own belief, their influence, or their power of speech for pelf or power. [Applause.] Hence I have read these resolutions and from those old speeches of 1815, which you seem to enjoy.

The victory of Jackson and his troops, to use a short expression, "set up" this country, and, as one of these speakers said, made it a "sovereign" in the eyes of the world. This, Jackson's victory, has compelled the world to respect American arms—the Stars and Stripes—as no other one military act has done.

Before this I should have said there was only one known soldier who deserted from Jackson's army. He went over and told the English where he thought the weak places in Jackson's forces were, and I find in a little red-backed book somebody sent me to-day, entitled "An Official and Full Detail of the Battle of New Orleans," by Maj. B. M. Davis, a footnote that states that as a fact, as follows:

This man was the only deserter from Jackson's army. He told Sir Edward where the weakest parts of the American lines were, having nothing but Tennessee and Kentucky militia to defend it. The principal column attacked that point. After the defeat they railed at the deserter and hung him.

No one can blame the British for that hanging. It is rather remarkable enough were left alive to make a good job of it.

I read now, Mr. Chairman, from a fellow-citizen from the city of Nashville, Col. Arthur S. Colyar, who has recently written a book entitled "The Life and Times of Andrew Jackson." This splendid old man—statesman, lawyer, patriot, and author—son of a Kings Mountain hero, still survives and will be out to-night, I dare say, at the Hermitage Club, Nashville, where the Ladies' Hermitage Association, which takes care of the "Hermitage," where Jackson lived and died, will celebrate the victory of New Orleans, as they do annually.

Indeed, he will not only be out to-night, but I dare say he will be out to-morrow, for he is still an active practitioner at the Nashville bar, though about 84 years of age. Here is what he says about this marvelous victory of Jackson:

The battle of the 8th of January is a mystery. It is difficult to believe the well-established facts.

That is what Jackson himself said when he reported only 6 killed on the 8th of January.

Colonel Colyar continues:

Historians have been slow to admit the facts as they are. In these chapters I am undertaking to account for this marvelous triumph by untrained militia over one of the best armies England ever sent into the field, and I trust my readers will not be impatient to have me reach that memorable day in our history, because to know and be satisfied about the result of the 8th and the complete triumph of General Jackson, contending with more than double his number, and how it was done, the whole facts must be given, though it may seem tedious. No writer that I have found has satisfactorily accounted for this marvelous chapter in war. Jackson, by a generalship that has no counterpart, whipped this great battle before he got to it. If I take what may seem to be more time than is necessary in reaching the final struggle, let it be remembered that nothing like it is recorded in history.

Two thousand dead British and less than a dozen men lost on the American side is the wonder in war's record, the loss from the time of landing being more than 3,000.

Colonel Colyar then quotes at length from Jackson and New Orleans, by Walker, who graphically describes Jackson's troops between December 28, 1814, and the 1st of January, 1815, when the two armies were confronting each other on a level plain, as follows:

These wily frontiersmen, habituated to the Indian mode of warfare, never missed a chance of picking up a straggler or sentinel. Clad in their dusky, brown homespun, they would glide unperceived through the woods and, taking a cool view of the enemy's lines, would cover the first Briton who came within range of their long, small-bored rifles. Nor did they waste their ammunition. Whenever they drew a bead on any object it was certain to fall. The cool indifference with which they would perform the most daring acts would be amazing.

Mr. Chairman, those men fought with flintlock guns, with shotguns, and with the squirrel rifles, such as they could hurriedly gather together in Tennessee and Kentucky and Mississippi, and accomplished this wonderful victory over the pride of British troops.

How much, Mr. Chairman, since then the burden has increased upon the American people! We have been benefited by the fruits of that great victory as individuals and as a nation. We have millions and millions of money with which to buy and make the greatest, strongest, and most dangerous guns and men-of-war. How much greater now, in time of peace, is the responsibility on us to avoid war. Our ability is greater now to do so than ever before. Let us be actually at peace with all the world; speed the day by our example and by our teachings to at least a gradual removal of the causes of war—thus bar all its evils at a near day. Let us aid other countries that have been struggling so long at the mouth of the cannon and in front of the bloody bayonet for the same glorious principles and privileges which Jackson and his troops on the 8th day of January fought for, and that we, their children, are enjoying here to-day, but which we can aid others to get without bloodshed. [Applause.]

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. CURRIER, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 23551) making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bills:

H. R. 2315. An act granting a pension to Miranda Birkhead;
H. R. 2978. An act granting a pension to Amanda M. Webb;
H. R. 4292. An act granting a pension to George W. Kelley;
H. R. 9107. An act granting a pension to James W. Russell;
H. R. 9465. An act granting a pension to Ella Q. Parrish;
H. R. 10814. An act granting a pension to Eugene A. Myers;
H. R. 11483. An act granting a pension to Maria Niles;
H. R. 12517. An act granting a pension to William Bays;
H. R. 14144. An act granting a pension to Allen M. Cameron;
H. R. 16342. An act granting a pension to Matilda Foster;
H. R. 16747. An act granting a pension to Sherman Jacobs;
H. R. 17481. An act granting a pension to Eliza F. Wadsworth;
H. R. 17918. An act granting a pension to Walter S. Harman;
H. R. 19483. An act granting a pension to Lydia A. Patnaude;
H. R. 1871. An act granting an increase of pension to Alonzo Cooper;
H. R. 2715. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Martine;
H. R. 3338. An act granting an increase of pension to Lafayette Franks;
H. R. 4205. An act granting an increase of pension to Amanda W. Ritchie;
H. R. 4689. An act granting an increase of pension to James Reeder;
H. R. 4690. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Slinger;
H. R. 4707. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Pitman;
H. R. 5728. An act granting an increase of pension to William Harvey;
H. R. 5846. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Chandler;
H. R. 6956. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry L. Johnson;
H. R. 7580. An act granting an increase of pension to James W. Stewart;
H. R. 7719. An act granting an increase of pension to George Fetterman;
H. R. 8273. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Pearson;
H. R. 8481. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard Callaghan;
H. R. 8712. An act granting an increase of pension to Josiah Hall;
H. R. 9262. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Farrar;
H. R. 9836. An act granting an increase of pension to Dier Collett;
H. R. 11142. An act granting an increase of pension to James McQuade;
H. R. 12128. An act granting an increase of pension to Dennis A. Litzinger;
H. R. 12190. An act granting an increase of pension to Milton R. Dungan;
H. R. 12339. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles T. Murray;
H. R. 12482. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel B. McLean;
H. R. 12667. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Weber;
H. R. 13057. An act granting an increase of pension to James S. Salsberry;
H. R. 14199. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ewing;
H. R. 14480. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Moore;
H. R. 14537. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert B. Crawford;
H. R. 14680. An act granting an increase of pension to Sampson Parker;
H. R. 15619. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel W. Atkinson;
H. R. 15620. An act granting an increase of pension to David D. Owens;
H. R. 15713. An act granting an increase of pension to William McCrea;
H. R. 16211. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Montgomery;
H. R. 16397. An act granting an increase of pension to Allie Williams;
H. R. 16513. An act granting an increase of pension to Bridget M. Duffy;
H. R. 16741. An act granting an increase of pension to William J. Girvan;
H. R. 16748. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucius C. Fletcher;
H. R. 16856. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph McBride;
H. R. 17051. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Riley;
H. R. 17675. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonas M. Sees;
H. R. 17691. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Henrie;
H. R. 17874. An act granting an increase of pension to Roseanna Hughes;
H. R. 18018. An act granting an increase of pension to David Evans;
H. R. 18045. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Webb;
H. R. 18066. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander M. Fergus;
H. R. 18113. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa M. Sees;
H. R. 18193. An act granting an increase of pension to Walden Kelly;
H. R. 18214. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ingram;
H. R. 18227. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine F. Fitzgerald;

H. R. 18343. An act granting an increase of pension to John N. Oliver;
H. R. 18363. An act granting an increase of pension to Rudolph Bentz;
H. R. 18403. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Jane Ragan;
H. R. 18429. An act granting an increase of pension to David Mitchell;
H. R. 18493. An act granting an increase of pension to George H. Reeder;
H. R. 18705. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas T. Page;
H. R. 18860. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Anderson;
H. R. 19080. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick Fienop;
H. R. 19101. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah C. A. Scott;
H. R. 19119. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Osborn;
H. R. 19161. An act granting an increase of pension to Marcus D. Tenney;
H. R. 19162. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Van Tine;
H. R. 19174. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha A. Billings;
H. R. 19215. An act granting an increase of pension to John Lingenfelder;
H. R. 19256. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa J. Birthright;
H. R. 19293. An act granting an increase of pension to William Colvin;
H. R. 19298. An act granting an increase of pension to Job B. Crabtree;
H. R. 19300. An act granting an increase of pension to Phebe Easley;
H. R. 21408. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the keeping of employment agencies in the District of Columbia where fees are charged for procuring employment or situations," approved June 19, 1906;
H. J. Res. 196. Joint resolution relating to the construction of a bridge at Fort Snelling, Minn.;
H. R. 21678. An act to provide for the extension of time within which homestead entrymen may establish their residence upon certain lands which were heretofore a part of the Crow Indian Reservation, within the counties of Yellowstone and Rosebud, in the State of Montana;
H. R. 19321. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Turner;
H. R. 19318. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Rivers;
H. R. 19319. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Spruell;
H. R. 19320. An act granting an increase of pension to Louise J. Pratt;
H. R. 19322. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Isabella Rykard;
H. R. 19323. An act granting an increase of pension to Orlando L. Levy;
H. R. 19324. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan M. Long;
H. R. 19325. An act granting an increase of pension to George Oppel;
H. R. 19326. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret R. Vandiver;
H. R. 19357. An act granting an increase of pension to Anna Lamar Walker;
H. R. 19359. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi Brader;
H. R. 19404. An act granting an increase of pension to Elias S. Falkenburg;
H. R. 19415. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Ann Reavis;
H. R. 19416. An act granting an increase of pension to Antonio Macello;
H. R. 19463. An act granting an increase of pension to Emma L. Patterson;
H. R. 19503. An act granting an increase of pension to David S. Jones;
H. R. 19504. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Walker;
H. R. 19511. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander Dixson;
H. R. 19514. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Stimpson;
H. R. 19529. An act granting an increase of pension to Nancy Elizabeth Hutcheson;
H. R. 19530. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles P. Gray;
H. R. 19534. An act granting an increase of pension to Noah Ressequie;
H. R. 19587. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha Ann Jones;
H. R. 19601. An act granting an increase of pension to John E. Kingsbury;
H. R. 19611. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Kinkerly;
H. R. 19626. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Campbell;
H. R. 19743. An act granting an increase of pension to W. P. McMichael;
H. R. 19744. An act granting an increase of pension to George Casper Homan Hummel, alias George C. Homan;
H. R. 19819. An act granting an increase of pension to Johanna Kearney;
H. R. 19889. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Melson;
H. R. 19922. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Sutherland;
H. R. 4554. An act to remove the charge of absence without leave and reported desertion from the military record of J. F. Wisnewski; and
H. R. 21200. An act to authorize the county of Allegheny, in the State of Pennsylvania, to construct a bridge across the Allegheny River in Allegheny County, Pa.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent,
Mr. RAINEY was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of James T. Dodson, H. R. 3458, Forty-ninth Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.
Mr. SMITH of Kentucky, to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of the estate of Levi Fields, H. R. 702, Fifty-sixth Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.
Mr. DOVENER, to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of James A. Smith, H. R. 7864, Forty-eighth Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.
The motion was agreed to.
Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:
A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting a statement as to the necessity of refunding certain securities held by the Treasury Department for the benefit of the South Carolina school fund—to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.
A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy submitting an estimate of appropriation for water-system extension at naval station, Guantanamo, Cuba—to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.
A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for refund to G. H. La Fountaine & Co., of Plattsburg, N. Y.—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.
A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of plans and estimates of cost of navigable waterway from Lockport, Ill., to St. Louis, Mo.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.
A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of Newport Harbor, Rhode Island—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.
A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, a statement as to the employment of civil engineers in river and harbor works for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1906—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, submitting a statement of appointments, promotions, and changes in salaries paid from lump sums in his Department—to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, submitting a draft of legislation for permitting a patent in fee simple to be issued to Kaw pa she no quah, or Esta Beaver, a Peoria allottee—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bill of the following title was reported from committee, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Calendar therein named, as follows:

Mr. DAVEY, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22338) to bridge Bayou Bartholomew, in Louisiana, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6053); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 23122) granting an increase of pension to Melissa D. Whitman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5886); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 23133) granting an increase of pension to John Cowan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5887); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22932) granting an increase of pension to Bryngel Severson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5888); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22926) granting a pension to Louisa Bartlett, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5889); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22858) granting an increase of pension to John A. Henry, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5890); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22757) granting an increase of pension to Joshua E. Hyatt, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5891); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22711) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Kures, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5892); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22706) granting an increase of pension to William Smoker, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5893); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22447) granting an increase of pension to Frank Schadler, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5894); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22238) granting an increase of pension to James Stinson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5895); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21915) granting an increase of pension to John A. Smith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5896); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21648) granting an increase of pension to Michael Gaus, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5897); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21603) granting an increase of pension to Calvin S. Mullins, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5898); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21280) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Cain, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5899); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21270) granting an increase of pension to Ellen Sullivan, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5900); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20931) granting an increase of pension to John N. Shear, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5901); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20733) granting an increase of pension to Oscar Andrews, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5902); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20188) granting an increase of pension to John H. McCain, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5903); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19832) granting an increase of pension to George W. Smith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5904); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Commitee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19401) granting an increase of pension to Campbell Cowan, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5905); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18574) granting an increase of pension to Levi Miles, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5906); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14995) granting an increase of pension to James H. Bell, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5907); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4346) granting an increase of pension to T. H. B. Schooling, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5908); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2175) granting an increase of pension to James W. Bliss, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5909); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20730) granting an increase of pension to John Carpenter, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5910); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 21913) granting an increase of pension to Henry Pieper, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5911); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22237) granting an increase of pension to Nathan Lawson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5912); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22445) granting an increase of pension to Adaline T. Fisher, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5913); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 22710) granting an increase of pension to Nelson Cornell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5914); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2826) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Prochel, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5915); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 10) granting an increase of pension to Roswell Prescott, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5916); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 123) granting an increase of pension to William M. Morgan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5917); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 480) granting an increase of pension to Silas A. Reynolds, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5918); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 677) granting an increase of pension to Albert G. Peabody, jr., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5919); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 679) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Kelly, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5920); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 768) granting an increase of pension to William H. Rhoads, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5921); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 771) granting an increase of pension to Samuel G. Kreidler, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5922); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 774) granting an increase of pension to August Krueger, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5923); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 831) granting an increase of pension to Isaac G. Clark, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5924); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1257) granting an increase of pension to Patrick O'Day, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5925); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1347) granting a pension to Martha W. Pollard, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5926); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1493) granting an increase of pension to Cathrin Huff, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5927); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1857) granting an increase of pension to William Vantilburgh, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5928); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1891) granting an increase of pension to Charles F. M. Morgan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5929); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1941) granting an increase of pension to Elvira A. Kelly, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5930); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2249) granting an increase of pension to George W. Smith, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5931); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2541) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Murray, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5932); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2563) granting a pension to Isaac Carter, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5933); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2643) granting an increase of pension to James H. Thrasher, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5934); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2669) granting an increase of pension to Winfield S. Ramsay, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5935); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2734) granting an increase of pension to John R. Conyngham, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5936); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2737) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Hains, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5937); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2749) granting an increase of pension to John H. Brooks, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5938); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2794) granting an increase of pension to John H. Allison, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5939); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3220) granting an increase of pension to Wilbur H. Clark, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5940); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3221) granting an increase of pension to Robert Mills, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5941); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3671) granting an increase of pension to Louis Castinette, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5942); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3763) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Baker, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5943); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3767) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Turner, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5944); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3931) granting an increase of pension to Fanny A. Pearsons, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5945); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4032) granting an increase of pension to Solomon Craighton, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5946); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4053) granting an increase of pension to William A. Smith, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5947); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4127) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Paine, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5948); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4406) granting an increase of pension to Susan N. Fowler, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5949); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4771) granting an increase of pension to George R. Turner, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5950); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4772) granting an increase of pension to Gertrude McNeil, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5951); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4894) granting an increase of pension to Robert Ramsey, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5952); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4979) granting an increase of pension to Don C. Smith, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5953); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5067) granting an increase of pension to Martin Schultz, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5954); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5073) granting an increase of pension to Daniel G. Smith, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5955); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5156) granting an increase of pension to Granville F. North, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5956); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5176) granting an increase of pension to Lewis C. Janes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5957); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5443) granting an increase of pension to James D. Merrill, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5958); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5493) granting an increase of pension to Marcus Wood, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5959); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5502) granting an increase of pension to John B. Coyle, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5960); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5573) granting an increase of pension to Gustavus A. Thompson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5961); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5599) granting an increase of pension to Dennis Flaherty, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5962); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5685) granting an increase of pension to James M. Jenkins, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5963); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5725) granting an increase of pension to Alonzo S. Prather, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5964); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5727) granting an increase of pension to Lucius Rumrill, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5965); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5740) granting an increase of pension to Jared Ayer, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5966); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5741) granting an increase of pension to Amelia M. Hawes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5967); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5771) granting a pension to Mary E. Thompson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5968); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5823) granting an increase of pension to Nelson Virgin, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5969); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5826) granting an increase of pension to Isaac C. Phillips, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5970); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDWARDS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5892) granting an increase of pension to Daniel W. Redfield, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5971); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5963) granting an increase of pension to James Reed, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5972); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5980) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Smith, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5973); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6005) granting an increase of pension to John G. Bridaham, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5974); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6008) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Lamont, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5975); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6019) granting a pension to Harriet O'Donald, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5976); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6035) granting an increase of pension to John Fox, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5977); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6051) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Duncan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5978); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6052) granting an increase of pension to William E. Redmond, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5979); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6126) granting an increase of pension to James E. Speake, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5980); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6131) granting an increase of pension to Frances A. Jepson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5981); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6163) granting an increase of pension to William H. Westcott, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5982); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6186) granting an increase of pension to James L. Estlow, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5983); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6203) granting an increase of pension to Francis W. Crommett, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5984); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6232) granting an increase of pension to John L. Anthony, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5985); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6238) granting an increase of pension to Hugh S. Strain, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5986); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6239) granting an increase of pension to Kate M. Miner, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5987); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6250) granting an increase of pension to Alice G. Clark, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5988); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6267) granting an increase of pension to Denis A. Manning, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5989); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6347) granting an increase of pension to Edward R. Cunningham, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5990); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6353) granting an increase of pension to Dolores S. Foster, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5991); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6429) granting an increase of pension to Mary L. Beardsley, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5992); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6438) granting an increase of pension to Martha J. Haller, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5993); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6466) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Moser, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5994); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6485) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Cook, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5995); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6506) granting an increase of pension to Henry Z. Bowman, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5996); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6537) granting an increase of pension to William Eppinger, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5997); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6560) granting an increase of pension to Reuben D. Dodge, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5998); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6561) granting an increase of pension to George W. Blair, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 5999); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6568) granting an increase of pension to Wilbur F. Hodge, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6000); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6569) granting an increase of pension to George Porter, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6001); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6572) granting an increase of pension to Aaron L. Roberts, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6002); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6574) granting an increase of pension to Maria H. Waggoner, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6003); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6576) granting an increase of pension to Michael Meyers, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6004); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6579) granting an increase of pension to Ezekiel Morrill, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6005); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6580) granting an increase of pension to Ella B. Greene, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6006); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6581) granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Lowell, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6007); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6583) granting an increase of pension to Abram P. Colby, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6008); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6585) granting an increase of pension to Amos Ham, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6009); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6586) granting an increase of pension to Wesley J. Ladd, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6010); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6591) granting an increase of pension to Henry Campbell, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6011); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6596) granting an increase of pension to Cyrus W. Cobb, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6012); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6597) granting an increase of pension to Frank H. Read, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6013); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6631) granting an increase of pension to George W. Hodgman, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6014); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6632) granting an increase of pension to William Davis, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6015); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6636) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Grover, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6016); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6645) granting an increase of pension to Timothy C. Stilwell, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6017); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6650) granting an increase of pension to John A. McGinty, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6018); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6705) granting an increase of pension to Holmes Clayton, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6019); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6707) granting an increase of pension to Stephen E. Lemon, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6020); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6709) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Shawver, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6021); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6712) granting an increase of pension to Orin Ingram, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6022); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6714) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Bolshaw, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6023); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6717) granting an increase of pension to Manasa T. Houser, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6024); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6718) granting an increase of pension to Augustus L. Holbrook, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6025); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6767) granting an increase of pension to John C. Brown, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6026); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6814) granting a pension to Alice Bosworth, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6027); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6819) granting an increase of pension to Nelson Bigalow, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6028); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6821) granting an increase of pension to Jonathan M. Adams, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6029); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6822) granting an increase of pension to Christopher Christopherson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6030); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6824) granting an increase of pension to Byron Canfield, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6031); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6825) granting an increase of pension to Thomas M. Roberts, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6032); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6826) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Turner, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6033); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6829) granting an increase of pension to Thomas P. Cheney, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6034); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6881) granting an increase of pension to Jefferson Bush, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6035); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6882) granting an increase of pension to Elisha H. Stephens, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6036); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6883) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. White, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6037); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6942) granting an increase of pension to William B. Dow, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6038); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DIXON of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6997) granting an increase of pension to William Kennedy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6039); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOLLIDAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 7065) granting an increase of pension to Lovisa Donaldson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6040); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 7077) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Hattan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6041); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 7160) granting an increase of pension to Kate Myers, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6042); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DEEMER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1240) granting an increase of pension to Dana W. Hartshorn, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6043); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. FULLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4389) granting an increase of pension to Florence B. Plato, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6044); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4909) granting an increase of pension to Louis Sidel, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6045); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5693) granting an increase of pension to Margaret L. Houlihan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6046); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6505) granting an increase of pension to Theodore M. Benton, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6047); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6514) granting an increase of pension to Alfred A. Stocker, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6048); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6558) granting an increase of pension to Samuel A. Pearce, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6049); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6723) granting an increase of pension to Agusta P. Morgan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6050); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6885) granting an increase of pension to William H. Anderson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6051); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BEALL of Texas, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4586) for the relief of Mrs. R. E. Miller, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 6052); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BANKHEAD: A bill (H. R. 23713) permitting the erection of a dam or dams across the Black Warrior River, Alabama, at Squaw shoals on said river—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SHERMAN: A bill (H. R. 23714) for the erection of a monument to the memory of Lieut. Commander George Washington De Long and his comrades who lost their lives in the Jeanette Arctic expedition—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. McGUIRE: A bill (H. R. 23715) granting the rights of citizenship to Indians in Oklahoma and Indian Territory, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. DALZELL: A bill (H. R. 23716) to amend section 4919 of the Revised Statutes of the United States to provide additional protection for owners of patents of the United States, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. OLCOTT: A bill (H. R. 23717) providing for the taxation of foreign insurance companies doing business in the United States—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CRUMPACKER: A bill (H. R. 23718) to authorize the Chicago, Lake Shore and South Bend Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Calumet River in the State of Indiana—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington: A bill (H. R. 23719) to amend an act entitled "An act for the protection of game in Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June 7, 1902—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. LOVERING: A bill (H. R. 23720) to aid the Council City and Solomon River Railroad Company—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. CHANEY: A bill (H. R. 23721) to appropriate $100,000 for the establishment of demonstration farms, for the investigation on farm practice, and the inauguration of systems of farm management throughout the United States—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. GRONNA: A bill (H. R. 23722) to amend an act entitled "An act for the withdrawal from bond, tax free, of domestic alcohol when rendered unfit for beverage or liquid medicinal uses by mixture with suitable denaturing materials," approved June 7, 1906—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BELL of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 23723) authorizing the erection of a post-office building at Buford, Ga.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23724) authorizing the erection of a post-office building at Commerce, Ga.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23725) authorizing the erection of a post-office building at Jefferson, Ga.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SMALL: A bill (H. R. 23726) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint a deputy collector of customs at Belhaven, N. C.—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BURTON of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 23727) for the establishment of a light-house and fog-signal station at Carbarandum Point, in the vicinity of Split Rock, on the north shore of Lake Superior, Minnesota—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 23728) for the resurvey of a portion of the east boundary of Wyoming—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. LEGARE: A resolution (H. Res. 679) increasing the compensation of the Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms of the House—to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ACHESON: A bill (H. R. 23729) granting an increase of pension to John Vandegrift—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BONYNGE: A bill (H. R. 23730) granting an increase of pension to Michael Banzhof—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BRADLEY: A bill (H. R. 23731) granting an increase of pension to Isaac W. Corgill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 23732) granting an increase of pension to Rosanna Kaogan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CAPRON: A bill (H. R. 23733) granting an increase of pension to Gifford M. Bridge—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23734) granting an increase of pension to Matthew N. Chappell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHAPMAN: A bill (H. R. 23735) granting an increase of pension to Henry C. Jones—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23736) granting an increase of pension to William H. H. Stout—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23737) granting an increase of pension to John A. Johnson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23738) granting an increase of pension to Cyrus Bryant—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23739) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Pillow—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23740) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin C. Swan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CRUMPACKER: A bill (H. R. 23741) granting an increase of pension to William P. Youkey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23742) granting an increase of pension to John L. Johnson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23743) granting a pension to Eva Whittleberry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DIXON of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 23744) granting an increase of pension to John O. Cravens—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DWIGHT: A bill (H. R. 23745) granting an increase of pension to N. W. Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EDWARDS: A bill (H. R. 23746) granting an increase of pension to Perry Wells—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23747) granting an increase of pension to Jesse M. Taylor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23748) granting an increase of pension to Emily J. Vanbeber—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23749) granting an increase of pension to Nancy Lipps—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23750) for the relief of J. B. Mason, Theo. G. Moren, D. R. Brock, and J. C. McKee, trustees of Laurel Seminary (now London Graded Common School No. 1), of London, Laurel County, Ky.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT: A bill (H. R. 23751) granting an increase of pension to Charles D. Moody—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FASSETT: A bill (H. R. 23752) granting an increase of pension to Elijah Hallett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FOWLER: A bill (H. R. 23753) granting an increase of pension to Chauncey Harris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23754) granting an increase of pension to William D. W. Miller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FRENCH: A bill (H. R. 23755) granting an increase of pension to David Vickers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23756) granting an increase of pension to John C. Stalker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23757) granting an increase of pension to Gideon M. Combs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULLER: A bill (H. R. 23758) granting an increase of pension to Oliver Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23759) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Spanton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GILBERT: A bill (H. R. 23760) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Todd—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23761) granting an increase of pension to Philip B. Thompson—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23762) granting an increase of pension to Adelaide Wagner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23763) granting an increase of pension to James Riley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GILHAMS: A bill (H. R. 23764) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Fisher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GOEBEL: A bill (H. R. 23765) granting an increase of pension to John H. H. Babcock—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GRAFF: A bill (H. R. 23766) granting an increase of pension to Alonzo Harter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23767) granting an increase of pension to Edward G. Rockhold—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAY: A bill (H. R. 23768) granting a pension to H. G. Shull—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HINSHAW: A bill (H. R. 23769) granting an increase of pension to Beulah Thompson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 23770) granting an increase of pension to Henry D. Combs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 23771) for the relief of Edward Simmons—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CLAUDE KITCHIN: A bill (H. R. 23772) granting an increase of pension to Temperance Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KLEPPER: A bill (H. R. 23773) granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Pierce—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23774) granting an increase of pension to James Kelley—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23775) granting a pension to Norma J. Henderson—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23776) removing charge of desertion from military record of James M. Smith—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FREDERICK LANDIS: A bill (H. R. 23777) granting an increase of pension to James Marshall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23778) granting an increase of pension to Henry Clapper—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 23779) granting a pension to Delia Wight—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23780) granting a pension to Hattie L. Benedict—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23781) granting a pension to Honora Higgins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LOWDEN: A bill (H. R. 23782) for the relief of Theophilus D. Hoffman—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McCALL: A bill (H. R. 23783) granting an increase of pension to George W. Buzzell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McGUIRE: A bill (H. R. 23784) for the relief of Rufus L. King—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MEYER: A bill (H. R. 23785) for the relief of Antonio Hook, late seaman United States Navy—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23786) for the relief of the heirs of the estate of Patrick Dooling, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MILLER: A bill (H. R. 23787) to provide for the division of a penalty recovered under the alien contract-labor law—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MOUSER: A bill (H. R. 23788) granting an increase of pension to Elza Cameron—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MUDD: A bill (H. R. 23789) for the relief of the McCall-Dinning Company, of Baltimore City—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. OLMSTED: A bill (H. R. 23790) granting an increase of pension to George Hemminger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 23791) granting an increase of pension to Calvin B. Fowlkes—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PRINCE: A bill (H. R. 23792) granting an increase of pension to Zenrial McCullock—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RANSDELL of Louisiana: A bill (H. R. 23793) granting an increase of pension to William Nelson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 23794) granting an increase of pension to John W. Suits—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RIORDAN: A bill (H. R. 23795) granting an increase of pension to Patrick McMahon—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SAMUEL: A bill (H. R. 23796) granting an increase of pension to Jacob S. Snyder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHACKLEFORD: A bill (H. R. 23797) granting an increase of pension to James D. Tomson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMALL: A bill (H. R. 23798) granting a pension to Thomas M. Davis—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23799) granting a pension to Mary E. Alford—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 23800) granting an increase of pension to Elijah Fentress—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 23801) granting an increase of pension to Steth M. Carter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SNAPP: A bill (H. R. 23802) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Brown—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPARKMAN: A bill (H. R. 23803) granting an increase of pension to David C. Jones—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23804) granting an increase of pension to Phoebe E. Sparkman—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: A bill (H. R. 23805) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Hamilton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TALBOTT: A bill (H. R. 23806) granting an increase of pension to William F. Barker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23807) granting an increase of pension to Robert K. Robinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TOWNE: A bill (H. R. 23808) granting an increase of pension to Henry Pond—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: A bill (H. R 23809) granting a pension to James M. Thurston—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23810) granting an increase of pension to Ira J. Everson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VREELAND: A bill (H. R. 23811) granting an increase of pension to Theron Cross—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 23812) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Dewhurst—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WASHBURN: A bill (H. R. 23813) granting an increase of pension to Edwin May—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILEY of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 23814) granting a pension to Mary E. Hoffman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of bills of the following titles; which were thereupon referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 13875) granting a pension to Ada Richards—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 22018) granting an increase of pension to Charles Sells—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 22625) granting an increase of pension to George Young—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 22709) granting a pension to Martha E. Muhlenfeld—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 22276) granting an increase of pension to Warren Sherwood—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petitions of various commercial bodies of Philadelphia, for improvement of harbor of Philadelphia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of Joint Executive Committee on Improvement of Harbor of Philadelphia, for a 35-foot channel in the Delaware—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ALLEN of New Jersey: Petitions of various commercial bodies of Philadelphia, for deepening Delaware River at Philadelphia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Mission Promoting Association, for remission of duty on lumber for rebuilding purposes in San Francisco—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of New Immigrants' Protective League, against certain obnoxious provisions of the Lodge-Gardner bill—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BELL of Georgia: Papers to accompany House bill 9321, for establishing a mint at Dahlonega, Ga.—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. BENNET of New York: Petition of Harlem Reporter and Bronx Chronicle, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BIRDSALL: Petition of the Courier, Waterloo, Iowa; the Daily Times and Tribune, Waterloo, Iowa, the Telegraph-Herald, Dubuque, Iowa, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of veteran soldiers of the civil war, for restoration of the Army canteen—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BROWNLOW: Petition of Hampton Council, No. 142, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Richmond Jones et al., prisoners of war in rebel prisons, for passage of pension bill introduced by Hon. JOHN DALZELL—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: Petition of Good Will Council, No. 56, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. CAPRON: Petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. CASSEL: Petition of Sylvania Council, No. 71, Daughters of Liberty, Marietta, Pa., favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. COOPER of Pennsylvania: Petition of New York State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, favoring restriction of immigration (S. 4403)—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Sanford D. Payne—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DALZELL: Memorandum to accompany bill to amend section 4919, Revised Statutes of the United States—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. DAWSON: Petition of citizens of Clinton, Iowa, for special pension for Mrs. James Tompkins, an Army nurse—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of Joint Executive Committee on Improvement of Harbor of Philadelphia, for 35-foot channel in Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ELLIS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles Sells (referred previously to Committee on Invalid Pensions)—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FLOYD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John Hurst and W. H. Linscott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Mrs. Celia Scott, widow of John G. Scott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Benjamin Maple—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FOSTER of Indiana: Petition of Iron Molders' Union No. 51, Evansville, Ind., against employment of Asiatics within Canal Zone—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Germania Maennerchor, against passage of Dillingham-Gardner bill—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. FOWLER: Petitions of citizens of Roselle Park, N. J., and citizens of Rahway, N. J., for the McCumber-Sperry-Tirrell bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of Evening Times, Elizabeth, N. J., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FULLER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles F. Connery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Thomas F. Adkin, for the Crumpacker bill relative to post-office fraud orders (previously referred to Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads)—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Oliver Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of A. J. Holmquist, for the Crumpacker bill (H. R. 16548) relative to postal fraud orders—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of F. E. Sterling, for the Garrett bill (H. R. 22476) relative to right to exchange of newspaper stock in trade (advertising) for railroad stock in trade (transportation)—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Thomas Spanton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GARRETT: Paper to accompany House bill 21399, authorizing a survey of Forked Deer River, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HINSHAW: Petition of Beatrice Commercial Club, for appropriation to enlarge post-office building at Beatrice, Nebr. (previously referred to Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads)—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HOUSTON: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Edward Judkins (previously referred to Committee on Invalid Pensions)—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska: Petition of General Protective Board of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Union Pacific Railway, against restriction of hours of labor on railways—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Omaha Commercial Club and Grain Exchange, for an appropriation for improvement of the Mississippi River at or near Omaha—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Ohio: Petition of Cigar Makers' Union, Canton, Ohio, against employment of Asiatic coolies in Panama Zone—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against utterances of the President relative to the Japanese in said city—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of The Telegram, Youngstown, Ohio, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Youngstown, Ohio, for investigation of Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of locomotive engineers and trainmen of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy system railways, Ottumwa, against restriction of hours of employment on railways—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. LAWRENCE: Petition of Evening Telegram, Holyoke, Mass., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEVER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of George Young (referred previously to Committee on Invalid Pensions)—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut: Petition of New Haven Chamber of Commerce, for establishment of forest reserves—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Honora Higgins, Hattie L. Benedict, and Delia A. Wight—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of Joint Executive Committee on Improvement of Harbor of Philadelphia, for 35-foot channel in Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LIVINGSTON: Paper to accompany bill for relief of William D. Edwards—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McCALL: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Frank R. Chisholm—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MANN: Petition of Bankers' Club, Chicago, for legislation in harmony with enunciations of currency commission of American Bankers' Association, sitting at Washington—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of Chicago Christian Endeavor Union, for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Chicago Typographical Union, No. 16, favoring investigation of status of women and child workers of the United States by Secretary of Commerce and Labor—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of Monmouth Commercial Club, favoring legislation for improvement of navigable streams in United States, especially upper Mississippi—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of The University of Chicago Press, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MEYER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Antonio Hook—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of heirs of Patrick Dooling—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania: Petition of various commercial bodies of Philadelphia, for deepening of the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. MORRELL: Petition of Joint Executive Committee, for the improvement of the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee: Petition of Union No. 4, A. S. M. W. I. A., of Memphis, Tenn., favoring merchant marine commission shipping bill passed by the Senate of the United States—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of Joint Executive Committee on the Improvement of the Harbor of Philadelphia, for deepening Delaware River to 35 feet—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of San Francisco Labor Council, against utterances of the President relative to Japanese in schools of said city—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. PRINCE: Petition of Republican Register, Galesburg, Ill., against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REYBURN: Petition of various commercial bodies of Philadelphia, for appropriation to deepen the Delaware River at Philadelphia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Philadelphia, for removal of duty on works of art—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RYAN: Petition of International Seamen's Union of America, against ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of various commercial bodies of Philadelphia, for deepening the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SCHNEEBELI: Petition of joint executive committee on improvement of harbor of Philadelphia, for deepening channel of the Delaware to 35 feet—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SHEPPARD: Paper to accompany bill for relief of B. O. Mahaffey and J. A. Cleveland—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petitions of citizens of Valleant, Ind. T.; citizens of Brookston, Tex.; Hon. Lee Cruce; Hon. Sidney Suggs, et al.; Hon. W. H. Murray; Governor Johnson, et al.; citizens of Tishomingo, Ind. T.; citizens of Atoka, Ind. T., and citizens of Paris, Tex., for appropriation to improve upper Red River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Edward J. Warner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Kentucky: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Elijah Fentress, Emanuel Sandusky, and E. F. Hacker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: Paper to accompany bill for relief of James E. Arnold—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. STERLING: Petition of News-Herald, Lincoln, Nebr., Pentegraph Printing and Stationery Company, and Lincoln Courier, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WADSWORTH: Petition of Fred L. Baker, Nunda, N. Y., for amending post-office laws so as to admit paper of certain size as fourth-rate matter—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WASHBURN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Edwin May—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WHARTON: Petition of Packing Trade Council, Chicago, for passage of bills H. R. 17562 and S. 5469, investigating social, moral, educational, and physical condition of women and child workers of the United States—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. WOOD of New Jersey: Petition of Daily True American, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, January 9, 1907.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. EDWARD E. HALE.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. GALLINGER, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal stands approved.

ALLOTMENT OF INDIAN LANDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs submitting the draft of an item of proposed legislation for the purpose of permitting a patent in fee simple to be issued to Esta Beaver, Peoria allottee No. 62, for lands allotted to her in Indian Territory; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

COMPILATION BY BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a compilation prepared by the Bureau of Insular Affairs consisting of all legislation enacted by the Fifty-eighth Congress from March 4, 1903, to March 3, 1905, pertaining to Alaska, Cuba, Guam, Philippine Islands, etc., together with all treaties and conventions entered into by the United States affecting any of this territory, and also all proclamations issued by the President concerning any of this territory, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition, which will be read.

The Secretary read the telegram, as follows:

SPOKANE, WASH., January 8.

President of United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas the increased cost of living is a condition and not a theory; and

Whereas the present salary of our national representatives is inadequate to the dignity and needs of the office; and

Whereas there is no power but Congress that can raise Congressional salaries; and

Whereas scruples of delicacy prevent our representatives from voting more money into their own pockets: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Spokane Chamber of Commerce in annual meeting assembled: That we would favor a salary for our United States Senators and Congressmen, exclusive of traveling expenses, of $8,000 per annum, and would recommend and urge that that sum be fixed by act of Congress now in session.

Resolved, That these resolutions be transmitted by wire to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives, with request that they be read in open session of each House, and that through the press we request every commercial organization throughout the United States to take similar action.

SPOKANE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
By F. E. GOODALL, President.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the telegram be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOPKINS presented memorials of sundry trainmen employed on the Pennsylvania lines in Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Chicago, Ill., praying that the Isthmian Canal Commission operate one-third of the Government shipping out of the Gulf ports, with New Orleans as the most practicable port; which was referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

He also presented petitions of sundry newspaper publishers of Clinton, Crystal Lake, Dwight, Harvard, Eureka, Pana, Morris, Pontiac, Grayville, Elgin, Monticello, Rockford, Newton, Duquoin, Bushnell, Greenville, Fairfield, Dahlgren, Flora, Reynolds, Mount Sterling, Nauvoo, Ashton, Marshall, and Morrison, all in the State of Illinois, praying for the enactment of legislation to permit newspapers to contract with railroads for transportation to be paid for in advertising at regular rates; which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. STONE presented a petition of Louis A. Craig Camp, Army of the Philippines, of Kansas City, Mo., praying for the enactment of legislation providing foreign campaign badges for all persons who served honorably in the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps in campaigns in foreign countries; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the Dark Tobacco Planters' Protective Association of Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia, praying for the enactment of legislation to repeal the tax on leaf tobacco; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of John E. Weber of the State of Missouri, praying for the enactment of legislation for the relief of Joseph V. Cunningham and other officers of the Philippine volunteers; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Sedalia, Mo., praying for the ratification of certain treaties for the enlargement of the jurisdiction of The Hague tribunal, and also for the enactment of legislation providing for an increase in the efficiency of the Navy; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Laredo, Slater, and Brookfield, all in the State of Missouri, praying for the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Kansas City and Stansberry, Mo., and of Omaha, Nebr., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Morley, Huntsville, St. Joseph, Thayer, Little Rock, Mount Vernon, Wentworth, Arcola, Hermann, Clinton, Mound City, Charleston, Green Ridge, Bakersfield, Bloomfield, Speed, Granby, and Elsberry, all in the State of Missouri, praying that an appropriation of $50,000,000 be made for river and harbor improvements in the United States, and particularly for the construction of a 14-foot waterway from the Lakes to the Gulf; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. OVERMAN presented a memorial of sundry citizens of the State of North Carolina, and a memorial of Local Division, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, of Asheville, N. C., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PILES presented a petition of sundry citizens of Shelton, Wash., praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the transportation of intoxicating liquors; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of sundry citizens of Casselton, N. Dak., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. DU PONT presented a petition of sundry citizens of Marshallton, Del., praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HEMENWAY presented a petition of the Associated Charities of South Bend, Ind., praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. SIMMONS presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Hickory, N. C., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Elizabeth City and Weldon, in the State of North Carolina, praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. PROCTOR presented a petition of Local Division No. 535, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, of St. Albans, Vt., praying for the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented memorials of sundry railway conductors, engineers, firemen, and brakemen of the Central Vermont Railway Company, of St. Albans, Vt., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. KNOX presented petitions of C. B. Sowash, chairman of the grievance committee of trainmen, Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, Pa.; of O. Irwin, representing the conductors, and of sundry employees of the northwest and southwest systems of Pennsylvania Railroad lines west of Pittsburg, Pa., praying for a modification of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of Local Lodge No. 179, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Pittsburg; of Local Lodge No. 94, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Carbondale; of Local Lodge No. 703, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Brownsville; of Local Lodge, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, of Meadville; of Local Lodge No. 633, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Pittsburg, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the so-called "sixteen-hour bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6810) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to amend section 2455 of the Revised Statutes of the United States,' approved February 26, 1895," approved June 27, 1906, reported it without amendment.

Mr. TALIAFERRO, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 362) granting an increase of pension to James M. Bullard, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 7295) granting an increase of pension to Gabriel Campbell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 7428) granting an increase of pension to Helen C. Lettenmayer; and

A bill (S. 5586) granting an increase of pension to Albert F. Pepoon.

Mr. TALIAFERRO, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 6226) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Mickler; and

A bill (S. 5699) granting an increase of pension to Adelaide D. Merritt.

GIFT OF SAILBOAT TO NAVAL ACADEMY.

Mr. HALE. I report back favorably from the Committee on Naval Affairs, without amendment, the bill (S. 7372) to authorize the acceptance by the Secretary of the Navy, as a gift, of a sailboat for the use of the midshipmen at the Naval Academy, and I submit a report thereon. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to accept as a gift, from a member of the family of the late Assistant Naval Constructor Joseph E. McDonald, a sailboat for the use of the midshipmen at the Naval Academy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMMITTEE ON VENTILATION AND ACOUSTICS.

Mr. KEAN, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. HALE on the 8th instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Select Committee on Ventilation and Acoustics be authorized to employ a messenger at $1,440 per annum, the same to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

JOANNA C. KELLEY.

Mr. KEAN, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. RAYNER on the 8th instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay, from the contingent fund of the Senate, to Joanna C. Kelley, widow of T. A. Kelley, late a fireman in the employ of the Senate of the United States, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his demise, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BURROWS introduced a bill (S. 7645) to grant an extension of certain letters patent to Will F. Hoyt, of Dowagiac, Mich.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 7646) providing for the establishment of a public park at Fort Thayer, in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. McENERY introduced a bill (S. 7647) for the relief of the estate of Joseph L. Richardson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HOPKINS introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7648) granting an increase of pension to Joseph H. Suits;

A bill (S. 7649) granting an increase of pension to William Elias; and

A bill (S. 7650) granting an increase of pension to Charles Kort.

Mr. SUTHERLAND introduced a bill (S. 7651) granting rights of way and easements for the construction, use, maintenance, and operation of roads, highways, canals, ditches, reservoirs, telephone and telegraph lines, and lines for the transmission of electric light and power within and through forest reserves on the public lands of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. STONE introduced a bill (S. 7652) granting an increase of pension to Daniel F. Lee; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CLAPP introduced a bill (S. 7653) for the relief of the Mille Lac band of Chippewa Indians of the State of Minnesota; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. McCUMBER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7654) granting an increase of pension to John Young;

A bill (S. 7655) granting an increase of pension to Francis G. Brown;

A bill (S. 7656) granting an increase of pension to Edwin R. Hill;

A bill (S. 7657) granting an increase of pension to Herman Grass; and

A bill (S. 7658) granting an increase of pension to Edward C. Gearey.

Mr. SIMMONS introduced a bill (S. 7659) to change the time of holding the United States district courts in the eastern district of North Carolina, and to provide for the appointment of a clerk of the courts at Washington, N. C.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7660) granting a pension to Julia Elgie; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 7661) for the relief of Mrs. A. M. Bacon; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. NELSON introduced a bill (S. 7662) granting a pension to Victoria Ficker; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FRYE introduced a bill (S. 7663) to increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Revenue-Cutter Service; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia:

A bill (S. 7664) to amend the code of law for the District of Columbia, and providing for the appointment of probation officers for adults; and

A bill (S. 7665) for the relief of John J. Sanborn.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7666) granting an increase of pension to True Sanborn, jr.;

A bill (S. 7667) granting a pension to Henry Lunn; and

A bill (S. 7668) granting an increase of pension to Henry H. Buzzell.

Mr. BULKELEY introduced a bill (S. 7669) to amend an act approved June 29, 1906, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission;" which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. DU PONT introduced a bill (S. 7670) granting a pension to Sarah E. Lungren; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TALIAFERRO introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 7671) granting an increase of pension to C. H. Alden;

A bill (S. 7672) granting an increase of pension to Elvina Adams; and

A bill (S. 7673) granting an increase of pension to William W. Jordan.

Mr. CLARK of Montana introduced a bill (S. 7674) to survey and allot the lands embraced within the limits of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and to open the surplus lands to settlement; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. FRYE introduced a bill (S. 7675) to establish a fish-cultural station on the Kennebec River, in the State of Maine; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

Mr. KNOX introduced a bill (S. 7676) to amend section 4919 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, to provide additional protection for owners of patents of the United States, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. WARREN introduced a bill (S. 7677) to appoint Warren C. Beach a captain in the Army and place him on the retired list; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE FOR HOMESTEAD SETTLERS.

Mr. HANSBROUGH introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 81) authorizing temporary leaves of absence for homestead settlers; which was read the first time by its title.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was read the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That homestead settlers upon the public domain, in those sections where climatic conditions and other causes of an unnatural nature exists resulting in personal hardship, are hereby granted a leave of absence from their land for a period of three months from the date of the approval of this resolution. All homesteaders seriously affected by such conditions or causes shall make application, supported by affidavit, setting forth the facts justifying the leave of absence applied for to the register and receiver of the land office of the district in which their land is situated, and settlers granted such leave shall forfeit no rights by reason of the absence allowed hereunder: Provided, That the period of such actual absence shall not be deducted from the full time of residence required by law.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted an amendment relative to the pay and allowances of professors of mathematics in the Navy, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment providing for an examination and survey of Pepperell Cove, Maine, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CLAPP submitted an amendment authorizing the issuance of sixty Springfield cadet rifles to the Indian school at Phoenix, Ariz., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WARREN submitted an amendment proposing that all lands allotted to Indians in severalty or reserved for their use in common, susceptible of irrigation, may be leased for a term not exceeding twenty-five years for cultivation under irrigation, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO RAILROAD EMPLOYEES BILL.

Mr. SCOTT submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 5133) to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

Mr. HANSBROUGH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 5133) to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

SUNDAY OPENINGS OF POST-OFFICES.

Mr. BURKETT submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Postmaster-General be directed to inform the Senate by what authority post-offices are required to be kept open on Sunday, together with the regulations of Sunday opening, as to the extent of the business that may be transacted, and also what the provisions are for clerical help, and whether postal clerks or carriers are required to work more than six days per week.

ISSUANCE OF LAND PATENTS.

Mr. CARTER submitted the following resolution, which was read:

Resolved, That under the homestead laws of the United States a duly qualified entryman furnishing competent evidence of full compliance with said laws and all rules and regulations promulgated by authority thereof is, in the absence of contest or of any charge or evidence of fraud or mistake, legally entitled to a patent for the land embraced in the entry as to which final proof has been so furnished, and no executive officer is authorized to forbid and prevent the issuance and delivery of such patent.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, at an early day I will ask the indulgence of the Senate for sufficient time to express certain views concerning an order issued by the Secretary of the Interior on the 18th day of last month prohibiting the issuance of patents under all laws of the United States, regardless of the conditions. I intend to make it plain, if I can, to the Senate that that order was illegal and unwarranted; that it was issued and is being executed in violation of law, and that the Land Office records show that the issuance of the order is wholly indefensible.

I ask that the resolution may lie on the table, and be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie on the table.

DISMISSAL OF THREE COMPANIES OF TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

Mr. PETTUS. I ask leave to call up House bill 21951, providing for the building of a bridge across a river in Alabama. It is a matter that requires some haste.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There was a unanimous-consent agreement yesterday that the resolution respecting the Brownsville matter should be taken up at the conclusion of the morning business. The Senator from Alabama asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, which will be read for the information of the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. If the Senator from Alabama will yield to me for a moment, I think we can avoid any conflict with the agreement made yesterday. I have just received a message from the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], stating that he is unable to be here to-day. He thinks he will be here to-morrow, and asks that the Brownsville matter may go over until to-morrow morning. I ask that the agreement under which the resolution went over until this morning may be continued until to-morrow morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent that the consideration of the resolution respecting the Brownsville matter may be postponed from this morning until to-morrow morning after the routine business.

Mr. FORAKER. To come up then.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. To come up after the close of the routine morning business to-morrow. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

TOMBIGBEE RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. PETTUS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 21951) to authorize the Alabama, Tennessee and Northern Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Tombigbee River, in the State of Alabama.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALE OF PROVISIONS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] asks that I shall yield to him, that he may have a very short bill considered, which I am pleased to do.

Mr. GALLINGER. I thank the Senator from North Dakota. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 6578) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a sealer and assistant sealer of weights and measures in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1895, and to amend an act amendatory thereof approved June 20, 1906.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to amend section 10 of the act approved March 2, 1895, and the act amendatory thereof approved June 20, 1906, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 10. No person shall sell or offer for sale anywhere in the District of Columbia any provisions or produce or commodities of any kind for a weight or measure greater than the actual or true weight or measure thereof; and all provisions, produce, or commodities of any kind shall be weighed by scales, weights, or balances, or measured in measures duly tested and sealed by the sealer or an assistant sealer of weights and measures: Provided, That berries, when offered for sale in an original package or basket containing a standard measure, may be sold in said package or basket without the same having been first tested and sealed; but in no case shall said basket be refilled for use in the sale of berries or produce of any kind whatsoever: And provided further, That poultry and vegetables, usually sold by the head or bunch, may be offered for sale and sold in other manner than by weight or measure; but in all cases where the person intending to purchase shall so desire and request, poultry shall be weighed, as hereinbefore prescribed: And provided further, That scales reported not in use shall be sealed down, and said seal shall not be broken except by authority of the sealer of weights and measures.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SERVICE PENSION BILL.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, the resolution relating to the Brownsville affairs having gone over for the day, I presume that that will leave the time between this period and 2 o'clock in the afternoon for such discussion as Senators may desire to make of the bill which I ask to bring up this morning. I sincerely hope that Senators will give the matter their attention and that such as may desire will give the Senate the benefit of the expressions of their opinion upon each phase of the bill.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 976) granting pensions to certain enlisted men, soldiers, and officers who served in the war of the rebellion, which was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, the subject of service pensions has been agitated more or less during the last ten or fifteen years, and it has demanded and received continuing and greater and ever greater consideration as the accumulating years have added to the distress and the destitution of a large number of the survivors of the great conflict.

There are few persons, Mr. President, who will not concede that at some period after the close of the civil war a general service pension bill should be enacted. Those who have given the subject more than casual consideration have contended that such a bill should have been enacted at least ten years ago. It may be barely possible that there may be those who consider that the time has not yet arrived for such character of legislation. The opinion of the Committee on Pensions, who expressed that opinion, as I remember, by a unanimous vote, is that the debt of gratitude which we owe to the survivors of the civil war ought not longer to be delayed.

This bill was reported to the Senate on the 2d day of April of last year. It has, therefore, been public property for more than nine months. It has been considered by the press generally throughout the States, and its provisions have been given considerable publicity; and I have yet to hear the first criticism from any source against any provisions of the bill. The only things that I have received in the shape of criticisms have been letters from private individuals whose cases fall without the provisions and benefits of the bill. I can only say to them that it seems to me we should not modify the bill to any great extent. We have followed the rules that have been followed in other legislation as to time in reference to pension acts, and if in the future it is proper to so modify a general service bill it can be done whenever the requirements become manifest.

Mr. President, I feel personally that there is a greater obligation for the payment of a general service pension to the survivors of the civil war than for the payment of a like pension to the survivors of any other war in the history of this nation or of any war which we will be liable to enter into. It not only required a different character of patriotism to furnish the material to carry on that war of more than four years, but it also required a different character and a more intense and fervent quality of patriotism to furnish the material to conduct such a war.

In the first place, Mr. President, the nation and the world can never overestimate the devotion of the armies of the Union in the battles for the suppression of the rebellion and the struggle for the upholding of the Union cause and to make us and continue us as one undivided nation.

More than one hundred years prior to 1776 the American people had become practically a separate nation, almost independent of the British Empire. Without those instrumentalities of international communication—steam and electricity—which bring all nations into neighborly fellowship, there had grown up on this side of the Atlantic practically a separate nation, with little affiliation with the mother country, and when the soldiers of 1776 were summoned to war they were required to do battle, not against Americans, not against the men of adjoining colonies, but practically against a foreign invader. They were defending their own rights and their own homes against invasion, and every man understands that it requires less to fire the emotion of patriotism into a fervent defense of home and of our own land than it does to carry on aggressive warfare into the land of the enemy. Not so were the conditions in the war of 1861 to 1865. Many a nation whose armies have failed in an aggressive warfare against inferior foes has won glorious victories in the defense of home against overwhelming odds.

If, therefore, I admire and honor the heroes of 1776 in their struggle for independence, if I admire the impulses of our Army in attempting to release and in succeeding in releasing themselves from a monarchical form of government which threatened the rights which had been guaranteed to all English-speaking people, how much greater must be my admiration for the men of 1861 to 1865, who left their own homes, who went into the land of the enemy and followed the flag during those four long years of desperate warfare that its honor might not be lessened and that its glory might not be diminished.

Now, Mr. President, not only this, but the men of 1865 were called upon to do battle not against a foreign foe, but against men of their own blood, men of their own character, men of their own fighting qualities, men as brave and as well organized as themselves, men as heroic and as equally patriotic, according to their ideas of the patriotism of that day, as were the soldiers of the Union Army. And not only this, they knew, Mr. President, when they entered into the war that they were not to stand behind forts to repel invasion, but that they were to be the invaders themselves. They knew that they were to be the aggressors all along the line, and that this aggression meant increase and disproportionate dangers. They knew that they were to battle father against son in the border warfare and brother against brother. Even the old Commonwealth of Kentucky furnished about 90,000 soldiers, I believe, to each one of the great contending armies. They knew in addition to that, Mr. President, that the ancestors of the men of the South had fought side by side with their ancestors in the great struggle for independence; that men of the South had fought side by side with their grandfathers in the war of 1812, shoulder to shoulder with their grandfathers and fathers and elder brothers in the war with Mexico, and that their ashes commingled on many battle plains.

I repeat, Mr. President, that it required a greater devotion to principle to carry on that war, as against Americans of our own blood, than it ever required to carry on any other war on the face of the earth, and that call was met with a patriotism and a devotion unexcelled in all the world's long history.

Now, Mr. President, the debt of gratitude which any nation owes to its soldiers who constitute its armies in any conflict must necessarily be measured by the sacrifice that is endured and by the results of that conflict and the devotion of those engaged in it. When I compare those conditions with the conditions of any other war in which we have been engaged, I have a right to insist that the soldiers of the war of 1861 to 1865 should not only receive equal consideration, but greater consideration than the soldiers of any other war. Even in our enlightened policy and notwithstanding the claim that we have dealt more liberally with the soldiers of the civil war than with the soldiers of any other war, I desire to demonstrate very briefly that in very many respects we have not dealt with them as liberally as we have with the soldiers of other wars.

Mr. President, it must be remembered that the soldiers of the Philippines or the Spanish war received at the close of that war a compensation for wounds and disabilities incurred in service equal to that which the enlightened policy, the greater wealth, and the sounder judgment of the nation had accorded to the soldiers of the civil war thirty or forty years after the expiration of that war. It must be remembered also that the small amounts which were paid at the close of the civil war in the shape of pensions for injuries received at that time were a mere bagatelle as compared with the amounts which are paid to-day to the young men who have just come out of the Spanish or the Philippine wars.

And not only is this the case, Mr. President, but the small $13 a month which was paid to the soldiers who fought during all of those long years was paid in a currency which, when compared with the standard of money at that time, was not equal to more than 50 per cent of its face value, and at a time, in addition, when even the common necessaries of life were more excessive in cost than they have ever been in the history of the United States. The amount received by the soldier of the civil war as he came out of that war, disabled by reason of it, did not purchase one-tenth of the comforts that the amount that is received by the soldier of this later war coming out under similar disabilities.

The country now, Mr. President, is wealthy. The Treasury is bursting with its load of coin. Under these conditions extravagances of every character are creeping into our legislation, extravagances which well might be abandoned until we have performed our entire duty toward the survivors of that war which made it possible that we have a country of this wealth and which could indulge in those extravagances.

Mr. President, in order to show the disparagement between the character of pensions that were granted at the close of the war of 1861 to 1865 and the war with Spain, I wish to give very briefly what was received by each soldier at the close of each of those respective wars under like disabilities. This is well worthy the consideration of every Senator, and can not but impress him with the conviction that his duty is at the present time to at least place the soldiers of the war of 1861 to 1865 on an equal footing with the soldiers of the late war.

Let us take some of the specific disabilities. The soldier of the civil war at the close of that war received for the loss of both hands $25 per month. The soldier of the Philippine war receives $100 per month for the same disability.

The soldier of the civil war received at the close of that war for the loss of both feet $20 per month. The soldier of the Philippines receives for the same disability $100 per month.

The soldier of the war of the rebellion received for the loss of the sight of both eyes $20 per month. The soldier of the war with Spain receives $100 per month.

For the loss of sight of one eye, the other eye being affected, the soldier of the war of the rebellion received $25; of the war with Spain $72 per month.

For the loss of one hand and one foot the soldier of the war of the rebellion received $20 per month. The soldier of the war with Spain receives $60 a month.

For the loss of an arm at or above the elbow or a leg at or above the knee the soldier of the civil war received $15 per month; the soldier of the war with Spain $46 per month.

For the loss of a leg at the hip joint the soldier of the first war received $15, of the latter, $55 per month.

For total disability in one hand or one foot the soldier of the former war received $20, of the latter war, $60 per month.

For an incapacity requiring regular aid and attendance the soldier of the war of the rebellion received $25; the soldier of the recent war receives $72.

For total deafness the soldier of the war of the rebellion received $13; the soldier of the war in the Philippines received $40.

Mr. President, the men who received these comparatively small sums received no greater relief until within a very few years ago. So if we should pass this pension bill which I am now discussing, which grants but $12 per month at the age of 62, $15 at the age of 70, and $20 at the age of 75, it would not by any possibility equal the amount that would be received during the life of the soldiers of the Philippine war, assuming that they will live as long as those of the civil war. If, therefore, we should grant this partial justice, comparing the two wars and what each of the soldiers would receive, there would still be an injustice to the survivors of the great civil war. Justice demands, Mr. President, that we equalize this matter as nearly as possible.

The subject has been discussed here, and a great many of the newspapers have taken it up, of an increase of the salaries of the clerks in our Departments. It is stated that those clerks have salaries averaging about $100 per month, and it is purposed to increase those salaries 20 per cent, or $20 per month, for services amounting to about seven hours per day. It is inconceivable to me how anyone should favor the granting of that great allowance in the matter of a mere addition, while, at the same time, he would refuse to allow the same amount to the men who fought four years during the rebellion, who have reached the age of 75 years, and in all probability can not remain outside of their graves for more than four years longer. Twenty dollars per month, Mr. President, would not equalize even the amount that the soldier ought to have received during those four long years of strife; and if he then received but about $4 in the then standard of money, he ought to receive for the balance of his life, if he should live from 75 to 79 years, at least an additional $20 per month.

Mr. President, some twelve or fifteen years ago we increased the pensions of those who served from six months to one year. We raised them to $12 per month, while the majority of the soldiers who fought in the open for four years are receiving less than $10 a month. I point out these incongruities and these inconsistencies that we may better know what justice ought to be meted out to the survivors.

Mr. President, the soldier of the Mexican war has been granted $12 per month for his sixty days' service. One-half of the soldiers of the rebellion of the same age have not yet received a pension of $10 per month, although the service was very much longer. Whenever we select one arm of the service, or the pensioners of one arm, considering the hardships they suffered and the struggles that were necessary to carry on that war and the miseries they endured, and allow them a pension which is disproportionate to what we allow other soldiers of other wars, or other arms of the same army, we are doing an injustice that can not but be keenly felt by everyone who has engaged in any one of those wars.

It is my hope, Mr. President, therefore, that we will do this slight act of justice to those of the civil war, who made it possible for us to have a nation that is capable of doing justice.

Mr. President, it has been suggested here, and suggested in other places, that this bill should be amended so as to give a flat rate of $12 per month to all who served in that war, irrespective of time. It seems to me that a glance at this will show its injustice. In the first place, the older soldiers are those of the longer service. The man who receives $20 per month because he has reached the age of 75 years is in nearly every instance a soldier who served during the entire four years. The short-service men were the younger men, who were too young to go into the Army at the beginning of the war, and went in at 15, 16, or 17 years of age toward its close. Therefore, considering the longer service of the older men, it is but just that they should receive the greater amount. In addition to this, Mr. President, as we all understand, their necessities become greater as they grow older.

We have taken 62 years as the basis for the pension of $12 per month. The only reason we have taken that is that there seems to have been a kind of precedent for it. It was the precedent in the case of the general pension law in favor of the survivors of the war with Mexico; it was the precedent established by Order No. 78, under which the conclusive presumption is that when a soldier has reached the age of 62 years he is totally incapacitated from performing manual labor.

Mr. President, I assume that the query will naturally arise as to what amount this bill, if enacted into law, will increase the present pension appropriation. About a year ago—on March 28, 1906—this bill was submitted to the Commissioner of Pensions, and a letter was received from him, from which I will simply quote rather than to insert the entire letter. It will show generally the amount estimated to be required if this bill be enacted into law. Of course we all understand that a year's difference in the age of the pensioner will make considerable difference in the result that will be obtained under this bill.

It appears that on March 28, 1906, from the estimate made from a previous year, that:

> The number of civil-war soldiers on the roll June 30, 1905, receiving less than $12 per month on that date, who will be between the ages of 62 and 70 years on June 30, 1906, is estimated at 148,000.
>
> Of this number 37,000 are receiving $6 per month; 66,600 are receiving $8 per month, and 44,400 are receiving $10 per month. The proposed bill grants them $12 per month, and the annual increase to these pensioners would be as follows, viz—

This is the important table—

37,000	would receive an increase of $72 per year, or	$2,664,000
66,600	would receive an increase of $48 per year, or	3,196,800
44,400	would receive an increase of $24 per year, or	1,065,600
148,000	Total	6,926,400

> Of the 230,000 civil-war soldiers pensioned at $12 per month, and the 21,000 who are pensioned at $14 per month, it is believed that about 53,000 are between 70 and 75 years of age, and therefore would take $15 under the bill. Of this number—

48,000	would receive an increase of $36 per year, or	$1,728,000
5,000	would receive an increase of $12 per year, or	60,000
53,000	Total	1,788,000

Then the Commissioner proceeds:

> Of the number of soldiers pensioned at rates between $12 and $20 per month, it is believed that 30,000 will be over 75 years of age on June 30, 1906. The increase to the roll caused by granting them $20 per month would be about $2,000,000 per year.

This would bring the whole matter up to about $10,714,000 per year.

But, Mr. President, as you will observe, the Commissioner of Pensions makes his prediction upon the assumption that all of these soldiers will immediately apply, and that their application will be immediately heard for the larger pension when they reach the respective ages covered by the bill. As a matter of fact, very many of them will probably not apply at all, and others will apply some time thereafter. It will not only take a year, but it will take years before all have applied. There are many—I believe 130,000, it is now estimated—in the unknown army who have never made any application. Considering a still further addition to this number, the Commissioner of Pensions has assumed that a great many of them will also make application under the bill. I believe, therefore, Mr. President, that it is safe to assume that within the next year there will not be an increase of more than about $6,000,000 to the cost of the pension roll.

Mr. President, I do not know that I desire to say anything further on this subject than to call attention to another feature of the pension laws and to another reason why this bill should be enacted. I desire to call attention to the period which had elapsed after each war before a service pension was provided for the soldiers of such war. Let us take the war of the Revolution. March 18, 1818, thirty-five years after the termination of the Revolution, was passed the first act of general pension legislation. Pensioners under this act must have been in indigent circumstances, in need of assistance. May 15, 1828, forty-five years after the close of that war, a general pension was granted to all who served to the end of the war; and June 7, 1832, forty-nine years after the war, the pension provisions were extended to all who served not less than six months. Considering that, in comparison with the war of 1812, we find that on February 14, 1871, fifty-six years after the close of the war, was the first general pension legislation for the survivors of that war. That act required sixty days' service. March 9, 1878, sixty-three years after the close of that war, this period was reduced to fourteen days.

As to the war with Mexico, on January 29, 1887, thirty-nine years after the close of the war, a pension act was passed which required sixty days' service, and applied to those who were 62 years of age or disabled or dependent. As to the Indian wars, the first pension legislation was passed July 27, 1892, fifty years after the close of the Black Hawk, Creek, Cherokee, and Seminole wars. That was the first law which applied to all who served not less than thirty days.

So, by a recapitulation, we will observe that the first general act pensioning soldiers of the Revolutionary war was but thirty-five years after the close of that war; and as to the war of 1812, it was fifty-six years afterwards, and the war with Mexico thirty-nine years thereafter. So, Mr. President, it may be observed that the first act in relation to the war of 1812 required only sixty days' service, the next only fourteen days' service; that the first act with reference to the war with Mexico required but sixty days' service, and the acts in reference to the Indian wars required but thirty days' service, while the only act of a general service character concerning the veterans of the war of the rebellion required ninety days' service. So it will be at once seen that, both in reference to the time elapsing after the close of the war and the length of service necessary to entitle a soldier to the benefits of the law, and in reference to the amount received, the soldiers of previous wars have in some respects been treated with greater consideration than those of the civil war.

This, Mr. President, it seems to me, ought to be rectified. It is not a matter of mere sentimentality. We owe a duty and are under a moral obligation to every survivor of the civil war. That obligation is to make as pleasant, as agreeable, and as comfortable as possible the declining days of those old soldiers. We can not fulfill that obligation by a mere love for the country which they saved or by a mere admiration of their deeds of valor. That obligation can only be fulfilled when we have done our complete duty to every one of those soldiers, not by the erection of monuments after they are dead, but by assisting them while they are on this side of the grave. I sincerely hope that this act of justice, so long delayed, will find supporters at the present session of Congress.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I do not know that it is worth while for me to enter into a discussion of this bill. If Senators care to know my views on this question, I think I can do no better than refer them to some remarks which I made on Tuesday, January 27, 1903, when I advocated a similar proposition presented in the form of a resolution.

I have long felt, Mr. President, that we are not doing justice to the soldiers who served in the war from 1861 to 1865. They are all growing old, and many of them are suffering from disease contracted in the service, although possibly at the time they were in the service they had no hospital records upon which to base a claim for pension. I can cite the case of one soldier from my own State who served his full enlistment of three years and then served as a veteran for one year additional. He was engaged in thirty-one battles and skirmishes, but was fortunate enough never to have been wounded or to have been in the hospital; consequently he has no hospital record. At the advanced age of 69 he writes me that because of the arduous service and duty he performed during the war he finds himself unable to perform manual labor. He is possessed of a little house, with a quarter of an acre of ground, which, he says, is not sufficient for him to make a living for himself and "mother," meaning his wife. He wanted to know of me how I could get him a pension.

Mr. President, that is one of the many cases that come before those of us who are on the Pension Committee. I have been trying for at least five or six years to get passed through the Senate and through the House a bill that would give to these old soldiers at least a small pittance upon which they might live, if not in comfort, at any rate without being compelled to go hungry the balance of their few years.

There was no man called into the service of the United States in the dark days of 1861 who was not needed. There was no man called whose name, if he makes application for pension, does not have to appear upon the muster rolls, and he must show that he had an honorable discharge. We are too great, we are too rich a nation to turn the veterans aside and say, "Oh, well, we made you the promise to care for you in your old age, and your widows and your orphans, but that was forty-two or forty-three years ago." We can not afford to be unjust to the brave old defenders of the flag who fought in the civil war. We should care for them as we have cared for the Mexican war veterans.

In this connection I want to pay a tribute to my friends of the South who have, by State enactment and by taxation upon themselves, cared and are to-day caring better in proportion for the soldiers of the South who wore the gray than we are for the soldiers of the North who wore the blue. I admire my southern brethren and friends. I admire their States for enacting such laws to care for their veterans in their old age.

I do not believe that I could possibly say more in favor of this bill than I said in the speech to which I have referred. If any Senator cares to look over and ascertain my views and my reasons for supporting a bill of this kind at more length than in the few remarks that I have made this morning, I will ask him to send for a copy of the speech in which I endeavored at length to express my views upon a resolution similar to the bill which is now pending.

I do hope that it will be the pleasure of the Senate to pass this bill, and to relieve us from the great number of special bills that we are called upon every day to consider and very few of which are ever turned down. We report them favorably and the Senate passes them. Why not, as the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] has very well said, give us this bill, which will establish exactly what the old soldiers may expect and what we intend to do for them?

Mr. President, we are abundantly able, with more gold in our Treasury than was ever within the vaults of any government on earth before. Our rapid growth and development and the splendor of our genius stand the wonder and study of mankind. Mr. President, the harvest is plentiful, and the laborers must by the laws of nature grow fewer each year. Over the span of forty-two years many of our comrades will have marched in triumph to that final victory. Let our gratitude cheer the hearts and our bounty brighten the pathway of the survivors.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I do not intend to enter into a discussion of this question at this time. I note that this bill was reported to the Senate nine months ago the 2d of this month, and, if legislation is to be had, certainly at this Congress, the bill ought to be set down for a vote at an early day. I ask the Senator in charge of the bill if it is his purpose to ask that a vote may be had on this bill at an early day, so that we may do something more than to make speeches and declare our good intentions toward the old veterans?

Mr. McCUMBER. Replying to the Senator's question, I desire to state that it was my intention after the bill had been discussed this morning to ask that it be made the unfinished business after we dispose of the unfinished business now on the Calendar, and that then at a future time we fix a day certain on which a vote might be had.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have been interested in the remarks of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. SCOTT], and I confess in advance, in view of the fact that at a former time I was prominently connected with the Committee on Pensions, that I am reluctant even to rise for the purpose of discussing the measure. Yet there are some features of it that I think ought to be placed more directly before the Senate in advance of a vote on the bill.

The Senator from North Dakota gave correctly the time that elapsed before service-pension acts were passed in the wars that preceded the civil war. An examination of that record will show that there is no discrimination against the civil-war veterans up to the present time in that respect. Just forty years have elapsed since the close of the civil war.

Mr. SCOTT. Forty-two years.

Mr. GALLINGER. I beg the Senator's pardon; officially the war closed in 1866. If it closed in 1865, forty-one years have elapsed.

Following the Revolutionary war, the first bill was enacted thirty-five years after the war closed, but it was a very narrow bill. It granted a small pension, infinitely smaller than is proposed in this bill, and it was only to be paid to soldiers who were in indigent circumstances and in need of assistance. So that it was an exceedingly narrow bill. Afterwards a further enactment was made, and the original law was broadened to some extent, but no general pension was granted to survivors of that war until forty-five years after its close.

After the war of 1812 fifty-six years elapsed before any pension was granted, and that was a very small pension, as I remember, of $6 or $8 per month.

After the close of the war with Mexico we passed three acts. I want to call attention to those acts. The original pension act growing out of the Mexican war was passed January 29, 1887, thirty-nine years after the close of the war. That act simply provided that the survivors should be placed on the roll at the rate of $8 per month when they attained the age of 62 years.

Subsequently, April 23, 1900, that was amended so that it was provided that soldiers of that war who were in necessitous circumstances and wholly disabled for the performance of manual labor should receive $12 per month. March 3, 1903, it was again amended so as to grant all survivors of that war, every one of whom is a very old man and a very feeble man, $12 per month, and that is the law to-day. That is the way we have dealt with the soldiers of the war with Mexico. The soldiers of the Indian wars were granted, fifty years after the close of the war, a pension of $8 per month.

Mr. President, there is a special reason, which it is well enough to put into the RECORD, why we have not before the present time passed a service-pension bill for the survivors of the civil war, although the time elapsed averages just about the same as that which elapsed before we passed service-pension bills for survivors of the other wars.

Commissioner Evans, under date of March 8, 1902, in a communication addressed to me when a service (per diem) pension bill was under consideration at that time by the Committee on Pensions, suggested the reason. He says:

> With reference to the propriety of the legislation proposed by the bill, I have the honor to state that it has been my belief that a per diem service pension should have been granted in 1890 in lieu of that provided by the act of June 27, 1890, and that such an act would have been more equitable and just in many respects; but as more than $600,000,000 have now been paid out under the act of June 27, 1890, and as substantial relief is being daily afforded to hundreds of applicants under that act the propriety of additional legislation at this time extending the provisions of the pension laws, which are now exceedingly liberal, should be carefully considered.

Mr. McCUMBER. What is the date of that?

Mr. GALLINGER. It is dated March 8, 1902.

Mr. President, four years ago we had paid out under the act of June 27, 1890, $600,000,000, and it is safe to say that at the present time the amount reaches $800,000,000. That enormous sum was paid out under a bill that was to all intents and purposes a service pension bill. That is to say, the requirements were that a man should have served ninety days and that he should, to a lesser or greater extent, be incapacitated for the performance of manual labor. He was not required to prove that he had incurred any disability whatever in the service, but simply that he was incapacitated, partially or wholly, for the performance of manual labor; and the pensions allowed were six, eight, ten, and twelve dollars per month, according to the degree of disability. It is well to keep in mind that fact. I think it was an unfortunate piece of legislation. Had it not been enacted we would doubtless before now have had a service pension bill which would not have been restrictive in any particular so far as concerns granting pensions to survivors of the civil war.

Mr. President, it is absolutely impossible for us at this late day to legislate so as to grant equal and exact justice to every soldier. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] has called attention to the discrepancy between the rates of pensions allowed to survivors of the civil war and those that are now being allowed to survivors of the war with Spain; and there is a very striking and palpable injustice, if it could be corrected. But I call the attention of the Senator from North Dakota to the fact that if the bill which he advocates shall be enacted a very large proportion of the increase that will be paid out of the $15,000,000 a year, as estimated by the Commissioner of Pensions, will go to the men who have been drawing pensions under the act of June 27, 1890, and not to the men who have secured pensions under the general law because of disability incurred in the service. An enormous percentage of it will go to the men who have been drawing pensions for sixteen years without having made even a pretense that they incurred any disability whatever as a result of Army service.

One year ago the First Deputy Commissioner of Pensions, in answer to a letter I sent him, gave his estimate of what it would cost to place all the surviving soldiers of the civil war on the pension rolls at $12 per month. That estimate, a year ago, was $15,383,190.84. I will say in passing that I have not a great deal of confidence in the accuracy of estimates. I think they are necessarily guesswork to some extent, but they are approximately correct. But what I want to say is that out of the $15,383,000 in that estimate $12,517,000 would go to the soldiers who are on the roll under the act of June 27,.1890, who incurred no disability whatever in the service, and only $2,865,000 to the men who had proved disability as the result of their Army service.

Precisely the same result will be reached if the bill now under consideration shall be enacted. An enormous percentage of the money will go to the men who are now on the pension rolls without having incurred disability, and a very small proportion of it will go to the men who did incur disability as a result of Army service and who are on the roll on account of that fact. I do not know that I am at war with that condition; I do not know that I want to interpose any serious objection to it; indeed, there is no remedy for it; and yet it is well enough for us to understand precisely what the result of this legislation is to be.

Mr. President, we have been extremely generous as a nation to our soldiers. Nobody doubts that. The men who served in the Army admit it, as did the Senator from West Virginia; and those of us, who for various reasons did not serve in the Army, know it to be a historical fact. We have dealt very generously with our soldiers of all the wars, but especially so with those who served in the civil war.

I wish to give a few statistics, and they are very brief. In all the wars in which we were engaged, 3,304,995 men gave service. Of these men 69 per cent served during the civil war and 31 per cent in the other wars, including the Revolutionary war, the war of 1812, the Mexican war, and the war with Spain. We have paid out in pensions $3,320,860,022.98, and this vast amount does not include what our Government, in its beneficence and generosity, has paid out for the maintenance of soldiers' homes and other expenditures that have greatly added to the comfort of the men who served the country so patriotically from 1861 to 1865. Of this amount, $3,320,000,000, 95 per cent, or $3,144,395,405.26, has been paid to the soldiers of the civil war. While the soldiers of the civil war represent 69 per cent of the men who were engaged in all our wars, they have received 95 per cent of the pension money that has been paid out by the Government, including all those wars. So we have not been parsimonious to these men. We have dealt with them with the utmost liberality, as I view it.

Mr. President, we have of recent years gone further in the matter of liberality than we have done at any previous time, and the soldiers of the civil war have been the beneficiaries. First, under an Executive order, which afterwards was crystallized into law, we made age a disability, and we have been granting pensions, first under that order and next under the law, to men who had reached certain ages without any reference to whether they had incurred any disabilities in the service or whether any special disabilities existed when they reached that age.

Now it is proposed that we shall differentiate as between those various classes and grant pensions at varying rates because of the matter of age. The present bill contemplates that we shall grant pensions at the rate of $12 per month to all soldiers of the age of 62 years, whether they incurred disabilities or not or whether they are sick or not; to all soldiers who have reached 70 years, $15 per month, and to all who have reached 75 years, $20 per month. It is that feature of the bill to which I am inclined to object. I am fully persuaded that if we at the present time go as far as we have ever heretofore gone in the matter of a service pension and grant a pension of $12 a month to all soldiers who served during the civil war, irrespective of age or physical or financial condition, we will be dealing with extreme generosity and, I think, in a more wise manner than is proposed in the bill under consideration.

I do not know how much that would cost at the present time. As I have before stated, the First Deputy Commissioner of Pensions, who is a very careful man and knows about the Pension Bureau, I think, quite as much as any other man connected with it, one year ago gave an estimate that it would cost over $15,000,000. The old soldiers are dying off very rapidly; we all know it will not be many years before there will be but a remnant of them left; and for that reason there is no man in public or private life who has a greater desire to do equal and exact justice to those men and to deal liberally with them than I have. But if it will cost, say, $12,000,000 a year for the next five or ten years, as it probably will, to increase these pensions to $12 per month, which is the highest rate ever given in a service-pension bill in the history of the Government, it seems to me we would be doing quite as much as we ought to be asked to do at the present time.

I wish to say to the Senator from North Dakota that while this body has always dealt generously with propositions of this kind when they have come before it, a bill does not end here, and I think he would be much more likely to secure what he has at heart—the relief of these worthy soldiers—if he amended his bill so as to make it a service-pension bill at $12 a month than he will if he keeps in it these different rates at different ages. If the Senator himself does not come to the conclusion that it is wise so to amend it, I may offer such an amendment and submit it to the consideration of the Senate before the bill is finally voted on.

Mr. President, I am not here in antagonism to this bill. I want that to be distinctly understood. Had it not been for the act of June 27, 1890, which granted pensions to every soldier who served ninety days, without regard to disability incurred in the service, under which almost a billion dollars has been paid out, I myself should have advocated a service-pension bill when I occupied the honorable position as chairman of the Committee on Pensions, which is now so well and ably filled by the Senator from North Dakota. But the fact that these men have been drawing this money all through these years, while the men who served faithfully and for a longer time than they, who incurred disabilities, who went on the pension roll because of those disabilities, are, many of them, getting only $6 a month at the present time, was and is an obstacle that I could not overcome; and the further fact that a proportion, I think as large as 80 per cent, of the increased pensions that will be paid out under the bill which is now under consideration, if it shall become a law, will go to these same men, makes me hesitate to regard it as a wise and discreet measure.

Mr. President, I wish to do all I can for the survivors of that great war; I want to go to the point of extreme generosity; but I feel that we may in our interest and zeal for them possibly go beyond what is equal justice as between different classes and as between them and the soldiers who have fought the other wars of our country.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, for my own part the fact that 70 or 80 per cent of the increased appropriations would go to those who are now drawing pensions under the 1890 act would not in the slightest degree influence me in still insisting that the bill ought to be passed. Who are these men who are drawing pensions under the act of 1890? For the most part they are men who had the hardihood not to go into the hospitals upon every little sickness, and, therefore, had no hospital record to make a basis for the claim that any disease was incurred during service.

Mr. President, it is so difficult to determine accurately that any of the ills of life with which the great army of survivors is suffering was of service origin, other than those that relate directly to wounds, that I have never had a great deal of faith in the service origin of most of the diseases. Although a soldier could not prove that his disability was of service origin, because he had no hospital record to fall back on, and therefore could not secure a pension, while another who possibly had a little hospital record to fall back upon did secure a pension, I believe the case of the former is equally meritorious and ought to be considered. The question with me that is more important than any other is whether he was a good and valiant soldier; whether he performed all of the duties that were required of him during those years of service. If he did, then he is entitled, in my opinion, to the benefit of a service-pension law. Every soldier who received wounds or who can establish the service origin of his disability will get his pension under another and different law.

Mr. President, it seems to me scarcely proper to take the meager pension which is granted to soldiers of the Revolution as any basis whatever for what should be granted by the Government in its present condition. The Senator will remember that the per capita circulation of money in the country at that time was less than $4, while to-day it is about $33. He will remember also that the wealth of the country has increased not by the hundredfold, but by the thousandfold since that time. We are better able to-day to pay what this bill will require—far better able, a hundred times better able to pay it—than was the country able to pay the meager sum that was doled out to the soldiers of the Revolution. Our duty, I say, is somewhat commensurate with our ability to pay those soldiers, so that in their declining years they may at least have the comforts of life.

Mr. President, the Senate has already passed a bill granting to the soldiers of the war with Mexico $20 per month. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] says they are old men, mostly above 75 years of age at the present time. The $20 a month that we propose to grant to soldiers under this bill will go only to men who are over 75 years of age. The amount is granted to the soldier of the Mexican war irrespective of his disability. Therefore the same amount should be granted to a soldier of the civil war of practically or nearly the same age, irrespective of his ability to prove that any derangement or ills of which he is suffering are of service origin. I have never, myself, had very much regard for any per diem pension. The man who served thirty days often saw more service and harder service than the man who served two years, and therefore it would be unequal and unjust to make per diem service the basis of any pension.

Mr. President, just taking this bill as the Senator has read it, we granted to the survivors of the war with Mexico, at the age of 62 years, the sum of $8 per month. We afterwards raised it to $12 per month. What objection, then, can the Senator have to granting to the men who served in the civil war, at the same age, 62 years, the sum of $12 per month? Twelve dollars per month now is not more than $8 per month was when we first granted to the soldiers of the war with Mexico their $8 per month.

Then, again, taking the next period of 70 years, the Senator understands, as we all understand, that senility advances more rapidly between 70 and 75 than it does between 62 and 70, and therefore the greater the reason for granting the extra amount of pension.

Mr. GALLINGER rose.

Mr. McCUMBER. Right here, before I yield to the Senator, I call his attention to the fact that we pass during a session three or four thousand special pension bills, generally granting pensions at about $30 per month. Most of those soldiers, who are in indigent circumstances, would to-day, under the same rules that we apply in private pension bills, receive probably $24 to $30 per month. Therefore, by a general bill we ought to reach them in such a manner that only those in the most indigent circumstances will hereafter apply for relief by special bill.

Again, I call the Senator's attention to the fact that probably if these men who are 75 years of age should receive $20 they would not apply for the other $10 per month by special bill. Now I yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. Is the Senator from North Dakota through?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield the floor.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rose to ask the Senator if I correctly understood him to interrogate me as to why I objected to granting a pension of $12 per month to soldiers of the civil war at the age of 62. I do not object to that at all, I will say to the Senator, and I must have been extremely unfortunate in the observations I made on that point if there can be any mistake as to my attitude.

Mr. McCUMBER. To be strictly correct, my query was not directed to the Senator to be answered, but was merely an inquiry as to what reason there was for denying the soldier of the civil war 62 years of age $12 per month when we granted practically the same to the soldier of the war with Mexico—only $8, of course, in the first instance—and I desired to call attention to the parallel along each of those ages.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have no objection, I will say to the Senator and to the Senate, to granting pensions to soldiers of the civil war 62 years of age at the rate of $12 per month, notwithstanding that rate was not granted to the soldiers of any other war, except the war with Mexico, and that only three years ago.

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. SCOTT] and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] both have laid stress on the fact that this bill will decrease the private pension bills. Mr. President, I am not going to enter into the realm of prophecy to-day, but I will venture a suggestion, that I do not claim is prophetic, that the bill will have no such effect. We will have the same grist of pension bills to grind that we have had during the past ten years particularly, and it will increase, in my judgment, from year to year. I have never interposed any objection to it, and I certainly shall not in the future.

Mr. President, I rose merely to move an amendment to the bill, which is purely one of verbiage. On page 3, lines 7 and 8, I move to strike out the words "Pension Office" and insert "Bureau of Pensions."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire.

The SECRETARY. On page 3 of the bill, in the proposed amendment, strike out the words "Pension Office" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Bureau of Pensions."

Mr. McCUMBER. There is no objection to the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment to the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. In line 11, on the same page, I move the same amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 11, page 3, strike out "Pension Office" and insert "Bureau of Pensions."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment to the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. For the purpose of bringing the matter directly before the Senate—and I will say in advance that of course the will of the Senate after it has been expressed will be my will—I move to strike out in lines 3, 4, 5, and 6, on page 3, the words:

as follows: In case such person has reached the age of 62 years, $12 per month; 70 years, $15 per month; 75 years or over, $20 per month.

And substitute the words:

at the rate of $12 per month.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the proposed amendment to the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 3 of the proposed amendment strike out, in line 3, after the word "pension," the following words:

as follows: In case such person has reached the age of 62 years, $12 per month; 70 years, $15 per month; 75 years or over, $20 per month.

And insert in lieu the words:

at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. McCUMBER obtained the floor.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not ask that a vote shall be taken on the amendment to the amendment at the present time, if the bill is to go over.

Mr. McCUMBER. That is my understanding. It was the understanding that no vote would be taken upon this bill to-day, but that I would ask that it be made the unfinished business at some future time, whereby it might be taken up.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be made the unfinished business after to-morrow; that is, the day after to-morrow. Of course it would not interfere with any appropriation bill, and I am sure that it will not be unduly pressed to take the place of anything else. I simply wish it so placed that we can call it up and have a vote on it in the near future.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent that the pending bill be made the unfinished business beginning on the 11th instant, not to interfere with appropriation bills. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. President, I am not entirely certain what the effect of such an agreement would be. If it is made the unfinished business from day after to-morrow, it might hold that place the balance of the session. I am not certain what the effect would be upon Senate resolution No. 142, which is a privileged matter, but I am inclined to think that an arrangement of that kind by unanimous consent would cut out the consideration of that resolution, which involves the right of a Senator to his seat. I shall therefore have to object, unless the Senator will except from his request Senate resolution 142.

Mr. McCUMBER. I should like to ask the Chair, for information, whether the result would be as is anticipated by the Senator from Michigan.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It would be so, unless the Senate should by unanimous consent modify the agreement or by motion displace the unfinished business.

Mr. FRYE. Suppose the Senator from North Dakota simply asks that the bill be made the unfinished business on Friday next. Of course it can not take a great while to dispose of the bill. One morning ought to be sufficient.

Mr. McCUMBER. I will conform to the wish of the Senator from Michigan and will modify my request. I ask that the bill be made the unfinished business on Friday, at the close of the morning business.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will venture a further suggestion before the Chair puts the request. Some other bill by vote may be the unfinished business at that time. I think the Senator had better ask that it be taken up at the close of the routine morning business on Friday, and I am quite sure it will be disposed of.

Mr. McCUMBER. Very well, if the Senator thinks that it will be disposed of.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest to the Senator simply to make that request.

Mr. McCUMBER. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent that the pension bill be taken up for consideration immediately after the close of the routine morning business on Friday next. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SHOSHONE INDIAN RESERVATION LANDS.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Is there anything before the Senate at the present moment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is nothing before the Senate.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I ask leave to report a bill from the Committee on Public Lands, and I request its immediate consideration. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 21202) fixing the time for homestead entrymen on lands embraced in the Wind River or Shoshone Indian Reservation to establish residence on same, to report it favorably without amendment, and I ask that the bill be put on its passage.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, it was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that homestead entrymen on lands formerly embraced in the Wind River or Shoshone Indian Reservation, in Wyoming, which were opened to entry under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1905, shall have six months after the date of filing upon their lands, or until May 15, 1907, to establish residence upon the lands entered by them.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARCUS M. CURRIER.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 6587) granting an increase of pension to Marcus M. Currier.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Marcus M. Currier, late musician, Company G, Eighth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GABRIEL CAMPBELL.

Mr. GALLINGER. The bill (S. 7295) granting an increase of pension to Gabriel Campbell is one of great merit, in which the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] takes an interest as well as myself. I ask for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Gabriel Campbell, late captain Company E, Seventeenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORSON B. JOHNSON.

Mr. PILES. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 7384) granting an increase of pension to Orson B. Johnson.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 7, before the word "Infantry," to strike out "Volunteer;" and in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Orson B. Johnson, late of Company C, Fourth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WALTER D. GREENE.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 6828) granting an increase of pension to Walter D. Greene.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Walter D. Greene, late first lieutenant Company E, Thirty-eighth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FANNIE L. PIKE.

Mr. BULKELEY. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 6137) granting an increase of pension to Fannie L. Pike.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Fannie L. Pike, widow of Calvin Pike, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and second lieutenant Company E, Seventy-fourth Regiment United States Colored Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $15 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ENOCH BOLLES.

Mr. BULKELEY. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 6145) granting an increase of pension to Enoch Bolles.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Enoch Bolles, late of Company I, Twenty-second Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELI M. SKINNER.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 6656) granting an increase of pension to Eli M. Skinner.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, before the word "Eighteenth," to insert "Second Battalion;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eli M. Skinner, late of Company D, Second Battalion, Eighteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN H. HOLSEY.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (S. 6823) granting an increase of pension to John H. Holsey.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of John H. Holsey, late of Companies H and C, Twenty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and Company D, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOURS OF LABOR OF RAILROAD EMPLOYEES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill 5133.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 5133) to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I do not know whether other Senators desire to discuss the unfinished business to-day or not. I have not been advised in respect to that. I have some matters which I desire to present in order that they may be printed in the RECORD, and Senators have an opportunity to examine them before the vote is taken upon the bill.

The measure is one, Mr. President, of very great importance, not only to the railroads and to the men employed in their service, but it is of vital importance to the public. Because of its importance to the public, I endeavored to secure its consideration and passage by the Senate at the last session. I realize, from such study as I have been able to make of this subject, that the hours of continuous service of the men in the employ of railroads is a matter which bears directly upon the quality and character of that service. Realizing that, I felt warranted in urging with some presistency the consideration of this measure.

I think, from such information as I have been able to gather, that the railway employees were among the first to urge the consideration and enactment of legislation of this character. At the last session I presented, during the consideration of this bill by the Senate, the petitions of organizations of railway employees representing, as I now remember, forty-three different States of the Union. I think perhaps I stated (I know, if I did not state it, I was cognizant of the fact) that there were some railway employees who have to do with the moving of trains who did not approve of this legislation. I thought at that time, and I still believe, that the number of railway employees opposed to this legislation is very limited.

Some of the railway employees have been persuaded that this bill if enacted into law would inflict hardship upon them. There is no just reason for this belief. I am confident that, excepting as they have been thus persuaded, those of the railway employees who oppose this legislation oppose it because they desire to make a large earning, month by month, without due regard to the quality of the service rendered to the public.

That this may be more clearly understood, let me say it is my understanding that, west of the Mississippi River particularly, the employees of railroads engaged in the moving of trains are paid upon the mileage basis. The number of miles those engaged directly in moving the trains make per month increases their monthly pay. In this, as in every other service, there are those who are overanxious, from one cause or another, to make a large earning for each month and who are not always considerate of the risks which they may take themselves and the risks which they may inflict upon the public, who are directly concerned in the safe, or the reasonably safe, movement of the trains.

I am not unmindful of the fact, Mr. President, that during the present session quite a number of protests against this legislation have been received by Senators from railway employees. Some have been presented to the Senate, some have not been presented to this body. I believe, sir, that the railway companies have exerted themselves to secure from the employees a disapproval of this legislation. I need not enlarge, sir, upon the readiness with which it is possible in that service to in some measure coerce the judgment and the action of those who are working for railroad companies.

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] presented some letters, which were printed in the RECORD of yesterday, making protest against this legislation. I have been advised by other Senators of the receipt, upon their part, of letters from railroad employees in their respective States urging opposition to this bill. I have here, sir, a communication from a member of one of the railway organizations of this country. I will not give the name of the writer of this letter nor will I locate the lodge or the order of which he is a member. I will submit the letter very cheerfully to the examination of any Senator on this floor who may desire to see it. This letter is addressed to Mr. Fuller, the legislative representative of the railway organizations of this country, who, I think, for some seven or eight years, has been in attendance upon the sessions of Congress. It is dated January 7, 1906. It was received but a few days ago, and since January 7, 1907. It reads as follows:

Mr. H. R. FULLER.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: The inclosed unsigned resolutions were handed to one of our members by Mr. E. T. Lamb, division superintendent of the Southern Railway, with a request that our division indorse the same. But we are not doing it with a rush. I am directed by my division to send the same to you to find out more particulars in reference to the same.

Will you kindly let us have this information at your earliest convenience, as would like to have it by our next meeting, Sunday, the 13th.

Yours, fraternally, ——— ———.

I think, Mr. President, that I will read into the RECORD the inclosed copy of resolutions which accompanied this letter, and which were received by Mr. Fuller, who placed the letter and the resolutions in my hands:

Whereas the nature of the railway business imposes conditions little understood by the general public, among them the fluctuations in train movement from week to week, month to month, and season to season, which create corresponding variations in the quality of train service required and consequently in the demand for the labor of trainmen; and

Whereas the efficient handling of the public business intrusted to interstate railway carriers requires the arrangement of the runs of train crews so that in many cases the distances covered can not always be traversed when conditions are at all adverse within sixteen hours, and this is especially true of what are known as "turn" runs, which, however, are universally preferred by train crews because they permit the layovers to be spent at their homes, with increased comfort and reduced expense; and

Whereas the restriction of the hours of labor by imposing a statutory maximum of sixteen hours, with exceptions only in case of casualties occurring after the run begins, would require the railways to keep upon their pay rolls a greatly increased number of men to handle the traffic at the period of its greatest volume, but many of whom would be idle much of the time during most of the year, and would thus greatly reduce the average annual earnings of all classes of trainmen: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, members of ———, condemn any legislative proposal for the restriction of the number of hours during which railway trainmen shall be permitted to dispose of their labor, and that we especially protest against the passage of the bill known as S. 5133, introduced by Senator LA FOLLETTE, or any similar measure; and

Be it further resolved, That these resolutions be forwarded to the Senators and Members of Congress from the State of ———, to the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the United States Senate, and to the Speaker and the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives.

With two blank lines for signatures.

I am of the opinion, Mr. President, that Senators will readily understand, from the character of those resolutions and from their source, that in large part the opposition to this legislation, as presented by railway employees, is inspired, not to say commanded. That this set of resolutions is purposed to be used in more than one State is entirely apparent from its construction, and that the railroad companies of the country have been very busy moving upon their employees since the adjournment of last session need scarcely be stated. That railway employees of the country should be concerned for the adoption of a statute which would afford them some protection against excessive hours of labor being required of them seems to me reasonable and natural, and that without any solicitation upon my part, and so far as I know without solicitation upon the part of anyone, I was able to present to the Senate, at the last session, scores and scores of petitions, representing the great organizations of railway employees of this country, emanating from forty-three of the States of this Union, is quite conclusive to my mind, sir, that, left to themselves, the railway employees of this country would, excepting for such rare exceptions among their number, represented by those who are somewhat reckless with respect to the peril which they incur themselves in running beyond a reasonable limit of hours and who are overeager to increase their earnings—excepting as to these, I believe that the great body, the overwhelming majority of the railway employees of the country are at heart for this legislation. One need but examine the record of accidents, reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the railway companies of the country under the act adopted in 1901, to find ample cause for the railway employees of this country to favor the legislation proposed in the pending bill.

I have here a record of those cases reported by the railway companies of the country under the act of 1901 to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The accidents set forth in this record are limited to those in which the reports disclose that the hours of service of the railway employees engaged in or having to do with the movement of the trains extended over a period of more than fifteen hours. This table, as I have said, covers all cases of accident in which the railroads reported more than fifteen hours of continuous service from July 1, 1901, to and including the month of September, 1906.

In this table, which I shall ask to have incorporated in my remarks and printed in the RECORD, is stated the character of the accident, whether it was a collision or a derailment; whether individuals were killed or injured; the personal injuries; the damages; the cause of the accident; the hours of duty of those engaged in the movement of the trains or having to do with the movement of the trains, and the hours of rest which these men had immediately preceding the trip during which the accident occurred.

With respect to the statement of the cause of the accidents incorporated in this table, Mr. President, I desire to be clearly understood in saying that the language which assigns the cause is not the language of the compiler of the table, but is the language of the railroad company making the report. Therefore, I think no one will be inclined to question the accuracy of the statement of the cause; at least no one ought to assert that it is in any way prejudicial to the interests of the railway companies.

I shall not take the time of the Senate, sir, to go into this table very fully, but I will briefly run over the pages and call attention to a few of the cases reported in this table, because it seems to me they are pertinent to the consideration of the pending bill.

In one of the first or earlier cases reported in this table I find this entry: "Collision. Engineman asleep; hours on duty, 17; hours of rest preceding the service"—which was interrupted by this accident—"hours of rest, 2." That is, this engineer who fell asleep upon his engine had been seventeen hours on duty, and had gone on duty—had been called by the company to go out upon his engine—after having had only two hours to rest following the preceding service.

Another: "Collision. Train not under control" is stated as the cause of this collision. "The hours on duty, 42." No statement accompanies this report by the company showing that there had been any rest accorded to those in charge of that train immediately preceding their call to go upon this duty.

Another: "Collision. The engineman dozing; 17 hours on duty," and with only six hours' rest immediately preceding his call to this service.

Another, resulting in the killing of one man, the cause being stated as follows: "Signalman went back to flag; fell asleep; 20 hours on service." No previous hours of rest reported.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman asleep; twenty hours on service." He had had twenty hours of rest immediately preceding his service; but it needs no statement of mine, sir, to remind anybody seriously considering this subject that no man is physically capable of rendering any service to which responsibility is attached when he has been twenty hours in continuous service, I care not how long a rest he had preceding that service.

Another case, resulting in collision; cause reported by the railway company: "Flagman neglected to flag; hours on duty, nineteen." It is not very strange, Mr. President, that he neglected to flag.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman dozing; twenty hours on service." Twenty hours on duty, following twenty-four hours of rest.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman mistaking signals." This poor fellow had twenty-seven hours on duty, after nineteen hours of rest. It would have been strange, Mr. President, if he had been capable of understanding signals with twenty-seven hours of continuous service.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman going to sleep; fifteen hours on duty, with five hours of rest immediately preceding the call for that service."

Mr. President, I pause for a moment to say that while this bill limits the service to sixteen consecutive hours I would be glad indeed, sir, to see adopted a bill with a much shorter limitation. Whatever rest may be allotted to one preceding sixteen hours of continuous service it is hardly rational to expect from that man a full and complete command of all his powers; and, sir, if there be any service in which men engage where the concentration of all the faculties, where the greatest alertness of the mind, where the largest possible reserve of vitality are absolutely essential to the discharge of that service it is surely in this very important work of conducting the trains which carry the passengers of this country upon the railroads.

I cite another case from this record, following very closely upon the heels of the one last submitted, which resulted in collision in which there was loss of life and injury to persons: "Train orders overlooked." Twenty-two hours on service, with three hours of rest immediately preceding the call to duty on the part of the men engaged in running the train.

Another, where the cause is stated as follows: "Engineman falling asleep." Twenty hours on service, following twenty-one hours of rest.

Another, where the cause of the trouble is stated as follows: "Train standing on siding; trainman, sleeping, fell from the engine." Twenty-five hours on duty. Had twenty-four hours of rest preceding that call to duty.

Another, where the conductor went back upon the track to flag, sat down upon the end of a tie, went to sleep, and was struck; twenty hours on service, following nine hours of rest.

Another: "Trainman sent out to flag; fell asleep on track; struck by a passing train." Sixteen hours on duty; no hours of rest preceding this call to duty reported.

Another: "Brakeman sent out to protect train; sat down on end of tie, and went to sleep; struck." Seventeen hours on duty; no hours of rest reported.

Another: "Brakeman out flagging; went to sleep sitting on end of tie; hand lamp hidden from view; struck by relief train." Sixteen hours on duty; no hours of rest reported.

Another, resulting in collision, cause stated: "Engineman using poor judgment by stopping on a curve." Forty-three hours on duty; no rest reported previous to this call to service. It is not to be marveled at, Mr. President, that this man exercised what is termed by the company reporting this case as "poor judgment."

Mr. BEVERIDGE. What road is that?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Answering the question of the Senator from Indiana, I will say that this table, as prepared, does not, for manifest reasons, state the names of the companies. This information, under the law requiring the companies to report, is received by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and is in a measure in the nature of a confidential communication—that is, to this extent: That it is not to be used in such a way as to subject the company to litigation. If the table so prepared contained the statement of the names of the companies in this case, it might result in the violation of that statute. They are not here given. I will state, however, Mr. President, that I think I have a copy of the record here, which will verify each one of these statements, which I have in my possession temporarily and which I will show personally to any Senator who would care to see it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I want to assure the Senator from Wisconsin that my inquiry from my seat was not because I had any doubt of the accuracy of these reports. The reason I asked the question in the particular example given was that I was shocked, as I am sure every Senator here was who heard it, that any road would be capable of keeping any man on duty forty-three hours without rest. I should be very glad, if it were possible, to have a road that would subject men to such inhuman treatment known to the American people.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It is but just, Mr. President, to say, in response to the statement of the Senator from Indiana, that some cases to which I will call attention, where I think the hours of service extended over as long a period of time as in this case which excites the indignation of the Senator from Indiana, are cases where the men are responsible, apparently, from the statement given here, so far as the initiative is concerned, for such extended hours of service. I say that, Mr. President, to emphasize the point to which I adverted briefly earlier in my remarks, that we can not always trust this matter to the pleasure of the railway employees themselves. Some of them are so anxious to extend their runs within the month and so desirous of adding to their earnings that they will take great risks themselves and inflict upon the public very great risks in so doing.

Following the case last reported is another, resulting in collision, where the cause stated by the company is as follows: "Engineman asleep and running by board." I take that to mean some signal that should have arrested him; but he had been twenty hours on duty, as shown by this statement.

Another, resulting in collision, stated as follows: "Engineman failing to have engine under control approaching protected water station." But he had been nineteen hours on duty.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman of one train asleep;" eighteen hours on duty; three hours of rest immediately preceding that call to duty. "Conductor and flagman of approaching train also asleep;" thirteen hours of duty, preceded by only seven hours of rest.

Another, resulting in collision, where the cause is stated by the railway company as follows: "Responsibility rests with engineman and conductor for running train at high speed in block entered under caution signal." Thirty-four hours on duty; fourteen hours of rest preceding this call to service.

Another, resulting in collision: "Failure of engineman to obey order" is stated by the railway company as the cause; but this man had been twenty-four hours on duty with no rest reported preceding this call to service.

Another, resulting in collision; cause, as stated by company: "Train not under control; engineman and brakeman responsible." Nineteen hours on duty, with only eight hours of rest preceding.

Another, collision, the cause stated by the company as follows: "Failure of engineman to comply with rules requiring all extra trains to approach side tracks under control." Nineteen hours on duty; only ten hours of rest immediately preceding.

Another: "Brakeman struck by bridge and knocked off tender of engine; instantly killed." Twenty-one hours on duty.

Another: "Brakeman sent out to flag train sat down on end of tie and fell asleep." Twenty-three hours on duty; no rest reported.

Another: "Failure of engineman to stop train in time to avoid rear collision." Twenty-three hours on duty.

Another: "Failure to protect rear end of train by flag; conductor and engineman responsible." Thirty hours on duty; only eight hours of rest preceding this call to service.

Another, resulting in collision; cause stated by the company: "Engineman running train through yard not under control." But he had been twenty hours on duty.

Another: "Failure of conductor to properly protect his train." Twelve hours on duty. The conductor of the other train, as stated by the company, "failed to have engineman reduce speed." Twenty-two hours on duty.

Another: "Engineman going to sleep on duty and allowing train to approach a wreck at high speed." He had been fifteen hours on duty without any previous rest since his last preceding call, so far as reported by the company.

Another: "Engineman asleep; did not stop train in time." Twenty-two hours on duty.

Another, collision: "Both engineman and head brakeman asleep when passing switch." Nineteen hours on duty.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman on rear extra did not have train under control approaching end of double track." Twenty-four hours on duty.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman did not have his train under control approaching derail." Twenty hours on duty.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman falling asleep." Nineteen hours on duty, only five hours of rest immediately preceding.

Another, resulting in collision: "Engineman fell asleep approaching tunnel." Twenty hours on duty. No rest immediately preceding his call to duty is reported by the company.

Another, resulting in collision: "Train not properly protected; conductor, brakeman, and engineman at fault." Twenty-two hours on duty. Seventeen hours of rest preceding.

Another, resulting in collision; cause stated by the railroad company: "Engineman asleep; had made two straight double runs previous to this on account of shortage of men; record good." Forty-eight hours on duty. Only six hours of rest.

Another, collision; cause stated by the company: "Engineman dropping to sleep after he had been flagged; was on his fourth trip and had had but two hours' rest at end of each; was not required to make so many continuous trips, but desired to earn the additional wages." Forty-five hours of service.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that cases like that to which I have just called attention are a sufficient answer to the claim made by nearly every Senator who opposed this legislation at the last session, that this matter of the regulation of the hours of service was something that ought to be left to the parties directly interested, to wit, the railroad companies and the men; that they could settle and determine it best by contract, and that almost all the roads of the country had entered into contracts which provided ample protection to the public in this respect. Even where such contracts exist they are constantly violated, not only by the companies, but also by the men. In many instances the contracts provide that the men may overrun the limit fixed in the contract when they desire to do so, or, to state it differently, the limitation is not enforced excepting as the men invoke its protection.

It is hardly necessary to add, Mr. President, that the desire on the part of the railway employee to have a good standing with those who are immediately in authority over him, those who issue the calls for him to go on service and who have to do directly with his promotion, if he succeeds in securing promotion—it is hardly necessary for me to say that the desire on the part of these men to have good standing with and to secure a favorable report from those in authority who call them into service will inevitably force men, even against their will, against their better judgment, to comply with every call that is made. It would be rare indeed, I believe, to find cases where men have refused, whatever may be the contract with the company, to go into service no matter how exhausted and wearied they may have been by previous service.

I call the attention of the Senate to another case resulting in collision. The cause as stated by the company is as follows: "Freight train standing on track without protection; flagman in caboose asleep; conductor and flagman responsible." Twenty-two hours on duty, with twelve hours of rest preceding.

Another, collision; the cause assigned by the company: "Conductor and engineman of extra freight train disregarded orders." They had, however, been on duty for twenty-one hours. Preceding this call to duty they had a full period of rest. This only emphasizes the fact that whatever rest may be given these men prior to their call to duty the term of the hours of continuous service should be limited if they are to be protected or if the public is to be accorded any protection.

Another case reported is as follows: The cause of this injury was "watchman sitting on ends of ties asleep; struck by train." Twenty-one hours on duty without any previous report of hours of rest.

Another case, where the cause stated by the company is this: "Freight brakeman sent back to flag, sat down on rail and is supposed to have gone to sleep; struck and killed." Nineteen hours on duty.

Another, collision: "Failure of brakeman to have his train move into track carefully, so as to be prepared to stop promptly." Twenty hours of service; twenty hours on duty, with only three hours of rest immediately preceding this call to service.

Another case: "Failure of crew to flag and of engineman to keep lookout." Twenty-one hours of service.

Another, collision: "Extra train passed red Hall signal; flagman asleep in caboose." Twenty-one hours on duty.

Another case reported: "Yard trainman lying on main track asleep; struck and run over by passenger train." Twenty-two hours of duty; only five hours of rest immediately preceding this call to duty.

Another, collision: "Rear-end collision on account of engineman not keeping his train under proper control; did not handle air brake properly." But he had been nineteen hours on service without any rest preceding this call to service.

Another, where the switch tender is reported as "failing to close the switch." He had been eighteen hours on duty without any rest reported prior to this call to duty.

Another, where the cause of the collision is stated as follows: "Work extra on the time of extra train, which was running on schedule; conductor and engineman responsible." Twenty hours on duty; only six hours of rest preceding that call to duty.

Another, resulting in injury: "Fireman on freight train dropped off to sleep and fell, striking his head on deck of engine cab." Twenty-two hours on duty; no rest reported.

Another: "Brakeman sent out to flag discovered sitting on end of tie; struck and knocked off before train could be stopped." Nineteen hours on duty; no rest reported.

Another, where the case is stated as follows: "Freight brakeman sent back to flag fell asleep while sitting on rail; struck and killed by engine; fog prevailing." Twenty hours of service, with only seven hours of rest preceding. Possibly if the fog had not been prevailing the engineer who struck him might have seen him and stopped his engine, unless he, too, had been on service for the same length of time or longer.

The following, reported in this table, Mr. President, are cases which have occurred since the close of the last session of Congress.

Mr. OVERMAN. What period is covered by the cases the Senator has cited?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In answer I will say that the entire table from which I have read covers the time from July 1, 1901, down to and including the month of September, 1906. I will put it in the RECORD. It embraces only such cases reported where the hours of service were at least fifteen or more. Some twenty-one cases of accident have occurred, as here reported, since Congress adjourned. I have no doubt, Mr. President, and I do not believe anyone will have who examines these reports, that at least twenty of the twenty-one accidents would have been averted had the bill which is pending to-day been enacted at the last session of Congress and the hours of limitation upon service enforced.

From the remaining twenty-one cases I will quote only briefly. I call attention to one case where the cause reported is as follows: "Brakeman, while his train was on siding waiting for passenger train to pass, sat down on main track and went to sleep; struck and killed by passenger train." He had been eighteen hours on service.

Another, resulting in collision; cause stated by the company as follows: "Engineman overlooked his order and ran by meeting point." Thirty-nine hours of service. Nine hours of rest reported immediately preceding this call to service.

Another, resulting in collision; cause stated by the company: "Chain broke on a crippled car in train; flagman left the rear end to inform conductor; in his absence rear end ran down grade, owing to insufficient number of brakes being set up; head end collided." Thirty-one hours in service; only two hours of rest preceding the call to duty.

Another, collision: "East-bound freight collided with rear end of extra east-bound freight, due to crew of extra not flagging"—twenty-two hours of service—"and crew of freight train following not exercising proper caution, knowing the extra to be ahead." But they had been on service nineteen hours.

Mr. President, I shall ask leave to have printed in the RECORD the entire table from which I have read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and permission is granted.

The table is as follows:

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries.		Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
		Killed.	Injured.
1	.....	.....	.....	$400	Train not under control entering yard and no lookout on head car.	22	6
1	.....	.....	.....	900	Carelessness of engineer in disregarding flag.	16	18
1	.....	.....	1	700	Freight train standing on main line without being protected by flag.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	500	Train backed out of siding and struck another train, account of conductor neglecting his duties.	19	6
1	.....	.....	.....	500	One train running into rear of another train standing on main line not properly protected, as per rule.	16	12
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Engineman falling asleep.	18	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	700	Rear brakeman falling asleep and failing to flag other train.	17	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	728	Flagman failed to go back with danger signals to protect his train.	15	24
1	.....	.....	.....	500	Carelessness of conductors and enginemen in putting train in on siding.	18	12
1	.....	.....	.....	1,246	Negligence of enginemen in charge of double header not observing train on track.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	2,300	Failure of rear brakeman to go back and properly protect train, and excessive speed.	18	3
.....	1	.....	.....	300	Brakeman unable to get switch properly adjusted.	16	9
.....	1	.....	1	760	Engineman falling asleep.	17	2 wks.
.....	1	3	2	13,803	Train getting beyond control on down grade.	16	31
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Hot cinder in eye	19	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	1,500	Engineman not having his train under proper control.	21	12
1	.....	.....	.....	400	Engineman asleep	17	2
1	.....	3	7	5,000	Train getting beyond control while running at high speed.	25	.....
1	.....	.....	2	3,250	Failure to close main line switch.	18	9
1	.....	.....	.....	600	Train not under control..	42	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	800	Engineman dozing.....	17	6
1	.....	.....	1	287	Flagman not being back.	19	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	600	Engine, running for water, was backed by engineman into a train.	16	9 days.
1	.....	.....	.....	229	Failure of head brakeman to take stop signals from rear brakeman and transmit same to engineman.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	1,000	Carelessness of trainmen, in neglecting to secure rear portion of train.	15	17
1	.....	.....	.....	3,900	Engineman lost his bearings on account of heavy fog.	17	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Only 23 cars out of the 52 in train were working with air.	17	.....
1	.....	.....	2	100	Failure of conductor	15	8
1	.....	.....	.....	$2,300	Conductor's failure to observe rule regarding a superior train.	15	8
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Too high rate of speed and not under proper control.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	2	150	Failure of switchman and foreman of switch engine.	5 17	 48
1	.....	.....	.....	620	Engineman's failure to observe rule regarding superior train.	15	48
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Signalman went back to flag; fell asleep.	20	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Struck on head by timber while coupling cars.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	2,500	Flagman not back proper distance.	23	.....
1	.....	1	1	300	Failure of engineman to respect signals.	18	24
1	.....	.....	1	67	Freight train occupying main track on time of passenger train.	17	9
1	.....	.....	3	800	Failure of a head brakeman to deliver a train order to engineman.	18	24
1	.....	1	15	1,760	Flagman, sent ahead to set switch to side track, went to sleep.	15	7
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Engineman asleep	20	20
1	.....	.....	4	1,066	Error of train dispatcher and failure of conductor to have his train protected by flagman.	18	7
1	.....	.....	.....	2,200	Engineman dozing.....	15	26
1	.....	.....	.....	876	Failure to protect train as required by rules.	18	36
.....	1	.....	1	850	Soft track, due to heavy rains.	15	12
.....	1	.....	2	.....	Engine and caboose, backing up, struck cow.	15	6
1	.....	.....	.....	400	Flagman neglected to flag	19	.....
1	.....	.....	18	900	Brakeman leaving switch open.	15	28
1	.....	.....	.....	500	Engineman dozing.....	20	24
1	.....	.....	1	330	Failure of engineman to control train while running under a green block.	20	19
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Engineman mistaking signals.	27	19
.....	1	.....	.....	350	Failure of engineman to stop to avoid hand car on track.	24	12
1	.....	.....	.....	173	Failure of engineman to set air in time to stop.	15	12
1	.....	.....	.....	400	Train occupying main line unprotected.	17	24
1	.....	.....	.....	1,017	Failure of engineman....	19	18
1	.....	.....	.....	415	Engine without lights except classification signals.	18	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Failure of engineman to protect himself while running within yard limits, as required by rule.	16	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	900	Engineman going to sleep.	15	5
1	.....	.....	3	1,500	Engineman not using proper precaution in approaching station, and improper flagging.	15	7
1	.....	.....	.....	600	Failure of engineman to see open switch.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	900	Conductor and engineman claimed they made a mistake of five minutes in looking at their watches.	20	18
1	.....	1	2	5,270	Train order overlooked..	22	3
1	.....	.....	.....	240	Helping engine followed train too close.	22	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	1,615	Engineman not having his train under proper control in yard limits.	18	24
.....	1	.....	.....	247	Brakeman threw switch for main track instead of side track.	16	9
.....	1	.....	23	4,000	Front trucks of refrigerator car left track; cause unknown.	18	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	400	Conductor allowed cars to stand on spur without permission or protection.	21	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	173	Failure of brakeman to set brakes.	15	11
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Crew not keeping proper lookout.	22	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	1,321	Flagman failed to get out proper distance; high speed.	12	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Engineman running at high rate of speed through yard.	23	28
1	.....	.....	.....	404	Engineman ran by switch; heavy fog.	17	.....

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries.		Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
		Killed.	Injured.
1	.....	.....	.....	$600	Carelessness of engineman.	19	72
1	.....	.....	.....	633	Failure to display lights.	22	36
1	.....	.....	.....	6,000	Failure to notice that switch was not properly adjusted.	17	22
1	.....	.....	1	.....	Engine ran into side of train while pulling out of siding; fault of engineman.	26	17
1	.....	2	3	1,100	Engineman forgot his instructions to get an order to meet another train.	15	9
1	.....	.....	1	875	Failure of engineman and conductor.	20	10
1	.....	.....	.....	800	Engineman not having his train under control.	15	7
1	.....	.....	4	2,002	Train stopping in bad location and being improperly protected.	16	18
1	.....	.....	.....	400	Failure of engineman to run slower and exercise greater caution.	17	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	285	Engineman backing up without signal.	21	9
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Engineman overlooking location of cars.	16	.....
11	.....	.....	.....	340	Train standing on main line unprotected by flagman; weather very foggy.	12	15
1	.....	.....	.....	1,750	Brakeman failed to flag train.	22	24
1	.....	.....	.....	1,900	Engineman not having train under proper control.	15	17
1	.....	.....	.....	1,200	Enginemanfalling asleep.	20	21
1	.....	.....	.....	325	Failure of both enginemen and rear brakeman.	18	.....
1	.....	.....	1	800	Engineman failing to stop when flagged.	18	12
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman while coupling had foot crushed.	17	35
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Trainman sent out to flag; struck by train.	17	8
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Car derailed; brakeman jumped off.	17	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Train standing on siding; trainman, sleeping, fell from engine.	25	24
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman, sent out to flag, fell asleep on end of tie; struck by engine.	15	10
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Flagman sent out to flag train; went to sleep on main track; struck by train.	15	10
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Conductor went back upon track to flag; sat down upon end of a tie and went to sleep; struck.	20	9
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Engineman lying on his stomach alongside track; struck by oil box on rear of engine tender.	15	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman, while making coupling, struck by apron-hinge of car.	15	16
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Trainman sent out to flag; fell asleep on track; struck by passenger train.	16	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman sent out to protect train; sat down on end of tie and went to sleep; struck.	17	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman, out flagging, went to sleep sitting on end of tie; hand lamp hidden from view; struck by relief train.	16	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman running ahead to open switch, slipped and fell, striking left knee against end of a tie.	16	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Trainman lost his balance and fell to the track, engine passing over him.	17	27
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Fireman's foot slipped, causing him to fall from engine and strike his head on rail.	25	10
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Conductor on top of train performing duties; sudden stop caused to him fall.	19	22
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Engineman taking engine into yard; struck his head against lumber projecting from flat cars on siding.	22	18
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Fireman assisting to take down the side rods of engine; left foot mashed.	17	10
1	.....	.....	.....	$255	Engineman using poor judgment by stopping on a curve.	43	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Engineman asleep and running by board.	20	24
.....	1	.....	.....	11,500	Failure of engineman to control train (freight) with air brakes; extremely cold weather.	17	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Engineman not having engine under control.	15	37
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Failure of brakemen to control cars that were being shifted.	20	33
1	.....	.....	.....	704	Extra freight train heading into yard collided with cars standing on track; fault of engineman.	15	12
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Crossing obscured by steam and smoke; engineman also at fault.	16	12
1	.....	.....	1	500	Engineman failing to have train under control approaching a protected water station.	19	.....
1	.....	.....	2	350	Failure of crew to protect train.	10	17
1	.....	.....	2	709	Engineman of one train asleep.	18	.....
					Conductor and flagman of opposing train also asleep.	13	7
1	.....	.....	.....	230	Train getting from under control of engineman.	22	8
.....	1	.....	1	243	Couplers passing each other on account of depression in track 2¼ inches.	18	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	173	Engineman running train too fast within yard limits.	15	10
1	.....	.....	9	810	Failure of conductor to properly flag.	5	5
					Engineman and fireman.	33	13
1	.....	.....	.....	500	Responsibility rests with engineman and conductor for running train at high speed in block entered under caution signal.	34	14
1	.....	.....	.....	1,800	Engineman not having train under full control and disregarding yard limit boards.	15	.....
.....	1	.....	2	5,602	Train crew disregarding instructions to thoroughly inspect train before descending heavy grade; also rules as to the application of hand brakes in case of air failure.	15	21
.....	1	.....	.....	300	Engineman falling asleep on engine and failing to notice position of target.	27	48
1	.....	.....	1	1,320	Crew not observing order to protect against work train.	16	15
1	.....	.....	.....	357	Engineman not having his train under full control.	16	24
1	.....	.....	.....	1,321	Failure of engineman to obey order.	24	.....
1	.....	.....	3	290	Switch improperly set; conductor responsible.	18	24
1	.....	.....	.....	2,000	Rear brakeman at fault; not out sufficient distance to flag.	10	10
1	.....	.....	.....	360	Train parted; cause not determined; conductor and rear brakeman not in proper positions.	15	24
1	.....	.....	1	1,200	Crew asleep and failed to protect train.	16	15
1	.....	.....	.....	285	Engineman failed to see cars ahead of him; valve on engine leaking steam and obscuring vision.	20	12
1	.....	.....	.....	332	Train parted; cause not determined; conductor did not have his men properly stationed.	15	10
1	.....	.....	1	75	Failure of brakeman to properly protect his train by flag.	18	8
1	.....	.....	1	15	Failure of rear brakeman, conductor, and station agent.	17 14	22 10

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries.		Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
		Killed.	Injured.
1	.....	.....	.....	$370	Engineman misjudging distance between train and engine, and backing into train too hard.	17	43
1	.....	.....	1	91	Train not under control; engineman and brakeman responsible.	19	8
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Conductor permitted cut-off cars to go into siding without engine attached to control them.	19	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	1,070	Failure of engineman to comply with rule requiring all extra trains to approach side tracks under control.	19	10
.....	1	.....	3	950	View obstructed by curve and darkness.	16	11
1	.....	.....	.....	1,500	Failure of flagman to go back far enough to protect rear end of his train.	17	13
1	.....	.....	5	1,200	Crew on local freight, endeavoring to make siding, failed to get all of train in.	15	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Fireman while hooking fire mashed index finger.	18	12
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Brakeman jumped off engine, badly crushing leg; amputated.	16	.....
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Fireman while hooking fire mashed right hand.	18	24
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman struck by bridge and knocked off tender of engine; instantly killed.	21	20
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman, carrying coil of wire from car, stumbled and fell, striking his head on rail.	17	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Fireman sitting at window of engine cab, with one hand holding hood outside; hood broke, causing him to fall off and strike head on a cattle guard.	15	(a)
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Conductor, while making coupling, caught between platform and cars.	16	4
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman sent out to flag train, sat down on end of tie and fell asleep.	23	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman, sent out to protect front of his train, struck and fatally injured; heavy fog.	20	14
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Engineman, on way to telegraph office, stepped in front of train; struck and killed.	17	12
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Conductor jumped from moving train; back severely wrenched.	16	8
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Fireman, attempting to get off his engine, slipped on icy steps and fell to adjoining track; struck and fatally injured.	22	14
1	.....	.....	.....	500	Failure of engineman to stop train in time to avoid rear collision.	23	(b)
1	.....	.....	.....	325	Failure to protect rear end of train by flag; conductor and engineman responsible.	30	8
1	.....	.....	.....	825	Engineman running train through yard not under control.	20	12
1	.....	.....	.....	4,100	First extra passing switch into siding when second extra struck rear end; misunderstanding of engineman on second extra.	15	(b)
.....	1	2	.....	2,491	Train running at excessive speed; brakes failed to take hold.	15	(a)
1	.....	.....	1	650	Failure of conductor to set switch properly.	15	.....
.....	1	.....	.....	200	Conductor and flagman failing to give stop signal at the proper time.	17	20
1	.....	.....	.....	265	Failure of crew to protect rear of their train while backing.		10 a Ample. b Sufficient.

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries.		Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
		Killed.	Injured.
1	.....	.....	1	$700	Train approaching station with cab windows closed and train not under control; engineman and brakeman at fault.	15	7
1	.....	.....	.....	1,400	Failure of conductor to properly protect his train.	12	14
					Conductor of other train failed to have engineman reduce speed.	22	10
1	.....	1	1	85	Engineman going to sleep on duty and allowing train to approach a wreck at high speed.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	965	Engineman asleep; did not stop train in time.	22	24
1	.....	.....	.....	670	Both enginemen and head brakeman asleep when passing switch.	19	25
1	.....	.....	1	247	Train being pulled by a switch engine to station struck by another switch engine; responsibility not fixed.	15	10
1	.....	.....	.....	1,800	Engineman on rear extra did not have train under control approaching end of double track.	24	12
1	.....	.....	1	800	Engineman did not have his train under control approaching derail.	20	(b)
1	.....	1	2	1,800	Engineman carelessly let engine run out at end of switch and foul main track.	18	(a)
.....	1	.....	.....	2,200	Freight train left track, due to excessive speed.	19	11
1	.....	.....	.....	1,200	Engineman falling asleep.	19	5
1	.....	.....	.....	1,585	Failure of engineman to properly handle air.	15	19
1	.....	.....	.....	1,997	Enginemen could not see each other, on account of sharp curve in track, until very close together.	16	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	365	Failure of crew to observe rule relative to not passing order board.	7	(b)
					Crew of other train concerned.	18	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	665	Freight train standing on main track without flag protection: engineman and fireman at fault.	15	.....
1	.....	1	1	6,800	Crew on freight train attempted to make switch on too close time ahead of passenger train without proper protection.	18	(b)
1	.....	.....	1	75	Conductor of a work train not taking proper precautions to protect his train.	15	27
1	.....	.....	.....	345	Engineman fell asleep approaching tunnel.	20	.....
1	.....	.....	7	400	Train being moved without protecting rear end.	17	7
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Engineman devoting his time to slight lubricator repair, instead of keeping proper watch while running through yard.	15	12
1	.....	.....	.....	1,160	West-bound freight train collided with rear end of another westbound freight that had stopped for orders; engineman and flagman at fault.	15	12
1	.....	.....	1	53	Engine going to junction collided with yard engine.	15	3
1	.....	.....	.....	1,750	Flagman going to sleep on side of track and failing to flag train.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	600	Train not properly protected; conductor, brakeman, and engineman at fault.	22	17
1	.....	.....	.....	890	Engineman asleep; had made two straight double runs previous to this on account of shortage of men; record good.	48	6
1	.....	.....	1	450	Drawbar pulling out of car, causing four cars and caboose to run back and collide with switch engine; conductor asleep.	15	2

a Full rest. b Sufficient.

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries.		Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
		Killed.	Injured.
1	.....	.....	.....	$1,500	Engineman dropping to sleep after he had been flagged; was on his fourth trip and had had but two hours' rest at end of each; was not required to make so many continuous trips, but desired to earn the additional wages.	45	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	775	Flag not sent out to protect rear end of train; confusion of signals; engineman running too fast.	18	(a)
1	.....	.....	.....	250	Conductor failing to properly protect rear end of train with flag; on account of curve engineman of extra was unable to see train occupying main line in time to stop.	15	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	350	Engineman failed to respond to signals in coupling up train, letting the parts strike too hard.	25	10
1	.....	.....	.....	1,150	Freight train standing on track without protection; flagman in caboose asleep; conductor and flagman responsible.	22	12
1	.....	.....	.....	4,296	Flagman failing to go back the distance required by the rules; engineman running train at excessive speed.	17 16	12 12
1	.....	.....	.....	700	Engineman approaching station with train not under control.	16	20
1	.....	.....	1	600	Engineman approaching station at too high speed; fireman and head brakeman not keeping proper lookout.	16	.....
1	.....	.....	.....	700	Air hose bursted, setting the air and stopping the train; collided with by two engines following.	11 23	12 12
.....	1	1	2	1,000	Engineman running at too high rate of speed; brakes would not hold sufficiently to stop train.	18	.....
.....	1	.....	.....	400	Conductor and brakeman failing to notice hot box.	16 10	9 9
1	.....	.....	.....	165	Train not properly protected; engineman not keeping proper lookout while running.	24	16
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Failure of engineman and brakeman to closely observe crossing signal, which stood against them.	25	50
1	.....	.....	.....	250	Road engine pulling out of yard ran into side of switch train; engineman at fault.	15	12
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Freight train broke in two, the two parts colliding; engineman used bad judgment in making stop.	16	(b)
.....	1	.....	.....	2,500	Train running at too high speed on down grade; conductor and engineman at fault.	18	Full.
1	.....	.....	.....	1,500	Failure of engineman to stop when flagged.	16	(c)
1	.....	.....	1	1,000	Conductor and rear brakeman failed to see that rear end of train was properly protected by flag.	19	4
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Engineman at fault, intoxicated; dismissed.	15	48
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Engineman not having his train under control approaching station.	15	(c)
1	.....	.....	.....	1,635	Engineman and conductor violated rule in not observing 10-minute block on freight trains; followed preceding train too close.	15	23
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Engine backing down main line ran into rear of extra which had been left standing on track.	19	10
1	.....	.....	2	$2,550	Failure of conductor to protect rear end of his train.	15	16
1	.....	.....	.....	400	Rear brakeman failed to comply with rules; did not go out the required distance.	16	7
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Conductor and engineman of extra freight train disregarded orders.	21	Full.
1	.....	1	1	1,100	Engineman running train by signal at "danger."	18	25
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	While shaking grates engineman severely sprained back.	18	16
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman on top of box car signaling; lantern went out, causing him to step off car; run over.	17	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Watchman sitting on ends of ties asleep; struck by train.	21	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman, walking over train toward engine, stumbled and fell off, wheels passing over right foot.	18	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Firemen lying down with feet against rail on main track; three toes run over by passing train.	16	7
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman, sent out to flag, sat down on ends of ties and dozed off; struck by engine of freight train.	15	17
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Trainman, standing at baggage-car door, slipped on a piece of ice on car floor, falling to the ground and breaking an arm.	63	(a)
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Conductor slipped off step on pilot of engine, spraining muscles of his right forearm.	15	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Section foreman knocking angle bars off of rail, which flew back and struck his right leg, breaking it in two places.	19	13
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Freight brakeman, sent back to flag, sat down on rail and is supposed to have gone to sleep; struck and killed.	19	12
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman standing on rear platform of caboose; engineman set air emergency, throwing brakeman against iron rod on end window.	18	10
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Laborer, left to watch a small landslide, went to sleep on track; struck by train and fatally injured.	16	13
1	.....	.....	.....	900	Flagman not out to protect rear of train; conductor and rear brakeman responsible.	17	8
1	.....	.....	.....	200	Conductor neglecting to set switch in proper position after placing train in siding.	16	12
1	.....	.....	.....	331	Train placing coal in chutes pushed car over end of chute; due to engineman not stopping at proper time.	17	.....
1	.....	.....	1	2,921	Flagman failed to obey conductor's instructions, and also to display his red lantern as required by the rules.	15	2
1	.....	.....	1	.....	Engineman falling asleep.	15	48
.....	1	.....	.....	200	Conductor overlooking derail.	15	4
.....	1	.....	1	.....	Derailment at crossing, due to snow and ice in flange; brakeman jumped from top of car, 14 feet, bruising left knee.	18	6
1	.....	.....	.....	198	Failure of brakeman to have his train move into track carefully, so as to be prepared to stop promptly.	20	3

a Long rest. b Several weeks. c Sufficient.

a Through coast train; length of time on duty does not indicate lack of rest.

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries.		Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
		Killed.	Injured.
1	.....	5	5	$15,000	Train ran away and into rear end of another; due to failure to tie down train when engine was cut off for water.	15	33
1	.....	1	2	3,000	Failure of crew to flag and of engineman to keep lookout.	21	12
1	.....	.....	.....	500	Conductor failed to flag properly.	18	(a)
1	.....	.....	1	205	Conductor and brakeman failed to signal engineman to stop, in coupling, overlooking that there were three sections.	18	24
1	.....	.....	.....	732	Train parted and the two portions of train ran together; not discovered in time to use hand brakes.	18	16
1	.....	.....	3	1,466	Engine and part of train allowed to occupy main track on time of superior class train without proper protection; crew responsible.	16	8
1	.....	.....	.....	900	Extra train passed red Hall signal; flagman asleep in caboose.	21	12
1	.....	.....	8	3,600	Failure of conductor to properly protect rear end of his train.	16	12
1	.....	.....	.....	2,000	Engineman running by automatic signal at danger, and flagman failing to go back a sufficient distance.	15 16	24 24
1	.....	34	24	51,248	Operator asleep, allowing train to go by station where order had been given for it to stop; operator voluntarily working part of track of the regular night operator, who had gone off without permission.	16	12
1	.....	.....	.....	235	Failure of flagman to protect rear of train.	18	13
.....	1	.....	.....	1,700	Three cars derailed while passing over switch; cause not determined; trainmen not on proper lookout.	18	12
1	.....	.....	2	1,500	Improper flagging on part of crew.	17	8
1	.....	.....	.....	650	Engineman not having train under control entering station.	17	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman while out flagging sat down on track and fell asleep; run over by train.	16	9
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Conductor coupling up snow plow and outfit car; point of plow caught his heel, breaking his ankle; carelessness	16	10
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman climbing up side of box car while train was moving struck against spout on standpipe and was knocked to the ground; night.	16	30
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Yard trainman lying on main track asleep; struck and run over by passenger train.	22	5
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman while making a cut of cars caught his foot in spring rail frog; run over and instantly killed.	15	9
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman, setting train off junction, fell from car, on account of slippery and icy ladders; run over and instantly killed.	21	19
1	.....	.....	2	200	Work extra pulling out on main line, with markers on caboose, but which engineman following was unable to see owing to the darkness; flagman attempted to flag with red lantern, which went out.	16	8

a Sufficient.

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries.		Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
		Killed.	Injured.
1	.....	.....	1	$1,850	Rear-end collision of passenger and freight trains; engineman of former failed to run carefully and keep a sharp lookout.	3	.....
					Conductor of the freight did not go back a sufficient distance to properly protect his train.	20	.....
.....	1	1	4	2,187	Extra engine following preceding train at too high a rate of speed; engineman unable to see flagman on account of fog.	17	7
.....	1	.....	.....	950	Train struck rock slide in yard and derailed; accident unavoidable—
					Engine crew	32	8
					Train crew	26	8
1	.....	.....	1	100	Switchman turned a draft of cars into a siding, which collided with an engine standing there.	16	11
1	.....	.....	.....	1,400	Rear-end collision on account of engineman not keeping his train under proper control; did not handle air brake properly.	19	(a)
.....	1	.....	.....	593	Journal under car breaking; brakeman and conductor responsible for not giving train proper attention.	24	8
1	.....	.....	1	813	Crew violating rules	23	8
1	.....	2	4	16,083	Failure of conductor and engineman to properly read and understand orders.	17	9
.....	1	.....	7	2,600	Switch tender failing to close switch.	18	.....
.....	1	.....	2	900	Brakeman leaving switch open.	23	10
1	.....	.....	.....	333	Brakeman taking block out from under car, which ran down into empty cars attached to engine.	20	13
1	.....	.....	.....	1,000	Rear-end collision on account of engine crew not keeping proper lookout for train ahead as notified to do by flagman.	15	12
1	.....	.....	.....	300	Engineman and switchman leaving cars without protection—
					Engineman	25	10
					Switchman	12	12
1	.....	1	1	690	Work extra on the time of extra train, which was running on schedule; conductor and engineman responsible.	20	6
1	.....	.....	1	600	Engineman of southbound extra ran train past red signal, colliding with work train.	20	.....
					Conductor and fireman of work train also at fault for failing to properly protect their train.	4	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Fireman on freight train dropped off to sleep and fell, striking his head on deck of engine cab.	22	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Trainman unloading cars from car to platform stepped off edge of bridge and fell to ground.	15	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman sitting on tender of engine fell asleep and slipped off.	16	9
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Brakeman sent out to flag discovered sitting on end of tie; struck and knocked off before train could be stopped.	19	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman put off to flag fell asleep on track; struck and killed by engine.	17	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Flagman sent back to flag fell asleep on track; engine of freight train ran over and mashed lower part of right leg.	16	(b)
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Freight brakeman, sent back to flag, fell asleep while sitting on rail; struck and killed by engine; fog prevailing.	20	7 a No rest.

b Several days' rest.

Collisions.	Derailments.	Personal injuries. Killed.	Personal injuries. Injured.	Damage to cars.	Cause.	Hours on duty.	Hours of rest.
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman between cars, coupled with links, to make a cut; cars from rear bumped in, fatally squeezing him.	16	12
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Car repairer, crossing tracks in yard, stepped out of the way of one engine and in front of another; knocked down and run over; died same day.	22	(a)
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Trainman sat down on track and went to sleep; struck by train.	15	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Trainman, while out flagging, sat down on track and fell asleep; struck by train.	16	.....
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Trainman, out flagging, went to sleep; both legs run over by engine, necessitating amputation below the knees.	16	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Trainman, sent out to flag, sat down on side of track; struck and run over by passenger train.	16	15
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Brakeman, while his train was on siding waiting for passenger train to pass, sat down on main track and went to sleep; struck and killed by passenger train.	18	.....
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Trainman, sent back to flag, lay down in grass with head resting on track; seen and cautioned by road master five minutes before arrival of train which struck and killed him.	17	8
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Trainman, sent back to flag, sat down on rail and went to sleep; caboose, backing to pick him up, struck and ran over him.	16	7
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Trainman, sent out to flag, sat down on end of tie and went to sleep; struck by train.	18	12
1	.....	.....	.....	$7,880	Engineman overlooked his order and ran by meeting point.	39	9
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Conductor helping to unload freight, when a barrel of merchandise fell from door of car and badly mashed his left foot.	16	8
1	.....	.....	1	1,086	Failure of brakeman to go back a sufficient distance to flag; conductor grossly negligent also in not properly protecting his train.	17	10
1	.....	.....	1	1,720	Second section left station too close on the time of the first section; engineman and conductor of second section did not have their train under full control, resulting in a rear-end collision.	17	10
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Crew had stopped to take midnight lunch; fireman, left alone on engine, is supposed to have put cold water in on a hot boiler, which had been allowed to get too low, causing it to explode.	16	12
1	.....	.....	1	417	Chain broke on a crippled car in train; flagman left the rear end to inform conductor; in his absence rear end ran down grade, owing to insufficient number of brakes being set up; head end collided.	31	2
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Extra freight waiting on siding; fireman got off engine and sat on main track; fell asleep and was struck and killed by a passenger train.	18	21
1	.....	2	.....	$4,900	Eastbound freight collided with rear end of extra eastbound freight, due to crew of extra not flagging, and crew of freight train following not exercising propercaution, knowing the extra to be ahead.	22 19	12 14
.....	.....	.....	1	.....	Southbound freight took siding for a northbound freight; fireman climbed down out of engine, sat on rail of main track, and fell asleep; was struck by engine of northbound train.	15	Ample
1	.....	.....	.....	1,600	Westbound freight ran into rear of extra westbound, owing to the negligence of conductor and flagman with extra in not going out to flag.	16	21
.....	1	.....	1	7,300	Failure of crew to set sufficient hand brakes on draft of cars, which had been placed on a siding, causing them to run down grade.	17	20
.....	1	.....	1	2,000	Through westbound freight train standing on side track; boiler of engine exploded, supposed to have been due to engineman allowing the water to get too low.	17	12
.....	.....	1	.....	.....	Extra train on siding waiting for passenger train to pass; brakeman lay down on track and fell asleep; struck and killed by passenger train.	34	10
1	.....	.....	3	.....	Passenger train ran in on siding and struck light engine; due to fireman leaving switch open.	18	12
1	.....	.....	1	500	Rear-end collision, on account of engineman on head engine being asleep.	23	.....
.....	1	.....	.....	4,994	Conductor and engineman allowed train to get beyond their control, and high rate of speed caused derailment.
					Conductor on duty.....	23	14
					Engineman on duty.....	23	33

(a) Working in another man's place.

Mr. BACON. I do not want to interrupt the Senator from Wisconsin in his presentation, but before he takes his seat I should like to ask him a question or two about the practical operation of the bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will answer the questions if I can.

Mr. BACON. Whenever the Senator is ready.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Proceed.

Mr. BACON. All that the Senator from Wisconsin has said to-day is to illustrate the importance of some measures—legislation, if you please—by which the employment of railroad operatives for an undue length of time may be controlled. I presume we all agree with him on that matter; that it is a great evil. We do not differ on that at all; and if we can reach it properly, without incurring or causing other evils, so far as we can do so legitimately in the exercise of our functions as Federal legislators, I presume we would all be in accord with him.

What I desire to know is as to the practical operation of the bill; as to the details of the bill; as to the difficulties which are presented by memorials offered here, by the letters which were read here yesterday, addressed to the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] and others, and as to whether the provisions of this bill meet those difficulties. That was the cause of the suggestion which I made yesterday, that we should consider this bill during the remainder of the time which will be at our disposal before the arrival of the hour fixed for voting. For that reason I suggested certain difficulties to the Senator yesterday, and I have others in my mind to-day, not with a view of obstructing the bill, but with a view possibly of perfecting it in such a way as to remove those difficulties.

If the Senator has in mind the discussion of the details of the bill, I will be more than happy to suspend any inquiry which I may desire to propound to him until I see whether he covers the ground. I therefore will not interrupt him further just now than to make the suggestion I have made——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I wish the Senator from Georgia would talk louder. We are very much interested, and we can not hear the Senator.

Mr. BACON. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I say I wish the Senator from Georgia would speak a little louder. We over here would like to hear him.

Mr. BACON. I do not desire to repeat what I have said unless the Senator from Indiana desires it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Not at all.

Mr. BACON. I had about concluded all that I intended to say. I was endeavoring to direct the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin to the fact that upon the matter which he has been presenting to the Senate to-day there is no material difference among Senators, so far as I know. We all recognize that there is a very great evil, but the presence of an evil does not necessarily make every remedy proposed for it the correct remedy.

This is a most important bill, a most far-reaching one; more far-reaching in its practical effect, so far as I am able to judge and determine, upon the railway business of the United States than any bill that has ever been before the Congress—much further than the rate bill, very much further than the employers' liability bill, very much further than the safety appliances bill, and in its effect, as I endeavored to suggest on yesterday and to which suggestion I have had no reply to the contrary, absolutely turning over to the matter of Federal legislation the question of the hours of employment upon every railroad, long or short, within the limits of the United States. It turns it over hereafter to Federal legislation and in consequence to Federal litigation in Federal courts. I need not say to anyone who hears me who is a lawyer that if it be true that we put it within the domain and province of Federal legislation and Federal litigation, it is no longer either within the province of State legislation or within the jurisdiction of State courts.

Therefore I say it is a question of the most stupendous magnitude, and I do not think I am going too far when I say that this bill has not been properly perfected. I will not say anything about the amount of consideration which has been given to it, because I know nothing about that; but taking the bill which is before us to-day, with its innumerable amendments sandwiched in in almost every sentence—verbal, technical, and substantial all of them in their nature—and how can any Senator doubt the fact that the bill before us is in an exceedingly immature and unperfected condition?

What I want to hear from the learned Senator from Wisconsin is not whether there is an evil. We all recognize that there is an evil. I want to hear whether or not this bill is correct in its details and whether the difficulties which have been suggested here by Senators upon the floor, both originating with themselves and called to their attention by communications from railroads and from railroad employees, are met by the provisions of the bill. Those are the questions which are important and about which we wish to hear.

I beg the Senator's pardon for so long an interruption.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Those may be the questions about which the Senator from Georgia wishes to hear, and it may not be agreeable to him to listen to any other discussion. I, however, will say——

Mr. BACON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator pardon me for a moment?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In one moment.

I will say that during the four or five days at the last session, when the struggle was on for the consideration of this legislation and when finally it was taken up by the Senate for consideration, all the opposition expressed to it was as to the necessity of any legislation whatever upon this point. I think I do not go too far in saying that every Senator who spoke in opposition to it stated that there was no necessity at all for legislation on the subject; that it was a matter which might be left to contract and agreement between the employees and the railway companies.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. Right along the line on which the Senator from Wisconsin is now talking, in answer to the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON], I wish to say that while every Senator, whether he is going to vote for or against the bill, recognizes the good that might come from a measure with proper privileges as well as proper restrictions, yet I think the main question is whether the bill as it is before us is a proper bill, and whether it has had proper consideration at the proper time and in the proper place. I should like to ask for information, as I do not know, whether while the bill was in the committee a hearing was accorded to all those who wished to be heard?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I will say that the bill was pending for a long time before the committee, and no hearing was called for and no hearing was had, except a statement by a representative of the railway brotherhood. But the absence of a hearing is due to the fact that nobody appeared to desire a hearing.

Mr. WARREN. I am glad the Senator from Iowa has the information, and I will address the question to him.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I will say further that the bill had very considerable consideration by the committee, being pending for a long time, and the awkward and somewhat difficult shape in which it appears in its printed form before us arises not from any trouble with the bill itself, but from the multiplicity of amendments which have since been offered and are printed in various types. If anybody will read the bill as reported he may have a good many objections to it, but they will not be objections based upon the notion that the bill has not been well considered and well stated.

Mr. WARREN. Now, Mr. President, I hope the Senator will inform me, if I have been misinformed. I have been informed even as late as to-day that application was made for a hearing, which was forgotten by the chairman of the committee, and when reminded of it after the bill was reported he acknowledged that it had been overlooked. Is that true, or is it not true?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I have no knowledge of any such circumstance. Applications have been made since the bill was reported, to be heard, and the committee going a good ways beyond its duty agreed that anybody who desired to appear before the committee, notwithstanding the report of the bill, would be heard by the committee; and arrangements were made to call a meeting of the committee for that purpose. Nobody has been denied a hearing, and no suggestions have come from any direction that have not been just as well stated on this floor as they would have been if made before the committee.

Mr. WARREN. I think with the information I had the inquiry is certainly pertinent, and it is to be greatly regretted that there were not hearings, whether they were asked for or not, because it is a question which affects great interests. It affects the interests and welfare of employees, and if, as in my case, we are called upon to vote upon this measure and can hear only upon one side criticism or condemnation, or rather no commendation except upon the general objects sought, but all criticism as to the terms on the part of employees—and I have yet to hear from the first employee in the United States favoring the bill—it would seem as if the bill ought to have further consideration somewhere, so that men who object to it could appear and state their objections.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, this is a good place for the consideration of the bill. I know of no duty imposed upon the committees of the Senate to send out and bring people in and give them a hearing whether they seek it or not.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. I wish to say to the Senator from Iowa that I have received a tremendous number of protests against this bill, about 110 different letters, with perhaps 200 signatures, and I have just received in the past five minutes the first and only request for the passage of the bill. It comes from Grand Junction, Colo. But I wanted to ask the Senator from Iowa, who, I believe, reported the bill or introduced the bill originally, whether it was offered by him as the result of requests from any considerable number of railway employees, or from others, or whether the necessity of some such legislation as this arose from the repeated instances that we have had of serious accidents occurring by reason of the long continuous service of the employees who had the wrecked trains in charge?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, in reply to the question of the Senator from Colorado, I will say that the bill was not introduced by me, though my information is that it was prepared by those who are chosen by the railway brotherhoods to guard the interests of the railway men of the United States. Those brotherhoods very properly have an official charged with the duty of urging upon Congress the legislation which meets the approbation of the men whom they represent.

This bill, as I understand it, was drawn by the official representatives of the railway brotherhoods of the United States. Of course that imposes no duty upon the Senate to adopt the exact bill which they introduce. I have no doubt myself that the necessity of such legislation has been pressed upon the attention of nearly everybody in the United States by the series of train disasters, involving both property and life, occurring all over the United States, many of them traceable to the overworking of employees, to the working of men during such intolerable hours of service as leaves them practically unable to discharge the business which is committed to their hands. For example——

Mr. LODGE. I wish to ask the Senator if he has noticed the statement of the engineer of the freight or equipment train which ran into the passenger train here at Terra Cotta, just outside of the city, causing that frightful disaster. If I remember the statement correctly, he had been on duty from half past nine on Friday morning until the time of the accident, with only two intervals.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will say——

Mr. LODGE. I dare say that has been stated already.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It has not been stated, but I have the testimony which was given before the Interstate Commerce Commission and which I propose to submit in the course of time.

Mr. LODGE. From 9 o'clock on Friday morning, for a period of more than forty-eight hours, he had two periods of four hours each for sleep.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes, substantially.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yet the engineer is to blame.

Mr. LODGE. I think it shows that in the interest of the passengers of the country something ought to be done.

Mr. SPOONER. I think it is clear, notwithstanding, that he was not to blame.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Notwithstanding the fact that he was not to blame and could not have helped it, nevertheless he has been blamed in all the newspapers of the country as having neglected his duty after having been in train service for forty-eight hours.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I will ask the Senator from Wisconsin whether I am trespassing on his time?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Not at all, because the sound of another voice, I think, increases the attention, and I am very glad indeed to be interrupted in this way.

Mr. DOLLIVER. In that case, Mr. President, I wish to submit an observation or two, if it will not disturb the Senator from Wisconsin.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. May I interrupt the Senator?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. Before the Senator gets away from the subject of the representatives of the employees of the roads, it would seem as if there is quite a difference of opinion there. I inserted in the RECORD yesterday communications from the chairman of the general committee of conductors of the Union Pacific system, one of the largest railroad systems in the country.

Mr. DOLLIVER. It is very large.

Mr. WARREN. And also from the head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen; also of brakemen. So it seems there are great leaders of trainmen, embracing conductors, engineers, firemen, and brakemen, who object to the bill.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is a national organization, and these objections do not come from the national organization of railroad trainmen, but from organizations local in character, surrounded possibly by unusual circumstances. That leads me to say that everybody agrees that this bill contains a correct principle in seeking to prohibit a continuous train labor of more than sixteen hours without rest. It is not only of interest to the men, but it is of interest to the entire American people that that should be corrected.

Mr. WARREN. We grant that.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Now, that is granted. The reason that here and there local brotherhoods of trainmen oppose this bill arises from the fact that the bill in its present form appears to require a uniform treatment of situations that in various sections of the country are far from uniform.

Mr. WARREN. That is true.

Mr. DOLLIVER. If the Senator from Wyoming will read an amendment which I offered yesterday tentatively to this bill——

Mr. GALLINGER. As a substitute.

Mr. DOLLIVER. As a substitute for it, he will perceive that the objections made by these trainmen are probably fully met, because the substitute which I propose, while it preserves the prohibition against excessive hours, confides to the Interstate Commerce Commission the same sort of a discretion they have in the application of the safety-appliance laws which have heretofore been adopted, enabling them in special cases and under circumstances which they themselves will be the judge of, to make orders which will exempt the railways from obedience to the prohibitions of the law. I am not certain that that will suit anybody, but I believe it would be a very strange situation, with everybody in favor of the prohibition of excessive railway hours, if we here in the Senate should be embarrassed and bewildered by our inability to devise some straightforward and coherent method of doing that. Let the hours of labor be restricted as this bill provides, and in circumstances such as prevail with the Union Pacific Railway system, where there are branch lines in remote mountainous districts and in other sections of the country, let those peculiar circumstances be considered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, that where a reasonable showing is made these peculiar cases may be exempted from the operations of the proposed law. Now, has my honorable friend from Wyoming any objection to that?

Mr. WARREN. I wish to say that the amendment, as I have scanned it over hurriedly, is an improvement. The question is whether we are loading up the Interstate Commerce Commission with so much work with rate bills and train bills, etc., that men will be born and live their lives and serve their time and die before the many cases as they arise will be disposed of.

Mr. DOLLIVER. If my friend will observe the phraseology, it proposes that the law shall take effect at a period to be named in the future, and that before it takes effect the Interstate Commerce Commission shall consider such cases as are made by the trainmen at Cheyenne, and in other sections of the country, and if a proper case is made, where the interests of the public and the interests of the trainmen can be preserved, exceptions in such a case can be made.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. May I interrupt to ask the Senator a question?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Certainly.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I desire to address my interrogatory to the Senator from Wyoming. The Senator said that the only question that remains is whether we are not so loading up the Interstate Commerce Commission that it could not consider all the questions before it——

Mr. WARREN. No; I beg the Senator's pardon, I did not say that that was the only question.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That was one question.

Mr. WARREN. It is a question, surely.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. So that it could not consider the questions before it, and men would grow up, live, and die before the cases would ever be tried. Conceding that to be true, does the Senator think that would be any worse situation than to have a situation continue whereby men go on and get killed and wrecks occur, and the whole terrible condition which some legislation is needed to stop? Does he think even the suggestion, which he makes, if it were true, would be any worse than the situation as it is?

Mr. WARREN. I do not admit that we are driven to such an alternative as that. Possibly the Senator from Iowa is reaching in the right direction. The only question is, and I am only bringing it up as a question, whether that is the proper tribunal under the present circumstances, and whether it is as near to the facts and the men themselves as we may provide. I have nothing just at this time to offer to replace it, and therefore perhaps it is not becoming in me to question it, but I raise the inquiry for those who are giving it more attention than I have, whether that is the place in which to lodge the power.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I think in answer to that the Senator might well take it for granted that if those who have this bill in charge, the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], had thought of anything better they would have presented it, and since it must be presumed that those who have studied it have presented the best that has yet occurred to them, and since the Senator from Wyoming confesses that he has nothing better whatever to offer, then it would seem to be logical that he should not further resist the passage of this measure.

Mr. WARREN. Because it seems the men, so well posted, who have had this matter under consideration so long, and from time to time have found something better than that which preceded it, I am in hopes that in the same direction they may go still further. It is because I have a great deal of confidence in those who have this bill in charge that I am confident they can better it if given time and opportunity. I think no one on this floor would dispute the fact that what is aimed at is to bring the hours down to the proper limit of effort on the part of the men and to provide for sufficient sleep and rest between days of labor. That object itself is good. The only question is the manner of approaching it. I am hoping that with the many improvements already offered we may reach still further.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, with the permission of the Senator from Iowa, the obvious answer to that is that it is to be hoped that the laws of human intellect will still continue to work, and that we will be able to improve this proposed legislation after it becomes a law. But if, as the Senator suggests, this measure should lie over from time to time until an absolutely perfect law is evolved, since the human mind constantly improves the work that it produces, some years would no doubt elapse, but in the meantime the evil would go on; thirty, forty, and fifty hours' work would be required of men; Terra Cotta wrecks would occur, while men were gradually improving a measure upon which already months of serious time and thought and effort had been expended. Would it not be well to enact the best now that we have been able to evolve and then as experience proves where we can improve to improve it hereafter by amendments? I ask that question of the Senator.

Mr. WARREN. I am very glad to have the Senator from Indiana admit that there may be improvements in our work, that bills that may be introduced hereafter may be better than those being introduced and considered at present; but I trust the Senator from Indiana will remember that improvements may be still further presented here and now.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I have already done that in the bills that it has been my good fortune and my duty to present and fight for upon this floor. I have taken that for granted. But I call the attention of the Senator to precisely where the logic of his questioning leads and leaves him, and that is that we shall never pass a bill so long as it is possible that in the future somebody may after a while suggest something better, and that his logic leads and leaves him at this point, that gentlemen having charge of the bill, having perfected the bill the best they could, and the Senator from Wyoming not having suggested anything better, it becomes our duty to pass the best that we have produced and then wait hereafter until experience shall show where we can still improve it. According to the logic of the Senator, he is as much committed to this measure as the Senator from Iowa or the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator from Indiana is in error as to two matters. The first is, that I am opposing any bill or legislation leading in this direction.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No; I say that the logic of the Senator leads him to support it.

Mr. WARREN. And the second, that I have not tried to improve it, which statement is made in view of the fact that I introduced two amendments yesterday, and thus I am trying to improve it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Are those two all the Senator can think of to improve the bill?

Mr. WARREN. With that challenge I will have to say that I have something besides those two amendments which I should be glad to have adopted, and I should be very glad to vote for the bill when they are all adopted.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Wyoming will remember that there are about thirty other amendments pending.

Mr. WARREN. More or less, and probably there will be still more offered.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. But we are talking about the amendments which the Senator from Wyoming has thought would make the bill as nearly perfect as his study could possibly make it. So, according to that, the Senator from Wyoming is certainly committed to the bill. I did not say he was against it. Upon the contrary, I say his logic leads him and leaves him in support of it.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, the fact is that the situation is really very much simpler than our record here would seem to indicate. Everybody desires to put an end to unreasonable hours of labor in the railway service, partly for the sake of the railway workmen and still more for the safety of the American public. The bill contains a simple prohibition of that character, with an exception, namely, casualties occurring after the train had started upon its journey, sometimes requiring more than sixteen hours, on account of the accident, to reach the terminals.

Now, it appears that there are other exceptions which might well be made, exceptions arising sometimes out of the special situation of a railway line. I have had one or two of those brought to my attention. But more important than that, there are peculiar situations in the present arrangement of divisions and terminals upon some of our greatest railway systems which lead the men who are employed there to think that this law, greatly as they desire to be relieved of long runs, would be burdensome and objectionable from their standpoint. That is a matter which requires a very close investigation—an investigation that could not very well be given either in the committee or in the Senate—and I have thought it wise, in view of the fact that it requires a very careful investigation, to clothe the Interstate Commerce Commission with the power, before the law goes into effect, to find out these peculiar situations and to make an order exempting certain railways from the operation of the law, and exempting all railways from the operation of it under certain defined and stated circumstances. Now, that is all there is to it. If the Senate desires to pass a measure of this character, as I feel sure it does——

Mr. BACON. If the Senator will pardon me a moment, does he think——

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will yield, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The senior Senator from Wisconsin rises to a point of order. He will state the point of order.

Mr. SPOONER. My colleague yields, and I have no point of order to make.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The junior Senator from Wisconsin yielded, as the Chair understood, to the Senator from Iowa. Will the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I did not yield the floor, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator did not yield the floor. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. BACON. I thought I was asking the courtesy of the Senator from Iowa. I find, however, that he has not the floor, and I will not interrupt him.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I will very gladly yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BACON. The floor is not within the disposition of the Senator from Iowa, and I will not interrupt him. The Senator will not misunderstand me. If he were speaking in his own time, I would ask the privilege of interrupting him.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. DOLLIVER. I am certainly a little confused.

Mr. PATTERSON. The Senator from Iowa secured the floor to answer a question propounded by me.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I then negotiated with the Senator from Wisconsin, and found him not only willing but apparently eager to give the floor to me.

Mr. PATTERSON. But I was the Senator who yielded the floor to the Senator from Iowa to answer the question. He did not negotiate with the right person.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, seeing the uncertainties of my tenure, I will take my seat.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I will yield the floor to the Senator from Iowa. I can resume it again.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] at the conclusion of the observations of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER]. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President——

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, if the Senator from Wisconsin has yielded the floor to the Senator from Iowa, I will venture to ask the privilege of interrupting him.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. I understood the Senator from Iowa to say that the object of his amendment was to give to the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to exempt certain railroads from the operation of this proposed law. Does the Senator from Iowa think we could pass a law which would apply to some railroads and not to others?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I was misunderstood, Mr. President. I think if the Senator will examine the amendment he will see that the exemption which the Interstate Commerce Commission is authorized to make is an exemption arising from peculiar circumstances and conditions.

Mr. BACON. I had noticed that was the language of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa, but I was speaking of what has just fallen from the lips of the Senator. In speaking of that amendment he spoke of the design of it, and one of the particulars of that design was to give to the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to exempt certain railroads from the operation of the proposed law. If the Senator did not mean to be so understood——

Mr. DOLLIVER. I was misunderstood, Mr. President.

Mr. BACON. Then, I will say nothing further on that point.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, the proviso of the bill involves, I think, the same principle that is involved in the safety-appliance act, which is made applicable everywhere, with the understanding that the Interstate Commerce Commission may suspend or postpone the operation of the law under certain conditions found upon investigation.

Mr. BACON. Now, Mr. President, I should like to have the Senator from Iowa, if he will, permit me to have read in this connection a communication which has been addressed to my colleague [Mr. CLAY] and myself by certain railway employees, conductors and others, in order that I may ask the Senator from Iowa whether he understands that his amendment would cover such cases as are specified therein?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I shall be very glad to have read the paper to which the Senator refers.

Mr. BACON. I ask, with the permission of the Senator from Iowa, that the communication which I send to the desk may now be read. I will ask the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the particular case specified in the letter, with a view of seeing whether or not the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa would cover such a case; in other words, would give the right to the Interstate Commerce Commission to pass a rule or to make a regulation which would meet the difficulties suggested in that letter.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Hon. ALEXANDER S. CLAY, Hon. AUGUSTUS O. BACON,
United States Senators, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: It has come to our notice that there is now pending before Congress and the House of Representatives a bill known as H. R. bill 18671, or better known among us as the "sixteen-hour bill," which we think has some very objectionable features. We therefore recommend to the House of Representatives and Congress assembled that the arbitrary parts of said bill be modified. While a law of some kind is possible that might, as a rule, do away with long hours on duty, we do believe and know that there are circumstances that arise in the handling of traffic by railroads that, while strictly speaking, are unavoidable, yet would not come under the exceptions provided for in the bill as it now reads. There are numerous things that might happen to a train that is only a few miles from its terminal, and perhaps on the main line, that the time limit might expire before relief could be gotten to them. Then, again, the crew might be but a few miles from their home terminal and the time expire, while in a few minutes, perhaps, they could reach their home terminal, where they could get their rest at their home, where they should. We do not believe that you want to make a law that will compel a crew to lay up five or ten or fifteen minutes from their home terminal just because the sixteen hours were up, then when their rest was up run them into their home terminal and double them right out of it again.

Mr. BACON. The Secretary will pardon me just a moment. I am inclined to think that, so far as the cases already enumerated are concerned, the suggestion made by the Senator from Iowa would cover them; but I want to ask particular attention to that which follows, which I do not think would be covered by any power to make rules or regulations. I now ask that the Secretary resume the reading of the letter.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will continue the reading of the letter.

The Secretary resumed the reading, as follows:

Then the crew may have a hard run from their home terminal to their away-from-home terminal——

Mr. BACON. That means to the opposite terminal—from the home terminal to the opposite terminal.

The Secretary continued the reading, as follows:

Then a crew may have a hard run from their home terminal to their away-from-home terminal, which, under the bill as proposed, would compel them to have eight or ten hours off duty, as the case might be. This crew might stand for a good run home after five or six hours' rest, which would take them to their home terminal in five or six hours. The proposed law would work an undue hardship on the crew under such conditions. This would also work a hardship on the railroad company, but a much greater hardship on the men. We therefore request you to do all in your power to so amend this bill in favor of the railroads of this country so that unavoidable and unforeseen accidents be excepted, and in favor of the men that when an hour or two will get them to their home terminal be excepted, and, further, in favor of the men that when a few hours' rest at their away-from-home terminal will start them toward their home terminal that the men be allowed to use their own judgment as to whether they are able to go or not.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, if the Senator from Iowa will pardon me, I want to call his attention, by way of practical illustration, to the difficulty suggested in the latter part of that communication. All railroad men have their homes at one or the other terminal, a place where their families are located, etc., where they are supposed to take their principal rest, and where their "lie-overs," as they are called, are permitted. Under the bill as it stands it is required that there should be ten hours of rest. As suggested in that communication, a railroad employee starting from his home and making, it may be, a hard run to the other terminal is very desirous to get back to his home and have his rest there; but he would be compelled under the bill to remain ten hours at the other terminal, and in that way have that much less rest at his home terminal.

The point I wanted to ask the attention of the Senator from Iowa to was this: Whether or not, under the power with which it is proposed by his amendment to invest the Interstate Commerce Commission to make certain rules and regulations, would it, in his judgment, go to the extent of permitting them to meet a case of that kind; to vary the law, and say that in such and such a case the employees need not remain ten hours at the far-away terminal, at the away-from-home terminal, as they call it, but that they may have a less period of rest there, in order that they may return to their homes and have their principal rest where they desire it, with their families?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, I am inclined to think that the discretion conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission in the amendment which I suggested would enable the Commission to make regulations covering such a case; but I am not sure that they would do it, because that is a situation that goes to the very heart of the question of limiting the hours of labor, and I will admit that there are bodies of railway men in a good many places who look upon the limitation of the hours of their labor as liable to produce either a loss of time at their homes or, possibly, a loss of wages, a reduction in their monthly pay. Of course, an objection made by a workman upon grounds like these is entitled to very respectful and very careful consideration.

Mr. BACON. I grant that.

Mr. DOLLIVER. But it would be very easy to press a criticism of that kind to the point of making it entirely impracticable to put any limit at all upon the hours of railway labor, thereby taking away from the American people, the public at large, their right to have their lives and property guarded by these restrictions.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I do not wish the Senator to resign the floor for the present, but I want to say to him that I think he uses an incorrect term when he speaks of the suggestion as a criticism upon the bill, because the suggestion is not in the way of criticism, but in the line of an effort to perfect the bill, to relieve it from inperfections, and, if possible, to put it in such a shape as not only to serve the purpose which the Senator has in view, of protecting the traveling public, but, at the same time, of imposing as little hardship as possible both upon the railroads and their employees.

I venture to say that ninety-nine railroad employees out of a hundred, if brought before the Senator's committee, would say that in practical operation they would be in good condition upon the completion of a run to the away-from-home terminal after six or seven or eight hours at the outside of rest to start back on the run to their home terminal, and that it would be better for them, looking to the question of their physical recuperation, to say nothing of their comfort and domestic happiness, if they were permitted to take the larger part of their rest at their home terminal and not be required to take an undue proportion of it at the far-away terminal.

It is a very serious matter, Mr. President, to the men who have to be away from their homes most of the time that they should be required to stay a longer time at the far-away terminal than is necessary for recuperation. Eight hours will recuperate any man, and six hours will recuperate very many men, especially if upon the return to the home terminal they are to have fifteen or twenty hours, for a greater length of time for rest is always given to them at their home terminal. The period of rest is not equally divided between the home terminal and the far-away terminal.

Mr. DOLLIVER. And yet, Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia, I think, will admit that if the length of service is to be left practically to the convenience of the men and the purpose of this proposed law frustrated by anybody who thinks his comfort and his convenience would be promoted by such a course, it would go far toward destroying the value and vitality of such a statute.

Mr. BACON. Of course, that would be true if it would have the effect of destroying the statute, as suggested by the Senator; but the Senator seems to act upon the supposition that the Interstate Commerce Commission can be safely clothed with power to exercise a discretion as to the particulars in which these requirements should be followed. He says he thinks that this particular feature would be within the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission. If he thinks the Commission can be safely intrusted with it, I would suggest to the Senator that, if he will make the language so explicit as to remove any doubt upon that subject, we will not be in danger of having an agreement between the employees and the railroads which would destroy the efficacy of the bill, but we will be simply relying upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to make such exceptions as to particular cases as will prevent undue hardships to railroad employees, and at the same time protect the particular vital interests he has in view.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. President, the very reason that I felt constrained to offer the amendment was the difficulty in making a particular description of the circumstances which would warrant exemption from the operation of the law. In the proviso in the first section of the proposed substitute the language was made, as I thought, sufficiently broad to enable the Interstate Commerce Commission to prevent any hardship that ought to be prevented arising from the execution of the statute. I doubt the wisdom of making specific descriptions of any circumstances. If the Interstate Commerce Commission is given the discretion to make orders in the premises, I think it would be on the whole better to rely on them to take into consideration the case to which this memorial refers and all other cases involving exceptional circumstances.

Mr. BACON. I myself think that the Interstate Commerce Commission could, without any violence to the language or the proper construction of it, construe the provision found in the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa as covering this particular case. I will read the language:

Provided, That prior to August 1, 1907—

I think possibly that limitation ought to be removed—the Interstate Commerce Commission may, after full hearing and for good cause, specify extraordinary circumstances or special cases under which any such common carrier by railroad and its officers and agents shall be exempted from the provisions of this section.

That is very broad, and I am inclined to believe would cover a case of this kind; but I think the Senator would probably do well to enlarge it, at least I should myself favor an enlargement of that limit of time. I think it would be better not to have a limit of time, because emergencies may arise and new conditions may develop after that time.

Mr. DOLLIVER. The Senator from Georgia will observe that, according to the first section of the proposed substitute, the act itself does not take effect until the 1st of August, 1907.

Mr. BACON. Yes.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Of course, that date could either be advanced or it could be made earlier.

Mr. BACON. If the Senator will pardon me, I think that provision, which is a very wise one in giving some elasticity to the bill, ought to be one which could be availed of whenever the necessities of the case require it. I do not see why the Interstate Commerce Commission should not be permitted, after a certain date, to meet an evil which unforeseen conditions might cause to be developed.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Well, Mr. President, I admit there is great force in what the Senator from Georgia says about that, and there will be no objection, I think, to an amendment in that respect.

Mr. BACON. I confess I would be very much more reconciled to the Senator's amendment if he would take out that limitation of time and put it within the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission to specify causes of exemption whenever, in their judgment, an emergency arose or there were developments or changes in conditions which made it necessary to prevent hardships.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. We could amend it in any event at the very next session if we saw fit.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, I rise for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Idaho will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HEYBURN. I inquire whether it is in order now to move such an amendment of the unanimous-consent rule as will permit us to take up these amendments and vote upon them to-day, so that the bill can be reprinted as amended before we are compelled to vote on it to-morrow? I take it that what was done by unanimous consent can be changed by unanimous consent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Yes; it is within the province of the Senate to modify the unanimous-consent agreement by unanimous consent.

Mr. HEYBURN. Then I desire to ask unanimous consent——

Mr. LODGE. Oh, Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. HEYBURN. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. I do not think a unanimous-consent agreement ought to be modified in that way. We have no assurance that Senators who accepted the agreement and were present at the time it was entered into are here now at this moment. I have never known a unanimous-consent agreement modified in that way.

Mr. HEYBURN. I would say, Mr. President, that in the case of the pure-food bill the same motion was made, and I think I acceded to it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Request, not motion.

Mr. HEYBURN. Request, if you please.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, this is a very illuminating discussion we are having now, and I think it ought not to be interrupted by taking votes. I object to any modification of the agreement.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do.

Mr. PATTERSON. I would not interrupt the Senator from Wisconsin were it not that I realize he is quite willing to allow any Senator to occupy the floor.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that no Senator on this side can hear a word of his very interesting remarks.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, with the gracious consent of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], I want to suggest that this measure can hardly be classified under the head of a labor measure. The labor people of the world are struggling for an eight-hour day, while this is a measure that really provides for a sixteen-hour day. It is quite a commentary upon the railway service that a necessity exists to place a limitation upon the number of consecutive hours for which their employees may be compelled to labor.

I heartily concur in everything that has been said about the necessity for a measure of this kind, not so much for the benefit of the railway men, as for the traveling public. I can understand how men in many callings will be quite willing to work for a longer period than is profitable to their health and well-being on account of the additional earnings that lengthened employment will bring to them. Take the callings, Mr. President, that have secured recognition of the eight-hour day. Those who are engaged in them are willing to work for ten or eleven or twelve hours; but the eight-hour limitation is placed upon the day's work in order that they may get double pay for the extra time, or increased pay that may not amount to double the usual compensation. The limitation of the hours of work, except within special callings, is for the double purpose of affording the laborer an opportunity to maintain his health and vigor, and, at the same time and upon proper occasion, to increase his earnings.

I think the real necessity for this measure, or a similar measure that can be made effective, is for the protection of the traveling public. The many accidents that have occurred, resulting in deplorable loss of human life and the horrible maiming annually of thousands of people by reason of railway accidents, the result of the overworking of employees, constitute an appeal to Congress for legislation of this kind that should be heeded.

But I want to call the attention of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] to this feature of the substitute that he offered yesterday. There is nothing in it to prevent an employee being required to or voluntarily engaging in not only sixteen hours of consecutive labor, but practically thirty-one hours of consecutive labor. There must be some well-worded and carefully considered proviso to meet this objection that has not yet been thought of, or at least that has not yet been offered, in order that that fatal objection to this substitute and to the substitute that was reported to the Senate from the committee may be avoided. I have not been able to think out the precise phraseology that will be necessary to effectuate what the Senator from Iowa and other Senators desire to accomplish in a measure of this kind; but surely, Mr. President, when the first section of the substitute offered by the Senator from Iowa is considered, it must be perfectly plain that it does not meet the evil and in reality affords no remedy.

Let me read it for the consideration of the Senator from Iowa and other Senators:

That on and after August 1, 1907—

I am reading from the substitute of the Senator from Iowa, found on page 764 of to-day's RECORD—

That on and after August 1, 1907, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier by railroad in any Territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, or any of its officers or agents, or any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train to remain in service more than sixteen consecutive hours.

That is all that is necessary to read, because there is nothing in the section that follows that in anywise remedies the imperfection that the language which I have quoted discloses. It shall be unlawful to require or permit them to remain longer than sixteen consecutive hours.

Suppose, as I suggested yesterday, a man is in service for fifteen consecutive hours, and then there is an hour in which he is not in service. The consecutive labor has been broken and a new period of service may commence, which may last for sixteen hours without the common carrier making itself liable to the penalties of this measure. It seems to me that the defect is so apparent that the mere reading of the amendment and calling attention to the defect is a complete argument in support of the proposition I make. In addition, as suggested to me by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], this is language that would be strictly construed in any legal action.

The danger of voting upon this measure as it is, and without this particular feature of it being clearly before the Senate, is that a measure will be passed that will be wholly ineffectual in the purpose to be attained.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Does the Senator make the same objection to the bill itself? This is a substitute.

Mr. PATTERSON. Oh, yes; indeed, the same objection extends to the bill as reported from the committee.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It does if it contains the same language.

Mr. PATTERSON. It has precisely the same language, so far as that is concerned. I called the attention of the Senate to it yesterday.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I was not here then.

Mr. PATTERSON. That was to the bill as reported from the committee. So far as the measure itself is concerned, if proper language can be used to effectuate it, Mr. President, I am heartily in favor of it; and I discover upon reading a number of protests that have been sent to me that the objections made by the railroad men to the measure rest largely upon a misapprehension of its force and effect.

Surely most of the objections that are made to the bill can be obviated by simple amendments, amendments I have no doubt the Senate will acquiesce in.

I realize, Mr. President, looking at it from a certain light, that it is a drastic measure, but from the experience and knowledge of every Senator it is a measure of a character that is rendered absolutely necessary, having any regard whatever to the safety of those who must use these great lines of transportation. And as the miles of railway multiply, as the volume of travel increases, as the number of trains are multiplied, and as inventions and appliances are brought into existence for the purpose of securing safety in travel, the necessity for a measure such as this becomes the more glaring, for while you may perfect machinery and invent mechanical appliances, while the block system may be put into operation and other mechanical systems be applied to secure safety in railway travel, both to the public and to the railway men, there is one thing which can not be improved upon, and that is the endurance of the men to whom the running of trains must be intrusted. No ingenuity of the human mind, no mechanical skill, will amend the constitution of man. They will not eliminate the necessities of human nature. Men can work only a certain number of hours and retain their faculties at their highest. Especially can they not work beyond a certain time in such exacting employment as that of running railway trains. Therefore I take it, since the mind of the country as a whole and of the people as individuals is directed toward securing greater safety to the traveling public, Congress should, without any hesitation, do its share toward bringing about the reform.

So far as the bill itself is concerned, it no more affects railroads within States than does the safety-appliance law. That law requires that every railroad engine and every railroad car, whether it belongs to a local road or not, which is used in interstate commerce, shall be equipped with certain appliances. It is not necessary that they shall be continually used in interstate commerce. If they are a part of the equipment of a railroad which receives commerce from without the State, and are not set apart especially for local trade and local use, and if all traffic from without the State is not eliminated from the use of such cars and locomotives, they come within the meaning of the safety-appliance act by reason of the commerce clause of the Constitution. This proposed act goes no further than does the safety-appliance act. It goes just that far, and it ought not to be limited or curtailed by any very narrow construction when the purpose is to effectuate the remedy that the country is demanding.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. May I make a suggestion to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. PATTERSON. With pleasure.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Not only that, but it does not go nearly so far as the law applying to signals upon vessels carrying interstate commerce or that do not carry interstate commerce. It does not go nearly so far as that. Not only is what the Senator from Colorado says entirely true, but the act to which I refer goes very much further.

Mr. PATTERSON. I have no doubt that the statement made by the Senator from Indiana is correct. I have not had occasion, however, to examine the enactments with respect to that character of commerce or transportation. But I have, from a careful examination of the safety-appliance act and of the language of the pending bill, come to the conclusion that if the safety-appliance act is not in contravention of the powers of Congress under the interstate-commerce clause of the Constitution, then the language of the proposed act is in no wise in conflict with it.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator from Colorado permit me for a moment?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. Has the Senator examined the language of the safety-appliance act?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. BACON. I wish to ask him whether he agrees with the statement made yesterday by the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY] in which he used language which I will quote from page 762 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Yesterday the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY] said:

> The act providing for safety appliances prescribes that the vehicles employed by the road shall be engaged in interstate commerce.

I have not myself examined the act, and I do not rise for the purpose of controverting any statement, but I will ask the Senator from Colorado, if he has the act before him, whether or not the safety-appliance act in terms applies to all railroads engaged in interstate commerce and relates to all their equipment, or whether it is limited to such vehicles employed by the roads as are engaged in interstate commerce?

Mr. PATTERSON. The language of the Senator from Florida was open to misapprehension or misconstruction. I fully agree with the Senator from Florida that the railroad equipment, whether locomotives or cars, must be engaged in interstate commerce, but it does not follow that, in order to require the equipment of a car with the safety appliances provided for by Congress, there shall be interstate commerce at any particular time in any particular car. In other words, if the locomotives or cars are for the general use of the road, and if the car has in it that which is properly termed "interstate commerce," and it is hauled one day, it is not necessary that such commerce shall be in the car the next day, or the next, or the next, before the provisions of the act apply. They are locomotives and cars engaged in interstate commerce within the meaning of the law. That is my reading of the law, and such is the interpretation placed upon it by the United States court of my State.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. And by the Supreme Court.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. MALLORY. The Senator from Colorado stated that my language yesterday was subject to misapprehension or misconstruction. I do not exactly see from his statement how that is. I think, if the Senator has before him and will read that portion of the interstate-commerce act which relates to this particular matter, he will find that my statement covers it.

Mr. PATTERSON. If the Senator from Florida agrees with my interpretation of the language used in the interstate-commerce law, then I think I am justified in suggesting that it was to a certain extent misinterpreted by the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BACON. Misunderstood.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes; misunderstood.

Mr. BACON. I went simply by the letter of the language. I did not have the benefit of any comment made on it by the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PATTERSON. The language used in this bill, so far as that feature of it is concerned, is as carefully worded, in my opinion, as is the language of the safety-appliance act. And regret it as we may, however it may encroach upon the cherished notion of States rights and the wish of Senators and others that the States shall retain control of all such matters and there shall be no interference with them on the part of the Federal Government, the thing has already been accomplished; the Supreme Court has indorsed it; and the common experience of the country has approved it, so far as railroad transportation is concerned.

If we shall have an interstate-commerce law that exercises the most minute surveillance over the cars and engines of the railways of the country, as to the character of the goods transported, and if we are to have a safety-appliance law which simply relates to mechanical appliances for the protection of human life, then surely we ought to have a law that will apply to the men who are to man those roads and do the transporting; men who, if their faculties are impaired by reason of long continuous service, set at naught the skill and the capital of the great corporations in giving the protection to human life that human life is entitled to receive at the hands of these quasi public corporations.

I treat with the utmost respect the hundred and more letters I have received from railway employees. Some who wrote to me are engineers; others are conductors; others are telegraph operators. They all point out objections to particular provisions of the proposed law, but not one of them objects to the measure on principle. And most of the writers labor under a misapprehension of the provisions of the bill, even taking the bill in the raw, as it was reported from the committee which had it in charge. Most of the objections contained in the letters presented by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] are as to the mere matter of detail, as all the objections, so far as I have been able to discover them, contained in the letters sent to me, refer to details, and not a single protest has come up against the principle involved in the bill.

I take it, Mr. President, that we may safely say this is a proposition that is unassailable. I do not care what the railway engineers and conductors and brakemen say. We may take it as a proposition that should not even be assailed—that no man should be permitted to serve on a railway train after he has been at work in that employment for sixteen consecutive hours, no matter how well he may feel, no matter what he may conceive to be his capacity to run a train safely, no matter what inconvenience he may suffer by reason of being compelled to desist. It is a proposition that can not be assailed successfully, when we take into consideration the great charges that are placed under his control and management, that no man should be permitted in the cab of a locomotive or to handle a brake, or even to collect fares from the passengers, after he has been at work for sixteen consecutive hours. There may be isolated cases where facilities will not be impaired, but they will be so isolated that they will hardly constitute an exception to a general rule.

So my motion about it is that those who have this measure in charge should perfect it, and perfect it by to-morrow. They should consider well the language that ought to be used to effect the reform that is necessary. Having done that, speaking for myself, I will vote for this measure more cheerfully than for almost any other measure that has received my vote during my service here.

Mr. SPOONER. May I ask the Senator from Colorado a question before he takes his seat?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. SPOONER. Would it not improve the language of the section to say "to remain on duty" more than sixteen hours instead of "to remain at work?"

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator made a suggestion that I think has great weight, but can he find some language to overcome the difficulty he suggested?

Mr. BEVERIDGE (to Mr. PATTERSON). Have you thought of any language?

Mr. PATTERSON. I have thought of some such suggestion as the following: Instead of saying "who have been at work for sixteen consecutive hours," use the language "who have been at work sixteen hours during a twenty-four-hour period."

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It is not "at work." It is "remain on duty" in the bill.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes; "remain on duty" for a certain number of hours during a fixed period.

Mr. SPOONER. I had in my hand a copy of the substitute.

Mr. PILES. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. PILES. What would the Senator think of an amendment of this character? On page 1, line 8, of the substitute erase the word "consecutive" and insert after the word "hours" the words "during a period of twenty-six consecutive hours." In line 10 erase the word "consecutive" and, after the word "hours," insert "during such period;" so that it would read:

That on and after August 1, 1907, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier by railroad in any Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or any of its officers or agents, or any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train to remain in service more than sixteen hours during a period of twenty-six consecutive hours, or to require or permit any such employee who has been in service sixteen hours during such period to perform further service without having had at least ten hours for rest.

I take it for granted that the point desired to be made is, that no man shall work more than sixteen hours, and that he shall also have ten hours for rest. So, if you fix a period of twenty-six hours and say he shall not remain in service more than sixteen hours during that period, it seems to me it would cover the case.

Mr. PATTERSON. As I now comprehend the suggestion made by the Senator from Washington, it would be much better than the language used, because the language now in the bill is totally ineffective, in my opinion. I think, however, in view of the suggestions made and the apparently general acquiescence in the proposition that the bill is ineffective at present, that we ought, before the hour for voting arrives, agree upon language that will meet the trouble.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. CLAY. I wish to call attention to the fact that this bill evidently has not been very carefully drawn. If Senators will look on page 6, line 24, they will see that it provides as follows:

That to enable the Interstate Commerce Commission to execute and enforce the provisions of this act it shall employ such inspectors or other persons as may be necessary, and its agents or employees thereunto duly authorized by order of said Commission shall have the power to administer oaths, interrogate witnesses, take testimony, and require the production of books and papers.

That would authorize and empower the Interstate Commerce Commission, if it saw proper to do so, to employ a hundred or five hundred or even a thousand inspectors, and to fix such salaries as it might see proper to fix. As I understand——

Mr. BACON. Will my colleague permit me to ask him if he does not think it would require several thousand inspectors——

Mr. CLAY. I should hardly think that many.

Mr. BACON. All over the United States, with the 200,000 miles of railway?

Mr. CLAY. I believe there are about twelve or fifteen hundred thousand employees, and probably it would require a great number of inspectors, but if Congress is going to authorize and empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to employ inspectors to travel over the country and ascertain whether or not the proposed law has been violated, the number of inspectors who are to be employed ought to be named and the salaries of the inspectors ought to be fixed in the bill.

I can certainly never agree to support a measure which empowers the Interstate Commerce Commission to employ just as many inspectors as they want to and to fix the salary. The bill certainly ought to be amended in that particular.

Mr. PATTERSON. That is a matter as to which the Senator from Iowa can answer better than I can. But I would say this on my own account: Having in mind the paramount necessity for a measure of this kind, we could well afford to allow that provision to pass substantially as it is in order that during a year or so the Interstate Commerce Commission may have an opportunity to determine from actual experience the number of inspectors who ought to be employed and the salaries, and then, on report to Congress, let Congress take up the subject and determine in a more definite way what should be done in that direction.

I do not care about stickling at small things, and I say that without in any way intending to reflect upon the suggestion made by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY]. But that is a temporary matter. It would be permitted to last only so long as Congress should determine. There should be considerable latitude for experiment, actual experiment, before Congress is required to fix the number of inspectors; and I am inclined to think that the present Interstate Commerce Commission would not be any too extravagant in the matter either of the number of inspectors or the salary to be paid.

But, Mr. President, there is no trouble at all in suggesting objections to any such measure as this. It is drastic. There is no mistake about it. It will require, if the proper measure is passed, reorganization to a very considerable extent by railroads of their schedules—reorganization of the lengths of runs, it may be, and of the trains that are sent out. But that is a mere matter of detail also. When a wise and effective measure of this kind is passed, it will be discovered, in the future as in the past, that the railway companies are quite equal to the emergency. There will be no trouble about the readjustment by railway companies of schedules and the like when there is money in sight, when it is necessary to increase traffic, either freight or passenger. There ought not to be and there will not be any serious difficulty in the readjustment of schedules when Congress requires it at their hands, where the prime object to be secured is the preservation of human life, the preservation of the limbs and the bodies of those who travel on the trains as well as of those who are engaged in operating them.

I ask leave to have printed in connection with my remarks four or five of the hundred-odd letters I have received. They are perhaps fair samples of the rest and discuss different topics, and really contain all of the objections that are urged.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, consent is given.

The letters are as follows:

DENVER, COLO., January 3, 1907.

Hon. T. M. PATTERSON,
Senator from Colorado.

DEAR SIR: The present session of the House of Congress will consider and vote upon the enactment as a law of what is called the "sixteen-hour law," the object of which is to limit the hours of daily service of railroad employees.

I desire to register my objections to the adoption of this measure and its enactment as a law as a whole; in particular to that section reading "every violation of this law subjects both the company and the individual official who permits an employee to work more than sixteen hours or to resume work without taking for himself ten hours' rest to a fine of $1,000." Under this law were I, a train dispatcher, to allow a train and enginemen and operators to remain on duty over sixteen hours I would be subject to a fine of $1,000, and were I unable to pay it, imprisonment in a Federal prison.

There are and will continue to be occasions when it is impossible to prevent trainmen, enginemen, and operators from being on duty over sixteen hours, as in case of wrecks or failure of telegraph wires, and as a railroad employee of nearly nineteen years' experience I know that railroad companies do not compel employees of this class to work over sixteen hours, or even that many, where it is possible to release or relieve them.

The enforcement of this law would compel me, in order to protect my property and personal liberty and the welfare of my family, to give up my profession and begin over again at probably 40 per cent of my present salary, and I at an age when one is almost too old to enter a new profession.

As I am a registered voter of Denver and you are my personal representative, I ask that you use all your efforts to defeat the passage of the sixteen-hour law.

Respectfully, yours,
THOS. W. MCKINLEY,
Train Dispatcher, Union Pacific Railway.

DENVER, COLO., January 3, 1907.

Hon. T. M. PATTERSON, Senator.

DEAR SIR: I desire to respectfully and firmly protest against the enactment of what is known as the proposed "sixteen-hour law," its purpose being to limit the hours of service of railway employees, especially that part which reads, "Every violation of this law subjects both the company and the 'individual official' who permits an employee to work more than sixteen hours or to resume work without taking ten hours' rest subject to a fine of $1,000."

I am a train dispatcher, with fifteen years' experience, and know that railway companies do not wish their men to work more than sixteen hours without rest, and know that the rank and file of railroad men do not want such a law.

There are occasionally circumstances and conditions—storms, wrecks, washouts, etc.—where it is impossible for a dispatcher to prevent train and engine crews and telegraph operators from being on duty over sixteen hours without great hardship to them, also to the traveling public. Yet you could not explain it to the ordinary jury. The train dispatchers of this country are intelligent, law-abiding citizens, but with such an enormous fine or the Federal prison staring us in the face we would be compelled to seek another way of earning a livelihood.

I am a resident and voter of Denver and trust that you will give this bill your earnest opposition.

Yours, respectfully,
GEO. T. MEGINNESS,
Dispatcher, Union Pacific Railroad.

DENVER, COLO., January 3, 1907.

Hon. T. M. PATTERSON, Senator.

DEAR SIR: I desire to respectfully but firmly protest against the enactment of what is known as the proposed "sixteen-hour law," which has for its purpose "to limit" the hours of service of railroad employees, particularly that part which reads, "Every violation of this law subjects both the company and individual official who permits any employee to work more than sixteen hours or to resume work without taking ten hours' rest to a fine of $1,000," as there are times and circumstances when it is impossible to prevent a crew or an operator from being on duty over sixteen hours and yet be almost impossible to explain to the ordinary juror why, and to subject the train dispatchers of the United States to such an enormous and drastic fine it would be impossible to pay, and the Federal prison, being our next alternative, will tend to compel the train dispatcher to give up such a vocation, as we can not take such chances, and after twenty years' experience as a train dispatcher and knowing how such a law will work the most untold hardship on railroad men in trying to do that which at times is simply an impossibility.

I beg you to do all in your power to defeat the said law.

Yours, truly,
J. G. BLATTENBERG,
Dispatcher, Union Pacific Railroad.

DENVER, COLO., January 3, 1907.

Hon. T. M. PATTERSON,
Senator from Colorado.

DEAR SIR: I desire to place this, my personal protest, against the proposed enactment known as the "sixteen-hour law," which has for its purpose to limit the hours of service of railway employees, particularly to that part of the bill which reads, "Every violation of this law subjects both the company and the individual official who permits any employee to work more than sixteen hours, or to resume work without taking for himself ten hour's rest, to a fine of $1,000."

There are occasionally conditions and circumstances when it would be an absolutely impossible matter for a train dispatcher to prevent an operator or train crew from being on duty over sixteen hours, nor could an explanation be made for the reason that the circumstances leading up to such an event could never be satisfactorily explained to an ordinary jury before whom such cases should be tried. The technicalities of train rules, rights of trains, their superiority, washouts, and kindred troubles could never be explained in such a manner as would secure an intelligent verdict, even should this jury be made up of experienced railroad men, which would hardly be probable, as they are seldom required to serve in this capacity, and I doubt if the legal fraternity would allow satisfactory evidence given unless it would answer their purpose.

If the train dispatchers are subjected to such an enormous fine—$1,000—and I doubt if even one-fifth of them could pay this fine—the result then would be your Federal prison would be occupied by many capable railroad officials. Personally, I am not ready to wear regulation prison garb. My physique, built on the "corpulent lines," would hardly become the horizontal line of this Government textile.

Therefore I protest vigorously and firmly against this law, and to consider such a proposition to make the fraternity of train dispatchers, composed of intelligent, true, loyal American citizens, subject to the penalty proposed by this outrageous law is certainly beyond any attempt yet made by our lawmakers.

I assert positively and without prejudice that those who have proposed such a measure do not represent the better and more intelligent element or the rank and file of the railroad fraternity, and having discussed this matter with quite a number of railroad men in the different departments, I find them a unit in condemning the measure and those who proposed it.

It is no doubt true that those who propose the measure have a following of considerable proportion whom they have induced, through misrepresentations and otherwise, to lend their support to the measure, holding out inducements that are neither understood or in the possibilities of railroading, and I trust that you will give this measure your earnest consideration and hearty opposition.

Yours, respectfully,
H. W. BARRE,
Dispatcher, Union Pacific Railroad.

DENVER, COLO., January 4, 1907.

Hon. T. M. PATTERSON,
U. S. Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am inclosing herewith a number of letters from various fellow railroad employees asking that you use your best endeavors to defeat the recent Senate bill which provides that an employee shall not work or be permitted to work more than sixteen consecutive hours and must have at least ten hours for rest before being allowed to work.

In addition to these letters, I would like to state that in almost any instance where a man feels that he is in need of rest he has always been able to secure same by calling for it, and I know of no case where an employee has been punished by the railroad company for refusing to go out when he had been on duty as much as sixteen hours and had not had sufficient rest.

To diminish our salaries by restricting the number of hours we shall work, and add to our living expenses by compelling us to tie up on the road when the sixteen hours is up, probably only a short distance from home, I do not think is exactly just to us, and it is with the hope that you will do all in your power to defeat this bill that we are sending you these letters, which we have written of our own free will and not upon the instigation of any railroad or its officers.

Yours, very respectfully,
W. B. MORLEDGE,
Conductor, Chicago and Texas Railway,
Denver, Colo.

GENERAL PROTECTIVE BOARD, BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE FIREMEN AND ENGINEERS,
UNION PACIFIC SYSTEM,
Cheyenne, Wyo., December 31, 1906.

Hon. THOMAS M. PATTERSON,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: Referring to my telegram dated at Omaha, December 29, reading as follows:

"The General Protective Board of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Union Pacific Railroad, desires that you consider this a formal protest against the passage of so-called 'sixteen-hour law,' the purpose of which is to limit the hours of service of railway employees. Letter of explanation follows."

I desire to give you briefly some of our reasons for protesting against the passage of this bill. If it becomes a law, it will unquestionably decrease the earnings of all railway employees engaged in train service, as the companies will shorten their passenger and freight districts in order to enable them to get trains and crews over the road within the sixteen-hour limit, and as a matter of protection will increase the tonnage of trains in order to offset the expenditures incident to shortening of districts and the operation thereof. A greater number of men will have to be employed so the railroad companies will be in a position to comply with the law, as it necessarily will cause men to lay over at terminals greatly in excess of the ten hours' lay-over clause provided in the bill, and for this reason, therefore, it will require more men, and they can not possibly make fair average mileage and earn fair monthly wages, as they are paid on a mileage basis.

Trainmen's living expenses away from home will be increased about 33⅓ per cent over the present system on account of their being required to be away from home terminals so much longer. The railroad companies will pool engines and cabooses, which has been tried heretofore and resulted very unsatisfactorily. Trainmen away from home terminals live in and prepare a great many of their meals in their cabooses. Pooling the engines and cabooses will prevent this being done.

A large percentage of railroad employees in train service own their own homes, representing the savings of a lifetime. In this western country a great many of the terminals are what might be termed "railroad towns," and are supported almost exclusively by employees of railroad companies. If terminals are changed such towns would be abandoned, and the loss to employees would be enormous, practically meaning the financial ruin of many of them. It would also deprive the children of employees of educational advantages which they now enjoy, as it would be years before similar facilities would be available at the new terminals.

It is now impossible to man western railroads with experienced men. The passage of this bill would require the company to largely increase their force, which could only be done by employing new and inexperienced men, thereby creating greater risk and hazard of accident than the overworking of men could possibly cause. It would also make the positions of railroad employees in train service less inviting, and a great many of our old men would seek other avocations, thus increasing the number of new men in the service. The experienced railroad men alone realize that a great number of accidents to-day are caused by the "student" or inexperienced man, and they only can appreciate the care and vigilance which must be exercised in watching the movements and actions of new men in connection with the operation and safety of life and property intrusted to their care. If the public realized, as does the experienced railroad man, the element of danger that exists in introducing new men into the service it would be very reluctant in giving support to this measure.

The compulsory ten-hours'-rest clause in the bill will compel men to tie up at times for rest at points where there are no accommodations, and at the end of ten hours they will be in worse physical condition than if they had continued to the end of their run.

Passenger and freight runs on the western railroads are adjusted so that under normal conditions the men make their runs within the usual hours constituting a day's labor. Excessive number of hours on duty is the exception, not the rule.

The apparent object of this bill is to materially reduce the number of accidents, the number of hours on duty, and the tonnage of trains in order to get them over the road at a higher average rate of speed. So far as the accident feature is concerned, there has never been an accident on the Union Pacific Railroad, to our knowledge, caused by employees being on duty an excessive number of hours. Regarding the reduction of the average number of hours on duty, and a reduction in the tonnage of trains, it will have the opposite effect, for, as stated above, the company, in order to protect itself and offset its increased expenses made necessary by shortening the districts, will increase the tonnage, and instead of having over 80 per cent of its trains averaging less than twelve hours over the district, as is the case on the Union Pacific to-day and has been for some months, the greater percentage of the trains will average closer to the sixteen-hour limit on account of the increased tonnage.

Yours, truly, C. V. MCLAUGHLIN.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE obtained the floor.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Will the Senator from Wisconsin yield to me for a moment?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I desire to present an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the pending bill, and inasmuch as the time is so short before we shall be called upon to vote on the amendments and the bill, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be printed in the RECORD to-morrow morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that the amendment proposed by him may be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. GALLINGER. And also in the usual form.

Mr. BACON. If it is not too long, Mr. President, I hope it may be read now.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It is very short.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read at the request of the Senator from Georgia.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier by railroad in any Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train to remain in service more than sixteen consecutive hours, except when on account of an emergency, which by reasonable care on the part of such carrier, its officers or agents, could not have been avoided, he is prevented from reaching his terminal; or, except in such emergency, to require or permit any such employee, having been in service as aforesaid, to go again into service without having had at least ten hours for rest.

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad, or any of its officers or agents, to require or permit any employee engaged in or connected with the movement of any train by which such commerce is conducted, or to require or permit any employee engaged or connected with the movement of any train by which such commerce is affected, to remain in service more than sixteen consecutive hours, except when on account of an emergency, which by reasonable care on the part of such common carrier, its officers or agents, could not have been avoided, he is prevented from reaching his terminal; or, except in such emergency, to require or permit any such employee, having been in service as aforesaid, to go again into service without having had at least ten hours for rest.

SEC. 2. That any such common carrier, or any of its officers or agents, knowingly violating any of the provisions of this act, or any employee who by any false representation or concealment of fact procures himself to be employed in violation of the provisions of this act, is hereby declared to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000 for each and every such violation, to be recovered in a suit or suits to be brought by the United States district attorney in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction in the locality where such violation shall have been committed; and it shall be the duty of such district attorney to bring such suits upon duly verified information being lodged with him of such violation having occurred, but no such suit shall be brought after the expiration of one year from the date of such violation; and it shall also be the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to fully investigate all cases of the violation of this act and to lodge with the proper district attorneys information of any such violations as may come to its knowledge.

SEC. 3. That the provisions of this act shall not apply to employers operating wreck or relief trains.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will yield for a question.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to make an inquiry. I understand that we have agreed to vote to-morrow at 3 o'clock. I understood the Chair to rule that we could not vote on the amendments until 3 o'clock.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not so ruled in connection with the pending bill.

Mr. TELLER. Then the statement was made by some Senator that we could not vote before 3.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is not aware that the question has been addressed to the Chair.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to know whether in the opinion of the Chair we can vote on the amendments prior to 3 o'clock to-morrow.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that under the terms of the unanimous-consent agreement there can be no vote upon amendments before 3 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. TELLER. I believe the Chair is right in that opinion. I think that is the construction which has been put upon this kind of an agreement. I wish to ask the Senator who has the bill in charge if he will not call up the bill as early as possible to-morrow to give some of us a chance to say a few words about the bill, which apparently we will not have an opportunity to say to-night.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I was about to give notice to the Senate that as soon as the routine business is disposed of to-morrow I shall move to take up the bill, so that as much time as possible may be given to its consideration. I had also thought of asking unanimous consent that the Senate meet at 11 o'clock instead of 12 to-morrow, that we might have another hour for the consideration of the measure.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Wisconsin was kind enough to mention that to me, and I would gladly consent but for the fact that there is a full meeting of the Committee on Appropriations at half past 10 to-morrow, and I know it will last until 12, for the consideration of an appropriation bill which will be up before the committee at that time.

Mr. WARREN. I would also like to state that the Committee on Military Affairs will met at 11 to-morrow morning, and that will require the attendance of some thirteen Senators. I do not believe it will be practicable to get a quorum of the Senate before noon.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Then I will simply say that as soon as the routine business is disposed of in the morning I will move to take up the bill for consideration.

I have here a communication with respect to such amendments as were proposed to the bill prior to yesterday, from the legislative representative of the several brotherhoods of trainmen, and, as I think all Senators must realize that a discussion of the several amendments from the standpoint of an intelligent railway employee will be helpful to the consideration of the bill by the Senate, I shall ask the Secretary to read the letter which I have from Mr. Fuller.

First, with reference to Mr. Fuller's right to speak for the railway men of the country, I wish to read the following:

BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS,
BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE FIREMEN,
ORDER OF RAILWAY CONDUCTORS,
BROTHERHOOD OF RAILROAD TRAINMEN,
Cleveland, Ohio, November 21, 1906.

To whom these presents may concern, greeting:

This is to certify that the bearer hereof, Mr. H. R. Fuller, whose signature appears below, has been duly chosen to serve as the representative of the above-named organizations at Washington, D. C., during the second session of the Fifty-ninth Congress, in matters pertaining to national legislation.

W. S. STONE,
Grand Chief Engineer Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.
JOHN HANNAHAN,
Grand Master Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen.
A. B. GARRETSON,
Grand Chief Order of Railway Conductors.
O. H. MORRISSEY,
Grand Master Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.
H. R. FULLER, Representative.

As showing further authority upon Mr. Fuller's part to speak for the national organizations in this matter, I will read a letter addressed by Mr. Fuller November 3, 1905, to the President, which I have permission to present:

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 3, 1905.

To the honorable the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: At conference between Grand Chief Engineer Stone, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Grand Master Hannahan, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; Grand Master Morrissey, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and Grand Chief Conductor Clark, of the Order of Railroad Conductors, Mr. H. R. Fuller was again selected as legislative representative for the above-named organizations.

The undersigned were instructed by this conference to respectfully request that, if it has not already been done, you invite the attention of Congress to the following matters of legislation in which the railroad employees are vitally interested and on some of which they have long sought favorable action:

First. What is commonly termed "anti-injunction legislation." We still favor the enactment of a law which will prohibit the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes, except after hearing.

Second. Employers' liability. We feel that there is great need for some legislation on this subject. We realize the difficulties, if not the impossibility, of eliminating the doctrine of "contributory negligence," and while our representatives will seek to have reintroduced the measure that was before the last Congress, we shall be ready to meet such reasonable amendments thereto as may appear to be necessary.

Third. We think the attention of the Congress should be called to the importance of preventing railroad companies from keeping employees on duty so many consecutive hours as to render it simply impossible for them to perform with efficiency and safety the duties devolving upon them and upon the faithful performance of which so much depends.

Respectfully, yours,

H. R. FULLER, Secretary.

Attest:

E. E. CLARK, Chairman.

I have just received during the afternoon the following telegram from the grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Mr. W. S. Stone:

CHICAGO, ILL., January 7, 1907.

Hon. R. M. LA FOLLETTE,
Senator Wisconsin, Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

I am informed that amendment to hours of service bill have been introduced by Senators FORAKER and GALLINGER. The purport of these amendments are to penalize employees for working more than limited hours on duty. We believe this is an unjust and unfair discrimination, as the employee must either remain on duty or be forced to place himself in a position of insubordination to his superior officer. You can readily understand that he can not afford to do this, as it would jeopardize his position, and we earnestly protest against any such amendments being enacted, and we hope you will do everything possible to prevent same.

W. S. STONE,
Grand Chief Engineer Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers.

I have received from other organizations telegrams indorsing and approving this legislation. The first that I will read is as follows:

FOND DU LAC, WIS., January 8, 1907.

Hon. ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Lodge 516, Brotherhood Trainmen, representing 100 men, urges your support bill S. 5133.

J. B. HARRIS, Secretary.

I have also received the following telegram to the same purport:

MILWAUKEE, WIS., January 7.

Senator ROBERT LA FOLLETTE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The members Order Railway Conductors, Division 259, Fond du Lac, Wis., urge the passage of the sixteen-hour labor-limit bill.

V. O. ZIMMERMAN,
Secretary No. 259, Fond du Lac, Wis.

Also the following telegram:

SUPERIOR, WIS., January 8.

Senator LA FOLLETTE (or SPOONER),
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

We earnestly urge you to use all your influence in passing bills 9328 and 5133.

D. D. BONER,
Secretary Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 450.

I received also this morning in the mail a letter from the State chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen of Indiana, in which he states:

Your sixteen-hour bill is a good one, and all the railroad men in the United States want this bill to pass, but the railroad officials are compelling men to sign petitions against it.

I will send to the desk and ask to have read the letter of Mr. Fuller analyzing and discussing somewhat the amendments that have been offered to the bill prior to those offered yesterday and to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

H. R. FULLER, 216 NEW JERSEY AVENUE NW.,
Washington, D. C., January 8, 1907.

Hon. R. M. LA FOLLETTE,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: In compliance with your personal request that I write you regarding the proposed amendments to the pending bill, S. 5133, limiting the hours of service of railroad employees, I respectfully submit the following:

The words "unavoidable accident," as contained in the amendment to section 1, offered by Senator GALLINGER, are susceptible to too broad interpretation, and in our minds would open wide the door for evading the law. Under it an accident might be classed as "unavoidable" by applying the circumstances existing at the time it happened, yet the accident might be the result of previous mismanagement on the part of the railroad company, which would be a very difficult matter to prove. For instance, a locomotive might give way when out on the road, and the real or primary cause of its failure was the lack of proper inspection or repairs before it was sent out from the terminal. Hot journals on cars are generally the result of lack of inspection and care at terminals by the managements, but it would be a difficult matter to prove this after these journals had become heated on the road and the contents of their packing boxes had been consumed by fire. The word "casualty," as it appears in this section as reported by the committee and as proposed by you, covers all real unavoidable accidents, and should be sufficient.

The words "except in an emergency," as proposed by Senator FORAKER to section 1, would, if adopted, render nugatory the whole bill, as emergencies can come as a result of bad management and neglect as well as from unavoidable causes.

The words "having been on duty for sixteen consecutive hours immediately before," as proposed by Senator MCLAURIN, we have no objections to.

The amendment of Senator FORAKER, substituting "eight" for "ten," is objectionable for the reason that eight hours' rest is not sufficient for an employee who has been on duty sixteen hours.

The substitution of the words "off duty" for the words "for rest," as proposed by Senator GALLINGER, are not objectionable, providing the period "off duty" is not fixed at less than ten hours, as there is considerable difference in allowing a man ten hours for rest and allowing ten hours off duty, as considerable time is consumed in going to and returning from their homes before and after they have taken rest.

Would suggest that the last two amendments on pages 4 and 5, which were offered by Senator MCLAURIN and yourself, which provide periods of eight hours' rest for employees who have been on duty ten and less than sixteen hours, be not adopted.

The words "or employee knowingly," as offered by Senator GALLINGER, and which appear at the top of page 6, would penalize the employee the same as the railroad company, and we seriously object to this for various reasons.

First, we object on broad grounds to having the railroad employees of the country put under a criminal code enacted by Congress, and we believe the passage of such an amendment would serve as an entering wedge by which the adoption of such a code will be sought. Railroad employees can not, and do not, claim or ask immunity for offenses committed by them, but like all others they prefer to answer to all such accusations under the laws and in the courts of the States of which they are citizens rather than to answer in the Federal courts, where, in such cases, their past experience has taught them their liberties and rights as citizens have not been properly conserved.

Second. The carrier creates the conditions under which men are required to work, and it is to it that the Government should look for the safe transportation of persons and property. No employee in train service can work excessive hours without the knowledge of the carrier, as a record is kept, or should be kept, showing the time all such employees go on or are relieved from duty; and it is therefore impossible for an employee to deceive the carrier as to the time he has been off or on duty. The adoption of such an amendment would in many cases defeat the purpose of the act, for the reason that it would prevent the Government from using the employee as a witness, as the employee could not be compelled to give testimony which would incriminate himself.

To those acquainted with the practical operation of a railroad it can be readily seen that such a provision in the law would be used to defeat its purpose in this way.

A train dispatcher, who is the person responsible for the prompt movement of trains, could, in order to cover up his own mistakes which had caused delay, get the employees within a few miles of their homes within the maximum time, and knowing the great temptation for the men to get home, would say to them that he did not know how long they had been on duty, and influence them to stretch the time sufficiently to enable them to reach their homes. It would encourage this practice, which would have the effect of delay rather than an effort to move trains with dispatch.

This same argument applies to the amendment proposed by Senator FORAKER.

The amendment of Senator GALLINGER, on page 6, which requires that suits shall be brought within one year, is also objectionable. The general statute of limitations, as I understand it, is three years, and we can see no good reason why a railroad corporation—an artificial person—should be exempted from it.

The amendment offered by Senator GALLINGER, which provides "that the provisions of this act shall not apply to crews of wrecking and relief trains," is proper, and either it or the similar one offered by you should be adopted.

The amendment offered by Senator MCLAURIN, on page 7, and which is to be a new section numbered 3, should not be adopted, for the reason that employees of railroad companies are not given greater rights for recovery for injuries in the national employers' liability law, and we think this amendment would narrow that right on account of it being a subsequent act.

Very truly, yours,

H. R. FULLER,
Legislative Representative.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes, sir.

Mr. KEAN. Will the Senator from Illinois yield to me?

Mr. CULLOM. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey, who has some matter which he desires to put in the RECORD.

Mr. KEAN. I have here an analysis of the so-called "Mosely Accident Table," made by Mr. F. C. Rice, of Chicago, which I should like to have printed in the RECORD.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. It is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

THE MOSELY ACCIDENT TABLE.

There has been filed in the House Committee upon Interstate Commerce and published over the country a table prepared in the office of the secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission of 86 cases compiled from the accident reports of railroad companies purporting to be, all of them, cases of accidents caused by men being overworked, and therefore proofs of the necessity for this legislation.

This table covers a period of five years. Thousands of these accident reports are filed every year. From these thousands some one has culled out and tabled every instance during the five years where, through any construction of language, inference can be drawn that a man connected with that freight train was "on duty" sixteen hours or over. Fourteen of them show on their face that no employee was on duty over sixteen hours and would not be covered by the proposed bill. They should not, therefore, have been included in the table.

The phrase "hours on duty" has been construed by the compiler in a manner calculated to mislead. Many cases are cited as showing an employee "twenty-four hours on duty," or "nineteen hours on duty," which were round-trip runs, and the crew had six to nine hours for rest and sleep at the turning point and were therefore not over ten hours on continuous duty. The compiler has ignored these rest hours and called the entire period that the man was under pay as "hours on duty."

Investigation shows that few of these 86 cases were, in fact, instances which this law ought to cover. Several of them are turn runs—that is, round-trip runs on branches which it is not practicable to operate in any other manner. Some of them were wrecking crews engaged in opening road obstructed by snow or landslides, and should not have been inserted in the table at all.

While the table covers a period of years, it is not arranged chronologically nor alphabetically, nor are all the accidents upon one railroad grouped together. The principle which seems to have guided the compiler is that of effectiveness. He has placed at the head of the list every case where it was possible to use the words "Asleep on track." This may be effective, but can hardly be regarded as fair.

In this table the reports of the railroads themselves are made to constitute the strongest argument that is put forward for this measure, but, as a whole, it is a misrepresentation. The reports, as actually filed by the companies, do not justify the statements there ascribed to them.

This is clear from the following comments by the officials who made a majority of the reports; in other cases the companies have not yet furnished the facts.

CASE NO. 8.

Statement of cause: "Fell asleep while sitting on track; struck by train. Hours on duty, 17."

The facts: The language of the company's report to the Commission was: "It is supposed that he fell asleep while sitting on the track." This man had not been on duty 16 hours. He started at 5.05 a. m., arriving at Conway yard at 12.56, a run of less than 8 hours, and then laid at Conway yard 3 hours 4 minutes. He met with the accident at 8.55 p. m., or after 4 hours 55 minutes of service. It was impossible to make the crew take 10 hours' rest at Conway yard. They would very much oppose it; there were no facilities there, and the crew would very much prefer to make the return trip and rest at home.

CASE NO. 9.

Statement of cause of accident: "Sat on track; went to sleep; struck by train. Hours on duty, 23."

The facts: Weaver, the brakeman, had made the going out trip from Springfield to Newberg in 6 hours 35 minutes. He had 1 hour and 30 minutes for rest; his train was called for 5 p. m., he expecting to make the return trip in about 6 hours. He was delayed 2 hours, switching, at Newburg; 3 hours at Lebanon, meeting passenger trains. He was thus on duty continuously from 5 p. m. until arrival at Marshfield at 7.38 the next morning, where he was injured, 14 hours 38 minutes. At the time he was called for the return trip he had only been on duty 6 hours 35 minutes, and could then have had additional rest if he had asked for it.

Before starting he had had more than 19 hours' rest.

CASE NO. 10.

Statement of cause of accident: "Engineman dropped crown sheet, blowing out grates, ash pans, and connections. Hours on duty, 23."

The facts: The company's report shows that in a snowshed the engine dropped crown sheet; the fireman was in the act of putting coal in the fire box when the accident occurred. The fireman had been on duty 11 hours 25 minutes. The engineer had been on duty 11 hours 25 minutes. The only member of the crew who is claimed to have been on duty 23 hours was the brakeman, who had nothing whatever to do with the accident. No member of the crew who had anything to do with the accident had been on duty longer than 11 hours 25 minutes, with 15 hours' previous rest. The cause of the accident was remote from any question of hours on duty.

CASE NO. 19.

Statement of cause: "Out flagging; went to sleep on track. Hours on duty, blank."

The facts: This case should not have been reported. The company's report states: "No one saw the accident;" so that it is mere assumption as to the cause of the injury.

The proposed sixteen-hour law would have no effect in this case; the accident was the result of a wreck, which occurred before the crew had been on duty sixteen hours. The whole trouble was due to a casualty beyond the control of the company.

CASE NO. 20.

Statement of cause: "Crew falling asleep. Hours on duty, 27."

The facts: The statement made by the company to the Commission was as follows: "Had been on duty 27 hours, with 4 hours intervening sleep, behind a landslide."

Additional facts regarding this crew are given as follows: "It was a round trip, and the crew was on duty 11 hours 55 minutes east bound, and spent four hours of this time behind a landslide. At the terminal they had 3 hours 12 minutes further rest before making the west-bound run, which occupied 10 hours, 23 minutes. They made no request for further rest. Their longest continuous duty was 11 hours 55 minutes, east bound, of which 4 hours was behind a landslide."

CASE NO. 25.

Statement of cause: "Running down grade too fast. Hours on duty, 18."

The facts: Collision was due entirely to the manner in which the engineer handled his train of 33 freight cars. He was running down grade at a high rate of speed, and did not begin to hold up in time to pass through the station under proper control; when he found the semaphore set against him, he could not get the train stopped in time to avoid collision. No claim was made that hours on duty had anything to do with the excessive speed of train.

CASE NO. 26.

Statement of cause: "Running at high rate of speed. Hours on duty, 18½."

The facts: The length of time on duty had no bearing on this accident. The company's report states: "The responsibility for the accident rests with the engineer of extra 203. It appears that he turned over the hill, approaching Guthrie, at too high rate of speed, and did not start to apply air brakes at the proper time. He also wasted the air pressure by making two light applications, so that when he found that he was not going to stop before reaching the crossing, and attempted to make an emergency application, he was unable to get the proper effect from the brakes."

CASE NO. 28.

Statement of cause: "Snow plow ran into rear of caboose. Hours on duty, 18."

The facts: This train was fighting snow in the dark, opening up the line of road, and it was an impossibility to relieve the crew at the end of sixteen hours. In the confusion the snow plow struck the rear of a freight train standing on the main track at station.

CASE NO. 29.

Statement of cause: "Let engine run at other end of switch and fouled main track. Hours on duty, 18."

The facts: The schedule time of the train was 9 hours 30 minutes. The train on this day met with very unusual delays; but a great part of the time was put in at stations where there was nothing for the crew to do. The accident really occurred from the failure of the flagman to put down torpedoes, which failure can not be attributed to long duty hours. There is very light traffic on this line; and it was unusual to have a wreck train to look out for, which was the kind of train that ran into them.

CASE NO. 30.

Statement of cause: "Engine crew of freight train forgot passenger train. Hours on duty, 19."

The facts: An extra freight train collided with a passenger train that was on time, the engine crews of the freight train forgetting passenger train. The freight train was within twenty minutes of the end of their run, and there is nothing to indicate that any member of its crew was not wide-awake. Their being on duty over sixteen hours was caused by the delay in doing switching and meeting trains en route and getting a helper engine at Navarre, and this being within an hour's run of their home terminal, and there being no facilities at that point for taking care of the engine and crew, there was no way that the crew could be cut out of service at the completion of their sixteen hours' duty.

CASE NO. 31.

Statement of cause: "Failed to wait prescribed time. Hours on duty, 15."

The facts: The immediate cause of this accident was the failure of the conductor to wait at Kise the prescribed time after the departure of No. 38, and for running through the dense fog at too high a rate of speed, knowing that No. 38 was only a few minutes ahead of them. The conductor who was responsible for the accident had been on duty six hours and forty minutes. This accident could not be attributed to overwork.

CASE NO. 32.

Statement of cause: "Head-on collision of freight and extra. Hours on duty, 21."

The facts: The length of time the men had been on duty had nothing to do with the accident. It occurred in broad daylight, with a freight train pulling into the yard and the switch engine standing on the main track having hold of some cars on a spur. The flagman of the switch engine gave the engineer of the freight a stop signal, which he mistook for a signal that the track was clear. When the signal was given he had the air brakes applied, and then released them; and upon getting the second stop signal he did not have time to pump up his air to get sufficient pressure to apply the brakes to prevent the collision.

CASE NO. 33.

Statement of cause: "Failure to flag train. Hours on duty, 15."

The facts: The company's report states: "Extra stopped, account air sticking, and conductor and rear brakeman failed to flag the regular train following." The crew had been on duty fifteen hours, after forty-eight hours' rest.

CASE NO. 34.

Statement of cause: "Overlooked open switch. Hours on duty, 20."

The facts: Accident caused by running into open switch. The engineer was at fault for failing to notice that switch light was not burning. He had been on duty ten hours forty minutes at the time, including two hours' lay-over at St. Louis, and had twenty-five hours' rest before going out. Blame also attached to the brakeman, who had requested the fireman to close the switch, and the latter agreed to do so. Both the brakeman and fireman had been on duty about ten hours from Galesburg, where they had a four-hour lay-over. In order to get twenty hours for the brakeman and fireman, the time going and returning, including the four-hour lay-over at Galesburg, must be included. They had both had forty-four hours' rest before going out.

There is nothing to show that excessive hours had anything to do with this accident.

CASE NO. 35.

Statement of cause: "Engineman asleep. Hours on duty, 9¾."

The facts: The report of the company to the Commission states: "Engineman Morgan, who was instantly killed, supposed to have been asleep."

CASE NO. 36.

Statement of cause: "Conductor not being out on train. Hours on duty, 20."

The facts: The general manager of the Baltimore and Ohio, of date November 27, 1906, writes: "The words 'conductor on duty twenty hours' do not appear in our report. As a matter of fact, the train crew had been on duty thirteen hours, thirty-nine minutes. The hours on duty had nothing to do with the accident, which was caused by the train being parted. But for a dense fog they would have known their train was parted before they struck."

Some one seems to have inserted the words "conductor on duty twenty hours" in the company's report without their knowledge.

CASE NO. 38.

Statement of cause: "Engineman failed to have engine under control. Hours of duty, 20."

The facts: There is nothing to indicate that this accident was caused by anybody being asleep. The statement made by the company to the Commission is that it was caused by the engineman's "failing to approach the end of the double track under full control."

The letter from the general manager says: "The words 'engineman in service since April, 1900, on duty twenty hours' do not appear in our copy of the report sent in to the Interstate Commerce Commission."

This was a round-trip run.

CASE NO. 39.

Statement of cause: "Carelessness of engineman. Hours on duty, 17."

The facts: "Engineeer had been on duty five hours and twenty minutes, previous to which he received nine hours' rest."

The foregoing appears in the company's report to the Commission.

CASE No. 42.

Statement in table: "Misunderstanding of signals. Hours on duty, 18."

The facts: There was no claim that this accident occurred on account of the hours of duty. There was a dispute between the bridge watchman and the engineman, the bridge watchman claiming that he had opened the draw for a boat and had signaled the engineer to stop. The engineman claimed that he had made the stop and had afterwards received a signal from the bridge tender to come ahead.

These facts were fully stated in the company's report to the Commission.

CASE No. 43.

Statement in table: "Crew not taking proper precautions. Hours on duty, 24."

The facts: This statement is not correct. The crew on engine No. 151 were held responsible for not keeping a lookout to see the snowplow, which was only ten car lengths ahead around the curve of the hill. This crew had only been on duty eleven hours and had had twenty-four hours' previous rest. The other crew was on a snowplow at a time when the weather conditions were unusually severe, and it was practically impossible to keep the snowplow crew within the sixteen hours. It was the duty of the brakeman to look after the rear of the train, and he had had eight hours' rest before leaving Traverse City; so that he had been on duty only ten hours at the time of the accident.

No one in any way responsible for the accident had been on duty more than eleven hours.

CASE No. 44.

Statement in table: "Engineman disobeyed orders. Hours on duty, 15."

The facts: This accident was caused by disobedience of orders, having no relation to length of hours."

CASE No. 46.

Statement of cause: "Engineman; train getting away. Hours on duty, 17."

The facts: The report of this accident made by the company to the Commission is as follows: "The evidence shows that the train had been stopped at Wilsons on account of trouble with brake rigging on eighth car from the engine. They took brake head off brake beam and cut air out. The train made a very smooth run until reaching Hitchcock's tunnel, where it was noticed that it commenced to run at an excessive speed. Brakemen doubled and applied hand brakes on all cars, and in so doing broke brake chains, rendering three additional brakes inoperative."

The entire crew were very wide awake and alert, and the accident was caused solely by trouble with the brake appliances.

CASE No. 47.

Statement of cause: "Conductor failed to give signal. Hours on duty, 15; hours of rest, 25."

The facts: The train backed into an open switch, and the conductor, engineer, and brakemen were held jointly responsible for the accident. The hours of service had absolutely nothing to do with the accident. The conductor, Devaney, and the brakeman, Miller, who were primarily responsible, had not been on duty to exceed six hours at the time of the accident.

CASE No. 48.

Statement of cause: "Disobeyed signals. Hours on duty, 48, 47½ hours."

The facts: This was a wrecking crew. There had been serious freshets just previous to this accident, and the train in question had been handling a pile driver and carpenter force in repairing washouts. At the time of the accident they were returning to Olean, where they would have discontinued work. They were only technically on duty forty-seven and one-half hours. While waiting for the carpenters to do their repair work the train crew had frequent and extended intervals of several hours at a stretch when they secured sleep and rest. It was an impossibility to relieve this crew and put another in their place while they were on this duty because of these washouts, the result of spring freshets, and we were obliged to adopt the most available means for resuming the operation of the road. No one was claiming to be overworked at the time of the accident. It was a question of veracity. The operator who gave the signal claimed that it was "red," while the train crew claimed that it was "white."

The report of the company to the Commission states: "Investigation indicates that operator was at fault for the accident, but responsibility could not be definitely placed." If so, the train crew were not responsible, and in any event their hours of service were not a contributing cause.

CASE No. 51.

Statement of cause: "Did not keep lookout. Hours on duty, 17½."

The facts: This train had just reached its destination. The Pennsylvania Company were at that time (1903) constructing second main track over this division, and the freight trains were unusually and unavoidably slow on this account. The long hours could not have been prevented, as the company was doing everything possible and spending large sums of money to provide two tracks in order to prevent just such delay. This accident was in no way due to long hours. If the fireman had been on his seat box as they pulled from one yard track to another, he would have seen the engine ahead in time to notify the engineman.

CASE No. 54.

Statement of cause: "Flagman failed to get back proper distance. Hours on duty, 17½."

The facts: This was a round-trip run from Nashville to Hollow Rock Junction and return. Hollow Rock Junction was a very unhealthy place, and the men much preferred to return to Nashville. The trip could ordinarily be made within the sixteen hours. The accident was primarily caused by the engineman on No. 59 failing to keep proper lookout for an extra ahead. He had been on duty 11½ hours, prior to which he had 9½ hours' rest. The hours of duty had nothing to do with this accident. The engineman knew that the extra was right ahead from the fact that he had seen them only 8 miles from the point of collision. They failed to approach the station under proper control.

CASE No. 55.

Statement in table: "Not properly equipped with flagging signals. Hours on duty, 18."

The facts: The report of the company to the Commission states: "The conductor, engineer, and flagman on freight train were responsible for this accident, on account of not seeing that they were properly equipped with flagging signals, and the flagman had not been properly instructed how to use the same."

CASE No. 56.

Statement of cause: "Running at too high rate of speed; foggy weather. Hours on duty, 17."

The facts: The record shows that these men had been on duty sixteen hours and two minutes. At the time of the accident they were only 3 miles from their terminal station. The length of time on duty had no bearing on the accident, which was due to high rate of speed under a caution signal in a dense fog.

The accident happened at the nearest point where a train could have been sidetracked at the expiration of sixteen hours.

The train was on the road so long on account of the cold weather, which delayed both it and the trains it met along the road.

CASE No. 58.

Statement of cause: "Enginemen not seeing flagman in time on account of smoke. Hours on duty, 20."

The facts: The length of time the crew had been on duty was not responsible for the accident. All the members of the crew were awake and alert, and the flagman had gone back and given the proper signal, but it was obscured by the smoke from the engine. There was no reason for anyone to think that the signal could not be seen. The accident resulted solely from the obscurity thus caused, and not from any negligence whatever.

The report made by the company to the Interstate Commerce Commission shows this clearly. The flagman who gave the signal was a member of the crew of a switch engine which on Sunday had been sent to Logansport for repairs and was returning. The condition of the engine delayed the train, and the collision occurred while they were stopping on the main track to blow up steam. The other train involved was a work train also, en route to Logansport to remain over Sunday for repairs.

CASE No. 59.

Statement of cause: "Engineman of freight pulled out ahead of passenger train. Hours on duty, 17."

The facts: This man had twenty hours' rest before starting to work. He was on a turn run, and there was no opportunity for him to take rest until arrival at Logansport. The men very much prefer returning to ther home terminal, rather than to lay over at Bernice, where there was no opportunity to take proper rest. This occurred in 1901.

There is nothing to show that the accident was caused by excessive hours.

CASE No. 60.

Statement of cause: "Improper flagging. Hours on duty, 16."

The facts: The accident was caused by the failure of the brakeman to place torpedoes on the track. He stated that he did not consider the use of torpedoes necessary. He had been on duty a little over sixteen hours, but no claim was made that the accident was caused by excessive hours.

CASE No. 61.

Statement of cause: "Disobeyed rule respecting open switch. Hours on duty, 20."

The facts: A work train was standing on track in gravel pit, and switch leading from main line was left open. An express train dashed through the switch, resulting in a collision. The responsibility rested with the switchman, who failed to follow the rule of the company: "Whoever opens a switch shall remain at it until it is closed, unless relieved by some other competent employee." There is not a word of evidence to show how long the man who left the switch open had been on duty. The record simply shows that the engineman, who apparently had nothing to do with the switch being left open, had been on duty about twenty hours; but there is nothing to indicate any connection between this and the accident.

CASE No. 62.

Statement of cause: "Engineman responsible, not keeping proper lookout. Hours on duty, 22."

The facts: This accident occurred in daylight; nothing to show that the engineer was asleep. He simply failed to approach the station with his engine under proper control. Instead of being on continuous duty for twenty-two hours, the report of the company shows that he had five hours of rest within that period. The rest period may have come at such time that he had only eight hours of continuous service.

CASE No. 63.

Statement of cause: "Approaching station at too high rate of speed to stop after seeing signal. Hours on duty, 17."

The facts: There is nothing to indicate that the accident was due to overwork on the part of the engineer. It was simply a case of error of judgment in the use of air brakes. The statement made by the company to the Commission was as follows: "No. 14 arrived just south of station and was slowing up to take siding. No. 15 approached the station at too high a rate of speed to stop after seeing red signal, although the operator had placed a torpedo on the track about 800 feet from the station, and signaled the engineer to stop. The train ran past the station and collided with No. 14, which was almost stopped."

CASE No. 64.

Statement of cause: "Not protected by flag. Hours on duty, 15."

The facts: There was no connection between the number of hours of labor and the cause of the accident. The freight train (an extra) stopped at the water tank, with its caboose standing on a steel trestle 40 feet high. It was a short distance ahead of the regular passenger; and the brakeman evidently figured that his train would not be there to exceed two minutes, so that he would not be taking any chances in not flagging the passenger. When the passenger train came around the curve where they could see the caboose, the brakeman was standing on the rear platform with his lantern in hand. He was afraid to leave the caboose for fear the passenger train would catch him on the trestle. He was wide awake and fully aware of what was going on, but could do nothing. The passenger train came up and struck the caboose and killed him.

CASE No. 65.

Statement in table: "Carelessness of engineman. Hours on duty, 18."

The facts: This crew left Brainerd at 3.15 p. m., and arrived at Spur (75 miles) at 9.05 p. m., five hours fifty minutes. They left Spur for Brainerd at 9.50 p. m., expecting to make the return trip inside of six hours. They were delayed three hours meeting an extra, which was delayed on account of another train doubling a hill. There were no hotel accommodations whatever at Spur; all trainmen and enginemen preferred to make the double, Brainerd to Spur and return, instead of laying over at Spur. This crew had forty hours' rest before making the trip.

CASE No. 67.

Statement of cause: "Disobeyed rule 99 in not properly protecting train. Hours on duty, 22."

The facts: This is entirely erroneous. The report made by the company states that the service was not continuous; "there was an interval of five hours seventeen minutes for rest;" that is, the run was from Hagerstown to Rutherford, twelve hours forty-two minutes, then five hours seventeen minutes rest at Rutherford, then a run of four hours thirty-six minutes from Rutherford to Lurgan, where the accident occurred.

The Moseley statement simply adds together these three periods, taking no note of the intervening rest period.

CASE No. 68.

Statement of cause: "Conductor and brakeman at fault in moving train befort track was clear. Hours on duty, 15."

The facts: There is no evidence in this case of long hours or overwork; the crew had two days' rest before starting. The accident was entirely due to lack of judgment. The train men tried to save perhaps thirty seconds of time by pulling up close to lead; they pulled ahead farther than intended, with the result that train was cornered by switch engine.

CASE No. 69.

Statement of cause: "Brakeman failed to go to far end of cars to see that they had cleared. Hours on duty, 18."

The facts: There is nothing to show that failure to take proper precautions was due to excessive hours of work. This crew had been on wrecking duty, clearing up a wreck.

The company's report to the Commission gives the following explanation of the cause of the accident: "Wrecker crew had placed eight cars on siding, striking cars which were standing on that track, and causing them to foul main track. Conductor instructed brakeman to go to other end of cars and see that they were in to clear properly. The brakeman reported that they were. This brakeman is responsible for failure to go to far end of cars and see that they were cleared." This law should not apply to wrecking crews.

CASE No. 73.

Statement in table: "Flagman not far enough out to protect his train; discharged. Hours on duty, 16."

The facts: This crew was called at 1.30 p. m. November 27, after forty-six hours' previous rest. The accident occurred at 5 a. m. November 28, so that he had been on duty less than fourteen hours.

CASE No. 74.

Statement of cause: "From not being properly protected. Hours on duty, 23."

The facts: This accident was caused by an extra train starting out without proper orders. A dense fog prevailed at the time. They stopped at Watts Siding to do switching, and they had just got head car cut off when second No. 3 collided with their rear. The freight crew had only made a run of 95 miles, and pulled out notwithstanding attention was called to signals by whistle and acknowledged by the engineer.

There is nothing to indicate that any employee was not awake and alert.

CASE No. 77.

Statement of cause: "Conductor failed to set switch for siding; brakeman also failed to make proper effort to stop train. Hours on duty, 19."

The facts: An extra engine was putting a train away in siding, and Devlin, conductor, failed to set switch for mountain siding. The train backed down on a grade crossing, resulting in a collision. All the trainmen were wide awake and on the ground, and the failure of the conductor to set switch properly was due to an oversight, which might have occurred under any circumstances.

There is nothing to show any connection between the accident and the hours on duty.

CASE No. 79.

Statement of cause: "Brakeman failed to turn switch; train ran on siding. Hours on duty, 19."

The facts: Rear-end collision, caused by brakeman failing to turn switch, throwing the train in on side track and striking the rear of freight train. He had not been on continuous duty for nineteen hours. He had left Galesburg and gone to Quincy, a trip of eight hours. At Quincy he had three hours and twenty minutes rest, and returning had been on duty about seven and one-half hours when the accident occurred.

There is no reason for saying that this failure to properly turn the switch was caused by excessive hours of labor. He had had two days' rest before going on this trip.

CASE No. 80.

Statement in table: "Crew went to sleep. Hours on duty, 24."

The facts: This is an incorrect statement. The crew went on duty at 10 p. m. September 4, after eleven hours' rest. They arrived at St. Joseph at 9.30 p. m. and remained there until 6.30 a. m. September 5; that is, they had nine hours for rest and sleep. They left St. Joseph at 6.30 a. m., and the accident occurred at 2.20 p. m., so that they had actually been on duty seven hours and fifty minutes.

The reason given for the formal statement in the company's report, "On duty twenty-four hours," without any reference to the nine hours of rest, was "Being under orders, they were allowed full time and were thus reported as having been on duty."

CASE No. 81.

Statement of cause: "Disobeyed rule 17, train taking siding not being in the clear. Hours on duty, two days."

The facts: This is an entire mistake, the result of a mere error in transmitting the report. As a matter of fact, these trainmen had only been on this run three hours and forty-five minutes at the time of the accident and had ample rest prior to going on the trip. This is all fully explained in a letter written by the general manager, W. C. Nixon, to Mr. Moseley, of date January 20, 1903; but, notwithstanding the explanation, the table contains the statement that the conductor had been on duty forty-eight hours.

Whatever negligence there was was on the part of the engineer.

CASE No. 82.

Statement of cause: "Engineman at fault, in going back struck cars. Hours on duty, 20."

The facts: The train stalled, and then doubled, and in going back for the rear end of the train the engineer struck the cars. There is nothing to show that the hours on duty had anything to do with the accident. The length of the division is 130 miles, and an average of 10 miles per hour would consume only thirteen hours. In this case there was an unusual number of delays, largely caused by the train having parted and by being held to meet passenger trains.

If this crew had been tied up at the end of sixteen hours, it would probably have been at a point where they could neither sleep nor get meals, and by the time they got to the terminal they would have lost more time and have been less fit to go out again than if they had been allowed to go through, even if it should take more than sixteen hours.

CASE No. 83.

Statement of cause: "Work train fouled main track without due protection. Rule: 'An inferior train must keep out of the way of a superior train.' Hours on duty, more than 15."

The facts: This accident occurred in 1902, to a work train engine which had been in the shop at Fort Wayne over Sunday, for washing out, etc. They had a rest in their bunk car, and went on their regular Monday's duty on the work train from Plymouth at 7 o'clock in the morning. The accident occurred at 5.35 p. m., Monday. Ten hours and 35 minutes on duty. Excessive hours had nothing at all to do with the accident. The engineman simply overran the clearance point of the switch leading from the siding to the main track, in the dark.

CASE No. 86.

Statement of cause: "Engineman at fault for not stopping when semaphore was against him and not having train under control. Hours on duty, 19."

The facts: The number of hours on duty had nothing to do with the accident. "Engineer Burns frankly admitted that when approaching crossing he saw an N. P. train passing over same, and that he also saw that semaphore signal was set against him, but thinking that tower man would give him the crossing in time to avoid necessity of stopping his train, he allowed train to drift until too late to stop before going off track at derail."

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. CULLOM. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. PATTERSON. I offer an amendment to the bill which we have been discussing in order that it may be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment submitted by the Senator from Colorado will be printed and lie on the table.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eight minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, January 10, 1907, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 9, 1907.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

William B. Sheppard, of Florida, to be United States attorney for the northern district of Florida. A reappointment, his term expiring February 17, 1907.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Thomas F. McGourin, of Florida, to be United States marshal for the northern district of Florida. A reappointment, his term expiring February 26, 1907.

INDIAN INSPECTOR.

James McLaughlin, of North Dakota, to be an Indian inspector, to take effect January 19, 1907, at the expiration of his term. (Reappointment.)

POSTMASTERS.

CONNECTICUT.

Arthur B. Jelliffe to be postmaster at Saugatuck, in the county of Fairfield and State of Connecticut, in place of Arthur B. Jelliffe. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1906.

ILLINOIS.

John B. Stout to be postmaster at Lawrenceville, in the county of Lawrence and State of Illinois, in place of Sylvester J. Gee. Incumbent's commission expired December 12, 1905.

INDIANA.

Edward L. Troop to be postmaster at Paoli, in the county of Orange and State of Indiana, in place of William W. Lingle. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

IOWA.

William J. Scott to be postmaster at Ida Grove, in the county of Ida and State of Iowa, in place of Barney Johnson. Incumbent's commission expires February 11, 1907.

MARYLAND.

Charles W. Farrow to be postmaster at Snow Hill, in the county of Worcester and State of Maryland, in place of Charles W. Farrow. Incumbent's commission expired May 21, 1906.

MINNESOTA.

Oscar Krook to be postmaster at Marshall, in the county of Lyon and State of Minnesota, in place of Charles E. Patterson. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1906.

NEW YORK.

George H. Kennedy to be postmaster at Cortland, in the county of Cortland and State of New York, in place of Andrew S. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1907.

Freeman H. Merritt to be postmaster at White Plains, in the county of Westchester and State of New York, in place of James H. Moran. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1906.

James A. Snell to be postmaster at Fonda, in the county of Montgomery and State of New York, in place of George L. Davis. Incumbent's commission expired June 10, 1906.

OHIO.

Wirt Kessler to be postmaster at West Milton, in the county of Miami and State of Ohio, in place of Wirt Kessler. Incumbent's commission expires January 26, 1907.

OKLAHOMA.

Jeannette L. Baker to be postmaster at Ponca, in the county of Kay and Territory of Oklahoma, in place of Burton S. Barnes, deceased.

OREGON.

Edward D. Starr to be postmaster at Brownsville, in the county of Linn and State of Oregon. Office became Presidential January 1, 1907.

PENNSYLVANIA.

William I. Kopp to be postmaster at Allegheny, in the county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania, in place of John Francies, resigned.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 9, 1907.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Edward T. Sanford, of Tennessee, to be Assistant Attorney-General.

DISTRICT JUDGE.

Thomas Ives Chatfield, of New York, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of New York, commencing January 1, 1907.

SURVEYORS OF CUSTOMS.

Thomas C. Elliott, of Illinois, to be surveyor of customs for the port of Cairo, in the State of Illinois.

Marcellus O. Markham, of Georgia, to be surveyor of customs for the port of Atlanta, in the State of Georgia.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS.

A. Lincoln Dryden, of Maryland, to be collector of customs for the eastern district, in the State of Maryland.

Morton Tower, of Oregon, to be collector of customs for the southern district, in the State of Oregon.

Herbert D. Philbrick, of Maine, to be collector of customs for the district of York, in the State of Maine.

William H. Daniels, of New York, to be collector of customs for the district of Oswegatchie, in the State of New York.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Professor of Mathematics Lucien F. Prud'homme, United States Navy, retired, with the rank of commander, to be a professor of mathematics on the retired list of officers of the Navy, with the rank of captain, from the 29th day of June, 1906, in accordance with a provision contained in the naval appropriation act approved on that date.

Gunner Cornelius Cronin, United States Navy, retired, to be a chief gunner on the retired list of the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 29th day of June, 1906, in accordance with the provisions of the naval appropriation act approved on that date.

Commander Rogers H. Galt to be a captain in the Navy from the 11th day of December, 1906.

Lieut. Luke McNamee to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy from the 12th day of June, 1906.

Lieut. Charles J. Lang to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy from the 25th day of December, 1906.

Lieut. Martin E. Trench to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy from the 1st day of January, 1907.

Sailmaker Charles E. Tallman, United States Navy, retired, to be a chief sailmaker on the retired list of the Navy, to rank with, but after, ensign, from the 29th day of June, 1906.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE NAVY.

To be assistant surgeons in the Navy from the 20th day of December, 1906, to fill vacancies existing in that grade on that date:

Renier J. Straeten, a citizen of South Dakota, and

James T. Duhigg, a citizen of Iowa.

POSTMASTERS.

GEORGIA.

Clifford H. Dyar to be postmaster at Adairsville, in the county of Bartow and State of Georgia.

ILLINOIS.

Thomas M. Crossman to be postmaster at Edwardsville, in the county of Madison and State of Illinois.

Abraham L. Coyle to be postmaster at Gridley, in the county of McLean and State of Illinois.

Clarence F. Buck to be postmaster at Monmouth, in the county of Warren and State of Illinois.

IOWA.

John Meyer to be postmaster at Alton, in the county of Sioux and State of Iowa.

Simon J. Mak to be postmaster at Inwood, in the county of Lyon and State of Iowa.

Asahel B. Chrysler to be postmaster at Lake Park, in the county of Dickinson and State of Iowa.

MARYLAND.

James C. Peddicord to be postmaster at Oakland, in the county of Garrett and State of Maryland.

MINNESOTA.

William Gallagher to be postmaster at Carlton, in the county of Carlton and State of Minnesota.

William J. Cowling to be postmaster at Ely, in the county of St. Louis and State of Minnesota.

NEW YORK.

Oscar E. Ward to be postmaster at Phoenix, in the county of Oswego and State of New York.

Lasuvious H. King to be postmaster at Port Byron, in the county of Cayuga and State of New York.

Lucius A. Waldo to be postmaster at Canisteo, in the county of Steuben and State of New York.

Millard D. McNeil to be postmaster at Oxford, in the county of Chenango and State of New York.

PENNSYLVANIA.

William I. Kopp to be postmaster at Allegheny, in the county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, January 9, 1907.

The House met at 12 o'clock m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CLERKS AND CARRIERS IN THE CHICAGO POST-OFFICE.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I call up a matter of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois presents a privileged matter. What motion does the gentleman make?

Mr. MANN. I call up for consideration the House resolution 651. It is a request for information from the head of a Department, and has not been reported by the committee in ten days.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves to discharge the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads from further consideration of a resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 651.

Resolved, That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, directed to report to the House of Representatives at the earliest practicable moment the number of clerks and carriers in the Chicago post-office who resigned, the number who were dismissed, the number who were appointed, both regularly and temporarily, the number who declined appointment after being upon the eligible list, the number of substitute clerks and the total amount paid to substitute clerks, by months, all for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the resolution is simply to acquire some information in an official manner for use in the consideration of the post-office appropriation bill.

Mr. PAYNE. When was it introduced?

Mr. MANN. On December 10.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to discharge the committee from further consideration of the resolution.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MANN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 7211. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to construct a bridge across the Missouri River at a point between Kansas City and Sibley, in Jackson County, Mo.," approved March 19, 1904.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

S. 7211. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to construct a bridge across the Missouri River at a point between Kansas City and Sibley, in Jackson County, Mo.," approved March 19, 1904—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill making appropriations for the support of the Army.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. CURRIER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 23551, the Army appropriation bill.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask how much time remains for general debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa has one hour and thirty-five minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Virginia thirty-three minutes.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I would state I know of no one who desires to discuss the question; and I ask the gentleman from Virginia to consume his time.

Mr. HAY. I yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MEYER].

Mr. HULL. Before the gentleman commences, I would ask if the gentleman will conclude in twenty minutes?

Mr. MEYER. Probably.

Mr. HULL. If not, I will yield whatever time the gentleman requires.

